Price of PHS project goes up

by Willie Elliott
 Staff Writer

In the first of a series of meetings that will be rotated throughout the county, the Floyd County Board of Education met in regular session at Betsy Layne High School on Monday night where it learned that the Prestonsburg High School renovation project may need an additional $240,000.

When construction manager Sam Martin and construction superintendent Henry Risner gave the report on the PHS project, interim superintendent/state manager Woodrow Arnold Carter presented a request for items needed to complete the project.

The total for the items was $73,811, but carpet for the band room will not be needed and the cabinetry may be done later, Carter said. Without these two items, the cost will be more than $40,000. However, Carter said the board really needed to look for as much as $240,000 to finish the project the way it should be done.

Board member Jody Mullins asked how this oversight could have occurred and was told the situation resulted from actions taken by "an earlier administration."

Board member Johnny Ross asked Martin if he had been aware of this situation, and Martin told him he had been. Ross asked Martin why he didn't inform the board of the situation. "It's not my job to keep up with the financial sit-

Fiscal Court refinances debt, takes over pool

by Pam Shingler
 Editor

The Floyd County Fiscal Court took the official step to reduce its indebtedness during last Friday's regular monthly meeting. County commissioners approved the second reading of an ordinance authorizing refinancing of general obligation bonds.

Road takeover disputed

by Pam Shingler
 Editor

Typically, people are eager to cede their roads to the county. It means — at least in good times — that the county will maintain the road, possibly grading, graveling and even paving.

But one Floyd County family is hotly opposed to having the county take over the road that runs through its property.

"We do not want our road in the county system," Judge Martin Hale repeated several times during the citizen comments period at Friday's meeting of the Floyd County Fiscal Court.

The road at Drift, listed as Martin Drive Road on the fiscal court agenda, was built by her late father, Sherman Martin, Hale said, and the family does not want the county to have it. "We have receipts where we paid for gravel and having it graded," she said.

The road was among five roads that the fiscal court voted to adopt into the county system during the meeting. That number is about average for a regular court meeting.

"Our intentions were good," said Judge-Executive Paul Hunt Thompson. "The road was in terrible condition."

Thompson said he understood that several other families lived saving proposal. He said then that refinancing would reduce interest rates on three bond projects from an average of 7.31 percent to 4.48 percent. The bonds involve the jail, solid waste and natural gas.

The fiscal court also added a swimming pool to its properties. The county accepted transfer of title to the Wheelwright swimming pool and an adjoining park from the Wheelwright City Commission.

Leaders in the Left Beaver community say the city does not have the financial resources to continue to maintain the pool, which was built several decades ago by Inland Steel as part of its model coal community.

A grant to the city for $386,010 from the Economic Development Administration to renovate the pool apparently will be transferred to the county, which will now take over that project.

Thompson said the county's ownership of the pool will help in garnering other grants to upgrade and maintain the pool for the southwestern part of the county.

Thompson opened bids for construction work on two senior citizen centers. Only one bid was received for the Mud Creek Senior Citizens Center. Johnson Commercial Contracting of West Prestonsburg offered to complete the project for $46,995.

The Johnson company submitted the low bid of $42,500 for work on the Betsy Layne Senior Citizens Center. Albon Meade and Sons Construction Co. presented a bid of $47,270.

Thompson instructed the boards of each center to review the bids to make sure they meet bid specifications, before the court awards the contracts.

Only one bid was submitted for a vehicle for the Floyd County Rescue Squad. Music-Carter-Hughes of Prestonsburg said it could provide a 1999 four-wheel drive Crew Cab Chassis Cab for $26,573.07. The bid was accepted.

The county commissioners voted to approve a $5,000 contribution to the Honey Branch Industrial Development Authority, a four-county cooperative effort to acquire and develop a 200-acre regional industrial park near the proposed federal prison site in Martin County.

Thompson said the authority has requested a contribution from each of the counties, Floyd, Johnson, Martin and Pike. The money is to be used for operating expenses which are not covered by coal severance tax money.

Also in the development category, the county agreed to pay $1,000 to the Big Sandy Area Development District to update the county's economic development plan. The county will also donate $1,000 in-kind, through office space, supplies, telephone, copying, etc., as an ADD staff person works on the plan. Each county in the district is to chip in similar amounts.

The ADD also requested $820 from the county, as a match, for grant money from the US Department of Commerce to train area businesspersons to compete for federal prison business. The grant will allow the ADD to provide technical assistance to businesses in the region in preparation for working with the new prison.

Attorney to head development effort

by Pam Shingler
 Editor

Prestonsburg attorney James Douglas "Doug" Adams II has been hired to head Floyd County's economic development effort.

Adams got the nod Friday from the Fiscal Court to fill the position that was approved last month as Economic Development/Special Project Director.

The commissioners assigned an annual salary of $15,000 with no benefits, but, at its noon meeting Monday, the Prestonsburg City Council kicked in an additional $10,000, bringing the attorney's pay for the job to $25,000.

Deputy Judge-Executive Chris Waugh said Monday that Adams would continue to maintain his law practice and that the county position, which starts March 27, will be part-time. Waugh said Adams will be expected "to devote a reasonable amount of time" to the job.

Waugh, who said the position has no job description, said Adams "will be basically working with anything dealing with economic development. He will be looking at what potential we do have."

The fact that Adams is an attorney is a plus for the job, Waugh said. "When you're involved in economic development, you are often dealing with legal issues," the deputy judge said.

He added that Adams has "been around business all his life" and has an outgoing personality, both of which are important in dealing with business development. Adams' family is involved with FADA, a local corporation that has developed and manages a number of businesses in Floyd County.

Judge-Executive Paul Hunt Thompson asked the county commissioners to approve the position at the February 19 meeting of the fiscal court. He then asked Waugh and Commissioner Larry Foster uation of the district," said Martin.

Ross then appealed to Martin to furnish such information to new board members who need it to make sound decisions for the district.

Board member Carol Stumbo said she wanted to do a walk-through of the site to see first hand what needs to be done. The board has tentatively scheduled a site visit for next Monday.

Carter said he would provide more information at the next board meeting about where the money for finishing the project would come from.

George Cawood from Kentucky School Boards Association provided additional information on the superintendent's search and made changes to the plan as requested by board members. Floyd County's advertisement for a new superintendent can be found on the web at www.ksba.org.

The board asked that the advertising be broadened to include all surrounding states and not just Tennessee. The board wants the advertising to appear in at least one other publication besides Education Week. The timeline (which begins immediately) accounts for advertising, screening committee selection recommendations, interviews and finally selection of the superintendent by the middle of June.

In the public comment portion of the program, Bud Reynolds, representing Floyd County Education Association (FCEA), asked chairman Terry Dotson to speed up the search for a superintendent.

Reynolds also recounted how the last official search resulted in the selection of a "good old boy" by then-Education Commissioner Tom Boysen. Reynolds said it is time "to choose the best candidate based on qualification and not political connections."

Reynolds added that the board "must let the process operate as intended so everyone's input will be considered."

Pete Grigsby, representing the Floyd County Administrators Association, asked the board to consider Presidents' Day as a holiday in the school calendar to honor George Washington and Abraham Lincoln.

Opal "Cissy" Williams and Eddie Hall discussed the Wheelwright gym situation and presented the board a written proposal for the operation of the gym. The board agreed to look at the proposal and get back with Hall and Williams.

Williams again asked for the return of Paul David Tackett as principal to Osborne Elementary.

Linville Martin invited the board to Floyd County Area Technology Center on March 25 to take part in a town forum in which the future of secondary technical education will be discussed. Martin also told the board that the school has picked up phone, electric, and garbage bills and the Floyd County system should not be paying bills on these items.

Instructional supervisor Susan Compton gave a report on professional development. Stumbo had questions about how few positions some schools were gaining by the new allocation that provides instruction in the arts. Stumbo said it appeared schools are gaining positions in the arts but losing in other areas.

Compton said such a reduction resulted from the projected loss of 400 students for next year.

Stumbo also said professional development needs to be monitored more closely. She said some schools have not used all their money and are planning to spend it all at once. "If we spend money all at once, we waste it," said Stumbo.

Donnie Daniels and Robert Hall, representing the South Floyd Football Boosters, listed three parcels of land, in order of preference, for the construction of a football field. The three properties are Meade Hill Bottom, the Deborah Neal property at the upper end of Meade Hill Bottom on the other side of the creek, and a site behind Gary Rose's house at Ligon, owned by Wheelwright Mining.

Citing a stable financial status for the food service department, the board voted to adopt current breakfast and lunch prices for school year 1999-2000. The prices for meals are as follows:

- breakfast— $.75, students; $1.25, employees; $1.75, non-employee;

- lunch—$1.25 student; $2.25 employee; $3 non-employee.

According to the rationale in the proposal, the computed cash position was $492,000 at the end of January. This amount is slightly short of two months operating expenses. At this rate of growth, the department should achieve its projected target of having three months operating expenses ahead by the end of January 2000.

The board turned down the motion to use the first week of the spring break to make up for days missed by the district. School principals voted to attend these days and keep the closing date June 4. Ross said he had several calls from parents who had already made travel plans.

Stumbo said she wasn't sure that the board had told people that the first week of the break could be used to make up days. Ross told the board to learn from this experience and in case this type of calendar is used next year, let the people know. He read from the system's handbook that encourages parents to plan appointments and trips during scheduled breaks.

The missed days will be added at the end of the school year.

As part of fulfilling requirements to provide up to six years of compensatory education for a disabled adult student, the board approved a contract with Dr. James Knoll who will serve as a consultant in the area of developmental disabilities. Both parties in the settlement agree to the selection of Knoll.

In order to present a precise, accurate picture of the certified and classified personnel in the system, the board voted to abolish all vacant positions, non-posted prior to the Floyd County School system becoming a state-managed school district.

Stumbo wanted the positions named individually, but after some discussion, Dotson asked Associate Commissioner Tom Willis his views on the matter and Willis said, "Abolish them or I will abolish them."

The board approved a plan to construct an encroachment and parking area at McDowell Elementary. The new entrance and parking would alleviate the congestion that now occurs in the morning and afternoon at the school.

