Political candidates' financial campaign records uneven

by Pam Shingler
Editor

Floyd County candidates for public office, on the whole, spent very little money on their campaigns during the latest financial reporting period.

According to state election laws, candidates who expect to raise and spend $3,000 or more must file four separate campaign finance reports to the local county clerk's office and to the state at designated intervals. The latest report deadline was mid-October.

Candidates who expect to spend less than $3,000 file one report at the end of the campaign, and those who expect to spend less than $1,000 do not have to submit a report, but do have to sign a statement that they will stay within the limit.

The finance reports, which are public record, include the source of contributions over $100 and how money is spent.

The vast majority of local candidates apparently don't expect to spend more than $1,000 on their campaigns, but there are a few notable exceptions.

Sheriff Paul Hunt Thompson, for example, in his Democratic campaign for County Judge-Executive lists contributions of more than $9,000. The itemized listing, as the information appears on the standardized form, includes, for the period Oct. 2-19:

Last minute voting tidbits

- Polling place for the Mouth of Mud precinct has been changed to the Bingo Dome and not WPRG Studio as previously published.
- One more reminder about the commissioners' races: Every voter is allowed to vote for one commissioner in each district, not just the district in which you live. Said another way, each voter can vote for three commissioners, one in each district.
- Training for election officers is today at 5 p.m. and again Saturday at 10 a.m., in the old circuit courtroom in Prestonsburg. The public is welcome to attend.

JW Theatre in the spotlight

by Janice Shepherd
Managing Editor

The sound of music at Jenny Wiley Theatre just got a lot more oompah.

The theatre will receive $200,000 in federal monies in an end-of-the year funding bill.

"I guess you could say we're getting a brand new start," the theatre's executive director, Carla Coburn, said Thursday. "The theatre is definitely on a turn-around."

The theatre has been in financial difficulties, especially in the last few years. It has been in debt since its 34 years of operation, Coburn said.

That bleak financial future is a lot sunnier. The theatre received a $200,000 grant recently from the state to pay off its debts and, last week, the theatre received word that it will get $200,000 in federal funding.

During groundbreaking ceremonies for the Mountain Top Development Complex last Wednesday, Congressman Hal Rogers announced that funding for the theatre had just been appropriated into the federal budget on Tuesday night.

Coburn was in the crowd when the unexpected announcement was

Voting machines get a second going-over

by Pam Shingler
Editor

Amid complaints by Floyd County Board of Elections commissioners, County Clerk Carla Boyd yesterday afternoon re-inspected voting machines that will be used in next week's election.

"I don't think this meeting is necessary," said Democrat election commissioner Omery "Chuck" Hall Jr. "An Independent (candidate) and a Republican (candidate) saw the zeroes on the machines last week and each machine was checked."

Republican commissioner Norm Marcum agreed, "I took time off work to do this, and I find it unnecessary."

Both were reacting to the challenge from representatives of the newly-organized Floyd County Republican Party that the machines were improperly inspected on Oct. 20.

Republican Chairman Bobby Stumbo protested to the state board of elections that during the first inspection, election officials and party representatives were unable to verify that the machines registered "zero-zero" and that the inspection was not thorough and public, as per state law.

Residents protest potential mining

by Willie Elliott
Staff Writer

With the fear of their land and water being disturbed by underground and surface mining, about 40 Frasure's Creek citizens showed up at the regional office of the state Department of Surface Mining and Reclamation and Enforcement (DSMRE) yesterday to protest the proposed mining of a large tract of land in their community.

The group was also concerned about flooding caused by the mining and what effect coal hauling would have on their road which is narrow and not paved thick enough for coal hauling.

The Elk Horn Coal Company of Prestonsburg has applied for a permit for an underground and surface mining operation, as well as a washer and refuse disposal, located 3.6 miles southeast of McDowell at the head of Frasure's Creek.

The proposed operation will disturb 96.25 acres and underlie 3,070

The City of Prestonsburg donated $1,000 to the Friends of the Prestonsburg High School Library Wednesday. The group will conduct a fund-raising drive November 1 through December 31. Historic moment :

Local Republican Party, 'born again'

A small hot-dog stand at the Jenny Wiley Festival and the Red, White and Blue Days seems an unlikely symbol of the rebirth of a political party.

But, according to Robert Stumbo, Republican Party chairman for Floyd County Republican Party is "back in business" after years of inactivity.

According to state Republican Party records, the local organization essentially closed up shop in 1991 when Curt Hall, the last County chairman recognized by the state party, resigned from that office.

However, following the May primary election, a large group of Republican voters, sparked by Stumbo, re-organized the party, at which time Stumbo was elected chairman, with Jean Hickman, vice chairman; Duna Combs, as secretary; Terry Mitchell, youth chairman; and Elmer Johnson, treasurer.

Stumbo stated that participation in the two festivals to raise operating funds was not the sole purpose. It was also to announce that the Republican Party in Floyd County is alive and well, and will again participate in every aspect of forthcoming elections as authorized by Kentucky's election laws.

With hot dogs and pop, the Republican party in Floyd County rallied for local festivals.

acres, with a total permit boundary area of 3,166.25 acres, according to the published notice of intention to mine.

Tom Kiser, an environmental control supervisor with DSMRE, told the group that the meeting was a fact-finding session.

The participants could ask questions, but there would be no answers, he said.

"If no one is going to answer questions, what are we doing here?" asked Connie Osborne, who added the information offered at the meeting could have been placed on a chart.

Margaret Robinson had prepared a series of questions that she wanted answered. She was permitted to read the questions but was told no answers would be forthcoming during this session.

Robinson's questions related to the effect this mining would have on air and water supply, damage to homeowners' structures, condition of dug wells, and payment for going over an owner's land. Robinson also wanted to know who would be responsible if damage does occur to property.

Even with Kiser's disclaimer, the group asked questions.

Patsy Mosley wanted to know, "If they mine, will they widen the road?" She also wanted to know if the mining company could take the trees off the land.

Bonnie Osborne wanted to know how cemeteries would be protected, and her husband, Alvin, wanted to know if Elk Horn would be required to pay for going over property owners' land and, if so, the rate per ton.

Peggy Jackson from DSMRE explained that once the permit is approved and there is a dispute between the coal company and a land owner, the dispute becomes a civil issue and has to be settled in court. "We can't act as judge and jury," Jackson said.

Jackson and Sue Minks, also with DSMRE, said the best solution is for each person to send questions, complaints or comments to the review committee's Operations Support, DSMRE, #2 Hudson Hollow, Frankfort, Ky. 40601.

Tom Sullivan from DSMRE tried to give the owners some answers to their questions, but he said, "Each situation is different, so it is impossible to make general statements about the mining and its effects on the land owners."

After the meeting, DSMRE personnel talked with land owners on an individual basis.

DSMRE had a large map of the area and used it to pinpoint individual properties.

Representatives from Elk Horn were at the meeting but did not comment other than to say they had made notes and would take the land owners' questions and concerns into consideration.

The permit application can be inspected at the Prestonsburg DSMRE office which is located in the old Maloney building on South Lake Drive near the entrance to Jenny Wiley State Resort Park or at the Frankfort office.

made.

"It was just a wonderful feeling. I could hardly contain myself," she said. "I knew he was working on it.

"This will be a step in the right direction. We know it won't be an end all. ... The future of the theatre will be really secure because we've had support from business leaders and from the community."

The funds will be used for infrastructure improvements and general maintenance, according to a press release from the congressman's office.

"There is a lot of maintenance that needs to be done," Coburn said. "We can also improve and upgrade the sound and lighting equipment."

The theatre's long-term goal is to provide a permanent housing structure for its stars during the summer.

"Housing is a key issue. For so long, we haven't had permanent housing ... We rent housing now. It's an incentive for the people we bring in from out of state ... Most theaters do providing housing. It gives (the cast) a better viewing of your community," Coburn said.

The theatre is an important asset to the community, not only because it brings in tourists, but also because it provides jobs, the theatre's executive director said.

"The theatre employs three full-time staff and 90 people work there during the summer. A lot of those are local college and high school students ... The theatre definitely has an important role in the community," she said.

Coburn said she is building next year's season on the crowd turnout from the past season. "The crowds were up this summer. We had a good year ...We were only rained out twice," she said.

The crowd response resulted in another show being added to next summer's lineup. Shows scheduled are Grease, Oklahoma, the Legend of Jenny Wiley, and Pinocchio.

The theatre is also beginning a promotion campaign, including season tickets as Christmas gifts and the Legend of Jenny Wiley CD's as stocking stuffers.

Thompson's records further indicate that he spent $162.53, related to a fund-raising event at Jenny Wiley State Resort Park on Oct. 13.

His opponent, Republican Randy Osborne, did not file a report, indicating that he says he raised and spent less than $1,000.

Gerald Derossett, candidate for county commissioner in District One, in a report covering May 27-Sept. 30, indicates contributions during that period of $2,225, which was added to a previous amount to make $4,938. His expenditures during the reporting period amounted to $3,046.

Derossett's itemized list of contributions, as entered, includes:

• Ross Harris, Pikeville, coal miner, $200;

• David Bowling, East Point, Dave's Concrete Products, $500;

• Earl McGuire, Prestonsburg, attorney, $250;

• Gerald Derossett, the candidate, two donations to his own campaign, one for $1,000 and one for $200.

Among Derossett's expenditures are $100 on two separate occasions to Hobert Keathley of Teaberry for putting up signs; two gifts of $25 each to the Betsy Layne Touchdown Club; $290 for radio advertising; $400 to Ann Jarrell of Prestonsburg for signs; $25 to the Left Beaver Quarterback Club; $534.24 and $160.27 to Southern Designs of Allen for tee-shirts and caps; $1,000 to the Democratic Executive Committee, for 10 plate dinners; $43.47 to the Prestonsburg IGA for a political gathering; $100 to the Old Beaver Regular Baptist Church; $25 to Teresa Scott of Prestonsburg to put up signs; $100 to the Little Rosa Regular Baptist Church; $25 to the McDowell Pentecostal Church; $67.15 to Lay's Potato Chips of Prestonsburg for a political gathering, and service fees to First Commonwealth Bank.

Floyd Skeans, Derossett's Independent opponent, indicated in his report, covering Sept. 29-Oct. 19, that he gave $5,000 to his own campaign.

His expenditures for the period include: $18 to architect Randell Burchett for enlargement of ballot for a television broadcast; $1,096 for radio advertising, and $200 for cable television air time.

Skeans is one of a handful of candidates who listed financial holdings of more than $10,000 on the financial disclosure sheet. Most candidates left blank the areas for reporting interests in business and commercial property. Skeans reported his interest in FKT Inc. at Dwale and several commercial properties.

Also listing assets on the financial disclosure form were Terry Dotson, candidate for Floyd County School Board, District Two, interest in Worldwide Equipment, Transfinancial Bank and real estate, and Roger Nelson, county coroner candidate, with interest in Nelson-Frazier Funeral Home and Monuments.

Two candidates for Martin City Council also listed interests of $10,000 or more in business or commercial property. They are Joe E. Jody Howard, rental property, and Dr. Mahendra Varia, Martin Animal Hospital and the Family Health Center.

Candidate for county commissioner in District Two, Larry Foster Stumbo, reported that between June 26 and Oct. 2, he gave his own campaign $250 which totaled assets of $404.66. He spent $50 for an advertisement with the South Floyd High School Football Boosters; $38.82 for supplies at King's Supply at Allen; $26 for political gathering food at Hinkle's Stop & Shop at McDowell; $250 to Jamie Blackburn of Prestonsburg for signs, plus bank service charges at Transfinancial Bank.

Ermal Tackett, Democratic candidate for county commissioner in District Three, reported that during Oct. 1-17 he donated $4,000 to his own campaign. His expenditure during that time was $150 for cable television advertising.

Larry Roberts, Republican candidate for County Commissioner, District Three, reported that between May 27 and Sept. 29, he received the following:

• Lurlie Roberts, Harold, housewife, $100 (cumulative $200);

• Elmer Dale Sturgill, Harold, coal miner, $200;

• Tommy Spears, Frenchburg, dentist, $200.

Roberts' expenses included $200 and $228.25 to Tri-State of Ivel for signs; $191, $191 and $90 to Statewide Press in Prestonsburg for bumper stickers and cards; $125 to Don Riley of Harold for signs; $100 to Betsy Layne High School Touchdown Club for advertising; $76.80 to the US Post Office for postage, and service charges to Matewan Bank.

E. Shag Branham, Prestonsburg mayoral candidate, reported that from Aug. 10-Oct. 2, he gave $3,804.71 to his own campaign.

He listed expenses of $80 and $80 for newspaper advertising; $8 to the County Clerk's Office for copies; $255.63 and $381.08 to Mid-America Political Showcase of Jeffersonville, Ind., for posters and other advertising items; and $726.10 to Hi-Tech Signs of Prestonsburg for billboards.

These reports are by no means complete; they simply reflect the latest reporting period. After the election, those candidates who raised and spent more than $1,000 are to submit a complete accounting.

Stumbo indicated that he believed the machines were not lawfully inspected when Boyd could not readily find the verification tape on a machine that was set for inspection. She later found the tape in an attached envelope.

This go-round, Boyd videotaped the proceedings and went through inspections of the machines step-by-step, machine-by-machine.

She gave Stumbo the test tapes from a couple of machines, saying she did not "have to give you anything."

At the beginning of the inspection, Lloyd "Blue" Goble, with the local Republican Party, questioned the use of tapes as verification under state statutes. "State election laws state that the machine must be set on zero-zero, not any extraneous tape. Tapes are worthless."

Boyd responded that the laws "are out-dated on the electronic voting machines."

"Laws cannot be out-dated," Goble countered.

Boyd encouraged Stumbo, Goble, the election commissioners and others present to gather around the first machine and watch as it went through testing and ran out the tape showing that no votes had been cast.

"State election laws state that the machine must be set on zero-zero, not any extraneous tape. Tapes are worthless."

Stumbo and Goble questioned the contents of what is referred to as the "custodian's compartment" on the machine.

Boyd said what is in the department has to be the same as the visible part of the machine. It functions, she said, as a back-up and as security.

Stumbo acknowledged that he was satisfied with the explanation. He and Goble continued to observe the inspection of each voting machine.

The inspection started at 2 p.m., and the election commissioners recessed at about 6 p.m. with 10 machines remaining to be inspected. The inspection was to resume today at noon.

Editorial

More on voting; What did you expect?

When trying to encourage people to exercise their responsibility to vote, there are some set points that are usually made. In the interest of fairness, we're offering some counter-truths.

• If you don't vote, you have no right to complain about who is elected and how government is run.

(Truth is, you still have that right. It's called freedom of speech. People vote to make sure you continue to have it.)

• If you don't vote, you're letting someone else decide your fate.

(Truth is, in these parts, other people have decided our fate for at least the last 100 years. In fact, most of us descended from peasants and poor folk who never directed their own lives to any real extent. Why should we change now?)

• Your vote is your voice, your cry in the wilderness.

(Truth is, the most the voice of sanity can muster these days is a whimper. Too many of us have shunned the polls and allowed the wolves and hyenas to eat up the air waves.)

• Democracy depends on your vote.

