'Posse' pursues, suspect sprints

Officers from four separate agencies were involved in a vehicle pursuit and foot chase Tuesday night that ended in the arrest of Koree Thompson, 24, of Volga in Johnson County.

Thompson was pulled over at the University BP by Kentucky State Police Trooper John Hunt for a possible DUI.

When he was approached by Hunt, Thompson allegedly pulled a gun on the trooper, said Floyd County Sheriff John K. Blackburn. Thompson apparently tried to push Hunt away from him and fold into his vehicle.

Prestonsburg Police Department media logs state that Hunt was in pursuit of Thompson along University Drive to Cliff Road. Thompson led Hunt along Cliff Road to Cliff Church where he turned and headed back toward the mouth of the road, forcing Prestonsburg Officer Stevie Little into the ditch.

After a nearly four-mile pursuit, Thompson reportedly pulled

KDE sponsors public hearing

A Kentucky Department of Education (KDE) representative at the State Board Public Facilities Hearing, Tuesday night at Allen Central High School, asked for public comment, and teachers, coaches and citizens from three areas were there to talk about the proposed amendment to the local school system's facility plans.

Teacher Debbie Walker was the first speaker. She told George P. Dundon Jr., program manager for KDE Division of Facilities management, that input was solicited from parents and teachers on the school uniform issue, but such input was not sought concerning the amendment to the facility plans.

She told Dundon how inadequate she thought the facility at Prestonsburg Elementary is. Her list of problems included no hot water or ventilation in some of the bathrooms, urine and fecal smells in the bathrooms, and dangerous radiators, among other shortcomings.

Walker said despite the inadequate conditions at her school, quality instruction is taking place. She gave her

Lake level lowering

The U.S. Army Corps of Engineers at Dewey Lake has begun lowering the lake level to winter pool. Every fall Dewey Lake is lowered to the winter pool level of 645 m.s.l. (mean sea level) Due to the drought conditions, winter pool will be at 647 m.s.l. this year. The lake will be at this level by December 1 and remain so until spring. The current lake level, rainfall and lake temperature is recorded daily. This recording can be reached by calling 606/886-6398.

PRIDE funds local projects

Times Staff Report

Four Floyd County schools have won grants for environmental projects from the PRIDE program, according to an announcement from US Rep. Hal Rogers' office.

The grants total $17,465.

Allen Central Middle School will use a $5,000 grant to develop an outdoor classroom and purchase materials for the construction of an outdoor shelter to serve more than 650 students.

Another $5,000 grant goes to Prestonsburg High School to purchase equipment and materials for an outdoor classroom project that will serve about 730 students.

May Valley Elementary will use a grant of $4,675 to develop a wildlife trail as part of an educational project to serve about 350 students.

The fourth grant, for $2,790, is for Prestonsburg Elementary to purchase soil test kits, materials for bird feeders and other educational materials.

"We invest millions to clean up the mistakes of the past, but that will mean nothing if we don't prevent a repeat of those mistakes. Education is the key," Rogers said.

"These grants support outdoor classrooms, environmental education projects and student recycling projects across the region. We are investing in our young people as well as our region's future," he said.

Kentucky PRIDE — Personal Responsibility in a Desirable Environment — was created by Rogers and Kentucky Secretary of Natural Resources Jim Bickford in 1997.

Under PRIDE's environmental awareness programs, educators, schools and other organizations from across the region compete for grants of up to $5,000 each for programs that emphasize water quality

Runaway teen returns home

by Randell Reno
Staff Writer

The parents of a local teen breathed a sigh of relief earlier this week after being reunited with their daughter. Sixteen-year-old Brandi Blocker had been missing since July 24.

The Weeksbury teen-ager and her boyfriend Gregory Russell of Roane County, Tennessee, had been in Baltimore, Maryland, staying with some friends.

Blocker and Russell rented an office of a car dealership to sleep in when they first arrived in Maryland. They stayed there from July until September when Debbie McCarty offered them a place to stay.

Blocker said McCarty had seen that she was sickly and became worried about her.

Michael and Debbie McCarty suspected Blocker was a runaway and threatened to turn her in if she did not admit to it, the Floyd County teen said Wednesday. The couple was able to get her to confess to running away one evening while Russell was in police custody for "fooling around with a 14-year-girl," Blocker said.

"The people had a feeling I was a runaway. I started crying and they called my mom and dad," she said.

When they received the call, Harold and Sherry Blocker notified the Kentucky State Police and the Maryland State Police of the situation and left for Maryland soon after.

"I knew they were worried. He (Russell) threatened me. If I called my parents, he said he would kill me," said Brandi Blocker. Russell had been abusing Blocker while they were living in the office, the young woman said, alleging that he had been beating her.

When the police arrived at the McCarty home, Blocker attempted to run from the officers, she said. The officers placed her in handcuffs and transported

In need of a warm coats

by Janice Shepherd
Managing Editor

Children in need of a warm coat this winter can get one for free on Saturday, November 13, at the Town Branch Church.

The church has about 500 boys and girls' coats to give away. The coats range in size from four to eight. The girl's coats are brightly-colored nylon parkas. The boys' coats are made of a sturdy material, similar to hunter's coats, and come in colors of tan and burgundy.

Town Branch conducts the coat giveaway annually, but this year, the coats are in the new style. In past years, wool coats were distributed, but this year's coats were purchased from a different supplier, according to Earlene Nelson, wife of Tom Nelson, the church's pastor, because manufacturer Rothschild Wool Manufacturers in New Jersey went out of business.

This year's supply of coats were purchased from Walls Manufacturers and the Bosco company.

The coats are purchased by Tender Loving Care Ministries and given to comments and left the meeting. Other than Walker and Kevin Spurlock, who spoke on behalf of improvements for the Allen Central football field, all other speakers voiced their opinion about the fate of schools on Left Beaver. Spurlock said he understood that his school was third on the facilities priorities list, but he asked for some immediate help in constructing a storage facility at the field. Spurlock said one estimate for building the facility was $217,000. Spurlock applauded board member Carol Stumbo and chairman Terry Dotson for attending the meeting and added, "I wish our board member (Jody Mullins) was here." Both Kathy Johnson, from McDowell Elementary, and Billy Duty, representing Osborne Elementary, asked why those schools were changed from "permanent" to "transitional" schools. If a school is labeled transitional, no major repairs can be made to the buildings at the school. Duty said current data indicate that big schools are not better. She asked that both schools be changed to permanent schools and needed repairs be done.

Stumbo said the biggest fault she has with the plan is the uncertainty it creates for schools on Left Beaver. She said it was not clear what was being recommended. She asked the committee to "have the courage to spell it out and give us reasons" for the recommendations that have been made. Stumbo said nothing was being done to help the two middle schools that were created by consolidation: Allen Central Middle and South Floyd Middle. "We just put them on the top floor of other schools and forgot about them," Stumbo said. Belinda Osborne of South Floyd

Middle said the school has no way to expand and talked about the difficulty of sharing facilities with South Floyd High School. "South Floyd Middle is one long hallway," Osborne said. Both Bud Reynolds and Connie Gearheart said they thought the original plan called for a middle school at South Floyd. Dundon said the plan he was reading from did not indicate that. Reynolds said he would agree with the middle school teachers that the two schools got in each other's way. Prefacing his statement with an assurance of impartiality, Dundon told the group that "one plan can't cure all ills." He also told the group the plan could be changed up to three times a year. Dundon told the group he would take the comments from the speakers and prepare his recommendation. He said he would send his recommendation to Supt. Paul Fanning and any interested groups could get copies from the central office.

the church for the free distribution. Tender Loving Care Ministries was founded by Carol Johnson of Bethlehem, Pennsylvania, and has been providing coats and clothing for Town Branch Church's clothing distribution projects. In addition to the coat giveaway, the church conducts Easter, back-to-school and Christmas clothing distributions each year. The clothing distributions include complete outfits, from hairbows to shoes. The church received shipments of clothing this week, but the shipments are still coming in and a limited supply of clothing will be available. Boys' garments include blue jeans and pullovers. Girls clothing includes jumpers and turtle-necks or blouses. In previous years, the church has also conducted a clown show or a similar form of entertainment for the youngsters. This year, though, the church is still trying to line up something for the crowd to watch as the children wait their turn to pick out their coats. The coat distribution begins at 11 a.m., but it's first-come, first-served. As people come to the church, they are given a number because only a few people at a time can go into the church's basement to select the coats. Town Branch Church is located on KY 3384, Town Branch Road, just off US 23 at Prestonsburg. Town Branch Road is located beside the large flea market on US 23 near the Floyd Funeral Home. his vehicle to the side. But when Hunt approached, Thompson accelerated toward Hunt, and Hunt fired two shot into the vehicle. With his exit blocked, Thompson crossed the railroad tracks near Schwan's into the trailer park, where he abandoned his vehicle and fled on foot. A posse of 13 officers was quickly mobilized by the KSP, Floyd County Sheriff's Department, Prestonsburg City Police and the state Department of Transportation. An anonymous caller told the city dispatcher the suspect was known to frequent a white double-wide trailer on the river bank and that he could be hiding there. After an extensive search of the neighborhood for nearly two hours, officers discovered

Thompson hiding in a trash bin. The suspect was taken to the Floyd County Detention Center and charged with three counts of attempted murder; speeding, 70 miles per hour in a 55 zone; carrying a concealed deadly weapon, and fleeing and evading a police officer. Trooper Hunt was assisted on the scene by KSP officers Ronald Peppi, Rick Conn and Sgt. Les Stapleton; Sheriff John K. Blackburn, Lt. Deputy Ricky Thornsberry, Sgt. Shawn Roop, and Deputies Linzie Hunt, and Herman Morris; Prestonsburg Police Officers Stevie Little, John Dale, Roy Roberts, and Bryan Hall. No injuries were reported in the case.

A hair-raising experience

Unemployment rates increase in 64 counties in September

Unemployment rates rose in 64 Kentucky counties between August and September, fell in 43 and remained the same in 13 counties, according to the Department for Employment Services, a Cabinet for Workforce Development agency.

From September 1998 to September 1999, jobless rates fell in 64 counties, went up in 52, and stayed the same in Boyle, Christian, Jackson and Lewis counties.

In September 1999, seven counties had jobless rates at or above, 10 percent. Eleven counties recorded double-digit rates in August 1999 and 10 in September 1998.

Jessamine County's 1.6 percent jobless rate was the lowest in the commonwealth. Other low rates were recorded in Woodford County, 1.7 percent; Scott County, 1.8 percent; Fayette and Oldham counties, 2 percent each; Shelby County, 2.1 percent; Bourbon, Trigg and Trimble counties, 2.2 percent each, and Garrard County, 2.3 percent.

Harlan County recorded the state's highest unemployment rate - 14.4 percent. It was followed by Monroe County, 12.8 percent; Taylor County, 12.6 percent; Green and Hancock counties, 11.5 percent each; Magoffin County, 10.6 percent; Martin County, 10.4 percent; Carter and Elliott counties, 9.8 percent each; and Lawrence County, 9.7 percent.

Unemployment statistics are based on estimates and are compiled to measure trends rather than actually to count people working. Civilian labor force statistics include non-military workers and unemployed Kentuckians who are actively seeking work. They do not include unemployed Kentuckians who have not looked for employment within the past four weeks.

This sheet provides information on industries where unemployed people had worked. The source of the information is a monthly sample of Kentuckians drawing unemployment benefits. For example, 25 percent of the sample in the Purchase area had worked in construction.

her to the police department in Towson, Maryland, where she awaited her parents.

"I tried to run. I thought they would lock me up, too. I figured where I had run away, they might try to put me in juvenile hall," Brandi Blocker said.

The teen-ager said that before the McCartys opened their home to her, she had been eating only once or twice a day. Reduced to begging for food Blocker lost 15 pounds. She said Russell had taken care of her by working as a mechanic for a car dealership.

Brandi Blocker met Gregory Russell through friends. After dating him for about a month, the couple fled the area. "Mom and Dad didn't want me to be with him. He told me the only way we would be together was if we ran away," she said.

Russell was arrested and held by the Baltimore County Sheriff's Department for an extradition hearing. He is wanted in the state of Tennessee for jumping bail on a statutory rape charge.

Brandi Blocker said she will return to school Monday. She has "learned my lesson and will never do it again," she said.

"I want to finish school and want to go to college," she said. She has her eyes set on being a lawyer.

Winners of the Food City Halloween costume contest in the Infant (under one year) category were Hannah Jervis (pea pod), whose guardians are Misty and Robert Jervis, first place; Margaret Bowens (Happy Lion), with Tina Bowens, second place; and Kari Blackburn (pumpkin), daughter of Theresa Blackburn. Rightly so

The election on Tuesday turned out pretty much as predicted and as the majority ordained.

Rightly, we believe, Gov. Paul Patton retained his job. It is difficult to argue, unless you have a particular axe to grind, that the state and this region have not fared well under his reign.

Interestingly, however, is the fact that Reform Party candidate Gatewood Galbraith outpolled Patton in 17 precincts. This should fuel conversation and debate for some time.

Obviously, Patton's stands regarding the community colleges and workman's compensation ticked off some voters around here, but we can't help wonder if Gatewood's reputation as a marijuana/hemp proponent influenced some entrepreneurs who have been trying their hand at, um, gardening on mountain tops and river banks of late.

They say folks vote their pocketbooks all the time. Sounds reasonable.

Sheila Crisp Lee took about half the number of votes as Doug Hall, her opponent for Floyd Circuit Clerk. Half, of course, hardly counts in the end. But, the significance is that Lee ran as a Republican in a county that is overwhelmingly Democrat.

Against formidable odds, she won far more votes than there are members of her party. Regardless of political philosophy, that says something positive and hopeful about Floyd County.

Perhaps we are moving — albeit slowly — toward a multi-party county with checks and balances that don't now exist. No matter how high the caliber of the officials we have, the county benefits from choices and competition.

Congratulations are in order for Hall, the winner, but Lee deserves a pat on the back and assurance that she is not a loser.

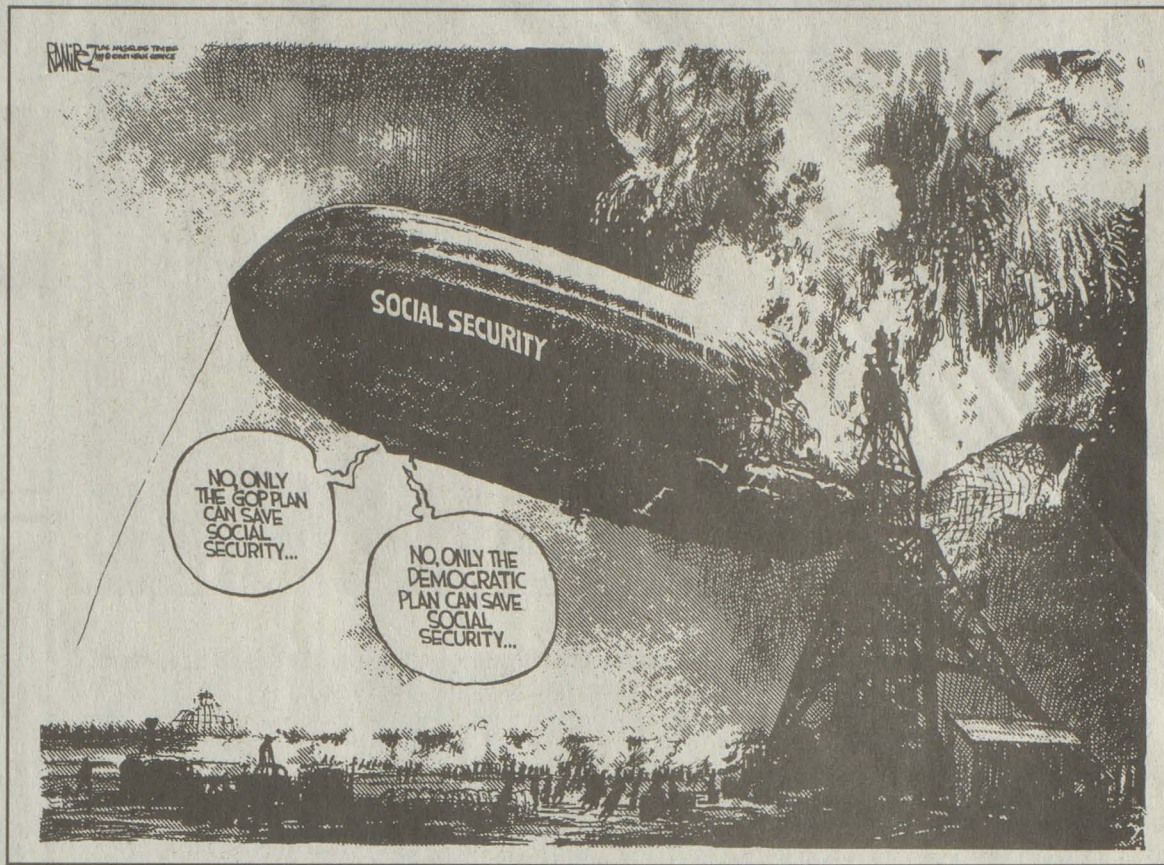

Congratulations, also, to David Allen Barber. He faced a big challenge, a multi-county contest against a seasoned incumbent.