Mullins and Roberts said all board members are not getting the same information since they did not have e-mail. Roberts said he was supposed to get all information from Ross, but Roberts said so far he has not received any information. Ross said he was busy with meetings and did not have time to copy the e-mail messages.

Dotson said it was important that something be worked out so all members get the same information. Fiscal agent Jim Nance reported to the board that it has $8.6 million in bonding potential ($4.3 million local and $4.3 facilities construction) and reported that the board may be able to save as much as $129,254 by refinancing bonds.

In other action the board:

- Authorized the request for bids for audit services;

- Presented nine schools' vision/mission statements and eight goals for Floyd County Schools for consideration.

- Approved the purchase of enough influenza vaccine to inoculate all students and teachers in the system. This will cost the board $28,000, but the system hopes to gain more than this amount by preventing student and teacher absences. Ross said he wanted the minutes to reflect that this decision is contrary to state health department recommendations.

ment recommendations.

- Approved the request for a waiver of the District Facility Plan (DFP) and Master Educational Facility Plan (MEEP). The projected completion dates for these plans was November 30, 1997. The system must be granted a waiver from the state to be legally compliant with the regulations;

- Discussed and approved a waiver of district policy for selection of cheerleaders for Allen Central, South Floyd, and Betsy Layne high schools.

- Approved a band trip for Betsy Layne Elementary.

- Tabled request for revisions in the McDowell Elementary rule book.

- Approved in its entirety Adoption Group VI—art/humanities, foreign languages, driver education, health/physical education, reading/literature for the period 1999-2005, grades primary through 12 of The State Multiple List of Textbooks and instructional materials.

- Approved copier maintenance for Betsy Layne High School.

- Approved attendance/transportation boundaries.

- Gave board chairman and secretary permission to sign for the sale of central office property and sign lease for the same property.

- Approved the use of May Valley gym for basketball leagues.

Stumbo to take applications for the position, with the goal of having the position filled by March 1.

Waugh said the position was not formally advertised, other than the mention of the position in the newspaper and playback of the fiscal court meeting on the two local television cable stations.

He also said that Adams was the only applicant, adding that the relatively low salary might make it difficult to attract economic development professionals.

The county's part of Adams' salary comes from "a fund for economic development that cannot be spent on anything else but economic development," said Thompson at Friday's meeting.

In endorsing Adams, Commissioner Gerald DeRossett said, "He's a fine young man. I'm behind him 100 percent."

In making a motion Monday to add the salary supplement to the position, Prestonsburg Councilman Estill Carter pointed out that the county has had no one in charge of promoting economic development for several years. The seven council members present agreed the position was needed by voting unanimously to contribute, without discussion.

Prestonsburg Mayor Jerry Fannin mentioned that the city has two hollows that might be suitable for development projects, particularly on the order of the Schwan's base at Cliff.

Waugh said he expects Adams to begin right away to market a site across from the new R/S Truck Body plant on US 23 near Ivel.

Adams, 33, earned a bachelor's degree in accounting from the University of Kentucky in 1988 and a law degree from the Salmon P. Chase College of Law at Northern Kentucky University in 1992.

His resume includes jobs with the Legislative Research Commission in Frankfort, state Department of Unemployment Insurance and state Administrative Office of the Courts in Lexington, and state Department of Public Advocacy in Pikeville.

He was an associate with the law firm of Stratton, May and Hays in Pikeville for two years and was a partner in the firm of Adams and Coleman in Prestonsburg from 1994 to 1997. He has had his present practice since January of 1998.

Road

on up the road beyond the property owned by Johnny Martin, Hale's brother, and Jacquelyn Martin, her mother.

"There are houses above there (the Martin properties) and people have to drive through holes and over bad road to get to their homes," he said.

Hale said the other residents along the road have another access to the primary road on Stumbo Hollow, but Thompson said he understood the other access was through a creek and often impassable.

Hale said her family has never granted an easement to the other people who live on the road. "It is our property," she said. "We're not responsible for other people's cars, and at no time is the other access unpassable."

She said that the former judge-executive, Ben Hale, asked two years ago if the road could be brought into the county system, and "we said no."

"All I want to do is provide a passable road for people who live on it," Thompson said.

County Attorney Keith Bartley said that the case could be made that since the road had been built and the public allowed to use it over time, it has already become a "public passageway." He added he understood the people who live above the Martin property have been using the road for years.

But, Bartley said he would investigate the law regarding the road issues and provide his legal opinion. "We'll try to resolve it by the next meeting," he said.

"We are in no way in agreement to giving this road to the county," Hale said.

According to the description given to the Fiscal Court, the road in question is about 1,200 feet in length and 14 feet wide.

Other roads that were adopted into the county system include

- Grant Newsome Road, off KY 979 at Teaberry, 275 feet long and 14 feet wide;

- Ned Johnson Road at Skull in Weeksbury, 1,868 feet long and 14 feet wide;

- Opal Isaac Road at Jacks Creek, 687 feet long and 14 feet wide; and

- Comas Johnson Road at Jacks Creek, 162 feet long and 14 feet wide.

10 named to committee

Judge-Executive Paul Hunt Thompson has appointed 10 citizens to serve on the newly-formed Floyd County Utility Advisory Committee.

The committee was created at the February 19 Fiscal Court meeting "to advise and assist the Court in the best way to provide water and sewage service throughout Floyd County."

The county commissioners at that time approved standing membership on the committee as the judge-executive, chairmen of the boards and chief operators of all water districts in the county, and the mayors of Allen, Martin, Wayland, Wheelwright and Prestonsburg.

They then authorized the judge to appoint 10 additional members.

At the March 19 meeting, the commissioners approved Thompson's choices.

The new members are Stanley Allen and Doug Rice of McDowell, Danny Branson and Bill Parsons of Allen, Palmer Frasure of Mud Creek, Gary Frazier and Jim Spencer of Martin, Jerry Fultz of Wayland, Bill Harvey Howard of Calf Creek and Tom Westfall Sr. of Ivel.

The appointments are for four years.

Fiscal

on and get business from it," said Thompson. "The federal (bid) system is complicated, and this will be training our people to compete."

The court also approved a payment of $1,666 to the Big Sandy ADD for the agency's role in grant preparation for the US 23 Industrial Site Project. Thompson said the county still has $5,000 in that account.

The county commissioners had the pleasant task of approving a cost of living pay increase for themselves. The directive came from the state Department of Local Government. "You all can't vote this down, because it's the law," Thompson told the court.

The 1.614 percent increase takes the commissioners' biweekly salary from $1,319.17 to $1,340.46.

Cleanup

The county's month of cleaning up is in effect, as of Monday. Thompson told the audience, "This fiscal court is firmly committed to doing the best job it can of cleaning up," he said.

Employees of the state's Highway Department spoke to the court on behalf of the Adopt A Highway Program. "We will work with the county in any way we can," said Dan Hall. "We can supply bags, we will pick up, we will do anything we can to help."

Delores Dingsus reminded that groups have to follow an application process and get a permit to adopt a highway. Some local groups who had previously adopted a highway, she said, "have fallen behind and have not renewed their permit."

Personnel

The Fiscal Court adopted a resolution that would allow county employees to participate in a retirement program. Employees will be able to contribute to the Kentucky Public Employees 401 (k) Deferred Compensation Plan, administered by the state Public Employees Deferred Compensation Authority.

Thompson said that employee contributions will not be taxed while they are part of the plan.

In addition to the employment of James "Doug" Adams II as Economic Development/Special Projects Director, reported elsewhere, the county commissioners hired Brandon Boling to do maintenance at the Dave "Dugger" Conley Memorial Park at Garrett, effective March 22. The pay is $6.50 per hour.

Ernest Burchett, who retired as a county road crew member on February 6, was rehired as a part-time employee with the parks department. Burchett is to work 24 hours a week on the county's ball fields for an hourly wage of $10 and no benefits.

DeRossett voted no, but Stumbo and Erial Tackett voted in favor of Burchett's employment.

The employment of Chad Frasure and Tommy Lackey as road crew workers was approved. The appointments were effective March 22, with an hourly wage of $6.50 for each.

On the recommendation of the Allen Golf Course Advisory Committee, the commissioners approved a pay hike for Estill Mullins who works at the facility. The increase is from $7.91 an hour to $8.25 an hour, effective March 27.

Following a request from Jailer Roger Webb, pay raises were approved for three jail employees. Effective March 27, the hourly pay for Ruby Johnson and Linda Caudill goes from $7.25 an hour to $8.25, and the pay for supervisor Dora Rickman rises from $8.25 an hour to $9.

Other business

The fiscal court members also approved

- authorization of Thompson to sign a one-year warranty agreement with Dover Elevator Co. for service to the elevators in the Justice Center;

- payment of a repair bill for $12,250 to Harris Diesel Service for emergency work relating to closure of the Floyd County landfill;

- advertising for a 1998 Chevrolet van for the Christian Appalachian Project's Spouse Abuse Center, to be paid from grant money;

- a change order, totaling $25,730, to Howard K. Bell Consulting Engineers for the Ligon/Clear Creek Water Storage Facility, to be reimbursed by the Department of Abandoned Mine Lands.

The next regularly-scheduled meeting of the fiscal court will be moved up one day from the normal meeting date. The meeting will be Thursday, April 15, to allow the officials to participate in a training program in Frankfort.

REX A. STEWART
 Born: Aug. 26, 1955 Died: March 24, 1997
*Has it only been two years today,
 When angels were sent to carry you away?
 On soft, billowy wings of love,
 You were gently taken to your new home,
 above.
 We didn't say goodbye, but rather good night; for someday again we shall meet,
 For now, rest and be at peace, and bask in your joy at Jesus' feet.*
 Beloved Son, Brother, and Friend

In Memory of Troy Blackburn
 Born March 29, 1920
 Departed this life Jan. 5, 1990

*God saw he was getting tired,
 And a cure was not to be.
 So He put His arms around him,
 and whispered, come with me.
 With tearful eyes, we watched him suffer, and saw him fade away,
 Although we loved him dearly,
 we could not make him stay.
 A golden heart stopped beating,
 hard-working hands to rest,
 God broke our hearts to prove to us, He only takes the best.*

Card of Thanks

Only what we give away enriches us from day to day, for not in getting, but in giving is found the lasting joy of living...for no one ever had a part in sharing treasures of the heart who did not feel the impact of the magic of God's love...and love alone can make us kind and give us joy and peace of mind. So live with joy unselfishly and you'll be blessed abundantly.