(Truth is, our democracy will probably last for a few more decades whether you vote or not; you're just entrusting it to fewer and fewer people. Anyway, you'll be gone before then, so why should you care?)

If you are a diehard voter, please consider these points:

• In the midst of the electioneering, try to hold on to your common sense. Some accusations and some promises simply don't hold water and you know that.

• Very few candidates can do or will do a fraction of what they say they will do. Take away points for being naive — or outright misleading.

• When the allegations against an opponent become the focus of the campaign, then ask the accuser what it is that he or she stands for.

• Don't throw all your hopes on the wagon of one candidate; no one person can satisfy all our needs — in government, as in life.

• Be wary of catch words and phrases, such as family values or big/little government or personal freedom or balanced budgets or any number of others that bombard us. They all have different meanings for different people in different contexts, and, very often, they are empty and worthless, said only to appeal to people who spend little time in thought.

• Be particularly wary of people who keep reminding you that the only reason they're running is to "serve

WRITER SAYS 911 IS 'SIMPLY CALL FORWARDING'

The announcement by the fiscal court that the Floyd County E-911 System is "On-line" would gag a maggot off a gut wagon. This is no more or less than the fiscal court arranging another snipe hunt for the country bumpkins a week before the general election.

Not one meaningful change nor improvement has taken place, except that they have arranged for the telephone companies to automatically switch any 911 call to the State Police telephone number. This is simply call forwarding, already available for any residential or business telephone.

It is also available on most telephones as a single digit button used for emergency dialing.

You still have to tell the State Police that your home is on fire, that you live about half-mile from the sawmill on Spurlock; and the State Police will try to alert the Volunteer Firemen on the obsolete pagers that only work about a third of the time. And you must be sure to tell them to bring water with them, as there are no water lines or fire hydrants, and the creek is dry.

The only thing that has changed now that our E-911 System is "On-line" is you get to dial three numbers instead of seven when you call the State Police. Since the fiscal court collected at least $1.5 million in taxes to achieve this miracle, it seems that it cost Floyd County taxpayers about $340 thousand per telephone digit saved.

As Old Uncle Rimfire Elliott used to say, "I dun figger hit wuz wurth hit." I agree with Uncle Rimfire.

WOMEN'S HEALTH IMPORTANT TO OSTEOPATHIC PHYSICIANS

Editor:

Do you know that in 1998 nearly 40 million women are post-menopausal and that this number is increasing rapidly as the "baby boomer" generation matures?

As the number of post-menopausal women continues to increase, it will be more important than ever that they receive the best healthcare.

To do this, Pikeville College, the American Osteopathic Association (AOA), and the nation's 40,000 osteopathic physicians will be celebrating National Osteopathic Medicine (NOM) Week, November 1-7. Osteopathic physicians emphasize preventive, holistic health care for the entire body and can be instrumental in maintaining good health during post-menopausal years. This year's NOM Week is focused on informing post-menopausal women of the many potentially serious medical conditions and problems that can develop without adequate preventive care.

As women hit menopause, they are at a higher risk for cardiovascular disease, osteoporosis, and arthritis. Many post-menopausal women may experience sexual problems. Some women may consider hormone replacement therapy to replace estrogen lost during menopause, thus reducing the risk of osteoporosis and cardiovascular disease.

Whether it's helping a woman cope with cardiovascular disease or deciding if hormone replacement therapy is right for her, D,O,s are equipped to treat issues surrounding post-menopausal women and provide advice in the context of a woman's lifestyle and medical history.

Please join us in our efforts to promote osteopathic medicine and see to it that post-menopausal women throughout the United States receive the best health care. By working together, we can ensure that post-menopausal women and all Americans enjoy a healthier tomorrow.

READER URGES "NO' VOTE ON NO. 1

Editor:

In addition to the many elected offices to consider on November 3, the voters will have to choose whether or not to approve a couple of amendments to our state constitution.

I would like to ask your readers to join me in voting 'NO' on amendment number one. This amendment would allow the state legislature to meet an additional 25 days in the odd numbered years, along with the present 60- day sessions in the even years.

To me, it does not make sense to send our representatives and senators to Frankfort to enact more laws and costly government programs, at a time when taxes and the cost of government are at all time highs.

Every day that the Legislature meets in Frankfort, direct costs to the taxpayers is more than $60,000, and this does not count the extra taxes, fees, regula-

My fault

If you live with, or have lived with, a perfectionist, then you certainly know the meaning of words such as annoying or frustrating or, even, maddening. I imagine yours is a bitter pill.

Consider, however, what it is like to be a perfectionist. Those of us who fit that bill are surely reserved a place in heaven, because we live through a hell of our own making right here.

I read somewhere that when asked how he accounted for his optimism, Knott County author James Still replied, "I learned long ago to forgive myself." I've thought of that phrase many times since, and I have wished — oh, how I have wished — that I could do as Mr. Still has done.

I've found that people tend to take the newspaper very seriously. They don't easily forgive mistakes and they are not shy about expressing their feelings. We encourage them to do so.

But what I don't tell them when they point out the errors is there is nothing they can do, short of bashing me in the head, that can make me feel worse than I can make myself feel. I don't mean to brag, but I can beat up myself far better than you can any day.

Put simply, I want the paper to be perfect. I want the writing to be interesting, relevant, correct and readable. I want the appearance to draw you in, to make you want to buy a copy and read it. I want the stories to be informative, edifying, helpful and, when possible, entertaining. I want the editorials to stimulate you to action or at least make you think about an issue.

When you bring in an item you'd like to see in the paper, I would like to be able to place it right away or, if necessary, explain to you why it cannot be in the paper.

Darn it, I can't seem to do it — and the more I try the less I seem to succeed.

Last week, a story that needed to go was omitted because I forgot to move it into the file where it could be used. Wednesday, at least three people wanted to know why stories they submitted have not been in the paper weeks after they brought them in. And they are right to complain because some less important items somehow got in.

One man came in a few weeks ago with a letter to the editor. I took it at another desk, laid it there while I answered the phone, got distracted by someone else and forgot all about the letter. When he called to ask why the letter had not appeared yet, I could only admit to losing it. I could not allay his conviction that it had not been used because I disagreed with the contents.

It's easy to say that we all get so busy as press time nears that we make mistakes and we overlook things that we should not, to say that we have much less space than we would like to have to accommodate what readers want to read.

But that will never be good enough. I would love to leave one evening as the paper is going to press without worrying that there is a big boner on the front page. I want to be able to pick up the paper one morning and not wince. I would love to be able to point out to a caller that the mistake is his fault and not mine.

I cannot forgive myself because this newspaper is not perfect. On one level, I realize that it cannot be; it is made by humans who are fallible. But on another level, I know that it can be better than it is, and I know that everyone here shares my desire that it be the best it can be.

Meanwhile, I'll keep looking for a good switch — and forgiveness.

tions, and compliance costs that come with any laws passed. We could probably expect that in a new 25-day session, that an additional 150+ new laws would be passed by the legislature. And, along with the every-year sessions, Governor Patton has stated that he will still call special sessions—making an almost perpetual legislature!

I urge your readers to vote no on amendment number one!!'

AGREES WITH STUMBO'S STAND

I do not alway agree with everything Greg Stumbo advocates or does, but when it comes to his stand in support of our community colleges, we are drinking through the same straw.

It is a shame the Herald-Leader cannot realize its position weakens the status of hours of study earned by community college students and hastens the decrease of enrollment in the only institutions of higher education the poor and underprivileged can afford to attend.

Governor Patton would do well to provide better pay for the community college professors and provide free text books and other supplies for their indigent students. In so doing, Patton might find favor with Greg and the legislature.

Michelle Steel is absolutely "right on" in her letter in Sunday's Herald-Leader editorial section, praising Greg Stumbo's stand that degrees granted by the Community Colleges remain the domain of U.K.

The Herald-Leader's subscribers reach from the Purchase to the Big Sandy but those in control of its editorials express a mentality that cannot see beyond New Circle Road.

THANKS FOR 4-H HELP

Editor:

As the 1998 4-H program year comes to an end, and a new one approaches, I wanted to write a note to the people of Floyd County and thank them for the many hours of volunteering they have done this year.

I would also like to thank those groups and individuals who have assisted us financially this year. And, of course, we thank our over 3,000 4-H'ers in the county—you are what makes the Floyd County 4-H Program one of the best in the state!

The new year is beginning soon and we will be looking for volunteers again, with special talents and a desire to see young people excel. If you are one of these people, contact the Floyd County Extension Service at 921 South Lake Drive, Prestonsburg, Ky. 41653, or call 606-886-2668. Again, thanks for a wonderful year!

It takes patience...

Allen Elementary has two student teachers from Pikeville College under the supervision of John Nelson. They are Amy Banks, and Angela Depoy.

The women have been student teaching since the latter part of August and will finish before Christmas break.

They put in many hours planning lessons and working with primary age children. They say that the key to being a good teacher is having lots of patience and wanting to be around kids.

Angela and Amy say that working with the teachers and students at Allen Elementary has helped to prepare them for their careers in teaching. They look forward to having their own classroom in the near future.

• Try to look at the big picture. In voting for senator, choose one who will act in the best interest not just of eastern Kentucky, but also all of Kentucky and even the nation. In voting for state offices, think beyond a couple of counties and into the region. In voting for commissioner or school board member, consider not just who will represent your neighborhood but who will advance Floyd County and who will work to improve not just your school but the total school system. We are no longer isolated in self-sustaining communities; we are interconnected. Just drive on US 23 or KY 80 or KY 114 between 7 and 8 a.m. and 4 and 5 p.m. —Pam Shingler

Fourth grade curriculum at Betsy Layne Elementary

The fourth grade teachers at Betsy Layne Elementary said they are excited about the new school year. Melanie Cooke teaches language arts in fourth grade. She plans to introduce her students to the exciting world of literature through drama and role-playing. Writing portfolios will also be a highlight of their fourth grade experiences.

Citizens' guide to schools

The Prichard Committee for Academic Excellence and the Partnership for Kentucky Schools have published a guide to help Kentucky parents and others be better informed about the state's public schools.

"We believe informed and involved parents and citizens are critical to school success," said Cindy Heine, author of Kentucky School Updates: A Parent/Citizen Guide for 1998-99 and associate executive director of the Prichard Committee. "It is our hope that this guidebook will provide both parents and citizens with the information and encouragement they need to be involved in the education of the children in their communities."

The guide is available free from the Prichard Committee and the Partnership. It is also available on the Partnership's Website.

Topics range from assessment and school accountability to parent involvement.

Information is listed about the basics of school law, what's new this year because of legislative changes, what a parent or citizen might expect to see this year as a result of the changes, what a person can do to become involved, and sources of further information.

To order a copy of the Kentucky School Updates, call 800-928-2111 or in Lexington at 233-9849. The Partnership Website address is www.pfks.org.

Housing authority works on drug elimination grant

by Willie Elliott
Staff Writer

Patsy Ryan, executive director of the Floyd County Housing Authority, is getting a good start on applying for a federal Housing and Urban Development (HUD) grant.

She's using a technical assistance grant from HUD to prepare a Public Housing Drug Elimination grant proposal.

Dr. Sheila E. Wallace, HUD consultant, offered high praise for the Authority during an eight-day on-site visit. She reports being "totally impressed with not only the physical structure and premises, but also the management and total commitment to excellence."

The authority provides housing in four communities: Warco at Langley; Left Beaver Creek at Minnie; Creekside at Harold; and Ivy Creek at Ivel.

The director, site managers and maintenance personnel from the four sites met at the Warco community room on Oct. 21, for a presentation on chemical dependency. Wallace asked the group to dispel some of the notions they have about people who suffer from chemical dependency.

Wallace asked the group to name some labeling that they to do with chemically-dependent people. One of the managers gave as one example the perception some people have: "Drunken sots go 'sworping' on Saturday night."

If the authority gets the grant, "we plan to have some activities for the children when school is out," Ryan said. "One goal of these activities is to teach the children about drug awareness."

Ryan said there would also be some adult parenting classes. She said these classes would deal with many issues, including alcoholism or other forms of chemical dependency.

According to Wallace, all of the authority's communities provide "exceptionally high quality public housing for residents."

Three of the four communities provide activity rooms for residents to gather for meetings, workshops, holiday activities, and parties.

"Perhaps the most notable aspect of the Floyd County Housing Authority is the attitude and bearing of the administrators, staff and residents," said Wallace.

"It is my hope that all community agencies, law enforcement agencies, organizations and service groups will lend their support and partner with the Floyd County Housing as it strives to reach this lofty goal," Wallace said.

PRIDE gets funding

U.S. Rep. Hal Rogers has announced that the massive end-of-the-year funding bill that will become law includes $8 million for the Kentucky PRIDE clean up program. This is an addition to $13.5 million for PRIDE Rogers has already secured this year.

The $8 million will be used to carry out a variety of PRIDE programs, including funding for the new PRIDE revolving loan fund, which provides low-interest loans to low-income homeowners so they can replace failing septic systems or straight pipes with proper wastewater treatment systems, and funding for grants to communities for PRIDE clean-up and educational activities.

Other PRIDE funding already approved includes $8.7 million to provide six communities that face serious environmental contamination because of failing septic systems and straight pipes with wastewater system improvements, bringing sewer service to over 3,000 homes.

About $4 million that has been signed into law will enable the Army Corps of Engineers to continue providing innovative wastewater treatment assistance for southern and eastern Kentucky, and $750,000, also signed into law, will complete the new PRIDE "trash gate" in Whitley County, which will capture and dispose of trash washing down the Cumberland River before it gets to Cumberland Falls and Lake Cumberland.

JIMMY OSBORNE

School Board, Dist. #3

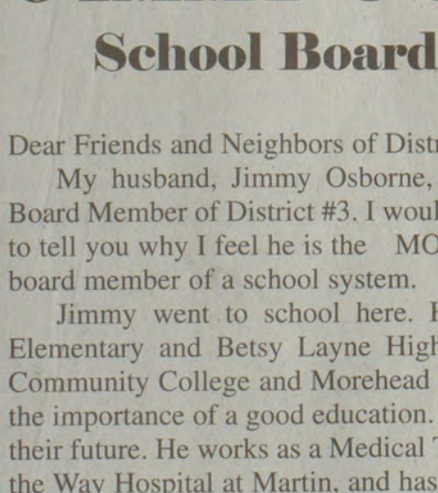
Dear Friends and Neighbors of District #3,

My husband, Jimmy Osborne, is a candidate for School Board Member of District #3. I would like to take a few minutes to tell you why I feel he is the MOST QUALIFIED to be a board member of a school system.

Jimmy went to school here. He graduated from Harold Elementary and Betsy Layne High School and Prestonsburg Community College and Morehead State University. He knows the importance of a good education. He believes in children and their future. He works as a Medical Technologist at Our Lady of the Way Hospital at Martin, and has for the last ten years.

Jimmy was born and raised in this area. He is the son of Ellis Osborne and the late Montana (Tean) Keathley Osborne. He is married to Linda (Evans) Osborne who is the daughter of Kennis (Roe) Evans and the late Topsie (Holt) Evans. He has two children who attend Betsy Layne Elementary, Jimmy Jr. and Crystal.