Nobody came close to getting as many votes Tuesday as County Clerk Chris Waugh, in his first campaign for elective office. This may put to rest the adage that nice guys finish last. Waugh is both a nice guy and a big winner.

Julie Paxton is, likewise, a winner. She conducted an intelligent, well-planned, well-organized campaign, upbeat and positive, which typifies how we expect she runs her judicial office. Thankfully, she was not harmed by the insidious, insipid charge of being an outsider.

Overall, Floyd County voters deserve a round of applause. While one-fourth of registered voters voting is not enough to turn cartwheels, it was considerably better than expected. Despite the rain, more than 10,000 Floyd Countians sloshed in to vote.

Letters to the Editor

Community cares

Editor:

I want to take this opportunity to thank the Floyd County community for their support during the annual Floyd County Poker Run and Bike Show, sponsored by Prestonsburg Harley Davidson and the Floyd County HOG chapter to benefit the local chapter of the Muscular Dystrophy Association.

The event, which was held, October 9 and 10, raised $1,380. MDA would like to extend a very special thanks to the dedicated participants who attended the event despite the rain, as well as the generous contributors, who dedicated their time and efforts to raise funds for MDA's local patient service programs.

It has been proven once again that your community cares enough to make a difference. The dollars you raised translate into direct local patient services. Research and patient services are being conducted at the University of Kentucky Department of Neurology.

From summer camp and wheelchair repair, to research and support groups, you have made a huge difference in the fight against neuromuscular disease.

Responds to response

Editor:

Please accept this response to the letter to the editor from a Mr. Bergeron.

I must say that I am impressed to see an answer from such a high ranking official, and I do feel an obligation to respond to his scrutiny of my previous letters.

Mr. Bergeron makes a statement about my not having formal connections to the hospital and my being unaware of hospital operational issues. I laud him for giving me and many others a good laugh for the week.

Could be that Mr. Bergeron is the one making the "numerous accusations and erroneous conclusions" here? Since Jim was here for just a month or so before the strike began, I guess we can forgive his unfamiliarity with our beloved eastern Kentucky... He has not been here long enough to know what these hill folks stand for.

For your information, Jim, I am fully schooled in the art of the collective bargaining process and have been for many years. I have had some of the best

'Sweetness' memories

In the early-mid '70s, when I was working in Atlanta for the Office for Advancement of Public Negro Colleges, I was assigned to go to Jackson State University in Mississippi to take pictures and research a story on a university program of note.

The JSU public relations director scheduled, over a couple of days, meetings with a number of administrators, faculty and students.

As the PR man and I walked across the wooded campus on a sunny, autumn day, we met up with a handsome young man on his way to our shared luncheon.

I have a strong recollection of that meeting. The young man had rigidly perfect posture, muscles sculpted on a straight frame, stretched to make himself as tall as possible. His dark eyes fairly sparkled and his smile could not be contained.

On that walk, it was hard to carry on a conversation with him because of the distractions of young women sidling up to him, arching their heads and rolling their eyes, each hoping she could win one special, penetrating look. The young college men, likewise, scrambled for his attention, no doubt hoping to bask in his reflection.

At lunch I watched how he interacted with the other people around the table. He was ever respectful. He did not hog the conversation, although the others would have gladly deferred.

He listened to what others were saying, and he was extremely humble when someone heaped praise on him — which was often.

The PR man was hyping the young Walter Payton for the Heisman Trophy. It was an idle effort since the picks did not come from small colleges and especially from historically black colleges. But southern blacks, like white Appalachians, learned long ago to live on hope.

I'm not a big sports fan, although at that time I was not long out of the Bulldog-crazy University of Georgia, so I paid a little more attention to collegiate football then. I'm not sure that if this young man had been someone other than Walter Payton I would have remembered him over the years.

I've followed his career these many years because he made such an impression on me that day. He was the opposite of what I expected from a star athlete, certainly of what I'd known at Georgia where jocks back then knew the world was theirs.

There was, as his NFL nickname indicates, a profound sweetness about him. I cannot quote any of his statistics, but I can verify that he was an unusual young man, the best of the best.

I was saddened when he announced last year that he had a serious illness, although as I recall he was positive that he could beat it. There was no aura of self-pity about him. That sweet smile shone as he talked about his illness.

It was surprising to learn this week that he did not beat it. I had confidence he would come out healthy and still shining. As corny as it might sound, perhaps God needed a boost and he asked Walter "Sweetness" Payton to join him.

instructors and some of the best reasons to commit to memory this process. I guess you'll just have to take my word for that.

The waters are not muddy on the issues that are before us, and, in case you didn't know, the only thing that old axes are good for is to dispose of and procure a new one.

The public can see clearly now, the rain has gone and the mud has settled to the bottom. It is apparently clear that the hospital could have bypassed a labor dispute had they desired to do so.

Again, Jim, we in eastern Kentucky are not into ESP or the TV fortunetellers, nor in persons who were not present when votes occurred. (We do not) rely on persons who have returned to the situations to which they were vehemently opposed prior to the work stoppage. They'll tell you what they want you to hear.

If you were as knowledgeable as you would like the public to believe you are, you would know that in this particular union, the members are the bosses. The members did not subvert their authority to the leadership in Columbus.

Ms. Rubado has stated many, many times what the bylaws state, and even she construed something that was not there. The public can read and comprehend more than you give them credit for. They have read the letters from union members attempting to tell her she was incorrect.

It is time that Highlands Regional Medical Center and Consolidated Health Systems heard the call from the community and get back to the tables and get this business settled.

Numerous people who could not afford health care could have been attended to, free of charge, with all the resources that you have placed into attempting to annihilate the union.

If this is a community-based, not-for-profit hospital, then isn't it time that the community call upon the leadership of the hospital to allow the community to exercise a right to vote on the members of the board.

Jim, hopefully one day you will learn to appreciate the land to which you have sojourned. To do that, you have to appreciate the people. Respect and honor come to each of us only through the respect and honor that we extend to the other.

God bless our workers. God save our hospital.

GOSPEL ACCORDING TO ME

To everything there is a season

by Paul Prather

In Genesis, God promises Noah that for as long as the earth remains, the ongoing repetition of "seedtime and harvest, cold and heat, summer and winter, day and night, will never cease."

These regularly scheduled seasons are brought about by the travels and revolutions of our planet, of course, and even now they're more dependable than the next breath you hope to draw.

What's interesting to me is that the writer of Ecclesiastes (traditionally said to have been Solomon) later adds to this law.

For him, not only do the workings of the earth, sun and moon have their specific times and seasons, but so does all of creation, including human endeavors.

"There is a time for everything," Solomon tells us, "and a season for every activity under heaven."

He says that, among other things, there's a proper time to be born and a proper time to die; a time to plant and a time to uproot; a time to weep and a time to laugh; a time to be silent and a time to speak.

I looked up the Hebrew words used in Ecclesiastes to convey this idea.

The word translated as "season" means, literally, "a fixed or appointed occasion." The word translated as "time" means "a proper 'now.'" The word translated as "activity" means "pleasure," "desire" or "inclination."

In short, there's an appropriate time to engage in most any inclination we may have, a time actually fixed beforehand by God as good.

And there's a wrong time. The trick is in discerning God's right timing from our errant timing.

If you burst out laughing in the middle of a comedian's routine in a nightclub, for instance, you'll be considered one of the boys. But if you burst out laughing at a funeral, you may find yourself the object of scorn.

If you invest in stocks at the beginning of a bull market, you'll make a fortune. If you buy those very same stocks when the market has peaked, you can bankrupt yourself.

It's rarely our activities that are a problem. It's our timing.

For me, this is enormously enlightening. Every activity is beautiful, Solomon says, when conducted in its proper time.

As I've mentioned, my third book recently was published. (This week it's the No. 1 non-fiction best-seller at Lexington's Joseph-Beth Booksellers. Yee-haw!)

But I dedicated "Back Porch Faith" to my only child. It contains a lot of stories about him and various other members of our family, some of whom died before he was born.

I wrote the book partly to give John a sense of his heritage.

Recently I was interviewed on a radio program.

"I noticed that your book is dedicated to your son," the interviewer said.

"What does he think of it?"
"To tell you the truth, he hasn't read it."

"Hasn't read it?" the interviewer said. She looked and sounded genuinely startled. "Why not?"

"Well, he's 16, and at this point he doesn't read much of anything. He has more important things to do. Like learning to drive. And calling girls."

"I'm sorry."

"Oh, I'm not worried," I said. "He'll read it at the proper time, and it'll mean more to him than it would if he read it now. I may be dead and gone, but eventually, at the right moment, it'll have its intended effect."

I really meant what I said. There's a time to write a book, and there's a time for the book to be read. Each should be allowed to happen in its opportune season.

Similarly, businesses, churches and sports teams naturally pass through cycles of spring, summer, fall and winter — or, if you prefer, birth, growth, maturity and decline.

Everything is beautiful in its time. Everything soon fades. Eventually most things spring to new life again even after they appear dead.

Knowing this, we can relax when something we love is experiencing a cold, dreary winter, because we understand that it's all part of God's plan.

The same creator made each season. Each season returns, in its own time and its own way.

Not on our schedule, but on God's.

Members still divided over principal position, agenda

A battle over additional principal positions continues to be a dividing issue for the Magoffin County School Board, and now has spawned another disagreement regarding the creation of meeting agendas.

The principal issue remains whether to increase positions at Prater-Borders Elementary and John T. Arnett Elementary from half time to full time.

Voters reject fire district proposal

A proposal to create a fire taxing district in the area served by the W.R. Castle Volunteer Fire Department was soundly defeated Tuesday by the district's voters.

The question was offered to voters in parts of seven precincts, and the result was a vote of 354 against the fire district and 209 in favor.

The ballot issue was the second attempt by W.R. Castle Fire Department supporters to create the taxing district.

Blaine will remain incorporated

The city of Blaine survived a tough dissolution fight Tuesday, with voters deciding that their community will remain incorporated but deadlocking on who will serve an unexpired term as mayor.

Blaine voters defeated the dissolution question by just 15 votes. Unofficial returns Tuesday night showed 63 residents voting no on the question and 48 voting yes.

While the vote was close on the dissolution question, it was the race for Blaine mayor that will likely result in a recount.

In that race, Denver Mollett, who was appointed interim mayor following the resignation of Cindy Steele and who was the only candidate to file for the post, and write-in candidate Wilma Blevins each received 44 votes. When unofficial results were first tallied, Mollett received 44 votes and Blevins 35. But County Clerk Gallie Isaac Jr. later learned that nine absentee ballots cast for Blevins were not figured into her total, making the outcome undecided Tuesday night.

Morgan retains judge's seat

J. Robert "Bobby" Morgan will serve another term as Circuit Judge of District 36, according to unofficial vote totals at press time on Tuesday. Morgan defeated challenger Jerry Wayne Slone by only 512 votes, 4,155 to 4,003.

Slone ran a close race in both Knott and Magoffin counties. Morgan carried Knott County by 157 votes, garnering 2,642 to Slone's 2,485.

The margin was wider in Magoffin: Morgan had 1,873 to Slone's 1,518 for a difference of 355 votes. Morgan has held the circuit judge seat since

Foiled robbery attempt lands local men in jail

A foiled robbery attempt recently landed two Magoffin men in jail.

Jamie Gibson, 22, of the Burning Fork area, was arrested by Salyersville City Police Detective Creed Patrick and County Sheriff Pat Montgomery following the attempted robbery of Jarrell's Quick Stop, a gas and convenience store located at the junction of Route 7 and Elk Creek.

Terry Coleman, 22, also of Burning Fork, turned himself over to Montgomery Tuesday afternoon.

pany had not been identified at the request of the prospective sellers, who must first notify the state's Public Service Commission and the Department for Local Government of their intentions to transfer ownership to the Paintsville company.

The identity will be made public next week.

Van Lear man jailed

Following the lead of an undercover buyer, the Johnson County Sheriff's Department swarmed over a Van Lear residence Thursday, making one arrest and confiscating a sizable quantity of illicit drugs.

Executing a search warrant obtained after the alleged undercover drug purchase, police arrested Jim Jack Penix, 39, of Millers Creek Road and charged him with trafficking in a controlled substance and trafficking in marijuana, more than eight ounces. Both are felony counts.

Louisa Police Chief Kevin "Tim" Adkins said a U-Haul trailer was stolen from Louisa Convenient Storage on Route 3, early Sunday morning.

Adkins estimated that the five-foot by eight-foot vehicle was stolen from the storage facility about 6 p.m. Sunday. The trailer, estimated at $3,300, has Arizona registration, and its license plate number is J01287AZ.

In a separate incident, a vehicle was broken into early Monday morning with about $1,100 of stereo equipment taken in the process.

KACo asks Knight to vacate recent order regarding ex-workers

The Kentucky Association of Counties says it shouldn't have to pay $450,000 plus interest to the Lawrence County Fiscal Court and 16 ex-employees who were illegally fired five years ago during the previous administration.

KACo, in a motion filed last week to alter, amend or vacate a recent ruling by Lawrence Circuit Judge James A. Knight, argues that its Kentucky All Lines Fund does not cover wrongful or illegal acts committed by county officials, saying that the firings of the 16 county workers "fall squarely within the police definition of intentional torts so that they would be excluded from indemnity coverage under the policy."

made possible by a $76,762 grant from the state Transportation Cabinet. Mayor Robert Nickell said the grant, obtained through the efforts of State Rep. John Stacy, will allow the city to pave 23 streets this fall—roughly the number it would take three years to complete with general revenues.

Casey's FoodWorld celebrates 40 years

In 1959, Martin (Junior) Casebolt opened Casey's IGA in Leburn.

Casey's IGA, located at the mouth of Possum Trot, quickly became a popular trading place for the people of Knott County.

Casey's IGA is no longer in operation at its original location, but Casey's FoodWorld at Hindman Holly Hills Shopping Center is one of eight grocery stores owned by Jim Cox.

On Monday, November 1, Casey's FoodWorld commenced a 40th anniversary celebration, with special sales and events planned for the next two weeks.

A major part of the ceremony was the recognition of 40 years of continuous service by store employee Strodie Slone of Leburn. He was presented with a plaque and a gold watch by Jim Cox.

Thompson tops Burke in race for family court

Despite a relatively quiet campaign effort, District Court Judge Larry Thompson earned what could be considered a landslide victory in the county's first election for family court judge.

Pike County voters overwhelmingly supported Thompson in Tuesday's general election, giving him 8,251 votes compared to the 3,840 his opponent, current Family Court Judge Kathryn Burke, received.

In the past week, the race became what was perhaps the most watched local race as Rhoda Simpson, a Pikeville woman who lost custody of three of her four children in Burke's courtroom, stationed herself outside the Pike County Courthouse and headed a protest against Burke.

A nominating process will be done to appoint a judge to fill Thompson's district court position in January until an interim election is held to fill the remaining three years of the term.

Hospital's registered nurses vote against Steelworkers

Father, son arraigned for murder

A father and son appeared before Wayne County Magistrate David Ferguson Thursday for preliminary arraignment in the murder of a Kermit man on October 21.

Birdie Muncy, 70, and his son, 35-year-old Crit Muncy, both of Crum, are charged with the murder of Kenneth Lyle Messer, 43, of Kermit. The pair reportedly opened fire on Messer, his wife Rylenea and brother Paul after an ownership dispute over a mobile home reportedly valued at $700 on Marrowbone Creek.

Messer was reportedly shot seven times. Mrs. Messer sustained serious injuries from two gunshot wounds. Paul Messer received a slight gunshot wound to the head after he reportedly tried to disarm one of the gunmen.

Sheriff owes fiscal court $91,000

Facing massive layoffs due to ever-decreasing funds, the Martin County Fiscal Court might have Despite continued claims of support into the eleventh hour, the United Steelworkers of America lost by a near 2-1 margin Friday its bid to continue representing registered nurses at Pikeville Methodist Hospital.

But Steelworkers officials and supporters held on to a measure of confidence following the vote, asserting they still have a battle to win to keep their other labor unit in the hospital's more than 600 hourly workers.

ARH officials deny woman's allegation of hospital attack

Appalachian Regional Hospital officials have publicly denied allegations made in a lawsuit filed last week that a patient was attacked by hospital employees when attempting to leave the facility last month.