The family of Clell Stephens wishes to thank the men who so unselfishly gave their time in digging the grave.

We want to thank Jimmy D. Reed and D. Blake Stevens (honorary pallbearers) and Kenny Lee Akers, Tim Akers, H. Dwight Howard, J. Keathley, Steven G. Porter, Mitch Stevens, Palmer Stevens, and Todd Stevens (pallbearers). These men so painstakingly and lovingly helped lay our beloved to rest.

There are no words to express how appreciative we are to Sterling and Phyllis Bolen, Jerry Manns and Mr. and Mrs. Risner. Our sincere thanks to all at Ann's Petals and Lace for all the time sacrificed and for the exquisite arrangements.

Our sincere gratitude to all at the Nelson-Frazier Funeral Home. The compassion, humility and caring that was demonstrated will not be forgotten. Also our thanks to the sheriff's department for the escort to the cemetery.

Our humble thanks to: all at the Pikeville Mountain Manor Nursing Home for giving and caring so freely; to Dr. Baretta Casey, who no matter what time day or time that she was called on, responded with kindness and compassion; to Dr. Charles P. Wheeler and his staff who cared so genuinely for so many years; to Dr. Chua and her staff who gave so much of themselves to help us; to Sharon Neeley-Branham, DMD, and her staff for the love, support and care given; to Barbara Williams, DMD, for the love and compassion demonstrated; to everyone at the Mud Creek Clinic (Big Sandy Health Care), we owe you all a debt that can never be repaid—from since the clinic was established, you all have repeatedly gone beyond the call of duty. We consider you all family—you all are so precious to us.

And to all who sent food, flowers, cards; to those who sat with us; to those who spoke kind words to us; to those who thought of us; and those who prayed for us—the family is eternally grateful and thankful for every act of kindness demonstrated.

Happy angler

Right Beaver residents make full use of park

Family fun and fishing popular at new facility

by Ed Taylor

We are told that one of the better forms of exercise is walking. We are told, and encouraged, to take advantage of every opportunity we have to spend some time walking. It is good for the heart and other physical conditions.

Residents up Right Beaver must be listening to the advice because, on a quiet evening at Garrett, you will find a large number of people who are walking for health reasons. Among those are Russell Wallen of Stone Coal and Kelly Cornette of Hueysville.

"I've had heart surgery and I come out here to get some walking in," said Wallen. "I enjoy walking here. It is good to have a place where we can come to walk."

Another walker at the track is Kelly Cornette of Hueysville.

"I walk because it is good for my heart," he said. "I just enjoy being able to get out."

Like Wallen and Cornette, hundreds of other walkers frequently find their way to the new park area that was built last year under then Judge-Executive Ben Hale. The park has much more to offer than just a walking track. There is even a favorite fishing hole for the avid angler like Richard Chaffins.

"I like to fish right here," said Chaffins as he pointed to a favorite spot. "There are a lot of memories here at this place where the old school sat. Right there where that River Birch is was the back door of the old school. We used to duck out to the back to smoke a cigarette and then go back in."

Chaffins was drawing out a string of six suckers and a 15-inch bass he caught in the area where the new park sits.

"You will find a lot of fishermen coming down here to fish," he said. "The other night I fished from that old log over there and caught some fish."

Walking, fishing are just two of the activities offered. There is a modern playground for the kids and, in the evenings, you will find them busy in the park area.

An old outdoor tennis court was converted into a fashionable basketball court with two goals and a paved court — all fenced in.

School board member Jody Mullins said the park has been well used by the local residents.

"It is really a nice park," he said. "It offers everything you would want to do."

Mullins tried his hand on the basketball court missing all three attempts

A Look At Sports

Flu bug hits; Kentucky exits

Well, I, like many of you, have been hit by the bug. The flu bug just has a way of taking all the energy from you and, with my job, I cannot afford to get the bug, but I have found it is "no respecter of persons."

While trying to muster some energy to get things done, I got to watch the Kentucky game (on tape) and I was surprised the Cats made it to the elite eight. I think they had a great season, and the way they played back in February, I did not give them much of a chance to go far in this year's tournament.

But the season for the Big Blue ends and life goes on. I look for the Cats to be a better team next year. Reasons why:

- Jamal Magloire grew up some this season and will be a force to reckon with next season (if he doesn't opt for the pros, which I expect he will attempt).

- Desmond Allison will be a big part of the Cats' offense next season and has proven he can play the game.

- Jules Camara will get a lot of playing time and be yet another shot blocker for the Cats.

- Michael Bradley has developed the moves inside, and he will move to a power forward slot.

- Taysan Prince is a rising star. He will be a three-point threat next season.

- Ryan Hogan will play with a lot more confidence next year and may inherit the two guard slot.

- Saul Smith has already been designated at the point guard next season and, I have to admit, he did show a lot of improvement in the last part of the season.

- J.P. Blevins. Probably will play the same role he played this season, just look forward to playing; although, I believe he can shoot the trey.

- Todd Tackett could be elsewhere next year. Todd said he would make that decision after the season ended and would sit down with coach Tubby Smith and evaluate his future with the Cats. I think he will play next year, and I believe he can play if given the opportunity.

Kentucky has a strong recruiting class coming in, and it may be hard to keep Marvin Stone (6'11") and Keith Bogan out of the lineup.

With the loss of John Stewart, a recruit, the Cats will have an available scholarship and you might wonder who they will go after. The next signing period is next month.

Overall, I look for Kentucky to be a final four team next season and will put up a number of three pointers. They will be strong in the middle with Bradley, Magloire, and Camara, along with Stone. This is going to be a good Kentucky team, but very young.

CASE OF THE MISSING TROPHY!

There has only been one state tournament high school champion to come out of Floyd County. It did not happen in basketball, nor football. But the 1948 version of Prestonsburg baseball, and they had some great ones, won the state baseball tournament to be the only county school to collect a state title.

Now, it seems the 1948 trophy that depicts the state championship is missing at the local high school and those who were on that team have become concerned about it. A search was made of the school for the missing award, but it was not found.

If anyone knows the where-

Q95 trio sounds off on tournament

by Ed Taylor
Sports Editor

(This is the second of three parts from press row of the boys' Sweet Sixteen High School Basketball Tournament.)

Two weeks ago the weather was almost perfect for a high school basketball tournament and the site would once again be Lexington's Rupp Arena.

Entering the dimly-lit arena just before the crowd gathered, I saw that the radio stations on press row were busy, in the quietness of the time, getting their phone lines hooked in, dialing in their respective stations, and making final preparations for the events of that day.

Some stations needed help from local officials, while others were ready and awaiting air time.

For a trio of local sportscasters, the boys' 82nd Sweet Sixteen was one they looked forward to. Rick Hughes, Don Compton and Bobby Hackworth would be on the air for local station Q95-FM, and this would be the station's 16th year of covering the Sweet Sixteen.

For Hughes, it would mark his seventh year behind the mike. Compton was making his second trip and Hackworth, his first.

In the quietness of the moment, the three took time to talk on various state tournament subjects, such as location, press row and the future of the event.

Hughes, the play-by-play sportscaster, talked about the latest rumor that KHSAA Commissioner Louis Stout was considering combining both girls' and boys' tournament games at one site.

"Well, that would help in attendance for the girls' tournament," Hughes said, "and I think it would help the girls. But, for the perception of the overall tournament, I think it would be better to leave it like it is."

Compton agreed on the attendance issue, saying the tournament could be ran in the same format of the All Classic earlier in the year.

"It would make a long day of basketball if they were to go to a different format," said Compton. "If they started at nine in the morning (the format from the free throw line. He was 0-2 from the three-point arc. Well, what do you expect from a left-hander?

"We have a wonderful facility here, and we hope residents will help take care of it," said Mullins, who confessed it had been a long time since he picked up a basketball.

The park has a picnic shelter, a full size (well nearly) baseball field that has become the home of the Allen Central Rebels, and a softball/Little League field.

The park is well lighted and county officials patrol the area often.

"Some (people) were afraid that drunks would come down here and tear things up," said Mullins, "but we haven't had any problems yet."

The ball fields have been named after the late Dewey "Dugger" Conley, who for many years supported the youth programs throughout the county. He was the reason the kids could play at the old site. He constantly kept the field up and saw the kids had a place to play. The ball parks are to be known as the Dewey "Dugger" Conley Memorial Park.

On this day that I visited the park, I was pleased, very pleased, that our county officials and everyone else involved, brought such a facility to the Right Beaver area. It certainly is a wonderful place — a place where families can retreat, play together and enjoy the wonderful outdoors. If you get a chance, make a special trip to Garrett, where the old school sat, and take in the sights of the new park. You and your family will enjoy it.

One day we hope to see other parks, such as the park at Garrett, dotted all over Floyd County. More of these parks are needed in the Betsy Layne area, as well as up Left Beaver.

An added note to the new park is the hiring of a full-time person to oversee the park. Brandon Boling was employed by the Fiscal Court to take care of the grounds. Ernest Mullins was also employed by the court to make sure all the baseball fields in the county are lined off and maintained.

of the All "A"), the games would not be over until around 11 and that would make it a long day. Also, getting all the people in and out of the gym could be a problem."

Hackworth said it would be worth the KHSAA's time to test the format and see if it would work.

"I think it would be a good idea," he said. "Definitely, it would help the attendance at girls games. Just test it and see what happens."

Hughes said his first-time coverage of a state tournament took place at Freedom Hall, where the tournament was held for many seasons before being alternated between Lexington and Louisville. Because of the lack of attendance and declining dollar, the tournament was moved to Rupp Arena for economic purposes. The move has paid off.

"I have been to both places and I personally think the boys' tournament is better off here at Rupp Arena," said Hughes. "It is centrally located, and we have better accommodations and more things to do here.