If elected, he will work to improve our schools to make them safe, so our children can get a good education. Our children deserve the very best education we can give them. We need to work to bring this area into the year 2000 with the best educational system we can possibly have. We can start now, with a vote for Jimmy Osborne on November 3, 1998. He will work for our kids!



Thank you for your time and support.

A Letter to the Voters of District 4:

Since August, I have been visiting some of your homes in District 4. While I don't know exactly how many people I have seen, I figure it is more than 2,000. A lot of walking and knocking on doors all the way from the Halbert precinct to Spewing Camp to Weeksbury. I want to thank the people who have welcomed me into their homes and their communities and for what I have learned from them.

In east McDowell, I sat on the front porch one evening just before dark and listened to a grandfather talk about his desire to bring the community together so that people could talk about their needs.

"You know, they don't listen to us any more," he told me. He was concerned about a grandson that had been in trouble at one of the schools. "We have to try to help these young people rather than pushing them out of our schools."

This past weekend, I listened to a Wheelwright resident talk about elected officials. "You can go to Prestonsburg and try to talk to people and they just ignore us. They don't care what we think." He wanted to know what I would do that was any different if I were elected to the board. When I told him that I would use whatever energy and time I had to serve children, he said, "That's all right then. You don't have to agree with me—just as long as you listen and try to do the right thing for children."

Many conversations later and with less than four days left to the November election, I understand why the people in Floyd County have lost their power. When I began my campaign for the board position in District #4, friends and people knowledgeable of politics gave me some advice. They told me that I didn't need to talk to all of the voters and that I only had to contact certain people in each voting precinct. These were the people, they told me, who controlled the votes in that part of the district. They told their neighbors how to vote. In an important race, these were also the people who handed out money in exchange for votes.

My friends could name these individuals in the community and those who influenced votes "in the house" or at the voting site. I might be able to win, they advised me, if the important politicians stayed out of the race, but if they decided to get involved and put money into the race, it was hopeless.

In spite of the fact that my friends know more about Floyd County politics than I will ever know, I have not listened to them. I have started at the head of a hollow or the first house when I go to a community because each voter is important to me. Part of our problem is that we have given up our right to be heard to a few individuals and in the process given up our schools and our government.

Last night, I heard that our county politicians are involved in the election in District #4. Once again, voters are about to be manipulated. My opponent is promising to build a new athletic facility in Left Beaver. She doesn't tell voters that Greg Stumbo has already appeared before the board and answered the questions that we had, and the funding has been accepted for the football field. Nor does she say how, as one board member, she can deliver on a promise to build an athletic complex. The money provided by the legislature for the field alone will not build such a facility. There are questions that voters need to be asking my opponent when she makes this promise. She has chosen to do what all politicians in Floyd County do—offer a new building or gravel a road and it sounds good.

What we gain through these promises is always so small in comparison to what we lose. We can't attract businesses or industry because of the quality of our schools. Floyd County seems to stand still while nearby counties are growing and developing. Our children have to leave home to find work.

The people of District 4 have an important opportunity to change things—to build a better future for our children. Isn't it time to do so? I urge you to think about the power that you have as voters and use it wisely. Use it for our students. Make your voices heard on November 3rd. No one can take your rights away in this election. No one can deceive you or control what you do in the voting booth—unless you give them that right.

The choice you make on November 3 is simple:

If you want someone who will promise new construction, jobs and pay raises without asking if these decisions help children, then don't vote for me. I will always question any recommendation that is put in front of me.

If you want someone who will not ask why politicians or state legislators, rather than the people of Floyd County, are making decisions about how money will be spent, then don't vote for me. We have given up our schools and our government to a few powerful people. It is time that we reclaimed them. I will fight for the rights of people in District 4 to make decisions and have a voice.

If you want someone who is not willing to make tough decision on behalf of children, then don't vote for me. I didn't like closing Melvin Elementary or any of the other schools in Floyd County, but in order to serve all of the children in District 4 better, I had to cast that vote. I was willing to accept the anger that should have been directed towards others in order to serve all of our students.

If you want someone who will blame others for our problems, create false issues, rather than looking at the facts and the truth, then don't vote for me. I have not and will probably never agree with everything that the Kentucky Department of Education does, but I know that they would not be in Floyd County today if we had run our schools well. I will never forget as long as I live sitting in a meeting at Jenny Wiley two years ago listening to the Opportunities Unlimited plead for hot lunches at their school. They shouldn't have had to beg for a decent lunch. Our county was responsible for that and it was wrong.

Don't vote for me if this is the type of board member you want.

But

If you want someone who understands education and who has spent more than twenty years working in classrooms at Alice Lloyd College, McDowell, and Wheelwright with students, then you need to vote for me. Important decisions are made at each board meeting, often by people who know little or nothing about education. Our children deserve knowledgeable people making the best possible decisions on their behalf. Only you can decide if they deserve that.

Kindergarten jumpstart at Betsy Layne Elementary

Everyone knows that one of the most traumatic time in the life of any five year old and their parents is the beginning of kindergarten. It is for many the first time the child and parent have experienced separation for any length of time. Many parents are laden with anxiety wondering if their child will be happy, safe, and adjusted. For kindergartners it can be a time of confusion. They really have no frame of reference for school and this "unknowing" can be very frightening.

In an effort to overcome these problems, the K/1 teachers at Betsy Layne Elementary came up with a special program to help alleviate these fears. It is called Kindergarten Jumpstart. Funded through the ESS program, Jumpstart was held on August 5, 6 and 7. The program began on Wednesday night when parents and students were invited to an "open house" where the kindergarten program could be discussed. After an informal reception and refreshment time, students and parents met with the teachers assigned them. This gave everyone concerned a time to become familiar with the school facility and each other. On Thursday and Friday from 9 a.m. until 12 p.m., students were engage, in their new classrooms, in crafts, songs, games, and all sorts of fun activities. Teachers, parents, and students all felt the program was a tremendous success.

Teachers participating in the program were Kathy Wagner, Gina Salisbury, Rhonda Tackett, Sandra Travis, Loma Harris, Rosemary Tackett, Shelia Hall, Traci Tackett and Sarah Barker. They were assisted by paraprofessionals Terry Akers, Terisa Hall, Cheryl Newsom, and Vivana Tackett.

Moore sent to Europe

Navy Fireman James F. Moore, son of Charles E. Moore of Jockey Hollow, Auxier, is one of more than 380,000 active duty sailors celebrating the Navy's 223rd birthday this month. Moore is currently on a six-month deployment to Northern Europe to represent the United States in NATO's Standing Naval Forces Atlantic, aboard the guided missile frigate USS Stark.

The Navy was created by the Continental Congress on October 13, 1775, after George Washington appealed for its formation. Since then, the Navy has been involved in all our nation's conflicts, from the Revolutionary War to Desert Storm, and sailors continue to serve the nation today, on ships and at bases around the world.

On October 13 every year, sailors mark the date as a time for ceremony and reflection on the deeds of the men and women who served before and who have given today's sailors their legacy of honor, courage and commitment.

Home ported in Mayport, Florida, Moore's ship is a combatant ship designed to protect amphibious expeditionary forces, underway replenishment groups and merchant convoys from undersea attack. In addition to torpedos, frigates carry helicopters that have sonar and torpedo capabilities, expanding the ship's reach.

Moore joined the Navy in October 1996.

Former Piarist School English teacher Michael O'Grady returned to the school recently to give the current student body a lecture on the importance of studying a foreign language. He told the students that while it is true most foreign students study and speak some English, unless American students also learn their language, they will never be accepted, and the best current prospects for good paying jobs do involve business contacts with other countries. After teaching at the Piarist School, O'Grady, who speaks six languages, spent several years teaching English to high school and college students in Poland. Piarist school senior Adam Hutchinson of Martin listened attentively as O'Grady presented his lecture.

Class reunion

Johnson Central High School, class of 1980, has scheduled a meeting at the Carriage House Hotel in Paintsville, for November 16, at 6 p.m., to discuss their Year 2000 reunion. Everyone is encouraged to attend. The reunion was initiated by Linda Ward and several of her classmates.

The commission's program provides diagnostic evaluation, clinical follow-up, x-rays, clinical equipment, supplies and therapy services for children.

For information on how to apply for services, call Monday through Friday at 349-7411 or toll free 1-800-594-7058. Changes coming in air conditioners, heating units

Because of environmental concerns, the federal government has issued regulations restricting the future production of R22 refrigerants—the refrigerants currently used in air conditioners or heat pumps.

"Some of the information about refrigerants can be confusing," says Jim Skaggs of Big Sandy Heating and Cooling in Lowmansville. "It's important for consumers shopping for new air conditioners or heat pumps to be armed with the facts about refrigerants before they buy."

Skaggs says that federal regulations call for an eventual phase-out of R22 refrigerant. "Products that use R22 must stop being produced by 2010," he says, adding that all production of R22 refrigerant will stop by 2020.

But there is no need to hesitate buying current air conditioning or heat pump equipment, says Skaggs. "The air conditioning industry has worked closely with the EPA to coordinate refrigerant phase-out," he explains.

Homeowners can be confident the products they buy today will support their home heating and cooling needs for the full expected life-span of the air conditioner or heat pump, Skaggs says. Sufficient quantities of R22 refrigerant will continue to be produced for any service need that may rise until 2020. And for many years after 2020, he explains, recycled refrigerants will be available that will safely fulfill all service needs for products that use R22.

Given the cost associated with developing the new refrigerants, the initial cost of any alternate refrigerant is expected to be quite high, says Skaggs. However, as production of new refrigerants increases, the cost will eventually come down.

MAYO MOMENTS

by Linda Lyon
Mayo Technical College

The spotlight this week falls on machine tool technology today. This program is a two-tiered offering starting with high school students who acquire credit toward post secondary graduation requirements and continuing with adult students who pursue a diploma in machining.

I wonder how many of you actually know what a machinist does? I know I did not have any idea what they did until I came to work at Mayo. Let me tell you some of the things these well trained professionals may find themselves doing.

How many times do we fasten things together with a screw, bolt, nut or brad?? A machinist made them. The pieces and parts that make a washing machine or refrigerator were probably made by a machinist. The tools that use drill bits, chucks, drivers, cams, and other metal parts were fashioned by a machinist. A machinist can make a brass candlestick, a tea pot, a chess set, or a golf club. They can create a sign, a name plate, a precision instrument for a surgeon or an axe for a woodsman.

Industrial plants cannot function without them. We, the consumer would not live nearly as well without them. All the designers and drafters in the world could not produce the masterpieces they do without the machinists to craft their designs in metals.

Here at Mayo our students begin in the mechanical machine shop where they use the manual lathes and cutting machines to learn to cut and refine tools and pieces and parts . This is where our beginning students begin including out high school students. The next step is the CNC lab where students use the computerized machines to create with exact precision.

They learn to program the machines to the specifications of precise designs and to execute the programs to produce the end products. Machine Tool Tech students work with the drafting students' designs in a coordinated effort between the two labs. Manford McCarty teaches the CNC section of machine tool and Keith Mollett is the instructor in the first level.

Perhaps you too would like to consider a career in this well paid, very employable profession.

We would like to discuss it with you. Call 789-5321 for more information.

Warranty important in new car buying

Consumers in the market for a new car should know the warranty coverage of the vehicle they are considering before buying it, according to AAA.

"The typical owner's warranty sits in the glovebox until there is a problem with the car," said Dave Van Sickle, director of AAA Automotive and Consumer Information. "By then it may be too late to avoid some common warranty pitfalls."

The most important things to remember in a warranty are what is covered, for how long and what the owner's responsibilities are, Van Sickle pointed out. For example, some warranties have separate mileage and time requirements for certain parts of the vehicle.

The vehicle may have "bumper-to-bumper" or full warranty for one time period, while the powertrain of the vehicle may be covered longer and the rust-through protection may extend even further.

If there is a problem with a vehicle that should be covered by warranty, it is important to have the work done by an authorized dealer. Scheduled maintenance, such as filter and fluid changes, should be completed promptly and all records should be kept. Failure to perform scheduled maintenance can void the warranty.

"Some manufacturers include free scheduled maintenance with a warranty, but usually it is the owner's responsibility," said Van Sickle. Those wanting longer warranties should shop the luxury car market. Cadillac and Lincoln have bumper-to-bumper warranties for four years/60,000 miles, compared to the standard three years/36,000 miles.

Adding "extras" to the vehicle usually won't affect the warranty, but it is still smart to check the warranty manual closely before making any changes to the vehicle.

For example, adding additional rustproofing to a vehicle may actually void the manufacturer's rust-through coverage.

Terry Ratliff, local chairmaker, spent the week of October 4 as an instructor at Open Ground, an arts camp in Washington County which offers arts-related classes year-round. Participants in Ratliff's class learned carving techniques while making wooden bowls. A weekend workshop, taught by Ratliff, focused on bent willow furniture. After two busy days, students took home handmade chairs or loveseats. For information on Open Ground, contact Don Boklage at 606/375-2411, or openground@kih.net.

Benshaw place
A ghost story

by Austin Alan
(A pseudonym)

I was walking down the street the other night by myself about ten-twenty, coming home from band practice. Since I am only 16, I did not have my driver's permit yet, so unfortunately I was walking that night.

And as I walked down Tudor street just about a block from home, I saw the old Benshaw Place off to the right of me. It was an older Victorian house that was run down and had the windows knocked out of it. No one would go in the house that I knew of. As I walked by it, I got to thinking about the rumors of its ghost. I stopped and looked at the Benshaw place more carefully and came to the conclusion that I would like to look inside it, for some reason. I was always afraid of things like spirits, but for the moment I was not.

After all, the legend has it that Mrs. Benshaw's spirit lives in the house still waiting for her husband to come home. He went off to war years ago, never to return.

I stood at the gate for a moment looking at the old Benshaw place, then went on in. As I walked onto the porch, it gave out a cracking sound from the boards under my feet. I kept on going to find myself at the bottom of the stairway of the house. I looked around. It was dark in the house, but I could see just a little from the moonlight coming in the broken windows. On the wall over the fireplace was a painting of what must have been Mr. Benshaw in uniform.

Looking up to the sound of a door hitting the wall slightly upstairs, I started to walk up the stairs. Suddenly I felt a cold burst of air blow by me from out of nowhere that put a chill in me for a second, as I stopped for a moment in my tracks on the stairs. Then I kept on walking up the stairs carefully to stand at the top of the stairs looking at three doors to my left, and two to my right. I walked to the middle door to the left of the top of the stairs. Slowly I went in the room looking around at everything as I walked cautiously. I saw a rocking chair sitting in front of the window, sitting still in the moonlight. The bed had a hat of Mr. Benshaw's lying with dust on it.

I looked around the room, then began to feel more relaxed, as I realized that those rumors people had always said about this place were just rumors. I felt compelled to look around the room some more, so I did, seeing a few things on the dresser that belonged to Mr. Benshaw — one of them was a pocket watch with a chain going from the watch to a small pocket knife. Standing there in the room, I was thinking about how Mrs. Benshaw must have felt waiting for her husband in that rocking chair by the window. Suddenly I was no longer afraid of the house at all. And I was glad that I came in to investigate for myself.