In a press release issued Friday, South Williamson ARH Assistant Administrator Tim Hatfield labeled the allegations brought by Barbara McCoy of Belfry and the News-Express' October 27 article about the lawsuit — "an astonishing distortion of facts." The lawsuit alleges the woman was attacked by approximately seven SWARH staff members after she decided to check herself out of the hospital.

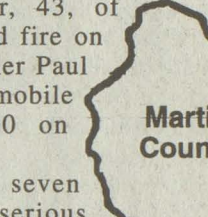

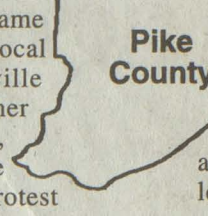

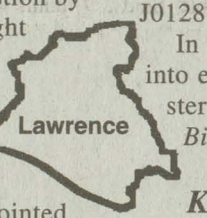

to rely on Sheriff Darriel Young paying his bill for relief. As of Monday, his office owes $91,046.77 for the county doing its payroll several months, which is a violation of a fiscal court order made in 1996.

For months, Young has told the court the money would be paid back after he collected taxes. Tax bills have been mailed, but the estimated revenue the sheriff will receive will not cover what he owes.

Ohio murder parolee to face grand jury for attempted murder

An Ohio parolee, sentence to 15 years to life in 1976 for murder, is still lodged at Southwest Regional Jail in Logan County after being charged with two counts of attempted murder for allegedly trying to run over two Kermit police officers, October 3.

Bond was set for 48-year-old Samuel Block of Magadore, Ohio, for $90,000, which includes $30,000 on two counts of attempted murder and one count of fleeing an officer while driving under the influence.

Effects of child abuse

by Peter O. Samples, State Chairman

Studies have linked child abuse and neglect to a wide range of criminal and social misbehaviors. Why? Because violence breeds violence.

The emotional damage which may result from child abuse or neglect often is vented through self-destructive expressions, such as substance abuse, running away, prostitution, suicide and antisocial expressions, such as rape, murder and the continuation of child abuse and neglect.

Morehead State offers electronic registration

Advance registration for the Spring 2000 semester at Morehead State University may now be completed electronically by current students.

When the University begins the pre-registration process on Monday, November 8, students may process a schedule of classes at their convenience from their personal computer in a residence hall or at home, or in the on-campus computer labs, according to Loretta Lykins, MSU registrar.

The new online registration option was added to the MSU Web site this fall to expedite the process for students. Before beginning the process, students must have their schedule approved by their adviser and have an MSU PIN number. Undergraduate students will need to have an official checksheet on file in the registrar's office. The electronic service will be available 24 hours

National Health and Information Technology week: November 7-13

The week of November 7 through the 13 is National Health Information and Technology (HI&T) week. The week-long event recognizes medical record and health information management professionals and the contributions they make to the medical field.

Due to the close working relationship between HIM professionals and the information technology professionals, the American Health Information Management Association has joined with the Joint Healthcare Information Technology Alliance to celebrate the week.

"HIM professionals play pivotal and diverse roles within the healthcare industry," Health Information Management Director Connie Clemson said. "And in many of those roles, HIM professionals are working much more closely with information technology professionals and senior executives in an effort to achieve mutual goals. They really do a great job and I'm very proud of the work they do."

According to Clemson, HIM roles and duties include:

- Data quality management—capturing, managing, and analyzing data pulled from medical records and other healthcare industry sources.
- Fraud and abuse prevention—spearheading organizational efforts to comply with laws and regulations designed to prevent fraud and abuse of the healthcare industry.
- Information security—developing and implementing methods to ensure that patient health information is protected from fires, power outages, unauthorized access, and other internal and external threats.

- Compliance with Health Insurance Portability and Accountability Act provisions—making sure healthcare organizations are aware of and comply with new administrative simplification and information security regulations that develop.

- Computer-based patient records—developing and implementing comprehensive computer-based patient record systems in settings throughout the healthcare industry.

"These are the unsung heroes of any hospital," Information Systems Director Bill Smith said. "They perform so many tasks, and accomplish so much in a day, and are often times overlooked."

Pike County man wins KY lottery

Gary Isaac, of Virgie, in Pike County, says he can't believe he actually won the $100,000 top prize in the Kentucky Lottery's Cash 5 game!

"I play pretty regularly and win some money here and there, but never anything like this," said Isaac. "When the cashier told me I'd won, I didn't believe her!" Isaac went to the Kentucky Lottery's Prestonsburg office to confirm his winning.

Isaac then traveled to the Kentucky Lottery's corporate office in Louisville to get his prize. "Seeing my name on that check makes it real," he said.

The lucky man says he has not yet had a chance to decide what he wants to do with his winnings. He added that his 17-year-old son and 15-year-old daughter will probably have the money spent before he makes it back home. Isaac is a coal miner for Branham and Baker Coal Company.

He actually bought his $1 quick pick from the $6 he had won in Saturday's Powerball® drawing. "I may not have hit that big jackpot, but I still feel really lucky!"

The winning Cash 5 ticket was purchased at Pit Stop Express Food and Fuel, 15087 US 23, in Dorton.

Cash 5 drawings are conducted seven days a week at 10:58 p.m. ET. Players can win $100,000 for matching all five winning numbers; $200 for matching four of five numbers drawn; or $10 for matching three of five numbers drawn. Tickets are available for Cash 5 and other Kentucky Lottery on-line games at any of the 2,700 lottery retailers throughout the state.

High winds, blowing leaves cause hazards for drivers

High winds, rain and blowing leaves can be a dangerous combination for drivers at this time of year, according to the Blue Grass Auto Club Safety Foundation.

"Strong winds can cause a motorist to lose control of a vehicle or objects blowing across a highway may distract a driver enough to cause an accident," according to Lilla Mason, director of the Safety Foundation.

Leaves that stick to a road surface during rain, can also cause drivers to experience trouble with skidding.

AAA has the following tips for drivers in these types of conditions:

RAIN & LEAVES

- Rain and wind will cause leaves to fall on the roadway, making roads slick and hazardous.

- Regardless of speech limits, reduce your speed before entering curves to avoid losing traction on wet leaves and going off the pavement. Wet leaves tend to collect in curves of winding roads.

- Use smooth starts and stops on roads with wet leaves. Avoid jack rabbit acceleration or jamming on the brakes when driving on wet leaves.

- Be prepared for anything. Sean low along the roadway for objects that could be blown into your path. Swerving to miss an object is safer than braking on rain slick road, as long as you can do it without hitting another vehicle or solid object.

- Keep in front of or behind high centered vehicles likely to swerve in a wind gust. Those vehicles include sport utilities, vans and empty tractor trailer trucks. Do not linger alongside while passing. Likewise, give such vehicles extra room when passing you.

- Be aware that windy conditions are often more severe in mountainous areas where "wind tunnels" are created by unusual topography. Also, when driving through an underpass, wind speed will decrease under the bridge, but suddenly increase when you come out the other side.

- Reduce your speed and increase your following distance in construction zones. Barrels and temporary road signs may blow onto the roadway.

- Be aware that when, entering or exiting a parked vehicle in windy conditions, a gust of wind may cause a door to fly open or shut with great force, causing injury.

The Blue Grass Auto Club Safety Foundation is a non-profit charitable organization founded by AAA Blue Grass/Kentucky to promote traffic safety in 48 counties in central and eastern Kentucky.

Sonya Tackett wants to improve under the boards

by Ed Taylor
Sports Editor

No longer does the South Floyd Lady Raiders' basketball team expect to remain the "door mat" of the 58th District, but the Lady Raiders are confident this could be the year they surprise some people.

Sonya Tackett is one of four returning seniors who looks at the 1999-2000 edition of girls' basketball at South Floyd as a team that can compete. The reason? An attitude change!

"We are a little more positive this year," she said. "In the past, we went out expecting to lose. Coach (Paul) Cline has made a difference in how we are thinking this year.

"He is for the whole team. He wants to see us do well. It's not about him or anything else, it's just about us as a team. I think an attitude like that is really great."

Tackett said the Lady Raiders will be an up and down ball club this season simply because they lack the size inside.

"Coach Cline has told us he wants us to run the ball more

Junior to Cincinnati?

A Look at Sports

Nahhhh! It will never happen. The budget-strapped Reds are not financially able to afford Seattle's Ken Griffey Jr., no matter that his father is a coach with the Reds.

Look for George Steinbrenner and the New York Yankees to grab the mega star. The Yanks have the cash that Griffey will demand once he becomes a free agent after next season. If the Yanks don't, then the Atlanta Braves will.

Can you imagine what he will command when he does go the free agent route? There are very few teams who will be able to afford Junior.

I don't think Griffey would fit into the scheme of things of what the Reds are trying to do. The lefthanded hitting Griffey turned down 135 million offer from the Mariners, which really is an insane offer. We have gone nuts in the sports world!

Deservedly, Reds Manager Jack McKeon was named Manager of the Year after guiding the Reds to 96 wins. He was signed for next season but for just one year. That leads me to think in the back of the Reds brass head they are thinking of signing Ken Griffey Sr. as the next Reds manager. That too would be a bad move.

KENTUCKY BASKETBALL

The Kentucky Wildcats basketball program has lost out on so many recruits one has to wonder what is happening. Rolando Howell, who was high on the Cats' list, committed to South Carolina.

The Cats have failed to get a commitment from a point guard and just can't seem to attract many blue chip players as they are going elsewhere.

Duke, North Carolina and others have won out over the Wildcats in the recruiting battles, and it appears coach Tubby Smith is going to have to settle for who-

Daniels: 'Harlan ranks with Pikeville in quickness'

by Ed Taylor
Sports Editor

It is November and the first round of the high school 1999 state playoffs gets underway tonight as football teams across the state have hopes of advancing to Louisville later in the month for the state championships.

Coach Donnie Daniels and the South Floyd Raiders are just one of those teams, and it will mark the third straight season the Raiders have been play-off bound. However, the South Floyd coach hopes things are a little different than the past seasons.

"If we can go to Harlan and pull out a victory, it will be the first playoff win in the school's history," said Coach Daniels.

Daniels believes his team has an excellent shot at pulling off the school's first playoff win.

"Of the other six teams we have played in the playoffs, I feel we match up against Harlan better than any of the other six," he said. "I have seen the confidence of this team growing all season and,

Key for Prestonsburg could be in the trenches

Youthful Cats travel to Breathitt County

by Ed Taylor
Sports Editor

If Prestonsburg assistant football coach Jackie Day Crisp had his wish for the weather tonight, he would like to see the rains fall when the Blackcats visit Breathitt County tonight for the first round of the state high school football playoffs.

Playing at the Jackson school has not been one of the favorite places for the Cats because it hasn't been a kind place to them.

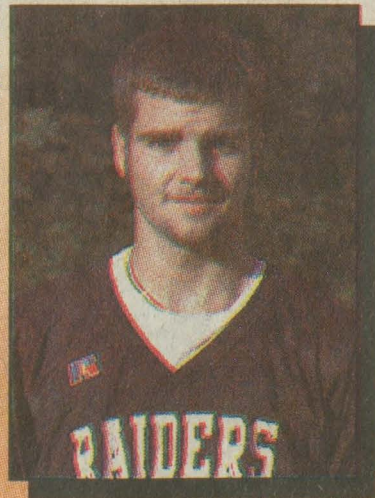

However, it should be pointed out, the Cats have never really put together a full four quarters at Breathitt. They have played well in games at the site but seem to struggle in the fourth period.

For Prestonsburg to bring home a win than we have in the past," said Tackett.

Being one of four seniors, Tackett has set some personal goals this basketball season.

"I want to be a better rebounder," she said. "I want to get a little quicker and to become a team leader on the court and help the other players out."

Tackett will be playing for her fourth coach in the four years she has been at South Floyd.

"It has been different coming from grade school to high school," she said. "In grade school you have the same coach but in high school you don't know."

"We started with Coach (Henry) Webb and he stayed a year and half. He had been there the longest of all. Then Coach (John) Martin stepped in for half of a year. Then last year we had Coach (Ronnie) Patton, and this year we have Coach Cline." Tackett said it had become frustrating at times with all the coaching changes.

"It's a different style every year," she said. "A lot of changes. Through all the changes each player sort of loses a little of themselves after a coach leaves."

"The good thing about this year, we all have been coached by Coach Cline somewhat. It has been hard going through all the changes."

Collectively as a team, Tackett said the Lady Raiders needed to pick up on defense before the season begins.

"We need to get to know each other better on the court," she said. "We need to know where the plays are going to happen. We need to step on rebounding. But everyone is working hard."

At the high school level, Tackett did not go through too many changes since coming from Osborne Elementary.

"There really hasn't been that many adjustments I needed to make," she said. "Maybe having to move from center to the power forward position. The coaches are looking for me to get quicker."

Basketball preparation is mostly physical, but Tackett said a lot of mental preparation for a game is involved. "I think we will be watching more film this year," she said. "I think that helps you mentally. If you can see what the other players are doing you have to think about the game. I have been writing down some of the offenses we have been running. If you get that in your head you can become more confident. Getting mentally prepared is just as important as getting ready physically."

The numbers are down this year for the Lady Raiders with only 12 players on the roster, counting junior varsity players. Tackett said some players will have to step up and contribute this season.

"We have the talent to be a good team, even though we don't have a lot of players," said Tackett. "Our bench will be long and not hurt us any when we go to it."

Lindsey Hall is another returning senior for the Lady Raiders.

"She is a very versatile player," said Tackett. "She can play inside and outside. She is quick and a strong rebounder. Lindsey is probably one of the best rebounders we had last year."

Monica Newsome is senior number three and gives the Lady Raiders some outside power.

"She is a very good basketball player," said Tackett. "She is capable of scoring inside as well as outside."

Senior number four is Martha Crawford, who Tackett said will have to be a leader on the court.

"Martha is an excellent basketball player," she said. "She can shoot outside and had been a great leader on the floor as well."

Junior Minnie Tackett is expected to take charge offensively this season.

"Minnie has really improved her game over the summer," said Tackett. She is very quick. We look for her to probably lead us in scoring."

Tackett said the Lady Raiders will get a lot of help from some young players such as Kandice Mitchell, Sarah Johnson, Jessica Paige, Stephanie Skeans and Tabitha Berger.

"Sarah and Kandice will both play inside," said Tackett. "Both have a great attitude and are really wanting to play."

"Stephanie is a bruiser in there. She is a battler under the boards. Tabitha is probably the hardest worker on this team. Jessica is quick and will come for Monica."

Sonya had her run down on the district ready and rehearsed.

"Allen Central lost a couple of key players last year. They will be a good team and ready to play. Natalie (Cooley) will be coming back and ready to play. However, Allen Central may not be as good as they were last year."

There is a team to beat and Tackett figures it to be Betsy Layne.

"They are probably the team to beat this year," she said. "We saw them a lot this summer. I think they are like us, tired of losing."

Prestonsburg has been tab as one of the top teams in the region but Tackett said she didn't think they would be like last year's team.

"Oh, they will be a good team," she said. "But I don't think we will see the same team as last year. Floyd County has some good teams this season."

Raiders and J.M. Stumbo advance to finals

by Karen Joseph
Sports Writer

The second round of the county volleyball tournament took place on Tuesday night at the Allen Middle School gymnasium. Allen Central Middle School defeated the Eagles from Allen on Monday night to advance in the tournament to face the Raiders of South Floyd for the first game.

In the second game, it was the J.M. Stumbo Mustangs, who defeated the Betsy Layne Bobcats, facing the Blackcats from Adams Middle School. It was the Raiders and the Mustangs who advanced to the championship game.

In the first game, the Rebels from Allen Central took on the Raiders from South Floyd. In regular season, the Raiders defeated the Rebels, but that doesn't mean anything when it comes to tournament time.

Both teams came out ready to play, inspired by the enthusiasm of the large crowd in attendance.

In the first match, Allen Central jumped out to an early lead on the serve of Terri Mullins. The Rebels scored four points on Mullins' serve.

The Raiders did not score until their third serve. They scored three points on the serve of Brandy Anderson to gain some ground on the Rebels, who had scored their fifth point on the serve of Amber Griffiths. This made the score 5-3.

Allen Central scored one more time in the first rotation on the serve of Lindsey Anderson to make the score 6-3 in favor of the Rebels at the end of the first rotation.

Allen Central played a very tough volleyball game by holding the Raiders to two more points in

WEEK 10

If they can block 'em, they can beat 'em.

Kentucky Sportsline

By Tom Leach

That's how I size up Kentucky's chances of winning at Mississippi State Saturday night and achieving bowl eligibility.

Because of a ridiculously soft schedule that enables Jackie Sherrill and company to avoid Tennessee, Florida and Georgia, Mississippi State's number eight nationally ranking and perfect record are suspect. Still, winning at Scott Field this year is no easy task.