"This is where the University of Kentucky play their games and UK basketball is the focal point of all Kentucky — and here is where they play. That is what these kids dream of, playing for Kentucky. Playing here in Rupp Arena is the next best thing for them."

Compton said the attendance figures at Rupp Arena compared to Freedom Hall, "speak for themselves."

"No doubt, the better attendance is here," he said. "There is a better atmosphere here. But for the KHSAA, money is the factor when putting on a tournament and it is better for them. For the next five years, the tournament will be here at Rupp."

There was a growing concern along press row that the smaller market stations could be pushed out and off press row. Hughes thinks the threat is very real.

"I think they are trying to eliminate the smaller markets," said Hughes. "I'm not sure of the exact dollar figure in covering the tournament, but I do know it went up several hundred dollars this year."

"We came up with WKCB out of Hindman, and they split the cost. They have increased the price, and they have made a few changes in getting in."

Hughes said that while he likes the changes of getting in, he said the changes were not worth the extra money.

"They really pushed hard, sent out different information several times to try and get your station to go with the Sweet Sixteen network and try to clear press row."

Hughes said he felt they were trying to "do away with the individual stations."

"What I see them doing is pushing for a low price to get you on the Sweet Sixteen Network, and once they get everyone off press row, and they are on their network, then they can go back and charge you anything they want."

Hackworth said the local people want to hear a familiar voice they can identify with.

"A lot of the fans at home remarked they listen to us because we are local," he said. "They (fans) feel they relate more with the local sports-casters and to the game because they are familiar with us."

Fans have tuned in the local stations all through the basketball season and do identify with the local voices behind the microphone.

"Another thing, I read in the Lexington paper where they were considering eliminating the blind draw," said Compton, "and go to the seeding process. How will they determine the one through 16 teams? I hope they leave that alone and not mess with it. Next to the NCAA tournament, this is the greatest basketball event there is."

The KHSAA should be thankful for the smaller market stations because they are there helping to promote the product the KHSAA is trying to sell to the fans.

Kids Day In The Park promises fun, fun, fun

by Ed Taylor Sports Editor

Whether you are a big wheel fan, or you like the football toss, you will want to mark April 24 on your calendar. That is the date for the sixth annual Kids Day In The Park for kids nine and under.

The special event, which grows every year, is sponsored by WMDJ radio and Food City in Prestonsburg.

One of the good things about the event, and there are many, is it is all free. But wait a minute, there's more. Someone is going to go home with some very special prizes that will be given away during the day.

Seven competitive games will be held this year at Archer Park, site of the special event. The all-popular Big Wheel race will be one of the top events as youngsters compete in their age groups on the Big Wheel track.

How about the football toss? There may be some future quarterbacks out there, and what better way to find out than at the football toss.

Everyone grows up playing kick ball and that will be one of the seven events offered.

Future Olympians will want to get their starting shoes and run the 50-yard dash. There has to be a future golfer in the hundreds of kids who will compete this year. If so, then they will want to see how they do in the hole-in-one contest.

There's more. The sack race draws a large field and is a lot of fun to watch. Even if you fall down, you will be in good company. Hot Shot will also be a part of the events this year.

Well, if that was all that will be offered, it would be worth the trip just to compete. But, wait a minute, there is so much more. This year something special has been added — the Owsley Fork Petting Zoo and Pony Rides. Wow! The petting zoo and pony rides are a fun and exciting addition, which promises to draw smiles from all who attend the Kids Day.

Domestic and exotic animals will be included in the day's events. Such animals as Pygmy goats, shetland sheep, Scotch Highland cattle, miniature donkeys and many more will be brought to the park. These zoo animals are tame, and they love to be showered with attention.

The pony rides offer fun to those who with an equestrian bent to take a real pony ride. But it doesn't stop there! Included in the events of the day, will be free snack and drink stops for all kids nine and under. Treat bags for all the kids will be given out.

Tackett hurls, Robinette bats Lady Cats past Whitesburg

by Ed Taylor
Sports Editor

The game was insignificant as far as counting in the standings, but for the Betsy Layne Lady Cats' coaching staff, it was a good sign of the kind of season this team is capable of having.

Betsy Layne played its final scrimmage before the real softball season began when they hosted Whitesburg last Friday night at the Allen Park.

Mindy Robinette picked up three hits and freshman Kim Tackett fanned six in a route-going outing with Betsy Layne recording a 13-3 win over Whitesburg.

"We were real pleased with the way our girls played," assistant coach Mitsy Collins said. "They played very well for this early in the season."

All nine starters for Betsy Layne picked up at least one hit. Denise Jones had two safeties in the game.

"Our bats were alive against Whitesburg," said Collins. "Our defense was pretty good. I believe we will have a great season in front of us. Devon (Reynolds), Crystal (Newsome) and Kim (Clark) played very well in the field."

Tackett allowed a first inning run to the Lady Yellowjackets but shut them down until they scored three times in the fifth inning. She allowed but four walks in her season debut on the mound for Betsy Layne.

Whitesburg held a 1-0 lead after the first inning but Betsy Layne went in front 2-1 after batting in the second. Jones stated the two-run second with a lead-off single. Clark, a sixth-grader, singled home both runs.

The Lady Cats added a third run in the third inning on a one-out walk to Reynolds and Robinette's RBI single. Robinette had two stolen bases but was stranded at third base.

In the Betsy Layne fourth, the Lady Cats exploded for six runs to move in front 9-1. All the scoring came after two were out. Clark started the inning by fanning and Tackett grounded to short. Amanda Robinette singled and went to second on an error. Heather Hamilton walked and both runners rode home on Reynolds' two-run double.

Robinette, Jones and Sheena Akers followed with doubles, giving the Lady Cats four consecutive two-baggers. Newsome then singled home two runs to complete the scoring.

Four more runs dented home plate for Betsy Layne in the fifth when 11 batters paraded to the plate. Hamilton and Reynolds had RBI singles and Robinette drove in two runs with her third hit of the game.

Tackett surrendered three runs to Whitesburg in the fifth inning but got the side in order in the sixth.

Betsy Layne will host South Floyd tonight at the Allen Park in its first district game.

abouts of the missing trophy, please phone me here at the Floyd County Times. We would like to locate that trophy and get it back in the trophy case at the school.

While on the subject of the state champions of 1948, I think a plaque — with all their neames listed — should be hung on the school wall in recognition of the accomplishments of the 1948 team. In fact, a championship wall should be erected (at all schools), not a trophy case, but a championship wall with plaques to commemorate the accomplishments of all teams.

One step further — we need a Floyd County Hall of Fame where we can preserve the memories of some of the great athletes who have performed in Floyd County.

There is going to arise a generation that does not know of a "King" Kelly Coleman, a Seth Branham, Ed DeCoursey, Lowell Hughes, Paul Phillip Hughes, Bob Tallent, Pat Tallent, Mike Tallent, Geri Grigsby, Dee Dee Music, Bridget Clay, Kathy Isaac and the list could go on and on.

I have contended for several years that we need our own Floyd County Hall of Fame — a place, in one of our schools, where we can preserve some of the great memories of the past. We need someone to spearhead a drive to get this going, and I would be willing to help in any way I can.

SO YOU THINK YOU WANT TO BE A RACE CAR DRIVER?

NASCAR race fans will get an opportunity to test their skills on the IGA Busch Series NASCAR Race Car simulator at the Floyd County IGA in Prestonsburg. Driver Jason Keller will be at the local store on Wednesday, April 7, from 11 am. till 2 p.m. Stop in and take the test drive.

ATV's not permitted on Wildlife Management Areas

Officials with the Kentucky Department of Fish and Wildlife Resources (KDFWR) remind the public that all-terrain vehicles (ATV's) are not permitted on public lands owned or managed by the agency.

State law defines an all-terrain vehicle as "any motor vehicle used for recreational off-road use." Kentucky Revised Statute 189.515 further specifies:

* No person shall operate an all-terrain vehicle upon any public highway or upon the right-of-way of any public highway or roadway.

* No person shall operate an all-terrain vehicle on any public or private property without the consent of the landowner.

Roads on public lands owned or managed by the KDFWR are public roads; therefore, ATV's are not permitted on these roads. In addition, KDFWR regulations do not permit vehicles to be used off-roads on public wildlife management areas.

For more information on lands owned or managed by the KDFWR, write Kentucky Department of Fish and Wildlife Resources, #1 Game Farm Road, Frankfort, KY 40601, or call 1-800-858-1549.

MOTHER AND DAUGHTER WEEKEND AT OTTER CREEK PARK

If you are a mother or daughter interested in learning about camping, hiking, nature identification and the great outdoors, your chance is just around the corner. On the weekend of April 17 and 18 Otter Creek Park in Louisville is hosting a guided overnight camp out where mothers and daughters come together and learn outdoor skills.

The weekend was inspired by the Kentucky Becoming an Outdoors-Woman program. In operation for four years, the program gets women outdoors by teaching them skills in nature, hiking, fishing, boating, hunting and more. The Otter Creek Park workshop will focus on hiking, nature identification, low-impact hiking, basic orienteering and campfire cooking skills.

Cost for the workshop is $35 per person and includes classes and ingredients for dinner Saturday night and Sunday morning. Participants need to bring a tent, day pack to carry while hiking, sleeping bag, mess kit (plate, fork, spoon, cup,) water bottle and lunch for Saturday. Wear appropriate clothing in layers for hiking during the day and sleeping out overnight. Camp will be set up at Otter Creek Park's Camp Kimbo, which offers a bathroom and shelter.

If interested in attending the Mother and Daughter Campout at Otter Creek Park call the park at (502)583-3361 in Louisville and (502)942-3211 in Brandenburg. If you are hesitant about camping out overnight, give the park a call and ask questions. They will be happy to talk with you.