So I turned and walked out of the room slowly, then down the stairs, looking at the picture of Mr. Benshaw as I stepped down the stairs. I thought standing at the bottom of the stairs, all the bad dreams of this place I had had were for nothing. I shrugged and started to sigh as I felt something touch the back of my left shoulder, and I slowly turned around to see what had touched me. There was the ghost of Mrs. Benshaw pointing to the room I had just come from, and she spoke to me.

"You forgot your hat."

Preventing mishaps for a safe, fun Halloween

Children across the state are selecting their Halloween costumes while adults are buying candy for the most bewitching night of the year. But while you are thinking about costumes and candy, don't forget about safety.

If children follow some simple safety tips while roaming through their neighborhoods in search of candy, they will have a fun and safe evening.

"Halloween can be one of the most dangerous nights of the year for children," said Darlene Goodrich, coordinator of the Kentucky SAFE KIDS Coalition in the Department for Public Health. "Most trick-or-treating injuries happen because of unsafe costumes, motor vehicles or collected candy. Before a child goes out trick-or-treating, parents should make sure the child's costume is safe, and important safety rules have been reviewed."

Goodrich said the first safety rule is adult supervision, especially for young children. If an older child wants to go without an adult, then that child should go with a group for protection, she said.

"Trick-or-treating is an exciting activity for children. Since fewer homes participate in trick-or-treating, sometimes children get in a hurry when they see a light on at a house and they forget about safety," Goodrich said.

The following suggestions will help children have a safe Halloween.

To prevent falls:

* Apply face paint or cosmetics directly to the face. A loose-fitting mask can obstruct a child's vision. If a mask is worn, make sure it fits securely and the eye holes are large enough for good vision.

* Give trick-or-treaters' flashlights.

* Make costumes short enough to avoid tripping.

* Secure hats so they will not slip over a child's eyes.

* Dress children in shoes that fit. Adult shoes used for costumes are not safe for trick-or-treating.

* Allow children to carry only flexible knives, swords or other props. Anything they carry could injure them if they fall.

* Teach children to stay on sidewalks instead of cutting across yards. Lawn ornaments, tree branches and clotheslines are hidden hazards in the dark.

To avoid injuries involving motor vehicles, follow these tips:

* Decorate costumes, bags and sacks with reflective tape.

* Use Halloween costumes that are light or bright enough to make them more visible at night.

* Tell children to walk, not run, while trick-or-treating.

* Remind children to stop at corners, look left, right and left again before crossing the street, and never dart from between parked cars.

Motorists should be particularly alert on trick-or-treat night and follow these safety tips:

* Slow down in residential neighborhoods.

* Watch for children walking in the street or on medians and curbs.

* Obey all traffic signs and signals.

* Enter and exit driveways and alleyways carefully.

* Teach children to enter and exit the car on the curb side, away from traffic.

When choosing a costume remember these helpful tips to prevent burns:

* Look for flame resistant labels on costumes, masks, beards and wigs.

* Use fire resistant material when making homemade costumes.

* Avoid costumes made out of flimsy material and outfits with big, baggy sleeves or billowing skirts because they are more likely to come in contact with an exposed flame.

These general rules can prevent a scary experience:

* Tell children not to eat treats before they are checked at home for tampering. Check each piece for puncture holes in wrappers or candy that has been unwrapped and repackaged. Adults should try to notice treats given at each home in case there is a question later. Suspect items should be reported to the police. Discard homemade treats. Fruits should be inspected closely for punctures and cut open before a child eats it. Some communities provide free x-rays of trick-or-treat items.

* Teach your child his or her phone number.

* Instruct older children to travel only in familiar areas and along an established route.

* Set time for older children to return home.

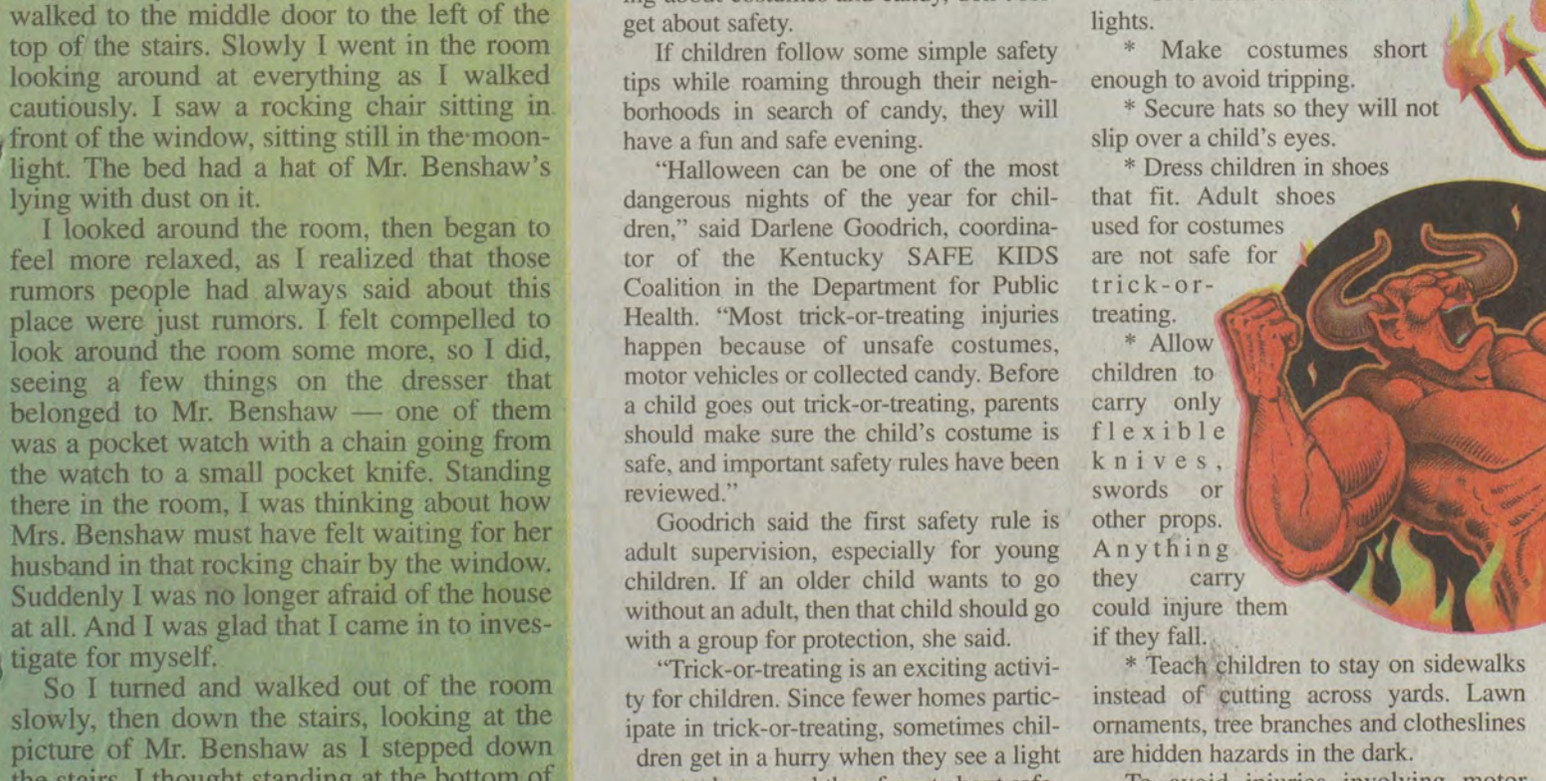
* Instruct children never to enter a home or an apartment building unless accompanied by their supervising adult.

* Restrict their trick-or-treating visits to homes with porch or outside lights illuminated.

* Adults should remove breakable items or obstacles such as tools, ladders and children's toys from their lawns, steps and porches.

Goodrich said some parents may want to consider some safe alternatives to door-to-door trick-or-treating. Parents can host a Halloween party, take children only to homes where they know the residents or go to malls where the stores have trick-or-treating.

For more information on Halloween safely, contact Goodrich at the Kentucky SAFE KIDS Coalition, Department for Public Health in Frankfort at (502) 564-2154.



Little girl and the big black panther and only a little piece of liver

(Submitted by Mildred Setser Fannin, who said: "This is one of the stories told to me by, my grandmother, Zella (Griffey) Burchell when I was just a small child. I have had many little listeners, that were sweet little friends of mine and also my children, when they were small.)

Once upon a time many years ago, out in the country, close to a large forest. There lived a man and his wife and their little daughter. This little girl was their pride and joy.

They didn't want to speak her, but they had great difficulty in putting her to bed at night because she had so much energy. One night she decided she wasn't going to bed until much later.

They had told her to go to bed, and sleep tight, and have good dreams. The little girl began her usual routine. "Please don't put me to bed," she said. She then started jumping up and down and screaming so very loud that their ears began to hurt, and oh, what headaches she gave them.

They told her to stop or they were going to put her out in the dark on their front porch until she quit crying.

She wouldn't stop crying and was actually screaming, so they put her out on the porch. They heard a few more real loud screams, ear piercing screams, then all of a sudden, everything was silent.

Her mom and dad thought, how wonderful. They thought they had broken her from screaming. They opened the door and saw a huge black panther with large squinted green eyes. This dangerous animal turned and ran into the forest. They looked around for their precious little girl that they loved so much, but all they found was a little piece of her liver. That old black panther had killed their darling little girl. Her mother and dad cried and cried for so many days, that they almost died.

But the moral to this story is this: Children obey your parents, and there is a good chance that you will live longer upon this earth.

Davis Road: A ghost story

by Austin Alan
(a pseudonym)

A narrow road that went from Trimble Branch to Sagan's Creek was a fearful road for many to travel who actually knew the history of the road. It was late in October of sixty-nine that a man named Mark Davis was walking home from work around nine-thirty at night. He was a local grocery store clerk who worked at Carl Counts on Main Street in town. He was a gentle and quiet man that had few friends to speak of, and a lot of people who talked about him. He never caused anyone any harm or trouble to speak of. But he went about his business daily and to church on Sundays.

On that cool October night as he was walking home from work, a truck came down the road with a couple of guys in the back of it whooping and hollering as they passed. One of them knew him for he yelled out.

"Watch out there, Mark!" And he laughed out as the truck passed.

Mark stood on the side of the road as the truck passed and watched it go down the road out of sight. He took a few more steps and heard something in the trees off to his right. There was a tree line about ten to twelve feet from the ditch line next to the road. He felt afraid, but kept on walking. He had only taken a few more steps when he saw someone come out of the tree line with a gun in his hand. It was dark, but the moonlit sky gave him enough light to see that there was someone there with a gun, slowly walking toward him. He yelled out, "Don't shoot!"

But it was too late. The person standing along the tree line had shot and killed Mark Davis in cold blood, that cool October night for no apparent reason. His body lay on the pavement in the middle of the road that had just been built recently by the county for the public's use.

In the night air, the sound of a person walking through the tree line and tall weeds could be heard going away into the distance. Mark lay still with the life out of him, but next to his body was a glow of his spirit that moved over him for a few minutes before going off into the tree line after the gunman. The spirit flew rapidly to the heels of the man carrying a large shotgun across his arms in the woods. The spirit appeared before the gunman in the dark woods of birch trees. The gunman stood still, not shaking or twitching at all from the spirit's presence.

"What in tarnation do you want? You're dead now," He said.

The spirit circled over him and around him for a few seconds then went on back to the road in a flash. The spirit stood next to the body for about three hours until another car came driving by. It stopped, and a women and a man got out, gasping at the sight of the body in the middle of the road. Shocked at the sight, the women fell into the arms of the man who began patting her on the shoulder.

"Let's get back into the car and go phone for help." The couple got back into the car and drove to the nearest telephone, about a mile off the road they were on. It did not take long for the police to arrive at the scene. Next came the coroner and a few other on-lookers.

The local paper read the next day," Local man killed." Nothing too detailed, because nothing was ever found out about who had shot Mark Davis that cool October night.

But folks around these parts say, a spirit can be seen now and then darting through the tree line off that road, now called Davis Road.

A rumor has been spread over the years that his ghost walks the road and tree line during the night. And a couple of people have said they have seen it, and it has spoken to them at times. But they could not hear clearly what the spirit was saying. Maybe someday someone will hear Mark Davis's spirit clearly, and his killer will be brought to justice. Maybe you will hear him tonight.

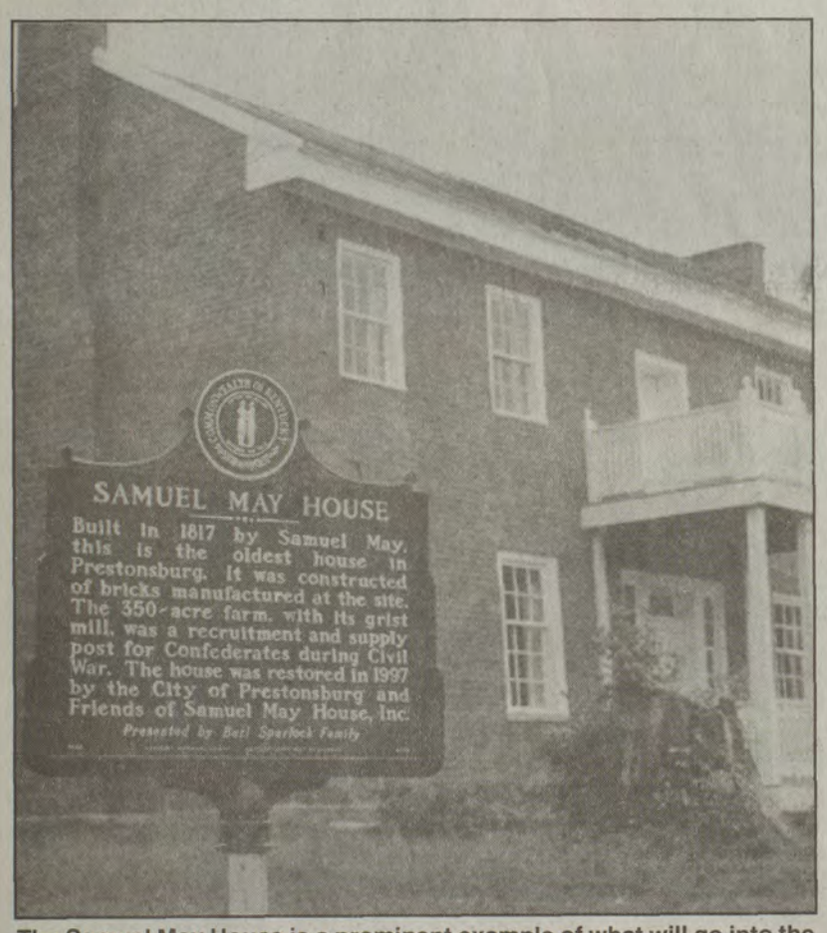
Historical photos of county requested for new book



The Samuel May House is a prominent example of what will go into the Floyd County Pictorial History. But the committee needs photos of families and houses from throughout the county.

The Floyd County Historical and Geneological Society and the Friends of the Samuel May House have begun compiling material and historical photographs for the publication of a new pictorial history book of the county.

The large hardbound book will include many never-before-published photographs of every aspect of Floyd County's history. The Floyd County Pictorial History Book Committee, chaired by Robert Perry and assisted by Jim Daniels, president of the Floyd County Historical and Geneological Society, is asking families and individuals to submit their historical photos for inclusion in this edition before December 15.