But because State's offense is only mediocre, I think Kentucky will win this game if it scores 30 or more points. And barring another performance by the offensive line like we saw at Georgia, I think Dusty Bonner will produce enough points with his offensive unit to get the job done. I know State's defensive numbers are outstanding, but again, look at the schedule.

Guy Morriss is a former O-line coach at MSU, so he knows well the creative blitzing attacks that the Bulldogs' defensive coordinator (Joe Lee Dunn) can employ. And now that his young blockers have lived through that onslaught from the Georgia defense and been able to study the tapes of it, I think Morriss' men will emerge as better players.

If you remember back to last spring, the offensive line had a similar performance in which the UK defense rang up a number of sacks. Morriss quickly got the problems fixed and I believe he'll do the same for this game. Morriss says he first thought Georgia simply overpowered his guys but the review of the tape showed lapses in execution instead.

Left tackle Matt Brown is the only offensive lineman to have played in last year's Tennessee game, the last time an opponent attacked Kentucky's offensive scheme in the manner that Georgia did. And given Mumme's non-contact approach to practice, UK's linemen saw only tapes of the style and scout team versions of it. Surviving that onslaught at Georgia and living to review will make Morriss' linemen much better this time.

And should Kentucky win this game, and perhaps in convincing fashion, it could serve as huge boost to this year's recruiting effort and the next one, given the stage of ESPN's Thursday night game-of-the-week and State's top 10 national ranking.

TALKIN' SPORTS WITH TOM HAMMOND

Think of the phrase "consummate professional" and the name Tom Hammond should come to mind.

This Saturday, the Lexington, Ky. native takes the national sports spotlight as host of NBC's coverage of the 16th Breeders' Cup from Gulfstream Park in south Florida.

Come 2001, his network is scheduled to take over the telecasts of the Triple Crown races, with Hammond penciled in as the host. And we recently had a chance to talk with him about that topic and others:

There was some speculation about ABC possibly giving up the rights to the 2000 Triple Crown, since NBC was taking over the following year anyway. Where does that stand?

"I haven't seen anything official, but the word I understand is that ABC will retain for (next year)," Hammond replied.

Won't the Derby, etc. get a boost in the ratings from the elimination of those head-to-head battles for viewers with the NBA playoffs?

"Of all the major sporting events in America, the Derby was the only one that went head-to-head against another major sporting event," Hammond observed. "Dick Ebersol, the NBC Sports president, thinks just having the NBA playoffs as a lead-in with raise the ratings 10 to 15 percent."

"And it will also help the demographics," he continued. "One of the concerns that people in racing have is (its) older audience. The demographics for the NBA are quite young, much younger than racing. So you'll get some younger fans and some non-racing fans to watch that wouldn't otherwise."

What do you think about the effort at increasing racing's TV exposure, in particular through vehicles like a racing channel aimed at in-home wagering?

"I would say it's a step in the right direction. I wouldn't say it's the only answer," Hammond said. "I think it's a very positive step. The problem to me has always been

J. M. Stumbo volleyball champs

by Karen Joseph Sports Writer

There was a lot of excitement in the air on Tuesday night at the county grade school volleyball tournament at Allen Central Middle School as the South Floyd Raiders took on the Mustangs of J. M. Stumbo for the title.

The Raiders had played a very hard game earlier in the night against the Allen Central Rebels. The Mustangs had only played a scrimmage game because Adams Middle School had to forfeit the game.

Both teams were really hyped-up for the game. There was a large and rowdy crowd. It only took two matches to decide the game, but it was two dandy matches. South Floyd played a really good game, but it was the Mustangs of J. M. Stumbo coming away with the winner's trophy. They won in two straight matches 15-10, 16-14.

Misty Tackett served first for the Mustangs to begin the game. The Mustangs scored two points on their first possession of the volleyball. The Raiders came back and scored two points on the serve of Ashley Johnson to tie the score at 2.

On the next serve by the Mustangs, they scored four points on the serve of Shelly Hammonds. The Raiders would come right back and score two points on the serve of Leigh Ann Tuttle. The score went back and forth on the first rotation with the score being 9-8 in favor of the Mustangs and the end of the first rotation. The Raiders would tie the score at 10 before the Mustangs scored three points on the serve of Shelly Hammonds, and then clinched the match on the serve of Kesha Newman. The final score of the match was 15-10.

It was a do-or-die situation in the second match for the Raiders. If the Mustangs won, they won the title.

South Floyd served the ball first in the second match. Carla Hall served for the Raiders, but the Raiders failed to score. The Mustangs also failed to score on their first serve. The serve went back-and-forth with neither team getting the points.

On the fourth serve, Brandy Anderson served for the Raiders and the Raiders scored two points. The Mustangs would quickly regain the lead by scoring four points on the serve of Tammy Hall.

The Raiders would capture the lead again on the serve of Kelley Hall. The Raiders scored three points to give them a 5-4 lead. The Raiders wouldn't hold the lead for long; the Mustangs scored two points on the serve of Alexis Hall to give them the one-point advantage at the end of the first rotation. Carla Hall served for the Raiders in the second rotation and scored three straight points. Mustang Coach Karen Henry called a timeout to try to put pressure on Hall. But Hall served again, and the Raiders scored another point before losing their serve. They had a 9-6 lead, but again the Mustangs came right back.

Stumbo scored three points on the serving of Misty Tackett to tie the score at 9. South Floyd then scored two points on the serve of Ashley Johnson. Stumbo once again came back strong on her team's serve. Shelly Hammonds scored four straight points for the Mustangs to give them the lead back.

The game became very intense with both teams playing very good volleyball. Each serve really counted — the Raiders, on the serves of Leigh Ann Tuttle and Brandy Anderson to tie the score 13-13. Kelley Hall served for the Raiders, and the Raiders scored point number 14 to put them in the lead, but, the Mustangs would not give up. They scored the fourteenth and fifteenth points on the serve of Alexis Fleming and thought that they had won the game. But, in volleyball, you must win by two points. So, the officials rounded the Mustangs back up to finish the game.

On the next serve by Alexis Fleming, the Raiders thought the ball was out of bounds, when actually it was inbounds, and the Mustangs did win on this score.

This was a really hard game for Jacqueline McKinney and her South Floyd Raiders to lose. They played two very good volleyball games. Karen Henry and her J. M. Stumbo Mustangs came away with the first annual Floyd County Volleyball Tournament winner's trophy. Coach Henry and her Mustangs were very proud of their win. Karen has done a great job coaching these girls this year.

Watch for both teams to be major competitors next year, as well as other Floyd County grade school volleyball teams.

the match. The Raiders scored on the serves of Leigh Ann Tuttle and Brandy Anderson to give them a total of five points for the match.

The Rebels scored three more points on the serve of Terri Mullins and scored five times when Rebecca Thomas served the ball. Elizabeth Mosley scored one point for the Rebels, giving them the 15-5 win for the first match.

In the second match, it was a different story, it was all South Floyd. Allen Central had the lead at the end of the first rotation 7-6, but in the second rotation, South Floyd got serious. Or, you could say Carla Hall got serious. The Raiders scored eight consecutive points on the serve of Carla Hall. Brandy Anderson scored the final point for the Raiders, giving them the 15-7 win.

Everyone was on edge when the third and deciding match started. The winner of this match would win the game and advance to the championship game. This was a very well-played volleyball game.

The lead went back and forth. Allen Central had a one-point lead at the end of the first rotation. Terri Mullins served to start the match.

The Rebels took the lead by scoring two points on Mullins' serve. The Raiders would score one point on their first serve by Ashley Johnson. The Rebels scored one point on each serve by Amber Griffiths, Jessica Isaac and Rebecca Thomas.

The Rebels scored three more points on the serve of Lindsey Anderson to give them their eight points in the first rotation.

South Floyd scored five points on the serve of Kelley Hall and one point on each of the serves of Ashley Johnson and Carla Hall to give them seven points on the first rotation.

In the second rotation, the Rebels added to their lead on the serve of Terri Mullins. But the Raiders would take the lead for the first time in the match on the serve of Leigh Ann Tuttle. The Raiders scored four points off Tuttle's serve to take the lead, 12-9. But the Rebels rallied back on the serve of Jessica Isaac to score four points to give the lead back to the Rebels.

Jacqueline McKinney, South Floyd coach, called a time out to try to ice Jessica Isaac and to give her girls some encouragement. The Rebels scored one more point on Isaac's serve to give them the 13-12 lead. But the determined South Floyd Raiders scored three straight points on the serve of Brandy Anderson to give them the match and the game.

This was a heartbreaker for the Rebels; they usually play such a good game. Doug Derossett does a wonderful job coaching the Lady Rebels.

Jacqueline McKinney and her Lady Raiders advance to the championship game.

In the second game of the night, it was the Mustangs of J.M. Stumbo taking on the Blackcats from Prestonsburg. Or, it was supposed to be, but the Blackcats did not have enough girls show up to play and had to forfeit the game to the Mustangs. The Blackcats and the Mustangs played a scrimmage game to led the Mustangs warm up.

The first exhibition game, and I know you don't put much stock in practice games, revealed a very weak offensive team. The rest of the SEC has shored up their teams and Kentucky, who is picked to finish third in their division in the preseason, is doing nothing but depending on Jamal Magloire and (gulp) Saul Smith.

Two seasons ago, Tubby proclaimed son Saul as heir apparent of the point guard slot. That scared off all highly-regarded point guard prospects.

If this Kentucky team wins 15 games, that will be a good season for them. There is no go-to player on this squad. Sorry!

Until Sunday, good sports everyone and be good sports! Take the kids to Sunday School and church this Sunday.

Prestonsburg

and advance to the second round of the playoffs, they will have to win it in the trenches.

"Our defense has been good this year," said Crisp. "We just haven't been able to score."

Prestonsburg's defense is one of the best in the state against the pass. And that could be the very area they will be tested quickly and often in the 48 minutes of football.

Breathitt County has the state's top passer in Allen Sperry. The Bobcat signal caller is averaging an amazing 340 yards passing per game. He has tossed for 43 touchdowns and will test the secondary of Prestonsburg throughout the game.

The Blackcats will need to put some numbers on the scoreboard early and not allow the Bobcats to dictate the tempo of the game. Ball control will be another factor for Prestonsburg as they need to keep the ball out of Breathitt's hands.

Sophomore Austin Clark will be behind center for Prestonsburg, and he has answered the call since moving to the quarterback slot after the first two weeks of the season.

Hank Mullins, Matt Slone and Seth Crisp, along with fullback Jeremy Caudill, will have to step up their game to the highest level as there is no tomorrow after this one. Mullins, Crisp and Caudill are seniors.

On the defensive side of the football, Chris Spriggs (6'2", 195, soph.) will be at a defensive end slot and has had a banner defensive season for the Cats. Spriggs knows his need to focus on Sperry in stopping the pass.

Caudill, Crisp, and Slone will be at linebacker for the Cats. Kevin Woods, Kevin Younce and Dusty Scott will anchor the defensive line. Mike McDonald and Clark will play defensive backs.

Breathitt County has been at the "top of the district" for the past five years and continues to throw in the good quarterbacks. But every quarterback needs a target and Sperry has one in Anthony Johnson, who hauled in 36 catches, eight going for touchdowns.

The Bobcats bring a 9-1 record to the playoffs, losing only to Middlesboro in the final game of the season. Breathitt has scored 484 points on the season and allowed just 188. Prestonsburg has scored only 132 points this season. The Bobcats finished 4-1 in their district, second to Middlesboro.

Prestonsburg is 3-7 on the year, their worst finish since 1989 when the Cats were 2-8 on the year. They have a 3-2 district record, dropping the last two games of the '99 season.

Clark hasn't thrown the football that much this season, but when he does he is looking for Kyle Shepherd (6'1", 152 senior).

The game is scheduled to kick off at 7:30 p.m. The game may be heard over local radio station, WQHY-FM, 95.5.

Raiders

even though we lost to Middlesboro in the first round last year, they believe in themselves.

"Really, we didn't play all that bad against Middlesboro and the kids now feel they can go out and play with anybody."

While the South Floyd coach was sounding optimistic, with the same voice he issued a warning that the Raiders were by no means taking Harlan for granted. After all, they did finish 9-1 on the season.

"They are a good, good team," said the South Floyd mentor. "They don't have any great individual players but they work excellent together."

Stopping the running game of the Green Dragons, especially with the "wing-T" offense they like to run, will be a priority.

"That is the offense that gives our defense trouble," said Daniels. "They will go outside 77 percent of the time they run the football. We have to contain their running game."

Ben Smith (5'11", 205) and Frank Shope (5'6", 165) are the feature backs for the Green Dragons. Smith has rushed for 696 yards on the season and Shope has totaled 595 on the ground. Coach Daniels said he was impressed with the two on film.

"They are the two backs I have seen all year," he said. "I would rank them right up there with Pikeville's backs. They both have outstanding speed."

"Shope is more of a lateral runner while Smith is more of the bulldog type, just runs over you," said Daniels.

Daniels said his team was going to have to do some searching for Brandon Johnson, who stands a great big 5'4" and weighs in at 140 pounds.

"He is so small that he gets behind his linemen and he is hard to find. All of a sudden you see someone shoot out of the pack and head up field," said Daniels. "We will have to check him. He is hard to see."

The South Floyd coach said he knows what Harlan is going to run, but it is hard to stop them from doing it.

"They are real good at reading the linemen," he said. "They do an excellent job of it. We are weak at stopping what they run."

According to Daniels, Harlan has had some squeakers this season, but they have found ways to win. They escaped Fleming-Neon 27-23 and edged Williamsburg 19-18 and got past Lynn Camp 28-27. South Floyd buried Neon in their district game. But Coach Daniels said he does not like to compare results.

"The game with Neon was early in the year," he said. "I just don't like to compare game results."

"That impresses me," he said. "Against Pineville, they got a safety that won the game for them. Pineville had the ball at the one-foot line and Harlan caused them to fumble the ball. They are a team that will not beat themselves. They don't do a lot of stupid things. They will run the 44-stack on defense about 70 percent of the time."

While Harlan has impressed Coach Daniels, so does his own team.

"It will be a good game. It will be an excellent game from the fans' standpoint. I don't know about the coaches," said Daniels. "I feel like if we go over there and do what we are supposed to do, we can bring our first play-off victory."

Coach Daniels said his ballclub is as healthy as it has been all season.

Two Johnson County teams advance to semi-finals

by Karen Joseph
Sports Writer

The Mountain Middle School Conference Tournament got underway on Wednesday night at J.D. Adams gymnasium. There are six teams that compete in this conference: Adams Middle School, Johnson County Middle School, Paintsville Independent, Warfield Middle School, Inez

Middle School and Herald Whitaker Middle School.

Inez finished first in conference play and Adams finished second; therefore, these two teams drew a bye in the tournament.

In the opening round, it was Paintsville taking on the Red Devils from Warfield in the first game. And, in the second game, it was the Eagles from Johnson County Middle School taking on Herald Whitaker.

Paintsville and Johnson County Middle School were winners and will advance to the semi-finals on Thursday night.

In the first game between the Paintsville and Warfield, Paintsville was a little weak in the first half, but came back strong in the second half to defeat Warfield.

Warfield went into the locker room with a six-point lead. In the first quarter, the Red Devils outscored the Tigers 12-8.

Tabitha Parsons scored six points for the Red Devils in the first period of play. Mary Endicott had four points and Jessie Endicott had two for the Lady Red Devils.

For the Tigers, Ashley Hall scored four points, and Whitney Reynolds and Jennifer Chaffins each had two points.

In the second quarter, the Red Devils outscored the Tigers by two points. Tabitha Parsons scored four points, and Mary Endicott scored the other two points to give the Red Devils six points for the quarter.

For the Tigers, Whitney Reynolds and Jennifer Chaffins each had two points and Ashley Hall had a free throw to give the Tigers five points for the quarter. The score at the half was 19-12 in favor of the Red Devils.

When the second half began, the Lady Tigers looked like a different team. The defense of the Tigers held the Red Devils to only six points in the third quarter. The Tigers exploded in the third quarter by scoring half of their total points. Jennifer Chaffins had seven points for the Tigers, including a big three-pointer. Ashley Hall had six points. Whitney Reynolds and Amy Lafferty each had two points for a total of 17 points in the third quarter.

Tabitha Parsons had four points for the Red Devils, and Megan Stanley scored two points to give the Red Devils a total of six points for the quarter.

The Red Devils came back in the fourth and final period to outscore the Tigers, but it was not enough as the Tigers defeated the Red Devils, 34-31, to advance to Thursday night's semi-finals.

The Tigers will go against the conference winners, Inez, in the first game on Thursday night.

In the night cap, it was Johnson County Middle School taking on the Hornets from Herald-Whitaker. This was a slow starting basketball game and lasted a long time. The game went into overtime.