BECOMING AN OUTDOORS-WOMAN PROGRAM OFFERS INSTRUCTOR WORKSHOP

If you would like to help teach women about outdoors skill such as fishing, hiking, hunting, canoeing, horseback riding, wildlife identification and more, your opportunity has come. The Kentucky Department of Fish and Wildlife Resources is holding an Instructor Workshop for their Becoming an Outdoors-Woman program April 9 and 10 at camp John Currie in Benton.

is a national program which seeks to overcome some traditional boundaries and teach women skills in outdoor recreation. The Kentucky chapter has been holding weekend workshops three times a year for the last four years. Kentucky was even host to the first International Becoming an Outdoors-Woman Rendezvous in 1998.

The program has now moved to a new level and is seeking teacher trainees for the growing workshops. Interested participants should already have expertise in an outdoor skill. It is not necessary to be skilled in all areas listed above. Participants will learn all about Kentucky's Becoming an Outdoors-Woman program, discuss gender issues, get tips on teaching techniques, meet new friends and have lots of fun.

Teachers attend Becoming an Outdoors Woman weekend workshops and teach four-hour classes on their subject. Of course, teachers also have free time to fish, hike, relax or attend other outdoor skills classes. For more information or to apply, write to Barbara J. Pullman, Kentucky Department of Fish and Wildlife Resources, #1 Game Farm Road, Frankfort, KY 40601 or call 1-800-858-1549.

NOTCH AND CALL

"Notch and Call" is a catch phrase that means when a hunter kills a deer or turkey this fall they must notch or cut out the appropriate information on their permit then call 1-877-CHK GAME to report their harvest to the Kentucky Department of Fish and Wildlife Resources. The Fish and Wildlife Commission approved the notch and call procedure with two actions at the Kentucky Department of Fish and Wildlife Resources Commission meeting in February.

Beginning this year, hunters are required to notch or cut out the information on their deer tags, instead of marking it with pen or pencil, before moving their deer. The new procedure will keep dishonest hunters from attempting to reuse a tag by erasing the information. The commission also voted to change to the tele-check phone system as the only way to check in deer during the 1999 deer hunting seasons. The system will also be used to check in turkeys beginning with the 1999 fall season.

The tele-check phone system was introduced to deer hunters last year as an option to walk-in check stations. With electronic check-in, hunters can call a toll free number from anywhere and check in deer over the phone. Wildlife Division Director Roy Grimes says the electronic system, called tele-check, increases efficiency and accuracy of hunter data.

"The tele-check system is more convenient for the hunter, cuts down on human errors found in the old system and, due to a special security feature, gives law enforcement officers a better way to catch poachers," says Grimes.

Tele-check is an over-the-phone system for recording deer and turkey harvest. The service is toll-free and is available 24 hours a day with infinite phone lines. When a hunter calls, they are asked a series of questions. After each question, the hunter is asked to verify their answer. This keeps errors out of the system.

After answering all the questions, the hunter is given a unique validation number for their harvested deer. When a law enforcement officer checks a hunter, the number can be used to determine if the deer or turkey in front of them is actually the one that was checked in over the phone. A hunter has until 9 a.m. the morning after taking a deer or turkey to check it in. This makes it very easy for law enforcement officers to follow up on a check.

"The purpose of our deer harvest reporting requirement is to gather accurate and timely information to manage the state's deer resource," says Grimes. "When you compare the old walk-in check system with tele-check, the tele-check system is obviously the better of the two. Last year, both systems were used. The walk-in system reported thousands of errors. Of 25,000 deer checked in through tele-check, there was not one error."

Of course, people have expressed concern over going to the electronic system exclusively. Some fear tele-check promotes deer poaching.

Actually, the tele-check system makes the officer more effective. In the old system an officer had to do a lot of digging to find out if someone had actually checked their deer.

Then, it was difficult to prove guilt. It is easy for law enforcement to check if a hunter has tele-checked a deer. They only have to use a social security or driver's license number to call in and find out. In fact, several poaching cases were made using the law enforcement call-back feature last year.

Some people also fear that the tele-check system will take away business and camaraderie produced by physically checking in deer. The Kentucky Department of Fish and Wildlife Resources will be replacing the old yellow check stations signs with new yellow "Touch Tone Check Station" signs. A list of participating check stations will be listed in the Kentucky Hunting Guide. Many stores will continue weighing deer and posting photos.

Finally, the tele-check system is convenient. Hunters will no longer have to drive out of their way and find a walk-in check station to report their deer harvest. This was very inconvenient for hunters harvesting a deer late in the day after check-in stations were closed. Hunters won't have to miss work or hunting the next morning to visit a check station.

"Last season, I harvested a deer and used my cell phone to check it in before I even left the field," reports Grimes. No one who used the tele-check system last year reported a complaint.

Michael Ritch Wins Hooters Miller Lite 250

Michael Ritch of High Point, N.C. swept the Hooters Miller Lite 250 at Mobile International Speedway, Saturday, March 20, for the second consecutive year.

Ritch was the fastest-qualifier at 18.765 secs. (95.923 mph) of the 33 car field. He also led at the halfway point as well as leading 157 laps, the most of any driver.

While most drivers elected to pit on lap 124 during a caution period, Ritchu stayed on the track until another caution came out on lap 157 when Jason Bowser of Clearwater, Florida lost control on the backstretch and spun into the infield.

"We knew we had a good run going and we didn't want to mess up, Ritch says. "We kind of gambled. We thought we might get bit by it because we had a lot of cautions there at the end of the race, but it worked out. We had an extremely fast race car and, once we put new tires on it while everyone else had 30-40 laps on their tires, I knew we was going to be all right."

Driver Tim Edwards of Arden, N.C., who hit a concrete wall during practice is listed in fair condition at USA Medical Center. According to a hospital report, he has no broken bones, but is being treated for internal injuries.

Karen Schultz of Statesville, N.C., the only woman driver in the field finished 25th.

The winning margin of victory was about eight car lengths.

Unofficial order of finish: 1. Michael Ritch, 2. Mike Laughlin Jr., 3. Bobby Gill, 4. Jay Fogleman, 5. Derrick Kelley, 6. John Rumley, 7. Jeff Agnew, 8. Scott Wimmer, 9. Toby Porter, 10. A century of satisfaction

Della Herald, who will be 100 on April 8, could easily pass for 70. She made the dress she has on about 10 years ago, when she was a mere 90. Her century of life has been quiet and peaceful, she says.

by Pam Shingler
Editor

Quiet and peaceful. That's how Della Herald describes her life — all 100 years of it.

"I've never overdone things. I've never gotten too excited about anything," Herald says, matter-of-factly, her thin hands folded in her lap, her voice even and low.

Her daughter Jean Burke concurs. "She never gets excited," says Burke, who lives a little piece behind her mother off University Drive in Prestonsburg.

Herald, who still lives by herself with frequent drop-ins by her daughter, will celebrate a century of life on April 8. She was born in 1899, eight months before the new century kicked in, "far in the country" near Ivyton in Magoffin County.

She doesn't see as well as she would like, visitors have to raise their voices to be heard, and she doesn't hesitate to ask for an arm to hold onto as she walks alongside someone else. But her smile is radiant, her carriage still fine and her brain alert and active.

"I've never smoked a cigarette and I've never eaten much junk food. I've always tried to eat nutritional food," she says. "I've tried to take good care of myself."

It's a formula that apparently works — that and a life filled with hard work and good works.

The diminutive near-centenarian is the last surviving child of Lark and Rhoda Patrick Risner's five children. Her mother died when she was only eight years old, and her father tried to keep the household together. However, after a couple of years, he took in a relative and her husband to help out with the children.

"That didn't work," Herald remembers. "So he made them leave and they burned down our house, and I went to live with a cousin." The story is startling, but, true to her word, Herald presents it as simply the way things were, with no hint of bitterness or anger.

"(Life) wasn't altogether pleasant, but it could have been worse," she says.

With long life come many firsts. Herald saw her first train when she was 11 — around 1910 — when she and family members went to McGuffey, Ohio, to work on an onion farm for the summer.

She first came to Prestonsburg two years later when she turned 13. An older sister was married and already living in the town, so it was natural for the younger sister to follow and find work.

And work she did. After having slept on shuck mattresses and living in modest farmhouses, she was hired by one of the wealthiest families in Prestonsburg at the time — the Harkins — to look after their children, at first young Joe Harkins and then Walter Scott Harkins.

For the first time, she lived with electricity ("just during the day") and the warmth of coal fires. She had her own room in the Harkins house and a mattress on the bed.

"I had never seen a (store bought) mattress on a bed until I came to Prestonsburg. We had shuck beds that we made by shredding the corn shucks with a fork." She illustrates with her hands how the process was done.

"I treated the children as if they were my own, and they loved me as much as their mother," Herald says, nodding her head and smiling.

Pressed, she admits she did more than baby-sit. Working seven days a week, she cleaned the house and cooked for the family — sitting at "the second table" when she ate. She also helped with the frequent entertaining that accompanied the Harkins' social status.

There was some free time, however. When she was 16, the young woman entered a contest at a Fourth of July celebration and was chosen the "Prettiest Girl."

Ballard Herald obviously agreed. "He said it was love at first sight," his widow recalls. The two met shortly after she came to town, but remained "just friends for a long time." They married in 1919 when she was 20.

A picture on the wall shows the sweethearts standing under a large tree, obviously in love, a short time before they married, looking as if they had been posed for an advertisement. Herald's daughter says her father took the picture himself, setting up the box camera to delay until he dashed in front of it.

The picture was made in West Prestonsburg where the young couple would make their home and raise their family before moving across the river 40 years ago.

Ballard Herald was not the only man in love with her. "We went to

by Clyde Pack

Among his flowers

For nearly 50 of his 69 years, my dad was a coal miner. The heels of his callous-covered hands were as thick as a catcher's mitt, his back was slightly bent from working in 30-inch coal since boyhood, and his breathing had become labored as year-by-year his lungs filled with rock dust. Yet, he was strong as a bull and gentle as a lamb...and loved to grow things.

I guess that's why I tend to think about him more at this time of year, when the hedge starts to turn green and Wilma's forsythia is suddenly filled with yellow blossoms.

Dad's gardens, from which he fed his family year 'round, always seemed to prosper. He had a knack for knowing just when to plant, and it seemed he'd be harvesting long after everybody else's gardens were gone.

But he never took credit for the things he grew. When someone would comment on how pretty his beans looked, or his abundant yield of potatoes, he's just shrug and say, "Yeah, the Lord has been good to us."