All photos will be returned once the book is completed. In the near future, a brochure will be sent out from the book committee to each household. The brochure contains important details about how each family and community in the county can be represented.

The new volume will be published with the help of Keith Steele, publishing consultant with Turner Publishing Company, who will be assisting county residents throughout the project.

Turner Publishing of Paducah previously helped publish the popular "Floyd County Family History" which up until recently, had been out of print.

The pictorial book will have a rich black leatherette cover with gold embossing to match the family history book and will contain hundreds of historical photos, maps, sketches and historical highlights of Floyd County.

Books must be ordered in advance to be assured of receiving a copy at the special pre-publication price of $32.50 (plus $1.95 sales tax and $6 shipping, if mailed).

Send all materials, photos and orders to: Floyd County Pictorial History Book, P.O. Box 982, Prestonsburg, KY 41653, or call (606) 886-3863, ext. 290 for more information.

All About Animals...

Written by Kim Kilgore

Mrs. Bragg's second grade class did a theme on animals and animal groups. This activity was part of their Science. The students were asked to draw an animal and label it according to the group it belonged to.

Kristen Bentley drew a tiger. Kristen said that the tiger belonged to the mammal group. The baby tigers get milk from their moms and they hunt different animals. They eat deer and they have orange or black fur.

Ali Wright drew a frog. Ali said that frogs are amphibians. Frogs eat insects. Frogs live on land and water and are known as tadpoles when they are babies.

Joey Slone drew a fish. and fish just belong to the fish group. Joey said fish have gills and they have fins. Fish have cold blood. Some have teeth and they have gills for breathing.

A Penny's Worth of Character

by Jessie Stuart

A little boy named Shan was walking to a store named Mr. Conley's. His mom had laid out 9 bags for him to take. He knew it wasn't enough to get both a candy and soda pop so he took the bad with the hole in it. He tricked Mr. Conley, but he didn't trick his mom so he had to go back and give Mr. Conley a new bag.

Pictured above is Mrs. Leslie's 5th grade class. They had a school clean up. They cleaned trash outside and around the school. They had a contest to see who could gather the most garbage. The winners were Ashley Slone and Kayla Combs.

School Ghouls...

by Allison Dye

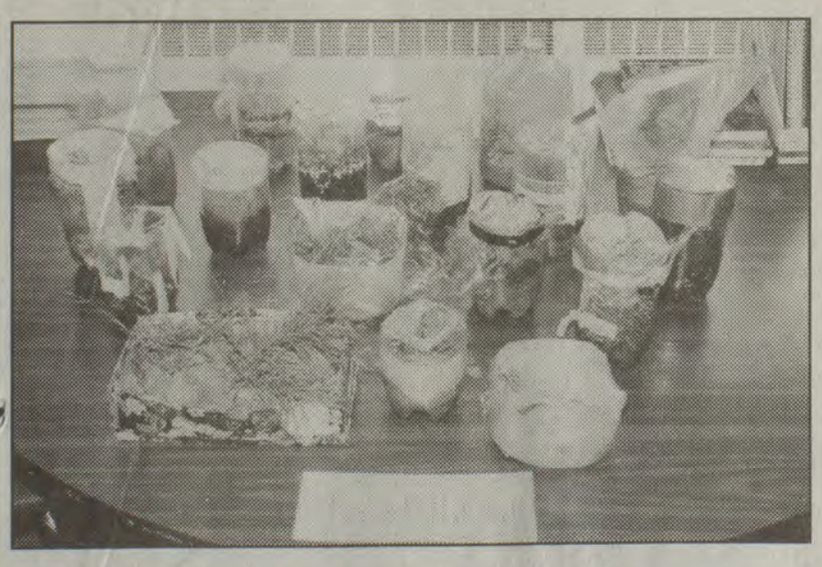
It was 8:03 a.m. when I jumped out of my mom's van and 2 minutes until I would have to get a tardy slip. I ran as fast as I could. Yes! I made it! I went to go get my books and I noticed it wasn't Mrs. Madden! It was the ugliest substitute ever! She had a long bumpy nose and stringy green hair. (sorta like my mom's hair when she got a bad bleach job). "Who is that?" I asked Morgan. She goes by the name Miss MadOne. She pointed her crooked finger at me and said "Take this down to Sally, the secretary." No way was I going to say no. I walked down to the office and there beside the desk was a vampire! She had sharp pointy teeth and slick black hair. Her face was as white as chalk. When she took the absentee's I noticed she had long red fingernails. I wondered if Mr. Combs had noticed. I looked through the door and saw a Frankenstein looking man! He had a flat top, a green face, and bolts in his neck. I didn't stay to see the rest. I hurried back to class I didn't want to get sent to see THAT principal.

Later that day when lunch came instead of Alvie, there stood the ugliest troll you'd ever seen! I knew then how Billy Goats Gruff felt trying to get to the sweet green grass.

My friend Pam told me her teacher Mrs. Hunsucker was an alien. I thought she was kidding until time to line up. Wow! Her teacher really was out of this world. With a big silver head and glowing green eyes.

When we went to music instead of Mr. Ord our usual music teacher it was Mr. Wolf, I mean Mr. Werewolf. My nerves were almost shot.

It wasn't until the last bell Mr. Combs announced for everyone to come to the Halloween dance. Then I realized what was going on, all of my teachers were dressed up for Halloween. How silly of me!



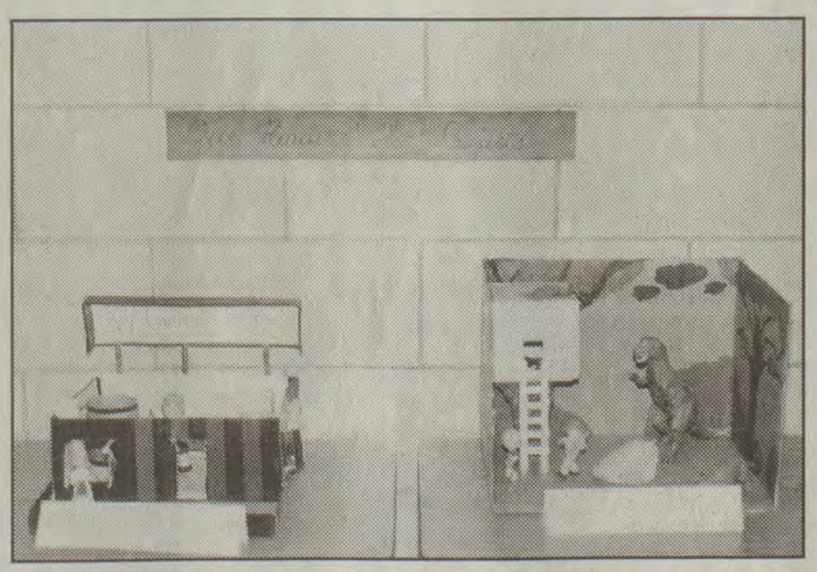
Forest Habitat

by Adam Reffett

Mrs. Dingus and Mrs. Warrix's classes did a project on the forest. The students that displayed their projects were Ali Hackworth, Erica Pitts, Keisha Stanley, Lashona Bradford, Nathan Evans, Brittany Hook and Jesse Mullins.

Jesse Mullins, one of the students, put soil and different kinds of plants in his bottle and also put tiny rocks in it. He put tiny toy animals in it and roots for the plants to grow. All the students worked very hard on their projects and they looked GREAT!!!

Dinosaurs Before Dark



by Mary Pope Osborne

Jack and Annie found a magic treehouse full of books in the forest. When Jack read about dinosaurs land. While exploring Jack got trapped by a Tyrannosaurus Rex. Annie sent the Pteranodon to save Jack and bring him back. When Jack got back to the treehouse, he found a book about Pennsylvania. He found a picture about Frog Creek, Pennsylvania, their home, and wished them back home.

Justin and His Bear Adventure

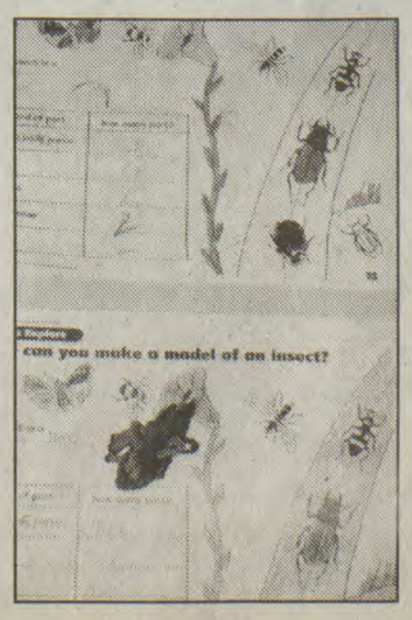
by Justin Montgomery

I went hunting. Can I make a ring of fire I was scared of catching the forest on fire but I did it anyway. The Bear was after me. The people killed it. The people were saved by a helicopter coming from out of nowhere.

The castle of cans

Miss Key and Mrs. Barrows "Creative Kindergartners" have studied the sound of "C". Using the "C" sound they made a can sculpture. They named it "The Castle". Even Hayes found a place for an elevator in it. They incorporated math in this project. They had studied the number 4. One child was called to the worktable and asked how many more children that it would take to make a group of 4. Each child was given an empty can, he/she pointed to the place where they wanted their can to be glued. This is a creative way to recycle cans and have fun doing it.

Grouping Living Things



by Kim Kilgore

Mrs. Bailey's 2nd grade class made models of insects to show what they learned about basic characteristics of insects. They used clay and pipe cleaners.

Isaac Bentley made a model of an insect made out of clay. The insect that Isaac made was a wasp. He told me that they can fly and walk sideways and they have stingers they have little hairs that are sticky so it can climb up side down. Insects have six legs. Some have antennae. And they have three body parts. And some have wings.

Jacob Cline made a model of a fly Jacob said that they have three body parts. And six legs and two wings.

GOSPEL ACCORDING TO ME

The Internet: An awesome tool for ministry

During my days as a full-time journalist, I gained a reputation in the newsroom as a "technophobe," a word I'm pretty sure my coworkers coined just for me.

By "technophobe" they meant I exhibited an irrational - they would have said pathological - distaste for computer technology, and particularly for the Internet.

Over lunch, my colleagues would wax eloquent about the glories of cyberspace and chat rooms, bits and bytes, servers and such.

I hadn't the slightest desire to understand what they were talking about. I figured that if a quill pen and ink well were good enough for Bill Shakespeare, they were good enough for me. I didn't give a zip-a-dee-doo-dah about a zip drive.

Paul Prather

But in the last year I've done a 180-degree turn. With the help of a few diligent - and much younger - adults from my church, I've finally learned to use a personal computer as something more than a glorified typewriter.

I guess you can teach an old dog. Or even an old reporter.

Shoot, I've decided that the Internet, particularly, holds the future of Christian ministry. It's recreating the way people communicate as dramatically as did the printing press in the 1400s or television in the 1950s.

Churches that aren't on-line are missing a tremendous opportunity to reach untapped audiences at almost no cost. Already tens of millions of Americans use the Internet, and the number is growing weekly.

Here's what our church is doing:

* A businessman who runs a computer-based company helped our church set up its own Internet web site - a home base in cyberspace - at no charge. The site tells everything you'd ever want to know about our congregation.

Unlike trying to call the church office and get information, you can call up our web site 24 hours a day, seven days a week, from anywhere in the world.

(Our address: www.bethesda-church.org.)

* Our little church, located in the boondocks of a rural Kentucky county, places a strong emphasis on praying for other people.

We asked permission to link our web site with that of another on-line ministry that has a greater visibility. The other ministry's site includes a page from which readers can e-mail in their personal requests for prayer.

These requests automatically are forwarded to our church.

In the last six months we've received prayer requests from, at last count, 40 U.S. states and 38 nations - such far-flung locales as the Czech Republic, Malaysia, Kuwait, and South Africa.

Among other benefits, this influx of prayer requests has helped revitalize the men's prayer group at our church; the group's Thursday night attendance has doubled.

* A young man in our congregation recently reprogrammed our web site so that it now can broadcast audiotaped sermons from our services.

I recently completed an eight-part sermon series on God's grace, for instance.

Anyone on the planet who owns a modem and feels the desire - I'm not sure exactly who that would be - can listen to all eight sermons over his or her computer, free.

* Within a few years, we expect to offer live and taped videos over the Internet as well. People in Zaire will be able to sit in their living rooms and watch our church services if they wish, at their own convenience.

Probably by then they'll watch us on their televisions. My techie parishioners assure me that soon most people's Internet hookup will be wired through their television sets. TVs and home computers will essentially be one and the same.

If you're on the net, you'll be on TV.

* The Internet is an especially effective tool for getting young adults involved - those hard-to-reach 20-somethings.

They're the ones most excited by this new form of ministry. At our church, they're the ones doing all the work on it.

There's plenty more I could say about all this. The possibilities, like the Internet itself, are limited only by your energy and imagination.

MAYO MOMENTS

by Linda Lyon
Marketing Director
Mayo Technical College

The program spotlighted this week is drafting. Here at Mayo Technical College we offer three levels of drafting. You can choose from the high school drafting, mechanical drafting and CAD drafting. Within these categories are other levels and subjects that you can choose from.

Drafting covers several professional areas. A drafter is a person who draws. They draw precise plans for construction of things. It may be a house, a tool, a machine, or a number of other things. You may draw the plans for an office building or a home or a parking garage. That is called architectural drafting. You may draw the plans for a new milling machine, a factory assembly line, a new tool, or a nut and bolt assembly for something. That is called mechanical drafting. You also can learn to do this drafting on a computer with programs designed to aid you in the planning and drawing. This is called Computer Aided Drafting (CAD). CAD drafting seems to be in big demand as this country moves into the Age of Technology. Here at Mayo Tech our students use computers to construct plans that can be used by our machinists and our automated manufacturing students to build machines that do work. Live work and cooperative education projects give our students access to work experience which is valuable when searching for employment.

You may wonder what the employment prospects are for a drafter. Every manufacturing company employs drafters. Engineering firms and independent drafting concerns also employ drafters. Many drafters choose to work on a free-lance basis, taking contracts from a wide range of companies and agencies. You cannot build a structure or manufacture a machine without a drafter doing his/her work first. Our students are very employable. It's a good job for the person who enjoys this type of work. There is a good future in this field if you want it.

Call us today at 789-5321 to discuss your opportunities as a drafter. You could be sitting behind the desk drawing the next major construction project if this is for you. Our instructors, Ralph Brown or Judy Blanton will be happy to talk to you. Call today.

A long-standing tradition at Mayo has been its cosmetology program. Hair and nail care is a basic staple for most of us and provides jobs in every city, town and community in America. Women and men have been coming to Mayo to learn the art of cosmetology since its very early years as an institution. Coordinated with the State Board of Cosmetology, the program provides both academic and hands on training.

Vanessa McCormick is the instructor in cosmetology. She supervises her students as they daily do the hair and nails of numerous ladies and men from this area. Mayo has been the "beauty shop" for numerous Johnson County residents over the years. You can get your beauty services at a cost savings and know that every process is supervised by an instructor. What a deal!