Neither team scored in the first quarter. It was both good defense and poor offense from both teams in the first quarter and much of the second quarter.

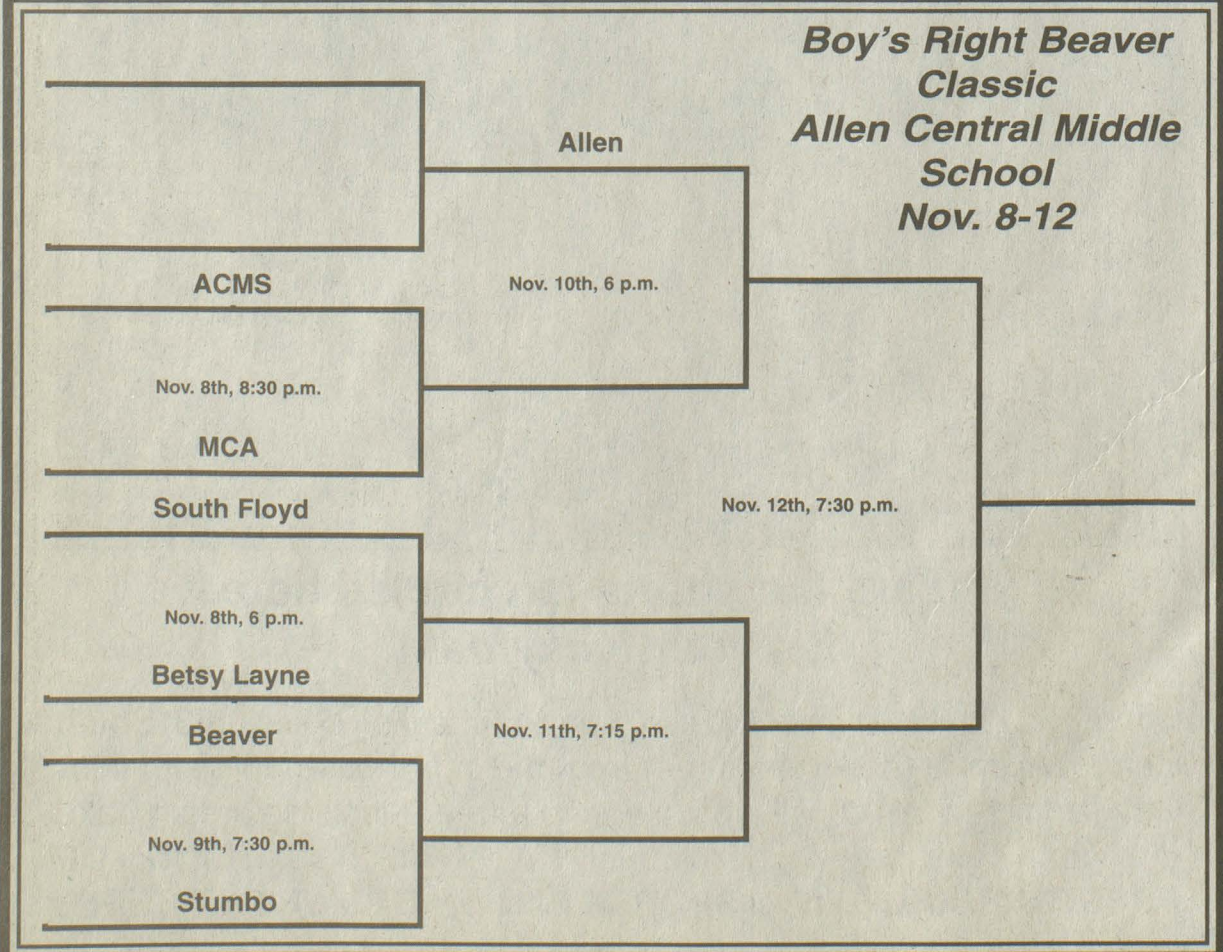

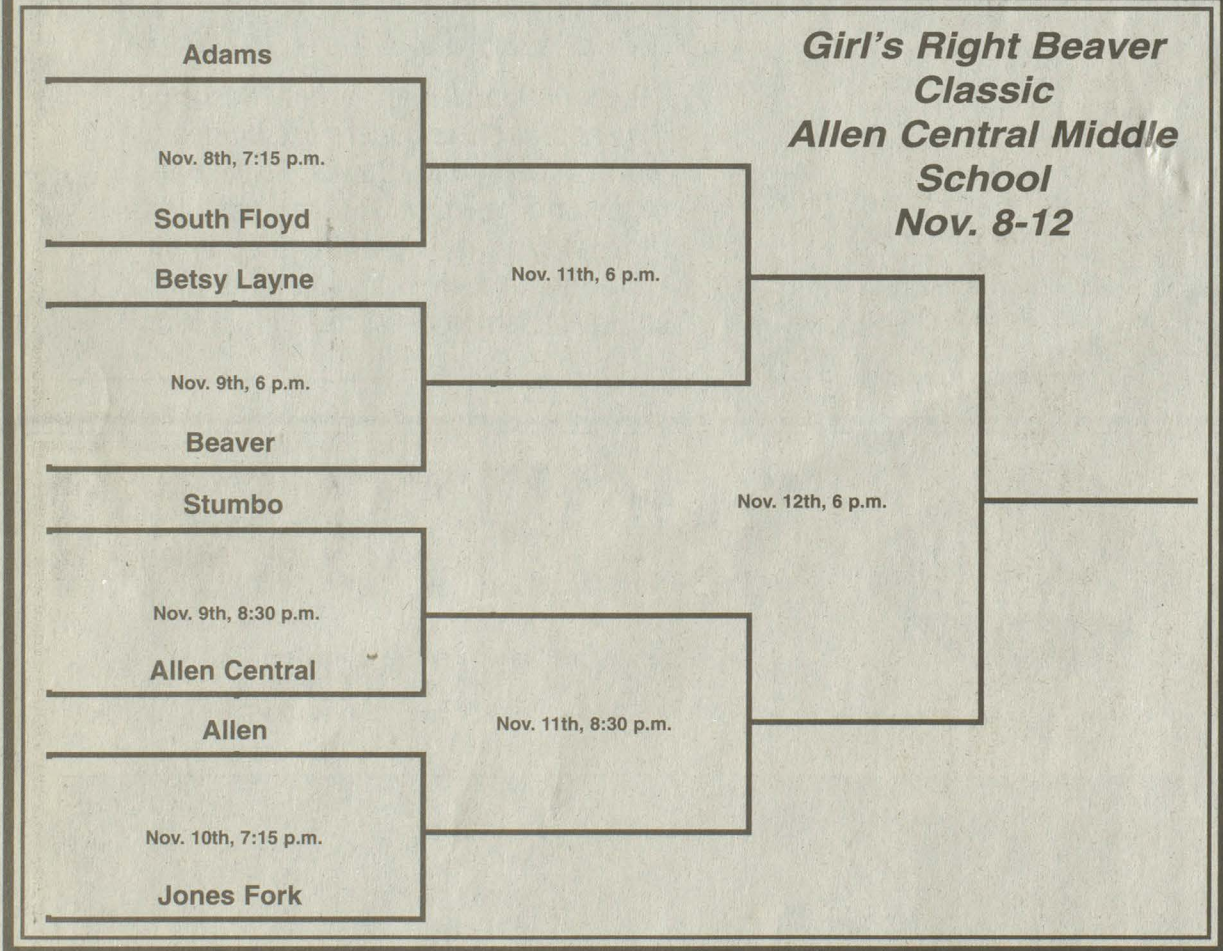

Johnson County Middle school finally put some points on the scoreboard with about three minutes remaining in the first half. The score, after a very long first half for both teams, was 8-1 in favor of Johnson County Middle School.

The second half was a different ball game. Herald-Whitaker outscored the Eagles 10-3 in the third quarter to tie the score 11-11.

Jamie Adams and Lyndsay Howard each had four points for the Hornets in the third quarter, while the Hornets held the Eagles to only three points. The Eagles' three points came off a free-throw by Michell Salyers and a two-point field goal by Ashley Lemaster.

In the fourth quarter, the Eagles scored all of their six points on free-throws. Then Robin Minix had a three-point basket, and the Hornets connected on three free-points to tie the score at the end of regulation play.

In the overtime, the Eagles narrowly escaped the Hornets by outscoring them 8-6 and winning the game by two points. The Eagles will advance to the semi-finals on Thursday night to take on the host team, Adams Middle School.

getting the product out there. Once people are exposed to the product, it seems to me that they usually enjoy it."

What's the storyline for this year's Breeders' Cup?

"This is the 16th edition and overall, I think it's the toughest if you're trying to pick winners that I've ever seen. I think it's the most wide open Breeders' Cup ever," he stated. "It would surprise me to see some Arcangues-style prices before the afternoon is over."

Arcangues is the horse that won the 1993 Classic at odds of better than 99-1.

BREEDERS' CUP PICKS

I agree with Hammond about the absence of clear-cut favorites at this Breeders' Cup, so don't bet the house on these picks that I offer up for the BC lineup:

Sprint—Bob Baffert first burst on the national scene as the trainer of longshot Thirty Sews, the 1992 winner of this race when the site was Gulfstream. Look for Baffert to get a repeat with Forestry, but

Good and Tough is a live longshot because of his affinity for that track.

Juvenile Fillies—Chilukki is the big favorite and Surfside is the wiseguy horse, but I have a feeling that Darling My Darling is going to claim the top prize because she'll relish her first two-turn race.

Distaff—Conventional wisdom is saying that Silverbulletday is over the top after a 10-race campaign, but I just think she doesn't run nearly as well at Belmont Park as she does elsewhere.

The reason? She does her best running on the turns and that skill is negated somewhat by the configuration of the Belmont track. I think she'll hold off Banshee Breeze for the win.

Mile—if I'm doing a segment of this column on picks, I have to take a stab at some horse in this race, but I'm not feeling especially confident. Garbu ran a last race last winter at Gulfstream Park that would be good enough to win this, so I'm going to figure he had excuses for defeats in his last two outings and and pick him to score a big upset for trainer Bill Mott in the mile.

Filly & Mare Turf—I think the New York-based horses will get most of the betting money, but I think the winner will come from California. Let's say trainer Bobby Frankel gets his first BC win with Spanish Fern.

Turf—Daylami is training like gangbusters in Florida and horses who bombed out in France's Arc de Triomphe have often done quite well in the BC Turf. Take Daylami to win this one.

Juvenile—I think the best of the bunch are from the west coast and I think Forest Camp is the top dog. And don't be surprised if Graeme Hall hits the board as a longshot.

Classic—There's only one three-year old with a good enough Beyer speed figure on his work-sheet to beat the likes of Behrens and it's General Challenge. His running style is perfectly suited to Gulfstream Park and he's the pick to upset Behrens and give Baffert his third BC winner of the day.

Good luck.

Charlie Gearheart comes home to visit

by Randell Reno
Staff Writer

Traveling west along KY 80 between Eastern and Wayland, a sign stands reading Charlie Gearheart Highway.

Residents not native to Floyd County may ask who is Charlie Gearheart, just as they would ask who is Bert T. Combs, Wallace Wilkinson, or any name along our highways.

Floyd Countians, however, know he is the founder of Goose Creek Symphony.

Gearheart, now 60, has enjoyed a successful life as a musician. His band, Goose Creek Symphony, has allowed him to travel extensively across the United States and to experience an extraordinary life. But Gearheart admits openly he is a hillbilly.

Gearheart made a visit to Floyd County recently after traveling to these parts to visit his 95-year-old aunt, Byrta Link in Ohio. She has always been the aunt he "connected with" and she is one of the last of that generation of his family.

He also left his home in Arizona to "get away from all the phone calls."

The Goose is still flying. Goose Creek Symphony is still selling its latest album, "Going Home," released this spring. Plans are in the works for a possible second Goose Creek acoustic album.

Gearheart said the group has played a couple of venues acoustically this year and will be using this same format when they visit the Sipp Theater in Paintsville on November 13.

With an acoustic performance, Gearheart said Goose Creek can go places they were previously not able to. The normal group of six or seven doesn't have to be at an acoustic performance; therefore, less space is needed on the stage.

Four band members, Paul (Pearl) Spradlin, the band co-founder, Doug Hablena, Gary (Big Mack) Mackey, and Gearheart play the acoustic shows. The band plans to be back at the MAC in April of next year.

Goose Creek now works "in house," keeping all the band's functions, business, promotion, production and the works within the band, said Gearheart. "I'm too old. I don't want people telling me what to do."

Goose Creek is in Nashville for the fall. Gearheart said that since the group got back together in 1993, they have tried to tour every year during the fall and spring months with a couple of breaks in the middle to be with their families.

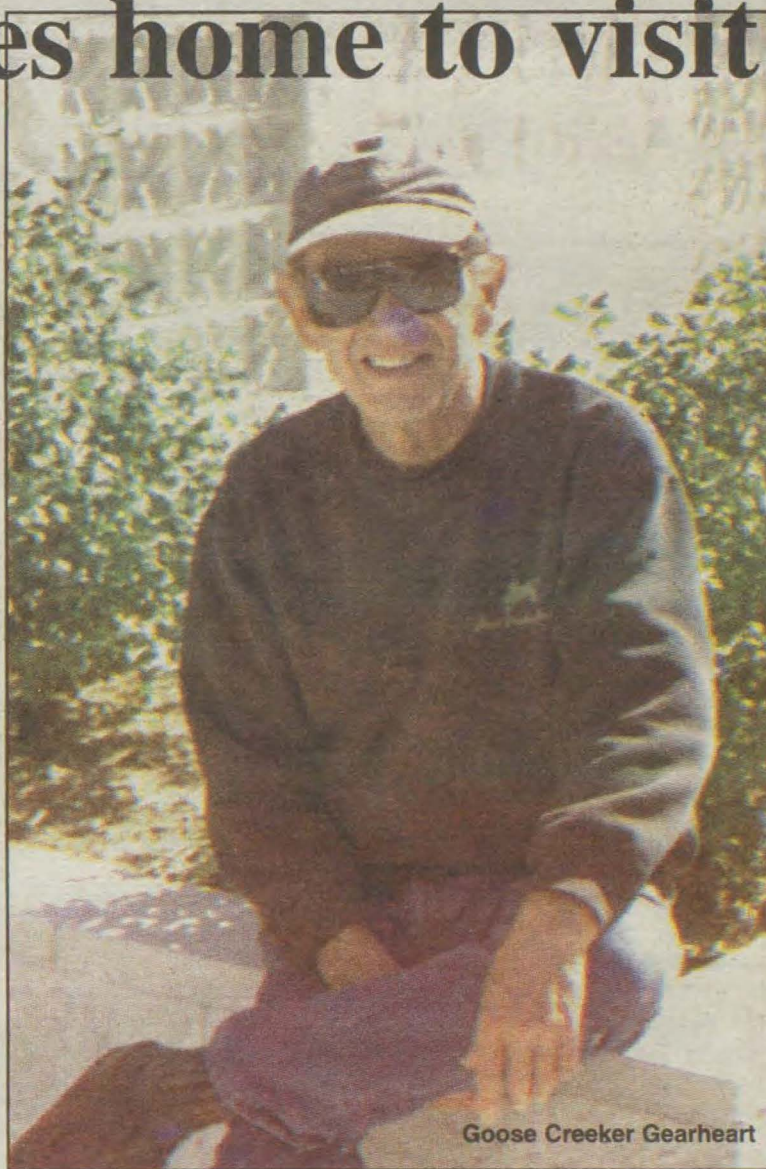

He will tell you proudly that his family is important to him. He and his wife Carolyn have been together for 30 years, and he said he talks to her every day.

Goose Creek and, therefore, Gearheart, is enjoying a resurgence on the music scene. Now in the business 31 years, they know what they like and they like what they do, said Gearheart.

The middle-aged rocker and his band have gained a new following among young people, much to his astonishment. He says there are actually more young fans in this area than any other. Members of Goose Creek were pleased, as well as surprised, to see the number of teens at their concerts here in the area.

NEWS OF THE WEIRD

by Chuck Shepherd

— Scotland Yard detectives said they overestimated the number of dead in a fiery London commuter-train crash in October because some survivors had walked away quickly and left town, spontaneously deciding to start new lives. (Detectives know this because several changed their minds and returned home.) After an announcement that some bodies were burned beyond recognition, other people called investigators to say falsely that their estranged spouses were on the train, hoping for official death rulings so they could inherit marital property.

— After questioning Stephanie Loudermilk at length after her 28-year-old husband Bryan's death in June, police in Okeechobee, Florida, said in October that they believe he died accidentally in a sexual stunt gone wrong. Bryan's body was found in a specially constructed pit, beneath a board, which was underneath a rear wheel of his sport utility vehicle, and police believe Bryan enjoyed erotic thrills from being driven over. Stephanie also had videotapes of herself stomping rabbits and mice ("crush videos"), which Bryan had been selling on the Internet.