And not only was Dad good with garden stuff, he also loved to grow flowers.

Especially after he retired, and after the better part of his gardening days were behind him, he took great comfort in his roses. Not surprisingly, he appeared to have had a green thumb when it came to that particular flower. In his last years (he died in 1969), he'd have several varieties of roses growing along the front fence next to the road, and much to his delight, they attracted a good bit of attention from passers by.

"Yeah, the Lord has been good to us," he'd say.

I suppose the reason is obvious as to why he didn't really get into flowers until his later years. After all, he did father and educate seven children, and as he would have said, "You can't put bread on the table pranking with flowers."

His education was cut short when at age 14 he was forced to become head of a family of several younger siblings. His reading was pretty much confined to the Bible, so just as with his vegetables, any knowledge he might have gained regarding flower growing must have been the result of something he and God had worked out.

He probably never heard of Helen Steiner Rice, but being a true Baptist and a deacon at the Thealka Free Will Baptist Church, he undoubtedly would have appreciated this verse she wrote. "Sometimes when faith is running low, And I cannot fathom why things are so, I walk among the flowers that grow and learn the answers to all I would know...For among my flowers I have come to see, Life's miracle and its mystery, and standing in silence and reverie, My faith comes flooding back to me."

Bill Pack was a man of faith, all right, and he sure loved to grow things.

This picture of Della Risner and Ballard Herald was taken in West Prestonsburg shortly before they married in 1919. Herald set up the camera so that he could take the picture and be in it, as well. It's not hard to understand how she was chosen "Prettiest Girl" in town.

Ballard Herald bought wooden candle holders for his young bride in Frankfort where he had gone to take a test. The gift was for their first Christmas together.

Through the years

By Nancy Richard-Guilford

"There is no friendship, no love like that of the mother for the child." — Henry Ward Beecher

A woman learns she never outgrows her mother's boundless love. Author and motivational speaker Nancy Richard-Guilford teaches proactional skills in a setting filled with heart and humor.

My mother, Hazel, sits peeling potatoes. Dressed in Mama's movie-star coat with the real fur collar, high heels and beautiful, red velvet hat, I shuffle elegantly into the kitchen and gleefully yell, "Look, Mommy, I'm Little Hazel!" Mama looks up and smiles with tears in her eyes. I am completely aware of how incredibly cute I am being. I am 4 years old, and Mama is my friend.

"Oh, Mom, it's so pretty! I love it! Thank you, thank you, thank you," I cry as I turn and rustle in my new party dress. My fingers touch the soft, peach satin, and I look up to see Mom smiling at me. I am 9 years old, and, sometimes, Mom is still my fairy godmother.

"I'll be glad when I go to college next year and don't have to live here anymore," I scream at my mother. "If you keep on acting this way," she says in frustration, "I'll be glad too." Hurt and shocked by this revelation, I storm of the room, trying to hold back my tears. I am 17 years old, and, too often, Mother is my adversary.

Two Friends, One Dream... Chicken Soup for the Soul

"I did it! I did it! I got an 'A' from Professor King," I shriek. I leap to my feet, waving my report card in the warm kitchen air. Mom tells me she's proud of me, and we dance around the kitchen in a wild victory jig. I am 21 years old, and Mom is my biggest cheerleader.

I am barely able to hear "Flight 405 to Great Falls is now ready for boarding" over the airport intercom. After all those times when it was me leaving and my mother was crying, now it's her turn to depart, and I am the one left crying. I look at Mama and do something I haven't done since I was 4 years old; I grab her hand and say, "Don't leave." She touches my cheek and says, "But honey, I've got my ticket." Hugging her close to me, I say, "The only way I'll let you go is if you promise to come back for Christmas." Dabbing at her own tears, she says, "Oh yes, I'll be back." I am 37 years old, and Mama is my friend. This time, it is forever.

THINGS TO PONDER

by Mable Rowe Lineberger, Ph.D.

So, so frequently, the individual and his/her family's histories include the excessive taking of "nerve pills" that are legally prescribed by a licensed M.D. Most often, the pills have been taken for "panic attacks, everything and everybody got on my nerves," and generally as a "magic wand" for any kind of problem. It is also not unusual for folks to take these pills for years.

"Pain pills" are another group of abused drugs in our region due to disabling injuries in coal mines, other job sites, and auto accidents. How often do you talk about or hear someone else refer to needing a nerve or pain pill?

One broad category of abused nerve pills is the central nervous system (CNS) depressants. Of these, sleeping pills and anti-anxiety drugs are among the most prescribed medications in the U.S.; about 7 million people take some form of CNS depressant at least once a week. Barbiturates (CNS depressant) produce effects like those of alcohol. Benzodiazepines are safer than barbiturates, but can cause dependence when used in high doses for long periods of time. This class includes anti-anxiety agents diazepam (Valium), alprazolam (Xanax) and triazolam (Halcion). Their abuse brings on drowsiness, slurred speech, and lack of coordination, progressing to memory impairment, tremors, and paranoia.

Another broad category of commonly abused drugs are stimulants, such as Dexadrine (a diet pill) and Ritalin. Addictive stimulants cause rapid speech, agitation, and a debilitating pattern of emotional highs followed by crashes. People addicted to amphetamines, or "uppers," often try to calm themselves down with CNS depressants, or "downers," and become caught in an up-and-down cycle. Remember Elvis?

The most significant indicators of the misuse of legal drugs are: (1) changes in appearance and behaviors that affect relationships and work performance, and (2) in children, abrupt changes in mood or attitude, poor school performances, temper flare-ups, or increased secrecy—specific symptoms depend on the drug used. The indicators of the abuse of stimulants are: extreme energy, weight loss, dilated pupils, insomnia, and trembling. The probable indicators of the abuse of sedatives may be lethargy, slurred or confused speech, lack of balance, constricted pupils, or excessive sleep.

Then there is a third category of drugs associated with prescription drug abuse—opioids such as codeine, Demerol, and Darvon. They are pain killers that block the pain receptors in the brain so that people do not feel pain. They also produce mental clouding, drowsiness, and euphoria—"really feeling good." Demerol is the synthetic narcotic that is now only second to morphine for use in relieving pain. Another group of pain killers are chemically called oxycodones and are derived from morphine.

These pain pills are commercially known as Percocet and Percodan, sometimes called "perkies." They are similar to codeine, but stronger.

As said before, the abuse of pain pills is a giant problem. Some people start out using these prescribed drugs for pain relief from an illness, but gradually increase the dose on their own without permissions from a doctor. Tolerance, or the need for an increased amount to achieve the same pain-killing affect and/or high, develops rapidly and people often find themselves looking for doctors to write prescriptions for them.

A very unofficial survey of pharmacists in the region was done last week. The only question asked was: "Do you think that nerve and pain pills are generally being prescribed too much in our area?"

Twenty contacts were made and the results were as follows: 9-yes; 2-"yes and no." "Some need them and can't get them, others don't need them and can get them". Other statements made were: "quite a bit in use"; "no doubt"; "very much so"; "yes, and generally getting worse"; "too much pain pills, but nerve pills (are) not used as much." One response was "no"; reportedly due to his relationship with the doctors.

In general, we have a drug problem in this area. They deceive the doctor to get the prescription and pills end up on the street. The police have come by to check if a specific person had been here, due to suspicions that the person was selling drugs."

Taking nerve and pain pills excessively can often be a hidden addiction that is as dangerous and disruptive to the individuals and their families as alcoholism.

Talk with your physician about other possible alternatives if you think you are depending upon and abusing prescription drugs.

"Skills for Solo Parents."

THE WAITING ROOM

In all of my running here and there, I've had my share of hours spent in waiting rooms. I got in one more shift a few weeks ago when my brother Jack had major surgery at a Lexington hospital. The procedure lasted more than three hours, and there were five of us to wait it out—his wife Peggy, their pastor family, Lynn and Pam Dotson, our sister Jewel and me.

Jack and Peggy live in the Barbourville area and had gone in the evening before. The surgery was scheduled for fairly in the morning so Jewel and I had set our alarm clocks in order to get up and be there on time. We arrived at the hospital, having had less than a full night's sleep.

The designated waiting area was rather small. A few chairs were arranged around the walls and about eight others were back to back through the center. Along with other families of other surgery patients, there were more people than chairs in the room. It was suggested that we wait there for the doctor might want to contact us at some point during the surgery.

If we tried standing in the hall, we might get run over by a cart as equipment was being moved back and forth. The weather was pretty cold and, if we went outside to huddle with the smokers, we might catch pneumonia. We opted for the small room, but it was crowded and warm and we soon got drowsy.

Jewel was more fortunate than me. She got a chair against the wall and not only napped but had a rather deep sleep. The other three in our party must have slept longer the night before, for they talked about all the things they had been behind on. Listening to them helped me a little though I couldn't help yawning once in a while.

It fell my lot to have one of the chairs with its back to another. I might have leaned back and napped, but my head would have rested against that of the lady behind me. I finally got so drowsy that I propped my arm on the side of my chair and rested my chin in my hand. But when my head dozed off my arm did too, and I fell over against the little man on my right. I felt impressed that it might be good if I could stay awake.

There was a TV mounted high in a corner of the room that was preset to one channel. You had the option of watching or not watching, but you couldn't help hearing for the sound was preset too. I seldom watch daytime TV and was totally unfamiliar with the program that came on, but someone in our group said it was hosted by Ricki Lake.

The program had been planned around some mother-daughter couples who were being treated to make overs in their appearances. The daughters were teenagers who looked as if they'd missed a few meals and had forgotten to put on all their clothing. The biggest difference we could tell in their "before" and "after" look was that they were more completely dressed after. They still looked hungry. The change was a little less noticeable in the mothers as they looked somewhat like the women in our waiting room, except they didn't look sleepy.

The first young lady was tall and thin and wearing a rather skimpy outfit. They introduced her as she looked when she came in, then presented her with the new look they provided. Someone seated against the wall said, "She looks better than she did, but she's still knock-kneed."