We have a new schedule for the public. The Cosmetology Program is now taking clients in the morning, Monday through Thursday and all day on Friday. Starting the second week after Labor Day, you can make an appointment to have your nails done in many different ways, from manicures to artificial nails of different types. There are two new nail tech apprentices working at the moment. Plan to have the most beautiful nails in Paintsville and at a fraction of the cost elsewhere.

Cosmetology is just one of the programs we offer here at Mayo Technical College. You have a future at Mayo. Let us help you organize it. Call 789-5321 today to start a whole new beginning.

University of Kentucky to award scholarships

8th graders eligible for UK program

A special University of Kentucky scholarship program is now open for applications from eighth-grade students in Floyd and 28 other eastern Kentucky counties.

The Robinson Scholars Program will identify at least two eighth-graders from each of the counties, offering them full tuition, room and board, and other expenses if, as high-school seniors, they win acceptance to UK or any of Kentucky's community colleges.

The application process requires students to be nominated, but students or their parents, as well as teachers and school principals, can initiate the nomination. Nomination packets may be obtained from the student's school. Deadline for submitting the nomination is November 20, 1998.

Selection is based on each student's academic potential, the lack of previous generations' college degree, the family's financial need for assistance with college-related expenses, essays and interviews. At current costs, each scholarship carries a value of about $8,000 per year. During 1997 and 1998 the program inducted 276 eighth-grade students.

The Robinson Scholars Program is funded by earnings from mining and logging operations permitted on nearly 5,000 acres of the 14,000-acre Robinson Forest in Breathitt, Perry and Knott counties. The program was established in August 1995 by the UK Board of Trustees.

In 1991, the UK Board of Trustees approved the opening of specified areas for mining and logging activity. The royalties received by UK are being used as an endowment to fund a variety of programs, including the Robinson Scholars Program.

The counties targeted by the program are Bell, Breathitt, Carter, Clay, Elliott, Estill, Floyd, Harlan, Jackson, Johnson, Knott, Knox, Laurel, Lawrence, Lee, Leslie, Letcher, Magoffin, Martin, McCreary, Menifee, Morgan, Owsley, Perry, Pike, Powell, Rockcastle, Whitley and Wolfe.

Fifth-graders at Prestonsburg Elementary School ride in the hot-air balloon at the end of school. The Family Resource Center has sponsored this event for several years to "send off" the fifth-graders to Middle School. Up, up and away!

Local students included in National Dean's List

A total of 26 students from this area are among the more than 120,000 students included in the 21st annual edition of The National Dean's List, 1997-98, published by Educational Communications Inc.

Students are selected by their college deans, registrars or honor society advisors and must be in the upper 10 percent of their class, on their school's Dean's List, or have earned a comparable honor.

Listed students are eligible to compete for $50,000 in scholarship awards funded by the publisher and may also use a referral service for future employment opportunities. More than 2,500 colleges and universities nationwide use the publication to recognize their academically qualified students.

Allen Elementary is #1

Principal Linda Gearheart, here with Floyd County attendance officer Daniel Branson, said the 96.3 attendance rate for the month means "parents, students and teachers are working together for education."

Conservation contest carries cash prizes

"Kentucky Wildlife: Sharing Our Common Wealth" is the theme of this year's Conservation Writing and Art Contest, sponsored by the Floyd County Conservation District.

Entries of artwork and writings are due in each school principal's office by November 24, and principals must turn them in to the superintendent's office or the conservation district office by December 1.

At the school level, the conservation district will award winners of artwork and writings $25 for first place, $20 for second place, and $15 for third place.

County winners will receive $50 for first place, $25 for second, and $20 for third.

All winners will receive certificates from the district.

Schools with 100 percent participation will receive $100 and a plaque, and the district will, for the first time, award $100 to an elementary, middle and high school teacher.

Winners at the state level will be awarded $500 and a $200 US Savings Bond by the Louisville Courier-Journal.

Information on the contest has been sent to the schools, according to environmental educator Michelle Goble.

For answers to questions about the contest, contact Goble at 886-9545, ext. 104, or e-mail at conserve@eastky.net.

Music has successful surgery

Ramanda Music, who injured her right wrist, underwent successful surgery and is expected to be back with the Lady Pirates of Belfry before the basketball season begins. Music had surgery last week and is progressing well, according to her father, Kenny Music.

"When the swelling goes down, they are going to put a cast on it," he said. "She should be back by the panoramas."

Lady Eagles return players

Coach Phillip Wireman will return his entire squad from last year and you can bet Johnson Central will be a team to reckon with this basketball season. The Lady Eagles will have only three seniors this season and a good group of sophomores.

Good group returning

This year the Sheldon Clark Lady Cardinals will be a senior-laden team. Coach Robin Newsome will return five seniors to go with a good group of sophomores and freshmen. One of those sophomores is Mandy Harmon, and she is a good one.

Surprise team?

Looking for a surprise team this basketball season? Then consider the Lady Hornets of Phelps. Coming back? Courtney Mercer, Devin Stiltner and Erika Fannin.

PLAYER PROFILE...

Keathley, Leslie will have to fill void

Keathley has sights set on the Sweet 16

by Ed Taylor
Sports Editor

(This is the first of players profiles the Times will run as basketball season approaches.)

It was March 1997 and the place was Elkhorn City. The event was the 15th Region High School Basketball Tournament and the opponent for the Prestonsburg Blackcats was the Pikeville Panthers. Of course, it was the Panthers who pulled out a close win over coach Jack Pack's Blackcats that ended their dream of a regional championship.

This is 1998 and the '98-'99 season is just on the horizon as the Blackcats work hard on the hardwood, waiting for the opening game on December 1.

Prestonsburg lost five seniors from last year's club and more notably Andy Jarvis and Wes Samons. But they return a group of seniors who know this could be the year of the Cats. One of those is senior Jason Keathley, who said others will have to contribute this season.

"Some of our juniors are going to have to step up their game this year," said Keathley. "Nathan (Leslie) and I are going have to work the boards harder this year with Andy gone."

Jarvis was one of the top shot blockers in the region and the state last year and Keathley said his defense around the basket will be missed.

"With Andy gone it is going to be tough on Nathan and me," he said. "Especially around the basket. We are going have to get a lot more rebounds."

Keathley is one of the hard workers on the Blackcat team and averaged just over eight points per game last year while pulling in five rebounds per contest. He will play the small forward slot.

Keathley said that Prestonsburg will be a contending team, even with the loss of the two All-District players.

"This is going to be a good defensive ballclub," he said. "We will be a good pressing team as well."

Keathley said the likes of Joe Campbell and John Ortega, as well as Leslie, will make the Cats a district favorite.

"Joe is a great shooter, he plays defense and does everything well," said Keathley. "John (Ortega) is one of the best ball handlers in Eastern Kentucky. Nathan does so many things well."

PLAYOFF HOPES ON THE LINE

South Floyd Raiders visit Elkhorn City

by Ed Taylor
Sports Editor

You know it is Halloween when strange things happen. For Coach Donnie Daniels and the South Floyd Raiders, his team's playoff hopes have come alive.

"We have come back from the dead," he said of his Halloween chances of making the state playoffs. "Two weeks ago, we were dead and people had written us off. But now, even though it is a small one, we still have a chance of making the playoffs."

Things have developed lately because of loses other teams have unexpectively suffered. In order for the Raiders to make their second consecutive playoff appearance and third in the past four years, they will have to pull out a big win against the Elkhorn City Cougars tonight at the Cougars den.

A win over Elkhorn City could create a tie for fourth place between the Raiders, Cougars and Fleming-Neon Pirates. If the Raiders win at Elkhorn, Fleming-Neon wins over winless Jenkins, that would create a three way tie for the fourth spot. Each team would have identical 2-4 district records.

To break the tie, the point system would come into being with each team able to declare four teams on their schedule with the greatest number of wins, who they have beaten, but cannot declare each other. South Floyd could not declare the Elkhorn City game, etc.

"We would be able to declare Allen Central (3), Beth Haven (6) and Jenkins (0)," said Coach Daniels.

That would give the Raiders at least 10 points and a possible 11. Elkhorn City could declare only

WITH DISTRICTS SETTLED,

Blackcats, Panthers to battle tonight

by Ed Taylor
Sports Editor

It has little significance, the Prestonsburg-Pikeville matchup of tonight. Both teams are well on their way to the state football playoffs and have nothing to prove except gaining bragging rights.

The two powerhouses in their respective districts will kick off in front of what is expected to be a sell out crowd at the Prestonsburg stadium.

Jermey Caudill
Grant Castle

The two teams will mirror each other in some areas while the edge may go to the Blackcats with their running game. Both teams have very capable quarterbacks and "good-hands" receivers. Pikeville quarterback Ben Howard may have the edge over senior Adam Hall of Prestonsburg, but that is only because Hall had to miss the first three games of the season for Prestonsburg.

Since his arrival back to the team at the Whitesburg game, Hall has been one of the top signal callers in the state and has put up some very impressive numbers.

In the seven games he has played in, he has completed 57 passes for 1,094 yards and thrown for 18 touchdowns. He has been intercepted only six times. Against last week foe,

A LOOK AT SPORTS

NBA: Does anyone really care if they play basketball

Ed Taylor Sports Editor

By now we would have been flooded with NBA games on the tube. But it has been quiet on the NBA front as the owners still have the players locked out and it doesn't look too promising that the league will start up anytime soon. But does it really matter? Does anyone really give a hoot if they play or not?

I know there are some people out there who still follow the millionaire's league. I know that! But to they really miss it, like say, a UK game. Not me. I could care less if they ever play another game in the NBA.

The first two weeks of the regular season has been canceled and plans are for the owners to announce further cancellations later in the week.

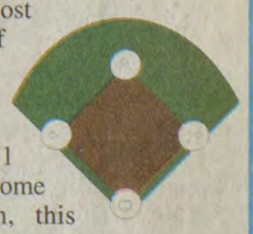
Did you see the breakdown of the salaries these kids are drawing? Wow! Over half of the NBA players are drawing the $1.3 million range. That breaks down to $25,000 a week. Can you imagine it? $25,000 a week. Some are drawing $50,000 a week. Unbelievable!

These poor souls must be starving. Must not be able to make their mortgage payment. Must not have stashed any back for times like these. Maybe we could have a yard sale for them!

BASEBALL

Like major league baseball, the NBA is ready to turn off the fans if most of the season is canceled. After all, there is much more basketball to watch if the NBA cancels half of the season. After all, there is college basketball which has become the real favorite pastime.

Baseball used to be America's favorite pastime but has fallen on hard times since the salary escalation and the strike that canceled the playoffs and World Series several seasons ago.



Baseball lost a lot of fans then, and they still haven't come back. Oh, this year was an exception, thanks in part to Sammy Sosa and Mark McGwire. They created an interest in the game that hadn't been there for several years.

Now that all the celebration is over, there is next season and what will the boys of summer do to create more interest. Surely McGwire will not hit 70 again.

Major league sports has created a rift between themselves and the fans. Only the NFL enjoys a fan-friendly relationship and that is because there is so much parity in the leagues. When you follow a team and you know they are going to be

Raiders

Allen Central and Jenkins, good for three points, while Fleming-Neon has the possibility of nine points: Pineville (4), West Carter (3) and Holy Cross (1) and Jenkins (0).

The Raiders have won the past two weekends defeating Allen Central and Louisville Beth Haven. But Coach Daniels may be a little short-handed when they meet Elkhorn City tonight.

Jarrod Johnson has already been lost to the team and now senior fullback Darren Newsome will miss the rest of the season after having surgery on his leg. Dependable Joe Platkus has an hyper-extended knee and James Walker continues to be out with an injured shoulder. On top of all that, defensive specialist, Andy Moore quit the team.

"We still have a good shot at them," said the Raider coach. "I have to give the kids credit, they have played hard after everyone wrote them off two weeks ago. They are playing with a lot of pride."

The Raiders have the dynamic duo of Matt Tackett and B.J. Bryant in the backfield. Newsome just gave that extra yardage, but with Newsome out and replacement Platkus ailing, it is not known who will fill the fullback slot.

"Beth Haven had two players concentrating on B.J. and that just left Matt wide open," said Daniels. "He has been playing some real good football for us."

Junior Charlie Williams is one of the top passers in the area and has an excellent target in Kyle Tackett.

"Kyle has been super and getting better," said Daniels.

For the past three seasons, it has come down to the final game of the regular season in determining the Raiders playoff hopes. For the third time, it has been Elkhorn City standing in the way. The Raiders are aware of the importance of this game.

The game will be on a delay basis over WPRG, Channel 5. Game time is set for 7:30 p.m.

Battle

Shelby Valley, Hall completed 14 passes for 205 yards, four touchdowns. It was his third 200-yards or better game this year.

But Hall has the receivers and that is one of the reasons for the good year he has had. He has tremendous catchers in John Ortega, Seth Crisp and Nathan Leslie. Crisp has had three 100 or better games this season including six catches for 102 yards last week. Ortega has 39 catches for 708 yards receiving in nine games. The Mr. Do-It-All, is also the county's leading rusher, rushing for 1,041 yards. He has scored 22 touchdowns this season.

But if there is one phase of the game that has improved for the Blackcats it has to be their defense. The Cats are led by some heavyweights in Nathan Leslie, Jeremy Caudill and Mark Branham. The trio of players play big-time football and have college on-lookers.

Leslie plays a linebacker position and had 12 first hits against Shelby Valley last week. His 6'6" frame gives him an advantage in pursuit of the opposing quarterback. Caudill, a junior, plays nose guard and is a force to try to move around. Not many players have moved the junior, who is at center on offense, around. He also had 12 solo hits last Friday. Branham is just a pursuer. He flies to the ball and hits hard. He came up with 11 first hits against Shelby Valley.

In the Prestonsburg backfield will be Hank Mullins, Ortega and Grant Castle. Castle sat out the Shelby Valley game with an injured shoulder, but coach John Derossett pronounced him ready to play.

"He has been full-go in practice this week," said the Prestonsburg coach. "We sat him out in the Shelby Valley game for just precautionary reasons. He will be ready to play this Friday night."

SCOUTING REPORT

Coach Derossett likes the Pikeville team and is quick to compare them to Breathitt County.

"There is not a lot of difference in the two teams," he said. "Both like to run a wide open offense. Pikeville is a very athletic team. They have some outstanding players."

One of those is Chase Gibson, who plays at the tight end slot for the Panthers. One of the state's top receivers is part of the Pikeville team and Jeremiah Akers ranks fifth in the state in catches. Akers is averaging 108 yards per game and by that it is easy to see why the Panthers like to throw the football. Akers has totaled over 1,000 yards in receptions this season.

Howard at quarterback ranks sixth in the state in passing with an average of over 200 yards per game.

KEYS TO VICTORY

Coach Derossett said his team's defense will have to stand its ground against the Panthers, especially in the secondary.

"We have veteran players back there," he said. "We will have to put pressure on Howard in rushing the ball."

Pikeville, as a team, is averaging over 40 points per game, one of the top ten in the state.

Prestonsburg must stop the passing game, something they had trouble with against Breathitt County.

While Prestonsburg will have to concentrate on the passing, Pikeville will have to stop both the running and passing game of the Blackcats.