SILICON VALLEY BABYLON

Michael David Rostoker, 41, an electronics firm CEO, was arrested in San Francisco in September, allegedly on his way to meet his 13-year-old Vietnamese paramour whom customs agents say he intended to bring home as his wife. According to the agents, Rostoker had spent $150,000 on the girl and her family, and e-mail messages to her mentioned Rostoker's "needs" to have her stay thin, learn English, and have sex with him "often." Rostoker's arrest was underreported, perhaps because of ongoing media interest in Patrick J. Naughton, 34, an executive with the high-profile Infoseek, who had been arrested a week earlier in Santa Monica, California, and charged with arranging on the Internet to have sex with a 13-year-old girl, who was really an undercover officer.

GOVERNMENT IN ACTION

— After analyzing public records referring to members of Congress, the online news service Capitol Hill Blue revealed in September that 29 current members have been accused of spousal abuse and 19 of writing bad checks, and that 71 have bad credit reports and 117 members have been involved in two or more bankrupt businesses. Included also are seven arrests for fraud, 14 for drug-related charges, eight for shoplifting and three for assault. Also, just in 1998, 84 members were stopped on suspicion of drunk driving but were released when they claimed constitutional immunity.

— A special assessor for the British government offered Eddie Browning, 46, about $125,000 as compensation for the six years he spent in prison for a murder he did not commit, but in March the assessor also told Browning that the amount would be decreased by about $8,000 to pay for Browning's room and board during his incarceration, which the

A picture is worth a thousand words

Did your husband ever grow a new appendage? (Don't worry folks — it's not going to be that kind of column.)

I'm talking about a "technological" appendage. And by appendage I mean a camera — a video camera to be precise. I'm referring to the honeymoon gift Ronnie and I presented each other by using our wedding cash to buy a Sony-8 XR camcorder to take with us on our trip to Italy.

And, if there's anything Ronnie likes better than tuna fish, it's movies — in this case, taking them himself.

In fact, Ronnie loves movies so much he moved to California, joined the Screen Actors Guild, and worked, at one time or another, alongside Mark Harmon, Danny Devito, Jon Voight, Ellen Burstyn, Robin Williams, and Matt Damon, just to name a few; but that was as an actor.

With the exception of a silent super 8 home-movie documentary he made of Apple Day in 1974 (which he recently resurrected, added a music soundtrack, and is now selling for the Paintsville/Johnson County Arts Council), his experience has been in front of the camera.

That is until the new baby came into his life. In Italy, I wasn't sure who he had married — me or that camera!

The only time I saw my new husband without his 8mm alter-ego was when he would take a shower and I got to babysit. I thought about playing a joke on him by hiding it and leaving a ransom note, but I didn't want to have to put up with the Roman Swat Team I knew would windup swarming the hotel.

"Oh, Lord!" I moaned when I was awakened in the middle of the night by a heavy object jabbing me in the side. "What was that?"

"What's what?" Ronnie sleepily asked, as he rolled over and nearly knocked me out with his new toy.

"Do you still have that stupid camera around your neck?" I asked, incredulously.

"It's not a camera," he replied, "it's a camcorder."

"I'm telling you. Nobody is going to break in here and steal it while you're asleep."

"Oh, yeah? The last time we let anything out of our sight on this trip I wound up having to loan you my underwear," he retaliated. "By the way, Sherlock, what was the latest report on your luggage?"

"All I know it's somewhere between Chicago and Brussels," I groggily answered.

"Well, if it's Tuesday, it must be Belgium," he chuckled, as he began filming the ceiling light fixture.

"Why don't you put that thing up and go back to sleep?" I suggested. "You can take all the pictures you want in the morning."

"But you can shoot a picture in the dark — it's Zero lux."

"I don't care if it's De-luxe," I fired back. "Their idea of a queen-sized bed over here falls somewhere between a twin and an army cot. And, right now, either me or that camera is going to have to go!"

"So," he yawned. "Where are you going to sleep?"

After I read him the riot act for the next hour and a half, we finally got to sleep just

LEO

(JULY 23 TO AUGUST 22)

The process may be a pain, but the outcome really is up to you. Be decisive in the strategies you choose to pursue. Limit your options to those which are most feasible.

VIRGO

(AUGUST 23 TO SEPTEMBER 22)

A magnetic field surrounds you, and it is alternating between attracting objects and repelling them. The two forces make for a strange mix. The midway point is likely to be your best bet.

LIBRA

CAPRICORN

(DECEMBER 22 TO JANUARY 19)

A twist of fate has you turned around and looking at something that you have never seen before. Stretching properly ensures that you aren't injured in the sudden movements.

AQUARIUS

(JANUARY 20 FEBRUARY 18)

Others can relate to your situation, your words and even your analogies in a way that is a bit surprising. Take advantage of the moment in order to take a wild ride on the same wavelength.

PISCES

(FEBRUARY 19 TO MARCH 20)

Your sweat and tears begin to pay off just as you are beginning to wear out. The extra inspiration allows you to go that extra mile. The results are likely to be worth the wait.

DEAR DIANE

by Diane Van Arsdale
DEAR DIANE:

About 18 years ago, I had an abortion. This was the biggest mistake of my life and the life of my unborn baby. I know it was my fault, but other factors also helped me to make this decision. For one, my boyfriend wanted me to have the abortion. The abortion clinic staff said my unborn baby of about eight weeks was just a bunch of cells, a blob, and not a baby. Now I know this was a lie because of ultrasound videos.

I see my mistake was not talking with anyone but those who wanted me to have the abortion and most of all, not hearing what my own heart and body were saying to me

I have learned when having to make a hard decision to get as much information as you can and to talk to loving people about it, and to follow your heart and conscience even when it is hard.

My question to you is, what are some of the ways I could let others know that you can never bring back your baby after you have had an abortion and how wrong it is and how sad you will feel after having an abortion?

SAD

DEAR SAD:

You've reached more people with your letter than you know. It's a fact that so-called pro-choice advocates are totally against adoption counseling. Planned Parenthood provides only abortion counseling. Similar organizations are equally guilty. In fact, Congress is debating just this issue.

Write to your congressional representative about your experience. Urge him or her to fight for the rights of women to hear the whole story when faced with such a decision. Also, get involved with a church counseling group for young women who are pregnant. You can make a difference!

Send letters to Diane c/o King Features Weekly Service, 235 East 45th Street, New York, N.Y. 10017.

ALL MY CHILDREN:

After learning that Adam switched the stem cell samples and used David's name as a cover, an angry Liza confronted Adam who blurted out that Colby is their daughter. Amanda and Jamie rushed to tell Junior about the "witch" in the woods. Meanwhile, the "witch" caused Gillian to lose control of the car. It crashed, leaving her and Ryan badly injured. Mateo saved the unconscious Ryan's life. Later, when he regained consciousness, Ryan asked for Gillian. Lesley told Tad he's been fired from the station. An anguished Marian learned Adam planned to go off with Colby. Wait To See: Janet's past threatens her future.

AS THE WORLD TURNS:

A terrible accident led Margo to discover the truth. Emily made a startling discovery and then made the mistake of sharing it with the wrong person. Carly was thrown another curveball by life, but this time decided to deal with it herself. Lily realized Holden was still mourning the loss of Hope. Eddie and Adam compared notes on their relationships with their fathers. Wait To See: Katie decides to wait until she can use her new information.

THE BOLD AND THE BEAUTIFUL:

sake. Amber was curious about Kimberly and Giovanni. Raymond casually mentioned to Becky Rick's interest in Kimberly, prompting Becky to call Amber for more information about the couple. Later, Amber was shocked to hear Raymond's voice on the phone. Tawny decided to "stop" Becky before she can cause trouble for Amber. Taylor got a clean bill of health and returned to her home and family. Wait To See: Becky acts. Amber reacts.

DAYS OF OUR LIVES:

Hope (the real one) dove into the river in an attempt at freedom. Meanwhile, under Stefano's directions, Rolf prepared the transformation laser, affecting both Hope and Princess Gina (who is pretending to be Hope). Hope was overcome by the process and later awoke with no memory and "learned" Kurt was her husband. Princess Gina had a positive transformation which Lili witnessed. While in a coma, Austin confronted his dead father, Curtis Reed, who acted as the prosecutor at his heavenly tribunal. Marlena told "Hope" she can help her with her rages. Wait To See: Vivian's plan to win back Victor takes a strange turn.

GENERAL HOSPITAL:

Unaware that Sonny had already heard the telltale tape, Hannah changed her mind about telling Sonny the truth about her.

Sonny, however, decided to use Hannah as a dupe by feeding her false information for the FBI. Roy saw Luke and Felicia in an embrace. Stefan begins his plan to prove Helena killed Katherine. Carly learned what Roy really means to Bobbie. Meanwhile, Bobbie assured Jerry she's not having second thoughts about their wedding. A.J. caught Carly with Jason. assessor called a "lodging fee."

— Legislative Oversight: Police in Anne Arundel County, Maryland, told outraged citizens in August that no state law requires people to report their relatives' deaths to authorities, and thus that Richard Lee Marshall's suspicious private burial of his 3-year-old daughter was legal. And in June, the Pennsylvania legislature restored the state law against bestiality, which was accidentally repealed in 1995 when "deviate sexual intercourse" was decriminalized. (The purpose that year was to legalize gay sex, but lawmakers forgot that for decades, some states have equated gay sex with bestiality.)

CREME DE LA WEIRD

— Computer programmer Lloyd L. Albright, 47, was arrested and charged with disorderly conduct in early August in a cave near Caldwell, Ohio, where he had gone to prepare for the destruction of Earth by a meteor at 4 p.m. on Aug. 11. The sheriff had pursued Albright to the cave after hearing of a car loaded with survivalist supplies, including 16 guns and loads of ammunition. Said the sheriff: "(Albright) very sincerely thought there was a meteor that was going to come and hit the Atlantic Ocean and cause a tidal wave 200 feet high."

— In an August profile, The Wall Street Journal estimated that Las Vegas hotel magnate Robert T. Bigelow may have spent $10 million of his $600 million-to-$900 million fortune on UFO research, including an endowed university chair in "consciousness studies" and a science institute that investigates sightings. Bigelow vows to spend $500 million to build the solar system's first space hotel.

— In August in St. Paul, Minnesota, mortgage broker John David Searle was sentenced to seven months in jail for what one Minneapolis officer guessed was only the latest of "hundreds" of episodes of late-night peeping through women's windows. Said a St. Paul officer of Searle, who arrives at his crime scenes in luxury cars and carrying a stool and video camera, "This is almost this man's lifestyle and avocation."

— Latest Fetishes: Police in London, England, announced in August they were searching for a man in his mid-20s who has been approaching women for nearly two years, grasping their hands, complimenting them on their fingers, and then attempting to chew off one or more of their nails. And in May in Milwaukee, Chad J. Hammond pleaded no contest to swiping a woman's underpants off her body at gunpoint in a convenience store.

THE NO. 1 TEST

In July, San Antonio, Texas, probation officers caught Micah Sheehan, 37, using a fake penis and tubing to lend authenticity to the dispensing of purchased urine in his mandatory drug test. Among the schemes athletes use in such tests, according to a September Washington Post story, are hiding pouches of clean urine in the vagina or anus and squeezing it through tubes obscured by pubic hair, or in extreme cases, injecting clean urine directly into the bladder. In another September Washington Post story, South Carolina urine seller Kenneth Curtis said he now only urinates professionally: "I don't waste any of my assets. It's literally liquid gold."

SOAP SCRAPS

Jill Larson (Opal, "All My Children") is making her directorial debut with the Flipside Theatre Company's production of the hit Canadian play, "The Melville Boys." The play runs from November 10-14 at the Sanford Meisner Theater, 164 Eleventh Avenue (at 23rd Street) in Manhattan. For ticket information, call 1-212-501-6035. By the way, the original Opal, Dorothy Lyman, also made her directorial debut with "A Couple of White Chicks Sitting Around Talking" when she was on "AMC." She's gone on to helm quite a few important productions since then.

Rumors persist that "General Hospital" will cast another actor as Lucky Spencer if Jonathan Jackson won't return to reprise the role on a regular rather than limited-run basis.

"Passions" isn't heating up the ratings quite as intensely as NBC had hoped when the show debuted. However, the soap has been building a loyal teen audience from its summertime airings and it's expected that most of them will stay with the show and become the core of a larger viewership.

Meanwhile, let's hear from fans who are still passionate about "Passions" as well as from fans who have not found themselves sufficiently turned on to stay tuned in. Write me c/o King Features Weekly Service, 235 East 45 Street, New York, NY 10017.

Marie Cheatham has returned to "Port Charles" to reprise her role as Charlene Simpson, Lucy's (Lynn Herring) sassy Southern belle aunt. Cheatham can also be seen on the big screen these days in "The Bachelor." Her "PC" castmate, Nicholas Pryor (Victor), co-stars in the flick.

A meeting in church, followed by a first date at the Daytime Emmys, has led to a December wedding date for "All My Children's" Marcy Walker (Liza) and Doug Smith.

Louise Sorel may soon wind up her long stint as Vivian on "Days of Our Lives," but she won't be in idling mode for long. Besides other offers, we hear she'll replace Judith Light (ex "One Life to Live") as the star of the Broadway hit, "Wit" when Judith takes it on the road in February.

Fall hit parade hangs on

by Tony Cavalier

MOUNTAINS

The fall foliage season of 1999 may be waning on the calendar, but the fact is that some of the best vistas of the season will linger through Halloween, thanks to a spell of Indian Summer.

That's right, the combination of frosty nights and sunny mid days this week has helped to put the finishing touches on the autumn hues. Now the oaks are coming on like gangbusters while the maple are holding onto their dazzling reds and oranges in spots. The result—one last picture perfect weekend for the procrastinating photographer in you!

Here is a look at some "can't miss" hot spots.

WEST VIRGINIA

While the leaves are past peak in the mountains, some late color is keeping fall foliage enthusiasts happy in the Summersville Lake to Sutton lake region. Still, there are plenty of brown leaves in Nicholas County, so your best bet may be a drive toward Charleston on the Midland trail.

By the way, fishermen, both the Elk (Sutton dam) and Gauley (Summersville dam) tailwaters have been recently stocked with rainbow trout, so you can double your pleasure by enjoying the late season colors and filling your skillet with some tasty rainbow.

CHARLESTON AND VICINITY

Jedd Flowers from the division of forestry says the leaves are at peak through Kanawha and Putnam county. The trip up to the Yeager airport on West Virginia 119 is aglow (as I found out firsthand this past week). Along the Kanawha River, the late colors are due in part to the river fogs that help to bathe the shorelines every fall. Those warmer fogs help to extend their season an extra few days every year along Kanawha Boulevard and MacCorkland Avenue.

One of my favorite spots is the drive out to Sleepy Hollow Country Club where the red and wine colors of the native deciduous shrubs offer a unique mix with the orange of the maple and emerging golds of the oaks.

RIVER CITIES AND NEAR-BY NEIGHBORS

From Beech Fork Lake to the Wayne National Forest (Ironton)—and from Riverbend Golf Club (Greenbo) state park to city park in Gallipolis and Krodel Park in Point Pleasant, the story is "illuminating" foliage. Start with the dazzling oranges and reds of the sugar maple, mix in the mellow yellows of the oak and then add a touch of burgundy from the dogwood—all this with the "evergreens" as a backdrop and you have mile after mile of flaming color.

CHIEF LOGAN AND NEARBY ENVIRONS

In Logan County, Forester Tony Evans says the trip on corridor G then onto WV 10 into Chief Logan State Park is at or maybe a shade past peak color. That means the golden browns of the beech trees, the ravishing reds of the sweetgum, and outrageous oranges of the maple are worth the trip on route 85 out to RD Bailey Dam and along state route 17 across Blair Mountain into Boone County.

JENNY WILEY STATE RESORT PARK

This section of Kentucky is known for its late season colors, often after the rest of the Bluegrass has browned out. Park Ranger Steve Markhum says this is a "very good year" through the Levisa Fork Valley with the yellows of the sweetgum stealing the show as of press time. Take KY 302 around Dewey Lake and enjoy the six-mile trip as you gaze across the emerald waters on your lakeshore drive.

Happy Leaf Watching.

Shuck beans, stack cakes, and fried chicken is bookclub selection

Fans of country music and down-home cooking have a feast in store in "Shuck Beans, Stack Cakes, and Honest Fried Chicken," Ronni Lundy's 1991 tribute to the Appalachian foods of her childhood. This entertaining cookbook, with recipes and stories gathered from country music stars, is the main course when "bookclub@ket" airs in November.