The next couple looked like an older-younger version of the same person except the teenager's skirt was considerably shorter. The voice against the wall said, "She looks better, but her skirt is so short she couldn't bend over." "Yes, she could," someone answered, "but it would be like saying, 'Good morning, Judge!'"

About that time, we were told Jack's doctor was ready to see us. He had good news that the surgery had gone well—and we had survived one more waiting room ordeal.

This is the sixth in a series of seven Exclusives on "Skills for Solo Parents." This series represents a sample of content adapted from a new video-based program called "Piecing It Together: Skills for Single Parent Families." The Piecing It Together program, a creative effort of many professionals and volunteers, is currently being pilot tested. It will be finalized and released later this year.

Skills for Solo Parents: support your child's affection for the other parent

A child's love for a parent is naturally strong, even if the parent is absent from the family. The fact that the person is his parent is more important to a child than the circumstances behind a divorce or other reasons for the parent's absence.

Children will feel love and anger, excitement and disappointment toward their other parent. They will even recognize their parent's faults, criticize certain behaviors, and still love them. By allowing this natural expression and development of your children's feelings toward their other parent, you show the depth of your love for them.

Here are some ways you can make your home a place where your children can feel free to show their true feelings:

- Set aside your own negative feelings about your child's other parent and family members. Children need space to form their own opinions. They can usually do a good job of sizing up a person on their own, without your help. You may be surprised at what your child picks up on and understands.

- Don't tell your child how he should feel. Listen well. Be receptive and accepting. Expressions of anger, sadness and guilt as well as silence are all OK. Even if he has an unhealthy attitude, be patient. Allow him to express his feelings.

- It's an old proverb, but it's tried and true: If you can't say something nice, don't say anything at all. This can easily be the rule when dealing with your child's absent parent. While it may be quite tempting to make unkind comments, try very hard not to do so.

Consider it an investment in your child's future.

- Bear in mind that you cannot speak for the other parent. You can only speak for yourself. Don't offer excuses for the other parent or family member's actions or words.

- Whenever reasonably possible, your children should receive guidance and love from both parents. The parent-child bond is special; some would say sacred. Do what you can to nurture it.

- Stay out of arguments between your children and the other parent.

Although you may want to help, your involvement can actually make things worse. It's usually best to let them work out their own problems.

- Encourage your children to telephone, visit, and send cards on special occasions. You can even help buy the stamps. Make it easy for your children to communicate with the other parent, and support them in their efforts.

- Do your best to maintain harmonious relationships with grandparents, stepparents and other extended family members. Your children benefit when the people they love work together. An extended family is a valuable resource for your children, both now and in the future.

Are you still battling strong negative feelings toward your child's other parent? If so, you may be ready to forgive your former partner, or perhaps to forgive again at a deeper level. This doesn't mean letting the other parent off the hook for what he or she may have done, but it does mean giving him or her a break. Most importantly, it means freeing yourself from bitterness and resentment.

If you have tried to forgive and cannot, or if your feelings of anger have grown stronger, consider getting professional help. Keeping strong negative feelings alive inside you is harmful to your physical, emotional, and mental health. A talented counselor can do wonders in helping you deal with, learn from, and let go of painful memories and self-defeating behaviors.

TURKISH CHICKEN WITH SPICED DATE SAUCE

4 boneless, skinless chicken breasts
Vegetable cooking spray
1 cup low-sodium chicken broth
1 box (8 oz.) chopped dates or pitted dates, chopped
1/2 cup chopped onion
2 Tbs. apricot or peach fruit spread

1/2 tsp. ground cinnamon
Hot cooked rice or couscous (optional)

Place chicken in large skillet sprayed with vegetable cooking spray. Cook over medium heat about 5 minutes on each side or until chicken is no longer pink in center. Remove chicken from skillet; cover and keep warm.

Add broth, dates and onion to skillet; bring to boil, stirring occasionally. Reduce heat to low; cook 8 minutes or until liquid is reduced by half.

Stir apricot spread and cinnamon into sauce until blended; spoon over chicken. Garnish with parsley, if desired. Serve with hot rice or couscous.

LITE HUMMUS SPREAD

1 15-oz. can garbanzo beans, drained, reserving 6 Tbs. of the liquid

1 Tbs. sesame tahini
2 Tbs. lemon juice
1-2 cloves garlic (depending on your love of garlic!)
1/2 tsp. olive oil
Paprika
Fresh ground black pepper
Salt to taste (optional)

Blend the beans, reserved liquid, tahini, lemon juice and garlic together in a blender or food processor until smooth. Pour the mixture into a bowl and drizzle the olive oil on top. Sprinkle with paprika, black pepper and, if desired, salt.

This recipe makes a little more than a cup—a good amount of dip for four people.

Each of the 4 servings contains 157 calories and 4 grams of fat.

CHICKEN ESCABECHE

1 pound boneless chicken breast, preferably one large breast

1 tablespoon extra virgin olive oil

1 cup white wine vinegar
1/2 cup fresh lemon juice (2 large lemons)

4 bay leaves
4 garlic cloves, crushed and peeled

1 teaspoon black peppercorns
1 teaspoon whole coriander seed
1 teaspoon dried oregano
12 pearl onions, whole, peeled, or 1 medium onion, cut in thin crescents

2 small carrots, diagonally cut in 3/4-inch slices

1 large red bell pepper, roasted, peeled and seeded

6 bamboo skewers

Trim all visible fat from the chicken and cut the breast into 1-inch cubes; there should be at least 24 pieces.

In a large, deep saucepan, heat the oil over medium-high heat. Cook the chicken, stirring until all pieces are white all over, 4-5 minutes. Transfer the chicken to a bowl.

Into the pot used to cook the chicken, pour the vinegar and lemon juice. Add the bay leaves, garlic, peppercorns, coriander, and oregano. Bring the mixture to a boil over high heat.

Add the chicken and onions. Reduce the heat and simmer the chicken 15 minutes. Add the carrots and cook 5 minutes.

Pour the escabeche into a glass dish or stainless steel bowl. Cut the red pepper into 4 pieces and arrange them to cover the chicken. Set the bowl aside until the escabeche is cool. Cover and refrigerate 24 hours, up to 3 days.

Cut the red pepper into 1-inch squares. If using pearl onions, slide one onto a bamboo skewer. If not, start the skewer with a piece of chicken, add a square of the pepper, a second piece of chicken, and a carrot slice. To complete the skewer, add another piece of chicken, pepper, chicken, and another onion. Repeat, making up 5 more skewers.

Note: This recipe can be doubled or tripled.

Each of the six servings contains 169 calories and 5 grams of fat.

LEAN COOKING BROTH

3 1/2 pound chicken
2 carrots, halved crosswise
2 Spanish onions, quartered
1 leek, with greens, cut in 3-inch pieces

8 sprigs Italian parsley
6 sprigs dill
6 sprigs thyme, or 1 1/2 teaspoons dried

1 sprig rosemary, or 1 teaspoon dried

1 teaspoon black peppercorns
2 bay leaves

Place the chicken, with its neck, gizzard, and heart, in a large soup pot, together with the carrots, onion, leek, parsley, dill, thyme, rosemary, peppercorns, and bay leaves. Add 4 quarts cold water and set the pot over high heat.

As soon as the pot starts bubbling, before it comes to a boil, reduce the heat until the liquid just bubbles gently. Cook the soup until the chicken is cooked, about 1 hour, skimming the top to remove the foam that rises to the surface. Remove the chicken.

Continue cooking the broth until it is reduced by one-third and tastes concentrated. Meanwhile, when the chicken is cool enough to handle, remove and discard the skin. Pull the meat from the bones and reserve it for another use.

When the broth is done, strain it into a large container, pressing on the solids from the pot to extract their juices. Cool, then chill the stock completely to congeal the fat on its surface. Skim off this fat. Transfer the stock to smaller containers, such as ice cube trays, and freeze, then store the cubes in a plastic bag, or pour the stock into sealable plastic bags and freeze. Use as needed in cooking vegetables, chicken, and seafood.

Each cup of broth contains approximately 25 calories and less than 1 gram of fat.

CHOCOLATE CHERRY ALMOND BISCOTTI

1 3/4 cups unbleached flour
2/3 cup Dutch-processed cocoa
2 teaspoons baking powder
2 teaspoons ground cinnamon
1/8 teaspoon salt
3/4 cup sugar
1/2 cup lightly packed light brown sugar

1 cup dried sour cherries
3/4 cup sliced almonds
3 eggs, beaten
1 teaspoon vanilla

Preheat the oven to 325 degrees F. Line a baking sheet with parchment paper or foil.

In a large bowl, mix together the flour, cocoa, baking powder, cinnamon and salt. Stir in the sugar and brown sugar. Mix in the cherries and almonds.

Add the eggs and vanilla. Use a hand mixer to blend the ingredients into a soft dough. Use your hands to work the last bits of dry ingredients into the dough.

Divide the soft dough into 2 parts. On the baking sheet, squeeze and shape each half into a log as long as the pan. Flatten each log slightly. Bake for about 30 minutes, until the logs are hard and dry to the touch. Cool them on the pan.

When the logs are completely cool, on a cutting board, cut them each into 1/2 inch slices with a serrated knife.

Replace the sliced biscotti on the lined baking sheet. Stand them up so they are close, but not touching. Bake 20-30 minutes, until the biscotti are dry and crisp. Cool on the pan. Stored in an airtight container, these biscotti keep for a week.

Makes 36 biscotti. Each biscotti cookie contains 79 calories and 2 grams of fat.

Century

housekeeping across from the Herefords," she says, with another smile. "Tom Hereford was just five years old and he got struck on me. The first meal in our home, he ate with us. He said when he grew up I would be his girl."

An electrician, her husband spent most of his working life with Kentucky/West Virginia Gas Company, retiring as station foreman at the Dwale works. The couple was married almost 52 years. She has lived alone for the last 28 years.

When the couple married, the wife didn't just stay at home, she worked at home. Besides raising two children, Herald baked and decorated cakes, selling them to prominent families in town for special occasions.

She also sewed everything for the home. Her daughter claims she "never had a store-bought dress until I graduated from high school."