The game will be on a delay basis over WPRG, Channel 5. CableVision will also carry the game on a delay basis on Saturday morning. The game maybe heard live over the Double X (WXKZ, WXLR) as well as Q95.

the 15th Region this year will be the Shelby Valley Lady Wildcats. They lost one player from last year's team but return a corps of young players who proved they could play last year. Two of those were freshmen Summer Jones and Ashley Damron. Watch out for the Lady Wildcats.

Big, big, big

The Belfry Lady Pirates will have a lot of height again this season with the likes of Tonya Francis (6'0") and Ashley Rosen (5'10") and they weren't hurt any when they added 5'9" Ramanda Music. Here's another one: Heather Whitt (5'11"). The Lady Pirates lost four seniors from last year's team. But Coach Cindy Halbert will have enough back to fill the void. Powerhouse of a team.

Tiger note

The Paintsville Tigers lost eight seniors from last year's regional championship team. Key players coming back: Danny Scott, Ethan Blackburn, Ben Trimble and Mitchell Grim.

Note

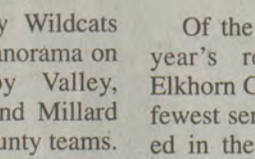
able to compete, you just don't get too excited about the season. But in the NFL, anyone, and I mean anyone, can knock off any team.

NASCAR is beginning to feel the wrath of their fans, and NASCAR is the fastest growing sport today, because the winner is predictable. Jeff Gordon has done more for NASCAR in promotion but has hampered the Winston Cup Series also by winning nearly every time out. But, what does other car owners, drivers and fans expect him to do, lay back. No!



Professional athletics is all about money, not fun. The owners are in the business to make money, the athletes are in it for a livelihood and will take every advantage to increase their salary.

The people picking up the tap for all this nonsense are the fans, the hourly workers who saved just to attend a game.

RACING...

The Perry County Speedway is still running stock car races. The track will be open this Sunday with gates opening at 1 p.m. and racing slated to start at 3 p.m. Only bombers, super bombers and road hogs will run.

PLAYOFFS

The high school football playoffs will get underway Friday, November 6 as the second season begins. Prestonsburg will host Russell at home on that date.

South Floyd will need a win at Elkhorn City to get the fourth spot in the Class A, District 2.

Allen Central will close their regular season this Friday night, but will have a playoff game and maybe more remaining when they take on Bardstown Bethlehem in a playoff game. If you recall, Bethlehem that beat the Rebels in a wild one at Allen Central, 49-42.

Coach Ted George and the Betsy Layne Bobcats draw the curtain down on their season Friday night at Breathitt County.

Until Wednesday, good sports everyone and be good sports! Take the kids to Sunday School and church this Sunday.

While the Blackcats appear to be set in four of the starting positions, the two-guard slot is still open.

That will be filled by either Russ (Music) or Kalen (Harris)," said Keathley. "Both are about the same and both can play basketball."

Music saw a lot of time off the Prestonsburg bench last season as did Harris.

Prestonsburg has won three consecutive 58th District titles and, according to Keathley, the fourth one may be a little tougher.

"South Floyd and Allen Central will be two teams we have to beat if we are to win a fourth title," said Keathley. "Coach Johnny Martin at Allen Central is an excellent coach and they have Gary Hunter back. They are going to be a tough team.

"It is going to be tough now. District games are always tough to win. It seems every year we are up there at the top in the district and the region. Maybe this will be our year."

The Paintsville Tigers have dominated the 15th Region the past four seasons but Keathley feels, while the Tigers will be a good team, the Blackcats may have their year.

"Pikeville and Belfry are going to be strong regional teams, but I feel that we are the top team right now in the region," said Keathley. One thing I would like to do before I graduate is make it to the Sweet 16 at Rupp Arena."

Maybe this will be the year for both Keathley and the Cats.

ELECT
GERALD DeROSSETT
Democrat for Floyd County
COMMISSIONER
District One

VOTERS OF FLOYD COUNTY,

As the children of Gerald DeRossett, we would like to ask you to vote and elect our father as your commissioner. Our family experienced a great loss this summer with the passing of our mother, Katie. She was not only dad's wife, but his best friend. Your prayers and support helped us through Mom's passing. Dad and Mom worked hard all their lives to raise us right and send us to school and see that we had respect for the things that are important to all of us, like God, family and friendship. Our opponent in this election has spread a lot of lies and slung a lot of mud, but as Mom always said, "the truth will stand when the world falls, and we must all face judgement on what we say and do, someday."

We would like you to go to the polls on Nov. 3, and elect our Dad as your next commissioner of Floyd County.

GERALD DOUGLAS DeROSSETT JOHN BRYANT DeROSSETT

Quota deer hunt reminder at Paintsville Lake

Around this time every year, hunters become excited about bagging a trophy buck during deer hunting season. The Kentucky Department of Fish and Wildlife Resources, in cooperation with the U.S. Corp of Engineers, has designated November 7-8 as quota hunt days for any deer at Paintsville Lake.

Quota hunts are held on KDFWR managed areas to sustain wildlife populations for present and future use. Paintsville Lake offers approximately 12,000 acres in which to hunt. If you are one of the lucky hunters to be drawn for this hunt, then here are some reminders that will make your hunt more enjoyable:

• Alcohol and guns are a deadly mix. The possession and/or use of alcoholic beverages on Paintsville Lake property is strictly prohibited.

• The cardinal rule of gun safety is to treat every gun as if it were loaded and with respect. Never point a gun toward anything you don't intend to kill.

• The use of all-terrain vehicles (ATV) can damage forest vegetation and cause soil erosion and are strictly prohibited on Paintsville Lake property.

• The cutting, damaging, or removal of trees and/or vegetation is strictly prohibited.

• Litter left in the woods has also become a problem. Paintsville Lake has a carry-in, carry-out policy which means anything you carry into the woods, you carry back out.

• Driving vehicles off public roadways is prohibited.

• Driving vehicles around any closed barricade is prohibited.

• Camping on government property is prohibited.

• Fires are only permitted in fire grills. Open fires are not permitted on government property.

The above reminders are only a few of the Federal Regulations regarding the use of U.S. Government property at Paintsville Lake. Hunters are urged to pick up a copy of Title 36 at the Resource manager's office at Paintsville Dam prior to the hunt and should be familiar with all the regulations regarding the use of U.S. Government property at Paintsville Lake.

The Early Years

History of University of Kentucky Football
GRIDIRON TRADITION PART TWO

Kentucky football got its start on Nov. 12, 1881. Kentucky, known in those days as A&M College, Kentucky State College and/or State University of Kentucky, defeated Kentucky University by the clumsy score of 7 1/4 to 1. The game of football resembled more of a rugby form and the scoring procedure is still unclear. Through football came to Kentucky in 1881, it quickly vanished after the three-game season. UK finished 1-2 in the inaugural campaign, but the id was shut on UK football for the next nine seasons.

Football returned to the University of Kentucky in 1891, when UK defeated Georgetown College, 8-2, on April 10, 1891.

photo A.

The sport would not again be interrupted until the 1943 season because of WWII.

The first known head football coach at Kentucky was Professor A.M. Miller, a Princeton graduate. Miller began the 1892 season as head coach and led UK to a 2-2 ledger through five games. He was replaced by John A. Thompson at the conclusion of the 1892 campaign.

Some successful years in the early 1900s dot the UK record book. Kentucky finished 7-1 in 1903 under Coach C.A. Wright; 9-1 in 1904 under Coach F.E. Schact; 9-1-1 in 1907 with Coach J. White Guyn, and 9-1 in 1909 under E.R. Sweetland.

The greatest UK team of that era was the 1898 squad, known simply to Kentuckians as "The Immortals." To this day, the Immortals remain the only undefeated, untied, and unscored upon team in UK football history. The Immortals were coached by W.R. Bass and ended the year a perfect 7-0-0, despite an average weight of 147 pounds per player. Victories came easy for this squad, as the Immortals raced by Kentucky University (18-0), Georgetown (28-0), company H of the 8th Massachusetts (59-0), Louisville Athletic Club (16-0), Centre (6-0), 160th Indiana (17-0), and Newcastle Athletic Club (36-0).

Besides Bass, two of the most successful coaches in the early stages of UK football were E.R. Sweetland and Harry Gamage. Sweetland compiled a 23-5 mark in three seasons. (1909-10, 12). His best year was 9-1 in 09. Gamage, on the other hand, had the longest tenure of any head coach during the first 43 years of Kentucky football. Gamage took the reigns of the UK program in 1927 and remained until following the 1933 campaign. In between, Gamage led the Wildcats to a combined 32-25-5 record. His best season was 6-1-1 in 29.

One of Gamage's brightest moments came during the 1930 season. During the 57-0 blanking of Maryville, UK running back Shipwreck Kelly rushed for a school-record 280 yards in leading the Cats.

In 197 seasons, Kentucky has participated in 1025 contests and owns 504 wins, 477 losses and 44 ties. The 504 victories rank 41st among Division 1-A programs in most wins. UK's overall winning percentage is .513.

Kentucky football has won two Southeastern Conference championships and appeared in eight bowls, claiming the CFA Academic Achievement Award on May 8, 1989. The Wildcats owned a graduation rate of 90 percent after 18 of 20 of their 1983 incoming freshman signees left UK with a diploma.

UK football has had 12 National Football League first-round draft choices, one Outland a Trophy winner, 18 first-team All-Americans, five Academic All-Americans, 51 first-team All-SEC players and 202 Academic all-SEC selections.

"Flag Football"

Cats lose to Georgia 28-26

On a perfect day for college football and a perfect opportunity for the Wildcats to beat their second straight ranked opponent, the Cats were anything but perfect.

There's a flag down on the game and what seems to be an occurring trend this season, the yellow hankie once again cost the Cats a victory.

The loss takes the Cats to a 5-3 record and 2-3 in the SEC and will go along way in determining the post season hopes for the "Blue."

FROM LAST WEEK

WINSTON CUP SERIES

Rain seldom falls in the Sonoran Desert near Phoenix, but it shortened the Dura Lube/Kmart 500 Sunday. The precipitation did not, however, prevent Rusty Wallace from winning for the first time at Phoenix International Raceway. In effect, Wallace made the scheduled 500-kilometer (312 miles) race a wash, and that's before the rains came. Wallace ended a personal streak of 59 races without a victory.

CRAFTSMAN TRUCK SERIES

Mike Bliss, himself a westerner (from Milwaukie, Ore.), captured the SuperTruck event on the Phoenix mile, which has hosted more series events (eight) than any other. Ron Hornaday slipped past Jack Sprague to take the point lead with only one event remaining.

FEUD OF THE WEEK

Felix Sabates vs. NASCAR

The veteran car owner believes the Ford Taurus has an inherent advantage over the Chevrolet Monte Carlos he fields. What about Chevrolet driver Jeff Gordon and his team? Sabates says: "I think they work harder than the rest of us, and I think they probably think a lot harder than we do. They deserve what they get. Talent plays a big part in it."

NASCAR This Week writer Monte Dutton gives his opinion: "Two years ago Sabates was saying that Pontiacs were at a disadvantage, so he switched to Chevrolets. Now the Chevrolets can't win. What's next?"

FROM THE ARCHIVES:

The rich history of NASCAR

The late Marshall Teague, killed while testing an Indy car at Daytona in 1959, was one of stock car racing's more talented drivers and able businessmen. He arranged NASCAR's first corporate sponsorship, with the Hudson automobile factory, and its first contingency program, with Pure Oil. The latter program lives to this day. Unocal, the gasoline supplier of NASCAR, is a descendant of Pure Oil.

PROFILE

Ricky Craven

John Clark/NASCAR This Week

Ricky Craven has no regrets about the time he sat out following his head injury.

By Monte Dutton
NASCAR This Week

Ricky Craven has faced more than his share of adversity this year.

After the first four races of the current season, Craven underwent tests at the University of North Carolina's medical center which revealed he was suffering from the lingering effects of a head injury during the 1997 season. He sat out 11 races before returning at his home track in New Hampshire, where he won the pole in spectacular fashion. Nonetheless, after three more races, Craven lost his ride with Team Hendrick, where he was replaced by Wally Dallenbach Jr.

Recently Craven was called on to substitute for another injured driver, Ernie Irvan, at Daytona and Phoenix.

HOMETOWN: Born in Newburgh, Maine, lives in Concord, N.C.

AGE: 32

WIFE: Cathleen

CHILDREN: Riley Diane (6), Richard Everett (2).

RECORD: 102 starts, 0 wins, 3 poles, 7 top fives, 17 top 10s, more than $3 million in career earnings.

DESCRIBE THE ANGUISH YOU'VE EXPERIENCED THIS YEAR. "What you have to understand is that there were two phases. First I had to recover from physical injuries. Then I had to deal with emotional and psychological problems. When I lost my ride at Hendrick Motorsports, it shook my self-confidence. I was bitter. Now I've reached the point where I think going through all this has made me a better person and a better driver. I'm excited about getting on with the rest of my career."

HOW DOES IT FEEL TO BE RELIEVING ANOTHER DRIVER WHO HAS HAD TROUBLE RECOVERING FROM HEAD INJURIES? "Well, I think Ernie Irvan deserves a lot of credit for making sure that he is fully healthy. It's not easy to turn your race car over to another driver. I'm grateful to Ernie for having the confidence in me to drive while he is recovering."

IF YOU HAD IT TO DO OVER, WOULD YOU HAVE DONE ANYTHING DIFFERENTLY? "Absolutely not. There is absolutely no doubt in my mind that I did the right thing and that when all is said and done, it will have lengthened my career and made it better. I have a lot of confidence right now."

Who's hot... Who's not

WHO'S HOT? Jeff Burton has finished in the top 10 nine times in the last 11 races.

WHO'S NOT?
Wally Dallenbach Jr. has finished 23rd or worse in the last 10 races.

YOUR TURN
Letters From Our Readers

Dear NASCAR This Week,

I'm a TV stock car racing fan. I was interested in a 500-mile race like the one at Talladega that was run on Oct. 11, 1998.

I would like to know how many gallons of gas it takes to run a race of that size and what grade of gas they use.

Also, what does one of those racing tires cost?

I really enjoy watching the races on TV. I like to see different drivers win. I like it when Jimmy Spencer does well because he is the only NASCAR driver from Pennsylvania.

Donald W. Heming Sr.
Twin Rocks, Pa.

Dear Donald,

Fuel mileage varies track-to-track, but at Talladega a Winston Cup car would typically get slightly more than 6 miles per gallon.

It would take roughly 82 gallons of fuel to make it 500 miles. Each car has a tank that holds 22 gallons of fuel. The gasoline is specially enriched for racing and has an octane rating much higher than that used in street cars.

Each Goodyear tire costs approximately $150, so if a team changed four tires on each of three pit stops, the bill would be $1,800.

CREW OF THE WEEK

■ Rusty Wallace's performance was dominant at Phoenix, but he would not have won the Dura Lube/Kmart 500 had it not been for quality pit work that enabled him to maintain the lead just before the rains came. Robin Pemberton and Team Penske made all the right moves.

ON THE MARKET

When Gargoyles, a manufacturer of sunglasses, noticed Dale Earnhardt wore its products, the company entered into an endorsement contract with him. Now Dale Earnhardt Inc. and Gargoyles are partners, so all drivers employed by Earnhardt's company — Steve Park, Ron Hornaday and Dale Earnhardt Jr. — are part of the deal.