Host Bill Goodman and his guests sample "Shuck Beans, Stack Cakes, and Honest Fried Chicken" KET Tuesday, November 9, at 11:30 p.m. and Saturday, November 13, at 12:30 p.m.

Lundy, a native of Corbin, began writing about popular music for the Louisville Times and the Courier-Journal and later served as the Courier-Journal's restaurant reviewer. In "Shuck Beans, Stack Cakes, and Honest Fried Chicken," Lundy combines her interest in country music with her passion for country food.

Interspersed among the recipes and stories from her childhood are family stories and recipes from Emmylou Harris, John Prine, Dwight Yoakam, Bill Monroe, Brenda Lee and many other country music performers.

Readers can join a live on-line chat http://www.ket.org/book- club) with Lundy at 8 p.m., Tuesday, November 9, or visit the Web site anytime to learn more about the book and other bookclub@ket selections.

The last bookclub@ket program of 1999, airing in December, features Chris Offutt's "The Same River Twice."

bookclub@ket is a KET production. Liz Hobson is executive producer, and Janet Whitaker is producer/director. The series is closed-captioned for deaf and hard-of-hearing. Viewers can find out more about programming on KET by visiting the KET Web site at <http://www.ket.org>, a Kentucky.com affiliate.

CRITTERS CORNER

by Carol Combs-Morris, DVM

Did you ever think about how important eyes are to communication?

We're certainly aware of other people's eyes. We say of someone we are sure is lying, "He couldn't look me in the eye." If we think someone is dishonest, we may say he has "shifty" eyes. How quickly could your mother remind you to mind your manners if she caught your eye across a crowded room?

Eyes are even more important to communication for animals that don't have a spoken language. Many non-human species depend primarily on visual and chemical (smell) means to communicate with each other.

Obviously, body language depends on vision for interpretation, but often the eyes themselves are used to transmit information.

By the way, this is an important point to remember if you have a blind pet: They may not automatically get along with other animals because they can't send and receive information normally. Animals who live with the blind individual usually adapt to the disability over time, and sometimes even seem to understand the problem.)

Dogs

are an excellent example of a species that has developed a very sophisticated visual language. We are told as children not to stare at dogs; this is good advice. In most predatory species (including dogs, cats and humans), direct eye contact with another individual is used to mean confidence, dominance, or sometimes an overt threat.

A dog could interpret a person's stare as any of these things; the interpretation can vary depending on the temperament of the dog, the situation or other signals the person is sending unconsciously with his body.

In prey species (horses, deer, goats, etc.), a stare is often associated with a predator. Watch a herding dog work a flock of sheep sometime. While he uses his body, a great deal of control is done with his eyes.

Border collies, in particular, are famous for their "eye." Herding breeds are actually dogs selected for their predatory drive; over time, this has been modified so they don't go any further than chasing and sometimes nipping or holding the leg of a sheep or cow.

The predatory stare is a useful concept to keep in mind if you have a horse that is difficult to catch in the pasture. Try approaching the horse with your head turned slightly and your eyes focused down and away from the horse.

Approach the horse in sort of a gentle, arcing, zig-zag pattern rather than in a straight line. If he turns away, you turn slightly and continue only when he stops moving. It's one of those cases where slower can actually be faster.

This is not going to work, of course, for the horse that just does not want to be caught, but if he is just nervous and flighty, it may be enough to reassure him and allow you to approach. (For more on this concept, pick up a copy of "The Man Who Listens to Horses" by Monty Roberts.)

Dogs use an averted gaze and narrowed, sometimes rapidly blinking, eyes to indicate they intend to harm. Different degrees of looking away, combined with other postures and expressions, can be used to indicate friendliness, submission or fear.

Some scientists even feel that the markings on the faces of wolves help to make facial expressions more easily seen. This poses an interesting question: Have we unconsciously made it harder for our domestic dogs to communicate with one another by artificially changing their markings? We almost certainly interfere with communications when we dock tails and crop ears.

I'm not saying that solid-colored dogs are handicapped by this, but just that color may be significant sometimes. If your Siberian Husky has never seen other breeds of dogs, the first time it meets a black Labrador Retriever, he may need some time to get the hang of the other's "speech." It's usually not a problem, probably for the same reason that we understand English even when spoken with an unfamiliar accent.

One of the most valuable things you can do when starting to train a dog is to teach him to make eye contact with you. Some dogs will do this more readily than others; obviously, bold, outgoing dogs will be more comfortable with this than more timid and submissive animals. I wonder if this is part of the reason that herding breeds do so well in obedience competition.

Ask the dog to "Look" or "Watch me" frequently during the day, whether or not you are actually doing a training session.

KY Crafted: The Market expands plans for 2000

Preparations for the 19th year of Kentucky's hand-crafted gift market are well underway. Kentucky Crafted: The Market, Homecoming 2000, is scheduled for February 5-6.

The Market features Kentucky contemporary, folk and traditional crafts, musical recordings, two-dimensional visual art, books and food products for the wholesale and retail trade.

This year, The Market will offer a section containing books by Kentucky authors from the Kentucky Book Fair. Activities and entertainment will include book signings, Kentucky cultural entertainment, and educational children's craft activities.

The Market will be held in the Kentucky Fair and Exposition Center, South Wing B, in Louisville.

Kentucky Crafted: The Market, Homecoming 2000 will not only feature more than 275 exhibitors, but also former exhibitors from past years, giving this year's Market more product selection than ever before.

"Homecomings and reunions are traditional events in Kentucky," says Program Director Fran Redmon. "What better way to celebrate the Millennium than to bring back many of the wonderful craftspeople that have been part of The Market's success and history for nearly 20 years?"

The Market opens to the public from 9 a.m.-6 p.m. on Saturdays and noon to 5 p.m. on Sunday. The cost is $5 for adults and $2 for children ages 6-12. Children under 6 are admitted free. Parking is $3.

The Market is sponsored by the Kentucky Craft Marketing Program, a state agency in the Kentucky Arts Council, Education, Arts and Humanities Cabinet, Commonwealth of Kentucky.

Critters

and young puppies may be helped by a treat or toy held near your eye.

(This is probably an unnecessary warning, but don't do this with a big rambunctious dog who can jump flatfooted and poke you in the eye with his nose. Don't even ask how I know this.)

A dog who refuses to make eye contact is much more difficult to train than one who watches his handler for the next cue. The dog who watches you wants to communicate.

The next time you look into the big brown eyes of your best friend, you will know that those expressive eyes are saying even more than you thought.

Locals exhibit in MSU art show

There is no need to look any farther than the campus of Morehead State University to find the identity of the American artist.

On Wednesday, November 3, MSU's Department of Art opened a new exhibit entitled, "The Great Wall of the MSU Art Department," in the Strider Gallery, Claypool-Young Art Building.

The exhibit, which runs through December 3, is sponsored by the department's "Art of the United States" art history class under the direction of Dr. Joy Gritton, assistant professor of art. It was designed to help students explore their history and what that means in terms of the art they create.

Each of Dr. Gritton's students was responsible for the development of a portion of the wall, which reflects that student's own heritage and who they are as an American artist. To discover their histories, the students interviewed family members to compile an oral history.

Students learned names of family members, countries of origin and migration, and the cultural and work traditions of their families," Dr. Gritton said. "They also researched the culture, economy and politics of their home communities."

Armed with this information, the students wrote a paper that included their own experiences. The next step of the project was the production of their portion of the wall.

"Together, their wall speaks to the diversity of Morehead State University's art students," Dr. Gritton said.

The students who participated in the exhibit are:

Emily Bell, a Sante Fe, N.M. senior; Katherine Byrley, a Taylor Mill junior; Jennifer Caudill, a Hindman graduate student; Sascha Cox, a Lafayette, Indiana, senior; Angela Ford, a Cox's Creek senior; Yancy Holbrook, a Salyersville senior; Ruby Laney, a Prestonsburg senior; Aimie Lockwood, a Clearfield senior; Jessica Mefford, a Morehead senior; John Moneypenny, a Louisville senior; Tommy Org, a Morehead junior;

Elizabeth Payne, a South Point, Ohio, senior; Naomi Sheehan, a Morehead senior; Melissa Smith, a Cynthiana senior; Frankie Spencer, an Ezel junior; Samantha Stewart, a Greenfield, Ohio, senior; Stan Shifferd, a Lexington graduate student; Amie Tanguay, a Gorham, New Hampshire, junior; Jessica VanWinkle, an Alamogordo, New Mexico, freshman, and Tonya Williams, a Louisville senior.

Additional information on the exhibit is available by calling Gritton at 606/783-2762.

Great train trips add fun, excitement to travel

(NUE) — The thrill of traveling to an exciting destination is even greater when your transportation is part of the fun. Incorporating train travel in your escorted tour lets you experience sights not possible from any other transportation mode.

Trains allow for traveling through areas that are inaccessible by other means. Tracks often wind through valleys and forests and climb the sides of mountains where there is no road access.

Responding to the growing popularity of this form of travel, Rhode Island-based Collette Tours — one of North America's largest escorted-tour operators — has added two new train trips to its offerings for 1999.

"Great Trains of Europe" features travel on three of the world's most famous trains. "Great Trains, Wineries and Cultures of Australia and New Zealand" explores Down Under on four different trains.

On the "Great Trains of Europe" tour, travelers experience Switzerland's Glacier Express. This traditional narrow-gauge railway takes you through the astounding natural beauty of Switzerland on a slow and steady ride.

You travel through a series of tunnels and bridges as you savor some of the most breathtaking Alpine scenery in the world — towering mountains blanketed with snow, patchworked valleys sprinkled with tiny villages and picture-perfect canyons and meadows.

A completely different experience awaits aboard the famous Eurostar train, known as the "Chunnel." The Eurostar connects London and Paris along a rail system beneath the English Channel. Reaching speeds of 185 miles per hour, it is the fastest train in the world.

The high speed TGV (Train a Grande Vitesse) quickly takes you from Paris to Bern. While traveling at high speeds, the train sweeps past the French countryside of rolling hills, lavender fields and quaint villages.

In Australia, Collette's "Great Trains" tour invites you to relax aboard the famous Ghan train, and let the subtle beauty of the Australian Outback mesmerize you, passing by ancient mountain ranges and over red-baked earth.

The Kuranda Rail in tropical Cairns,

Australia, travels along sweet-scented sugar cane fields and tropical jungles.

The Tranz-Alpine Express treks along the South Island of New Zealand, whisking you past the snowcapped peaks of the Southern Alps and beautiful river gorges. The Coastal-Pacific Train also explores New Zealand's South Island, sweeping along river valleys and vineyards with dramatic views of the Pacific Ocean.

In addition to these two new escorted train tours, Collette offers train travel in its tours to various European destinations, Alaska, Canada and the Copper Canyon in Mexico.

For information, call Collette Tours toll-free at 1-888-344-5576.

CRITICS CORNER

HOOFBEATS: Set against the red sand dunes of the oldest desert in the world, one courageous horse grows from an awkward colt into a magnificent stallion, triumphing against all odds at the edge of the rugged, inhospitable Skeleton Coast of Namibia.

In 1914, Lucky, a young foal, is born aboard a German supply steamer transporting his mother and other workhorses to Africa. Soon parted from his mother and terribly vulnerable, the foal is adopted by an orphaned stable boy in a mining town. When the town evacuates due to encroaching war, Lucky is abandoned and ventures into the surrounding desert. Following the lead of a young Bushman girl and later an Oryx antelope, the foal learns how to survive in the harsh setting.

In this dramatic adventure, Lucky's journey eventually leads him back to the destroyed mining town where he protects a young mare, Beauty, and undertakes a heroic mission to defeat Caesar, a domineering stallion.

This is a good one for the kiddies. However, the more sensitive ones may find it too brutal. While it has a good outcome, some of the scenes may be a bit much.

GIRL INTERRUPTED: In 1965, after a session with a psychiatrist she'd never seen before, Susanna Kaysen (Winona Ryder) was diagnosed with Borderline Personality Disorder — an affliction with symptoms so ambiguous almost any adolescent girl might qualify — and sent to a renowned New England psychiatric hospital where she spent the next two years in a ward for teenage girls.

There, Susanna loses herself in an Oz-like nether world of seductive and disturbed young women, among them Lisa (Angelina Jolie), a charming sociopath who stages a disastrous escape with Susanna, Daisy (Brittany Murphy), a pampered girl with a predilection for rotisserie chicken, and Polly, a remarkably kind burn victim. Ultimately, assisted by the hospital's head psychiatrist, Dr. Wick (Vanessa Redgrave), and a no-nonsense ward nurse, Valerie (Whoopi Goldberg), Susanna, like Dorothy, resolves to leave this Oz and reclaim her life.

Exposition is more than a livestock show

The North American International Livestock Exposition (NAILE) is recognized as one of the world's leading livestock shows. With more than 21,000 livestock entries from 48 states gathering at the Kentucky Fair & Exposition Center in Louisville, November 6-19, its dominance is clear.

No other show approaches those numbers of purebred animals. Organizers, however, also produce events and exhibits that appeal to both industry participants and the general public.

The North American Championship Rodeo is a Pro Rodeo Cowboys Association (PRCA) event and is an invitational finals for cowboys who compete all year in a nine-state region (PRCA Great Lakes Circuit). 1999 dates are November 11, 12 and 13, and performances are 7:30 p.m. nightly in Freedom Hall.

Tickets are available through TicketMaster and Fairgrounds Box Office and are priced as follows: Thursday and Friday—$17; Saturday—$20. The Saturday performance typically sell out, so advance ticket purchase is recommended.

Since 1978, Louisville area school children have come to the livestock expo on pre-scheduled field trip visits. Last year the program was revised and expanded, and a new complimentary classroom curriculum was developed. More than 7,000 area grade school children are expected to participate in the program this year. The NAILE Education Program is sponsored by Kentucky Beef Council and Kentucky Farm Bureau Federation.

Once again WHAS Radio and Feeders Supply Co. have teamed up to sponsor the Childrens Barnyard, an Expo feature that has become an integral part of the education program. This farm animal exhibit is open throughout the expo in the East Wing. No separate fee is charged for Barnyard visits and all show visitors are welcome.

Another free exhibit is the Art of Wool Showcase. Visitors see wool carding, dyeing and spinning, as well as wool craft demonstrations. The Showcase opens on Saturday, November 6, in the East Wing, immediately adjacent to the NAILE Wool Show. The Wool Show is a national, fleece competition. Wool fleeces are displayed from November 12 until the end of the expo.

The NAILE exhibit section, an area known as the Giant Country Store, is more than livestock agriculture supplies. The entire KFEC East Wing is filled with booths offering everything from western wear to unique jewelry, crafts, home decorating items and more. A food court is part of the area.

Another NAILE tradition is the Stockdog Trials. This event is a sheep herding competition for Border Collies and their handlers. Scheduled this year for November 11-14, the outdoor trials are also open to the public.

In addition to the competition, Border Collie herding demonstrations are also conducted inside in the East Wing during the NAILE's second week.

The sale of Champions and Free Country Concert takes place at 7:30 p.m., on Thursday, November 18. The Grand and Reserve Champions from three junior market shows—market swine, wethers and steers—are sold to the highest bidders.

A new sale record was set in 1998 when $64,800 was paid by area businesses for the six animals. The animals, along with $6,480 in fresh product, were then donated to Kentucky Harvest. This traditional food donation will take place again in 1999.

The sale is followed by a free concert featuring country music artist Brad Paisley.

One time admission to the giant exposition is $5 for adults and $2 for children. $15 season passes are also available. Admission fee includes KFEC parking.

The NAILE is produced annually by the Kentucky State Fair Board and the Commonwealth of Kentucky.

KET show explores efforts to discover extraterrestrial life

Does life exist beyond Earth? This ancient question has consumed stargazers for centuries.

Yet only in the last few decades have humans developed the tools to search actively for extraterrestrial life. The discovery of life beyond Earth would be without parallel in its impact on human thought.

"Life Beyond Earth," a two-hour special, airing on KET at 9 p.m., Wednesday, November 10, tells the story of humanity's search for extraterrestrial life.

The program explains why many scientists now believe that life is abundant in the universe, and examines how a signal from aliens could change the course of civilization. The groundbreaking special was created and is hosted by science writer Timothy Ferris.

"Are We Alone?," the first hour of the special, investigates the origin and evolution of life on Earth and traces the search for life on other planets. Ferris, noting that all of the elements that constitute living things on Earth originate within stars, asserts it seems reasonable to speculate that life is cosmetically commonplace.

Scientists postulate that if exotic life forms can exist in extreme environments on Earth, life may exist in any world that contains oceans and a molten core, no matter how far it is from a sun.