Herald still wears clothes she made for herself before she had to quit sewing because of her eyes. (She had cataract surgery last year.)

She has also been a consummate recycler. "It was kind of my hobby to take things other people had discarded and make something useful," she says.

The couple got their first car in 1923, a Dodge. The roads were mostly dirt and, like as not, followed creek beds. Herald laughs as she recalls the time she was taking her brother-in-law to town and a mule got scared by the car and backed into it.

They got their first refrigerator in the early 1930s. It was a second-hand model they bought from a "couple who had separated." She remembers their first radio being a box-type and the only station they could get was in Cincinnati.

Their first television was purchased in the early 1950s, she says, but she doesn't watch much television any more. "There's not much worth watching," she adds.

One of the things Herald misses most as age advances is her church. She was a charter member in 1953 of the First Church of God, a stone's throw from where she lives. As walking has become increasingly difficult, she has had to give up attending services.

Her daughter says her mother was "involved in everything that came along" at the church from baking food for special events to helping people who needed help.

"We grew up knowing that you helped everybody you could," says Burke. "It was second nature."

The "we" includes Burke's brother, Ballard Clinton Herald, who died of cancer in Cleveland, Ohio, a few years ago. Herald says losing her son was "the hardest thing I ever had to do."

Indeed, one of the drawbacks of living long is losing family.

Herald's youngest sister and last sibling died last fall at the age of 93.

Fortunately, the remaining family is nearby. Her only granddaughter, Burke's daughter Della Ormerod, lives next door, and great-granddaughter, Kristin Ormerod, is nearby, as well.

The family is planning a simple gathering to mark the matriarch's 100th birthday.

Herald's approach to her own turn-of-the-century is the same as her life, nothing out of the ordinary, she insists. She expects to follow her usual routine: get up around 7 a.m., listen to the news, get dressed (nearly always a dress), make her bed, and eat a bowl of cereal.

As with most of her life, she's not particularly excited. She does admit, however, "If anybody had told me I'd live this long, I'd say they were crazy."

LITE HUMMUS SPREAD

1 15-oz. can garbanzo beans, drained, reserving 6 Tbs. of the liquid

1 Tbs. sesame tahini
2 Tbs. lemon juice
1-2 cloves garlic (depending on your love of garlic!)
1/2 tsp. olive oil
Paprika
Fresh ground black pepper
Salt to taste (optional)

Blend the beans, reserved liquid, tahini, lemon juice and garlic together in a blender or food processor until smooth. Pour the mixture into a bowl and drizzle the olive oil on top. Sprinkle with paprika, black pepper and, if desired, salt.

This recipe makes a little more than a cup—a good amount of dip for four people.

Each of the 4 servings contains 157 calories and 4 grams of fat.

CHICKEN ESCABECHE

1 pound boneless chicken breast, preferably one large breast

1 tablespoon extra virgin olive oil

1 cup white wine vinegar
1/2 cup fresh lemon juice (2 large lemons)

4 bay leaves
4 garlic cloves, crushed and peeled

1 teaspoon black peppercorns
1 teaspoon whole coriander seed
1 teaspoon dried oregano
12 pearl onions, whole, peeled, or 1 medium onion, cut in thin crescents

2 small carrots, diagonally cut in 3/4-inch slices

1 large red bell pepper, roasted, peeled and seeded

6 bamboo skewers

Trim all visible fat from the chicken and cut the breast into 1-inch cubes; there should be at least 24 pieces.

In a large, deep saucepan, heat the oil over medium-high heat. Cook the chicken, stirring until all pieces are white all over, 4-5 minutes. Transfer the chicken to a bowl.

Into the pot used to cook the chicken, pour the vinegar and lemon juice. Add the bay leaves, garlic, peppercorns, coriander, and oregano. Bring the mixture to a boil over high heat.

Add the chicken and onions. Reduce the heat and simmer the chicken 15 minutes. Add the carrots and cook 5 minutes.

Pour the escabeche into a glass dish or stainless steel bowl. Cut the red pepper into 4 pieces and arrange them to cover the chicken. Set the bowl aside until the escabeche is cool. Cover and refrigerate 24 hours, up to 3 days.

Cut the red pepper into 1-inch

ARH rehab—hosts open house

The McDowell ARH Rehabilitation Services Department will host a combination Open House and Chamber of Commerce "Business After Hours," on Wednesday, March 31, from 5 to 7 p.m.

The Rehabilitation Services department was renovated and expanded in the summer of 1998 to provide a wider range of services to physical therapy, occupational therapy, and speech language pathology patients.

Because of the additions to the department, as well as the on-site nursing facility, McDowell ARH has dramatically decreased the need to be far away from home for rehabilitative care, whether it be short or long term, in or out-patient.

During the Open House, the Rehabilitation Services team will demonstrate the types of care they provide.

For example, they may show how to simulate a work environment to rehabilitate an injured employee, provide therapy for a knee replacement, or train patients to obtain independence at home through the use of the department's full-service kitchen and bath.

Ask about 'corporate culture' and you may get a 'cheerful' response.

It's not unusual these days to hear people using the term "corporate culture" as they describe a particular company.

This relatively new addition to business vernacular has become a popular term especially within human resource functions, which were once known as personnel departments.

These and other changes to business terminology have developed over the years with the intention of improving communications, speeding understanding, and humanizing things a little more.

Besides, coming up with innovative ways to describe a job or business function is nothing new. Before the turn of the century, people who operated those newfangled typing machines were called "typewriters." That job description evolved into "typist" as the machines themselves were granted the typewriter nomenclature. Today, administrative assistants keyboard data into their PCs.

New business terminology can at times seem a bit stilted, like someone trying too hard to be politically correct. But the "corporate culture" term is one that actually is quite useful.

Ask about a company's corporate culture, and it's understood immediately that you want to know about the firm's management style, its view of work/life balance, whether the work is team-based, if flexible work schedules are available, whether there's a dress code, health and retirement benefits, and on and on.

Fortune magazine recently published its annual lists of the "100

Best Companies to Work For" and "America's Most Admired Companies" and although the lists were developed separately, corporate culture is an important aspect of each.

Milton Moskowitz, a compiler of the "100 Best," told Fortune that the list reflects "the level of trust, pride, and camaraderie that employees share with management and their peers, as well as what practices the company has in place to support those things." In other words, the list reflects those features of corporate culture that employees value most.

Compensation is still key, but surveyed workers said training and development, as well as so-called soft benefits—everything from concierge services to on-site daycare to fitness centers—can help turn a so-so job site into a great place to work.

Meanwhile, the list of "America's Most Admired Companies" is based on the qualities that surveyed business people admire, including ingenuity, profitability, and focus. For example: Dell and Wal-Mart, both newcomers to this year's top 10 "Most Admired" list, have dissimilar but successful business methods, and both are "obsessed with quick product delivery."

The corporate culture at Dell is high-tech and virtual, selling its computer wares via the Internet. Wal-Mart is down-home and folksy: "Wal-Mart executives are as likely to lead employees in the company cheer as they are to cite sales figures or operational details," says Fortune. And, although Wal-Mart CEO David Glass has computerized the company, he doesn't have a PC in his office.

One senses that the people who enjoy working at Dell would not care much for the corporate culture at Wal-Mart; nor would the folks at Wal-Mart race to apply for positions at the computer manufacturer.

Still, in today's global business environment, which contributes to a mixing of cultures, the unexpected can occur. In Germany, home to no-nonsense workers and a number of the world's largest and most technologically advanced industries, police were dispatched recently to check out a loud racket behind the new Wal-Mart in Frankfurt. They found 35 employees practicing the company cheer.

Hooray for those workers everywhere who embrace their company's corporate culture, whether it includes innovative benefits, a company chant, or just honest work for an honest day's pay.

CHAMBER NOTES

Business helping business

by Rebecca Derossett
Executive Director
Floyd County
Chamber of Commerce

brochures, fliers, booklets, pictures and directories.

Since January 1, the Chamber has filled 28 requests for relocation packages. These have gone as far as Montana and as near as Scottsville and Richmond.

Now, this process has become even more sophisticated. To further entice these folks to visit Floyd County, Chamber personnel advise the caller to "beam up" on the Chamber website, www.floyd-chamber.com.

Let's play the "what if" game a little further. What if the seeker did search the website, and your business was nowhere to be found? What if you were not a member of the Chamber and could not link your web page with those other sites the caller was accessing hundreds of miles away?

Think about it. The Chamber website has had 165 hits since February 19. Those cyber visitors are clicking up only Chamber members in good standing—those who have paid dues since January 1. All others have been deleted. A pity, isn't it?

See you, same place, same time, next week. Stay in touch!

What if someone calls from Erie, Pennsylvania or Hot Springs, Arkansas, or Johnson City, Tennessee, and this person asks for information on Floyd County? Say they want a list of realtors or banks or hospitals, so they can be prepared for their relocation to this area. Then this stranger expresses an interest in the arts or outdoor recreation or crafts. Maybe the caller wants to establish a business in the mountains of eastern Kentucky. Now, where is this inquisitive person going to look for this information? Why, the local Chamber of Commerce, of course.

This scenario is replayed time and again at the office of the Floyd County Chamber of Commerce. Last year the Chamber responded to more than 100 calls for this type of information. Some were families, some entrepreneurs, others transferred workers. All were mailed a relocation package containing a synopsis of Floyd County, condensed into a conglomerate of

BUSINESS BRIEFS

Selling timber more profitable if sold as capital gains

If you are planning to sell timber in the coming year, how you agree to sell it can dramatically impact the amount of taxes you owe.

"The quickest way to increase your net income from a timber sale is to claim the income as capital gains," suggested Marcella Szymanski, extension specialist in forest economics in the University of Kentucky College of Agriculture.

The typical landowner harvesting 40 acres of timber of average value could easily see increased profits of up to $5,000.

To qualify as capital gains, landowners must have owned the timber for 12 months. Your interest in the timber must be released when it is cut.

Two basic ways to "release the interest" in the timber include agreeing to sell the timber for a lump sum and having the buyer and seller agree to sell for a specified amount per board foot, ton or cord.

For more information, call local UK Cooperative Extension Service office at 886-2668.