AROUND THE GARAGE

Crew chief Hewitt to make switch to Petty Enterprises

By Monte Dutton
NASCAR This Week

AVONDALE, Ariz. — Doug Hewitt, for the past six years the crew chief at Bahari Racing, will move over to Petty Enterprises next year, probably to serve as crew chief for Kyle Petty.

Hewitt has worked with Michael Waltrip, Johnny Benson and Derrike Cope.

FLAT'S NOT WHERE IT'S AT: Bobby Labonte's performance on the restrictor-plate tracks, Daytona and Talladega, was spectacular this year. That's the good news.

The bad news is there aren't any more of them.

Labonte, 34, thinks his "flat-track program" is much improved, but he took a setback when he had to take a provisional slot to qualify for the Dura Lube 500, then finished 23rd.

Still, Labonte ranks himself a contender for the Winston Cup championship next year.

"I'd say anything's possible," said Labonte. "We're definitely going to be a contender. At least I think we are. If we do everything right, we will be."

THE BEST-LAID PLANS... At Daytona, Bobby Labonte almost won the Pepsi 400 when he got a drafting boost from older brother Terry. The fraternal cooperation was unplanned, despite the fact that the two had a rain delay to formulate strategy.

"We sat there and talked, but we didn't talk about that," said Bobby. "You really can't plan. I got a good run on Ward Burton, but I didn't plan that either. You've got to go by the seat of your pants and what's happening on the racetrack. If we (Bobby and Terry) could've gotten by Mike (Skinner) cleanly and Terry could've stayed with me, we might have gotten by Jeff (Gordon, the winner). Terry pushed me all the way down the back straight, but when we got by Mike and Jeremy (Mayfield), I finally slowed down to the speed I was supposed to be going."

The last remark refers to the draft, where two cars, by getting in line, are capable of going faster than one car alone.

Of his bold last-lap move, Bobby admitted, "I wouldn't do that if it wasn't the last lap.

"I trusted Mike not to come up on me, just like I didn't move up on Terry and Jimmy (Spencer) and Jeff the week before that at Talladega. He (Skinner) had waited too late to move up. When they came around me (at Talladega), I just said to myself, 'If I move up now, there's going to be a big wreck.'"

Features: Plenty of great stuff for a privately maintained unauthorized site. We were impressed that Wallace's stats were updated immediately following his Phoenix victory. Links to other NASCAR sites, plenty of photos and biographical information. His fans all have computers: There is no shortage of Wallace Web sites, official and unofficial. Low MCHS test scores concern of school board Magoffin County High School's extremely low test scores provoked serious concern during a recent meeting of the Magoffin County Board of Education.

MCHS finished among the bottom 10 high schools in Kentucky when the national results of the Comprehensive Tests of Basic Skills (CTBS) were released.

All ten schools on this list were in Eastern Kentucky.

A representative of the Kentucky Board of Education told Magoffin County board members that when he visited Magoffin County High School he found nearly half of the teachers were not on the job.

Commenting on the low scores, Magoffin County Schools Superintendent Henry Clay Sizemore said: "We have got to teach. I have heard all kinds of excuses about behavior problems, but when you instruct children, when you teach, behavioral problems decrease. When you don't teach and the instructional level is not up to what it should be, behavioral problems increase." — The Salyersville Independent

Gov. Patton awards grant to city for sewage project

Additional state funds for the city of Salyersville are on the way.

Governor Paul Patton announced recently that a check for the Salyersville wastewater expansion project has been forwarded.

A check for $105,100 will go to fund the Salyersville Wastewater Expansion project. The money will come from the state's budget surplus. — The Salyersville Independent

18 indictments handed down

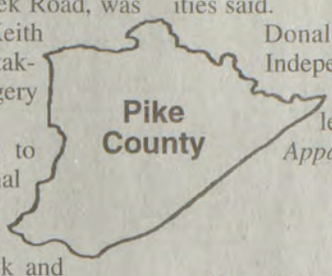
A child sexual abuse case and a double murder charge as the result of an automobile collision were among the 18 indictments returned by the Magoffin County Grand Jury.

Indicted were Jimmy Arnett, Kevin Cole, James Clevenger, Jimmy and Janet Cole, Jeffery Marshall, Benji Mann, Fonzy Howard, Eric Gene Allen, Glen Patrick, Jerri K. Pitts, Timothy Rife, Nicholas Roark, Jeff Smithers, and Calvin White. — The Salyersville Independent

Shelbiana man charged with check forgery

A Shelbiana man was arrested Thursday afternoon after he attempted to cash a stolen check, authorities said.

Kevin W. Hopkins, 33, of Greasy Creek Road, was arrested by Pikeville Police Officer Keith Justice on charges of theft by unlawful taking, alcohol intoxication, forgery and forgery device.



According to reports, Hopkins tried to cash a check at the Kentucky National Bank's drive-thru. As he attempted to cash the check, a woman was on the phone with the bank reporting the check and others had been stolen. — Appalachian News-Express

Animal shelter overcrowding forces euthanizations of thousands of pets

The Pike County Animal Shelter euthanized about 3,200 potential pets last year, many of them dogs. Officials said the percentage of euthanizations at the shelter is close to the national average.

The shelter houses around 100 dogs and cats at any one time. Last year alone, they brought in 3,556 animals. Only 348 were adopted. The rest were euthanized. — Appalachian News-Express

Police continue their search for jail escapee

An inmate who escaped through an air duct at the Pike County Detention Center early Sunday morning is still on the run and may be armed with a knife, authorities said.

Donald J. "Jamie" Morgan, 22, of Independence escaped from the jail between 12:15 a.m. and 12:30 a.m. after he was left alone to wax the kitchen floor. — Appalachian News-Express

Board trying to acquire site for new school

Negotiations continued last week for the proposed site of the long-awaited Cumberland Valley High School.

Prior to losing its quorum with the suspension earlier this month of a board member, the Pike County Board of Education authorized an attorney to begin steps for condemnation proceedings against Kentucky Berwind Land Company, Pike-Letcher land Company and Berkely Energy Corporation for the property at Lick Creek designated as the site for the school.

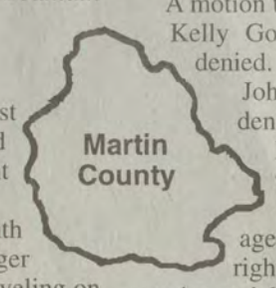
Superintendent Frank Welch said at that time that the board would first try to negotiate for the property before beginning condemnation proceedings. — Appalachian New-Express

Excell Mining begins production

Nearly two months after operates ceased September 3 with the loss of 287 jobs, coal is running again at the former Pontiki No. 2 mine as 30 workers began operations on a new super-section at the newly-formed Excell Mining.

Workers were recalled in units of 30. The mine was expected to be fully staffed Thursday. — The Mountain Citizen

Youth killed on ATV



A Martin County youth was laid to rest Tuesday afternoon after being tragically killed Saturday evening in a four-wheeler accident on Little Blacklog.

Richard Lee Maynard, a 13-year-old eighth grader at Inez Middle School, was a passenger on an ATV driven by another 14-year-old, traveling on an old logging road in the Flatrock area of little Blacklog when the accident occurred.

Police reports indicate two youths were traveling on an abandoned logging road, which used to be a creek bed. As the youngsters came down the hill, the driver lost control of the four-wheeler and Maynard was thrown off the ATV and then struck by it.

Maynard was pronounced dead at the scene. — The Mountain Citizen

Third trial for Goble to stay in Johnson County

A motion to have the third trial of Inez businessman Kelly Goble moved to Boyd County has been denied.

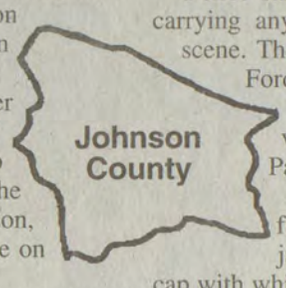
Johnson Circuit Judge Stephen N. Frazier denied assistant commonwealth's attorney Kurt Kruthoffer's request for a change in venue October 20.

The attorney thought that media coverage surrounding the trial limited Goble's right to a fair trial in Johnson County. Two previous trials in that county resulted in a mistrial the first time and a hung jury in August.

Goble, owner of Goble Signs, is accused of raping, sodomizing and sexually abusing a girl during the 1980s. — The Mountain Citizen

Cops keeping a lid on probe of homicides

Police remain tight-lipped about their investigation of a double homicide last week in Johnson County, offering no new details this week on the shootings.



Trooper Mike Goble, public affairs officer for KSP Post 9 in Pikeville, said Tuesday the case remains a mystery and that no motive or suspect had been identified in the murders of Herbert Witten, 77, and his son, Joel Witten, 44, at their Stave Branch home on the night of October 18.

Goble declined comment on reports of an anonymous 911 call made to the Paintsville 911 center on October 21, which reportedly identified a man seen at the Witten residence the night of the shooting. — The Paintsville Herald

Armed man holds up pop truck

Police are searching for suspect in a Thursday morning attempted armed robbery of an East Kentucky Beverage truck driver at Moon in Morgan County.

Details were sketchy at press time, but state police in Morehead said a man approached the driver of a Pepsi delivery truck at 7:15 a.m., aimed a handgun at him and demanded money.

Police said the driver told the man that he wasn't carrying any money, and then the suspect fled the scene. The man was driving a dark green or black Ford Ranger pickup with a board across the back instead of a tailgate. Police said the vehicle was last seen heading toward Paintsville on Route 172.

The man is described as 6 feet tall with a full beard. He was wearing a light blue jean jacket, a dark colored shirt and a black ball cap with white lettering. — The Paintsville Herald

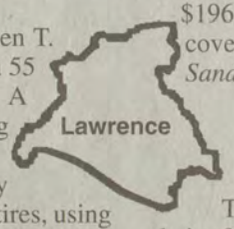
Schools to invest a million in technology

The Johnson County School District wants to prepare for the 21st century by spending $1.1 million for technology in the next two years.

A tentative Kentucky Educational Technology System (KETS) budget presented to county school board members Monday night shows that the school system hopes to spend $1,108.536 from now until the year 2000 on computer-related projects. — The Paintsville Herald

Chase ends with arrest of local man

A Lawrence County resident faces a host of charges stemming from a chase earlier this month on US 23 that reached speeds of up to 115 miles per hour and covered nearly 30 miles.



Police said they attempted to stop Stephen T. Mills, 28, for driving 93 miles per hour in a 55 mile per hour zone when the chase began. A police report noted that Mills was driving extremely erratic.

He was stopped at Ulysses after Kentucky State Police Trooper John Hay flattened his tires, using a stinger device, and Mills rammed Hay's police cruiser.

The truck Mills was driving was a 1998 Dodge that turned up stolen from B&K Dodge in Paintsville. — The Big Sandy News

Fire Station No. 2 officially opens

As the ribbon fell, the doors on Fire Station No. 2 raised marking its official opening Saturday.

A second fire station was one of Louisa Mayor James L. VanHoose's goals — along with a community center for Louisa — when he took office in 1992. With only two months left of his term, VanHoose said he was glad to see it accomplished.

The fire station, located on Old Lick Creek Road on property that was previously owned by the Lawrence County Board of Education, was built at a total cost of $196,000. Funding came from a fire tax district that covers areas around the city of Louisa. — The Big Sandy News

Local races expected to up voter turnout

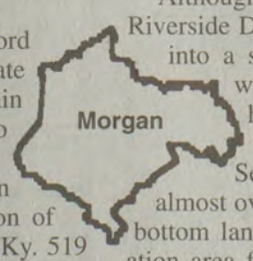
This Tuesday, voters in Lawrence County pick their officials to lead them into the next century, and the large number of local races are expected to drive up the number of voters who go to the polls.

Officials are predicting that anywhere from 55 to 60 percent of Lawrence County's 11,116 registered voters will turn out to cast their ballot on November 3.

The last election for county positions was in 1993, when the current administration took office following a 57 percent turnout. In that election, the Republican party swept most of the offices, claiming seats for county judge-executive, county attorney, sheriff, county clerk, jailer, and two of four magistrate positions. — The Big Sandy News

City council takes stand on highway department's plan

The West Liberty City Council went on record this week in opposition to a proposal by the state Department of Highways to make North Main Street three lanes from the MSU Center to Prestonsburg Street.



The three-laning proposal was included in the highway department's plans for relocation of Ky. 7 from West Liberty to its junction with Ky. 519 near Pomp.

Speaking on behalf of other business and residential owners, Dr. Robert Henderson, whose offices on North Main Street would be impacted by the proposed three-laning, requested the action, which was concurred with unanimously by the council at its regular meeting Monday evening.

By unanimous vote, the council adopted a resolution opposing the three-laning, which members said would do nothing to eliminate occasional traffic congestion and which would substantial harm to home and business owners by taking their yards and driveways, crowding residences and building behind concrete retaining walls, and devaluing their property. — The Licking Valley Courier

Renovated park is showplace

Although not completely finished, the park on Riverside Drive in West Liberty has been transformed into a showplace, visited frequently and viewed with pride by virtually all local residents who have flocked to view it.

During a flurry of activity in early September, Old Mill Park was transformed almost overnight from primarily an open expanse of bottom land into a beautifully-planned family recreation area featuring wide expanses of green space, a new half-mile walking trail around the park's perimeter with shaded picnic spots along the riverbank, dozens of new picnic tables, a 25-40 ft. picnic shelter, a kiddie playground, a 500 ft. plus roller blade track for the youngsters, and a handsome new lighted stage that soon will be the centerpiece of a new amphitheater inside the dike that formerly protected a city wastewater treatment plant.

Also completed: a new paved parking area and widening of Riverside Drive to allow two-way traffic along most of its distance by the park and the areas disturbed by bulldozing and site leveling have been reseeded in grass.

The $250,000 project is being financed with receipts generated by a 3 percent restaurant tax enacted by the city council. — The Licking Valley Courier

Everage wins contest, sings with Shania Twain

Hindman's Kristin Everage was chosen from 120 participants in a statewide contest last week to sing with country music sensation Shania Twain.

In front of 8,000 fans at a Lexington concert on Thursday night, Kristin sang, "What Made You Say That?" which was the first single from Shania's first album.

The "Sing Like Shania" contest, sponsored by K93 Radio in Lexington, began with four competitions: Richmond, Lexington, Danville, and Winchester.

Kristin has appeared at the Jenny Wiley Theater. She is a member of the Kentucky Opry Jr. Pros and the Kentucky Opry. — The Troublesome Creek Times

Two Knott County men sentenced to ten years for manslaughter

Jonathan Stamper, 37, of White Bluff, Tennessee, and Thomas Conley, 30, of Leburn, were sentenced to ten years in prison for manslaughter.

The two were convicted in separate incidents involving the operation of a motor vehicle while under the influence of alcohol, which resulted in death.

Jonathan Stamper was adjudged guilty of the September 2, 1996 death of Donald C. Blackburn. The victim was a passenger in Stamper's vehicle.

Thomas Conley was adjudged guilty in the death of Joe Dyer, 52, of Hindman and for leaving the scene of an accident. Dyer was killed in an accident on February 27, 1998. — Troublesome Creek Times