The second hour, "Is Anybody Listening?," investigates the attempt to detect signals from extraterrestrial civilizations. Since interstellar spaceflight will be slow to develop and expensive, the best way to contact intelligent extraterrestrials may be communication—sending messages rather than starships.

Life Beyond Earth, produced by KCTS/Seattle with Lark International in association with Devillier Donegan Enterprises, is closed-captioned for the deaf and hard-of-hearing. Viewers can find out more about programming on KET by visiting the KET Web site at <http://www.ket.org>, a Kentucky.com affiliate.

International doll exhibit at PCC

An International Doll Exhibit will be held in Prestonsburg Community College's Magoffin Art Gallery, from November 29 through December 3.

Dolls representing more than 50 countries will be on display. The exhibit is free and open to the public.

All schools, church groups, and other organizations wishing to bring large numbers of children or adults should call ahead to arrange for a suitable date and time to attend. The exhibit will be appropriate for nearly every educational component (world history, geography, art, music, design, language arts, foreign languages, etc.), and there will be someone in attendance to answer any questions.

Contact Dr. John Shiber at PCC at 886-3863, ext. 302, or 606-789-1017 for more details.

Regular exhibit hours will be from 9 a.m. to 6 p.m. daily.

Comfort for Our Losses

"Blessed are those who mourn, for they shall be comforted."

— Matthew 5:4

We all appreciate that the end of earthly life is death, but when that death occurs during war, it is a more sad occasion than the usual giving up of life. Most of us go to our heavenly reward surrounded by the comfort of family and friends. The soldier in battle has no such consolation, many going to unmarked graves. It is only fitting therefore that as a nation and as a people we dedicate a day of recognition to all who served to bring about the peace, especially those who did at expense to themselves. We can all take solace in the words of Jesus in His Sermon on the Mount, for we know we will be comforted through our faith and in our belief in a life after death in God's heaven.

Ashland museum offers new space

"The Riverbank" is a new attraction at the Highlands Museum and Discovery Center in Ashland.

This new addition to the Discovery Center was made possible through a grant from the Kentucky Colonels.

Designed for ages five and under, the youngest visitors to the museum now have a play space. This expands the Discovery Center and gives small explorers a chance to look at the world from the perspective of the Ohio River region.

A youngster can try the fishing hole, settle into the book nook, try a fish puzzle, or don a miner's hat and explore the coal mine as a train circles on a high track.

The center is located at 1620 Winchester Ave.

For more information, call 606/329-8888.

Superheroes stride into next millennium

(NUE) - On the eve of the 20th Century, "The Yellow Kid" debuted as the first American newspaper comic strip, and pulp fiction magazines began telling tales of action and adventure. Comic books — a magical mixture of the two — quickly emerged.

The format and delivery of these serial sagas have remained largely unchanged in the decades since.

As we approach the 21st Century, digital distribution is delivering another transformation for comic books — and many other kinds of published information.

Think about what it would be like to wake up in the morning to find your favorite comic book waiting for you on your computer printer. Just as automobiles, telephones and space-age conveniences have punctuated the 20th Century, digital delivery of everything from news to comics will mark the new millennium.

In the comic book arena, Marvel Enterprises teamed up with printing and imaging giant Hewlett-Packard Company to create the "Mighty Marvel Messenger," an electronically published, printed combination of comic book and news.

The "Mighty Marvel Messenger" arrives free to subscribers using HP Instant Delivery (www.instant-delivery.com), free software that automatically downloads and delivers the newsletter directly — and conveniently — to your printer, anytime you want.

"Mighty Marvel Messenger" features an exclusive full-color Fantastic Four weekly comic, "Chronicles of Valor."

But comics are just one of many publications ripe for digital distribution. Other news and information already available on HP's Instant Delivery include United Media's Dilbert, Afternoon Update from Time.com and MSNBC.com. Or, choose to have your favorite Web site delivered — all direct to your printer.

'Intimate strangers' looks at reliance on 'invisible' world

Earth's environment was created and has been maintained for almost four billion years by the smallest creatures on the planet.

Microbes, invisible to the naked eye, are the subject of a four-part series, "Intimate Strangers: Unseen Life on Earth," airing on KET at 8 p.m., Tuesdays, November 9-30.

Microbes help cure disease, prevent famine and clean up the world's most polluted areas. As "Intimate Strangers: Unseen Life on Earth" demonstrates, human beings share the planet with a hidden world that is beautiful, often startling, extraordinarily complex and essential to all life.

Each of the four one-hour programs examines the microbial world from a different perspective, but all make the same point: the continued existence of the human race on Earth will be determined in no small part by the well being of the planet's microbes.

"Trees of Life," the first program, follows the quest of scientists to understand how all human life on Earth is related.

"Keepers of the Biosphere" (November 16) features scientists who are exploring humans' reliance on microscopic organisms, which drive the chemistry of life and keep the world habitable. The series explores how infectious diseases occur when the human-microbe relationship changes or when an intruder invades.

"Dangerous Friends and Friendly Enemies" (November 23) focuses on scientists who delve into this most personal relationship with the invisible world.

Finally, "Creators of the Future" (November 30) introduces scientists using innovative and high-tech partnerships with microbes for solutions to world problems.

"Intimate Strangers: Unseen Life on Earth," produced by Baker & Simon Associates in association with Oregon Public Broadcasting, is closed-captioned for the deaf and hard-of-hearing. Viewers can find out more about programming on KET by visiting the KET Web site at <http://www.ket.org>, a Kentucky.com affiliate.

INFOLINK BY ZANE BINDER

The year was 1952, the Korean War raged, and if you listened closely, you could hear youth's first faint rumblings of discontent. Though the anger wouldn't break into "open social warfare" till the tumultuous and rebellious '60s, the signs were already appearing. One of the earliest was Mad Magazine's inception, a 1952 humor publication that specialized in poking fun at "The Establishment." There was nothing like it on the market back then (and surprisingly little now), and it's continued its winning streak to the present. Now Mad Magazine is available on seven CD's, its irreverence and wit from "Day One" perusable with ease!

"Totally Mad" from Broderbund (www.Broderbund.com) is unusual among magazine compilations. The material isn't just haphazardly scanned and handed to the buyer: it's organized and put together so both far-gone enthusiasts and the merely interested will find good things to say. There's a comprehensive search engine in this $49.95 street price package, and pages are viewable using a zoomable, rotatable, printable and otherwise easily manipulatable interface strikingly similar to Adobe's laudable Acrobat Reader. That means Mad's famous "fold in" pages - humor spread across two pages that's only recognizable when folded together - can be easily viewed.

All of Mad's famous features (including humor from their innumerable "special" issues) are here, and these CD's even includes an exclusive roll of Mad toilet paper. This icon's humor doesn't ordinarily qualify as risqué or "X" rated, but occasionally it makes mildly scatological points! The CD's encompass more than 22,000 text/graphic pages, covers (including a special cover browser), and innumerable shots of Alfred E. Neumann, Mad's mascot for more than half a century. Spy Vs. Spy, Madvertisements (Mad accepts no advertising and these are clever spoofs), The Lighter Side, The Trash Heap, and every other Mad department is featured. There's enough here - and at Mad's website at www.madmag.com - to keep you laughing for another 50 years!

Installation is easy, requirements are basic (just Windows 9X/NT, a Pentium 90, 32 megs of RAM and 30 megs of hard disc space). One caveat: if you're not familiar with Mad Magazine and/or don't care for satire, this compilation isn't for you. For the irreverent, though, it's priceless!

ENTERTAINMENT EXTRA

Q. I just saw the movie, "Fight Club" with Brad Pitt, and I've become a fan of his for the first time. I really thought he was great. Now I look forward to his next picture. Any idea what it might be? A.J. McL.

A. According to sources close to Pitt, he's in discussions with Warner Bros. for "Urban Townies." They want him, and I hear he wants to do it. It's a matter of agreeing where to put the decimal point when they show him the money. (He already pocketed some $20 million for "Fight Club.")

Q. Is there going to be a new "friend" on "Friends"? I read a blind item that the show would have a famous woman star joining this season. Catherine M.

A. NBC has already confirmed that report. For those who haven't heard, Elle McPherson, the Australian-born model and actor joined the NBC series for several episodes to air through November sweeps.

Q. Is it true Jerry Seinfeld has made a deal for a series on FOX? Also, what chances do my three new favorite shows, "Family Law," "West Wing" and "Judging Amy" have to make it through the season? Betty S.

A. Jerry is not planning to do a FOX show, at least, not at this time. However, two of his writers, reportedly, have done a deal with FOX for a new comedy series. The agreement is for six episodes. If it does well, no doubt, they'll renegotiate.

As we meet on this page, you'll be happy to learn that "Judging Amy," "Family Law" and "West Wing" have all been given the green light to deliver full season shows for their networks.

Q. Whatever happened to Milton Berle's lawsuit against a magazine that said he was gay? Drina J.

A. The 91-year-old oft-wed performer had his original suit thrown out for lack of jurisdiction. His attorneys say he plans to refile the case later this year.

Berle felt that the use of his photo in a real estate advertisement in a publication considered a resource guide for the gay community made it seem as if he were a homosexual. (I guess he now feels he should never have dressed in drag on his TV show some 50 years ago!!!)

Q. I was a big fan of the late Freddie Prinze, and I'm so pleased that his son is doing well. What's next for young Freddie? Lisa DeL.

A. Freddie Prinze Jr. will star in "Boys and Girls," due out later next year.

in time for the wake-up call and that wonderful Continental Breakfast which consisted of a sweet roll hard enough to knock out Joe Frazier and just enough liver paté to cover a 50-cent piece.

"Are you ready, Cecil B. DeMildew?" I asked as Ronnie wiped his mouth, careful not to drop any crumbs on his new cinematic Siamese twin.

"Yeah, just as soon as I go to the bathroom," he replied.

"Would you like me to cut the umbilical cord and nurse that thing for you until you get back?"

"Heck no! I've decided to document these bathrooms for the folks back home or they'll never believe us."

"Well, that will certainly be a potty picture," I laughed.

Ronnie was gone no more than five minutes when he returned with a sheepish look on his face. "You won't believe what I just saw in the restroom."

"Not a toilet that actually had a seat?" I queried. "If it's anything else, could you please wait until after I finish breakfast?"

"No, it's doesn't have anything to do with the porcelain fixtures," he replied. "It was my bathroom buddy."

In my mind I pictured something akin to a Sesame Street toy like an anatomically correct "Tickle Me Elmo," or (to get really scary) any thing that had to do with Big Bird. Ronnie could see the panic in my eyes and quickly explained, "No, it was a woman!"

Now I was wishing it HAD been Big Bird.

"I was standing at the urinal when I became aware that someone was moving behind me," he stated. When I looked over my shoulder, I discovered it was a woman nonchalantly mopping the floor.

"What did she say?" I asked.

"Buon giorno," he innocently answered. (That's good morning.)

"And what did you say?" I grilled on.

"I casually said 'same to ya'," he responded. "And since I've never carried on a conversation with a woman while I was standing at a public urinal with a mother to Mesa, Arizona, because she had severe asthma. In 1968, Goose Creek Symphony was established in Phoenix, releasing its first album in March 1970.

Gearheart had grown tired of playing bars and other people's music. And though it has had its share of members, Goose Creek has developed a hard core following over the years, known affectionately as Gooseheads.

Gearheart describes the band's sound as "Appalachian-based, not commercialized, almost folk, with a rock, big band, and old-time country sound."

"It's an organic sound," he said. "It's very intricate. It's not commercial music. It's our own thing and it's a good time."

Goose Creek's songs are not the everyday, three- to four-minute tunes.

"Some tunes go as long as 25 minutes, going through different movements and tempos," the founder said.

For 18 years the group was apart, closing the Goose Creek era of rock and roll. Before their break-up, they produced three albums for Capitol Records, one for Columbia, and two more by independent record companies.

Goose Creek also made appearances on the Ed Sullivan Show and at the Atlanta Pop Festival in 1977, which Gearheart said brought the band into the spotlight.

They had success covering Janis Joplin's "Mercedes Benz." It was their only Top-40 hit.

But the point came when the group agreed it was time to stop and raise the kids, said Gearheart.

"In late spring 1975, I took my kid and my wife and was going to migrate to Canada," he said. But his plans fell through, so he decided to go to Washington state to gather his thoughts.

"We stopped to eat at this little restaurant and stayed there 18 years," he said.

The West Coast proved to be the ideal place for Gearheart who wanted to take care of his "tribe."

"A lot of hippies had gone there. They were young. Graduated college. There were a lot arts and crafts. It was very progressive. There were a lot of barbecue parties, much like we are just starting to see here," Gearheart said.

Gearheart purchased a place, and he and his wife set up a couple of businesses, a green house for her and a fly fishing shop for him. All the while, the group kept a central office to stay in touch with one another.

"I left the music business and entered my fishing world," said Gearheart. Some of the fishing rods Gearheart sold were in the $500-$600 price range.

He dabbled in music through the years and even went into Canada to record an album entitled "Head for the Hills, the People are Coming." He also worked as a guide at Mount Baker, an active volcano.

"I got to the point that I felt like a pimp, letting people know where my fishing hole was."

And with his children raised, the indoors finally got to him.

"I got bored being indoors. It started getting to me. I came home from the shop one day and my wife looked at me and said, 'Getting tired of the shop? What do you want to do?'

"Let's go out playing music again," Gearheart responded. And Goose Creek was on the road again.

A few places that they have played include Down Home in Johnson City, Tennessee, and at Breedings in Lexington. They also have a video out that gives the history of Goose Creek Symphony entitled appropriately, "Goose Creek Symphony."

The group is said to have a fan base that stretches worldwide, especially into western Canada. But Gearheart has a fear of flying which has kept the band from exploring that part of their fan base.

"If they could get me on a plane, we could have played the World's Fair in Japan," said Gearheart.

He started playing music in the fourth grade. Playing the trombone at Maytown Elementary. Gearheart said he has marched up the streets of Prestonsburg many times participating in parades.

He started playing the drums at 15, and at 18 years old, with a hit single, "The Great Duane," Gearheart made an appearance on the Dick Clark Show. "I went to New York City by myself," said Gearheart.

His influences are rock and roll legends the Beatles, country greats Hank Williams, George Jones, Merle Haggard, and big bands like Duke Ellington.

As a native of Floyd County, Gearheart said he likes things the way they were. He has very fond memories of "the gang," when kids from six to 13 hung out together running up and down the creek bank, he said.

"I grew up around my family. You were around family. My fondest memories are of growing up on Goose Creek." Gearheart said he can remember the times when he would trade eggs for other things there on Goose Creek, a barter system now long gone.

He says the Indians have the right idea: You're not supposed to leave your roots or buried ancestry.

As for Goose Creek getting it back together and touring once more, Gearheart said it is not just for the people. "We also made the deal, we want to entertain ourselves," said Gearheart, who describes his craft as fun.

Charlie Gearheart Highway is a monument to the founder of one of rock and roll's unique sounds and a tribute to the memory of the Appalachia of our past.

"I still don't know who did it (named the highway). I want to thank them for it. It's near embarrassing. I never really got to know who did it and never really got to say thank you. I want to thank the people in Floyd County, our people. I'm flabbergasted," he said.

While home, Charlie Gearheart took a step into what he calls his fishing world by visiting Paintsville Lake, but he didn't get away from all the phone calls.

Still, he was thrilled to come back to the beautiful fall-colored mountains of home.

New Ken Burns documentary honors lives and work of Stanton, Anthony

When Elizabeth Cady Stanton and Susan B. Anthony were born, a woman could not attend college, pursue a professional career, serve on a jury or testify in a trial.

A woman also had no right to property or custody of her children. By the time Stanton and Anthony died, women had won all of these rights.

Acclaimed filmmaker Ken Burns celebrates their lives with "Not for Ourselves Alone: The Story of Elizabeth Cady Stanton and Susan B. Anthony." The two women shattered the social, cultural and legal inequalities that had shackled women for centuries and set in motion the movement that won the right for women to vote.

The two-part program airs on KET at 8 p.m. Sunday, November 7, and at 9 p.m. Monday, November 8. The program repeats on KET2 at 9 p.m. Tuesdays, November 9 and 16.

"When eight million women...voted for the first time ever in 1920, Elizabeth Cady Stanton had been dead for almost 18 years and Susan B. Anthony for 14," says Burns.

"However, it was the direct legacy of their tireless advocacy and a tenacious belief that all Americans—regardless of race, creed or sex—must be treated equally that led to this historic event," he notes.

"And beyond the vote, these two women created a movement that literally transformed American society by winning for women advances in everything from education to divorce law and the right to own property. They are, in my opinion, the two most important women in American history."

"Not For Ourselves Alone" is narrated by Sally Kellerman and features the vocal talents of Julie Harris, Ronnie Gilbert of the Weavers, Amy Madigan, George Plimpton, Adam Arkin and many others.
