Schools deal with end-of-year troubles Threats made at Prestonsburg Elementary; vandals strike PHS

by RANDELL RENO STAFF WRITER

Prestonsburg police officers made two separate trips to Prestonsburg Elementary School last week after two students allegedly threatened teachers.

A fifth-grade student was suspended last Thursday for the remainder of the year after he allegedly told several students he would kill a teacher on the last day of school.

Seven students told Police Chief Darrel Conley that the boy had told them his plans. Principal Gwen Harmon notified the police department in order to lodge a formal complaint in the situation.

According to the police department, the boy will have to go to Mountain Comprehensive Care before he will be allowed to enter Adams Middle School in the fall. School officials were advised to see a court-designated worker about the incident.

Just days before, another boy was suspended for three days and transported home last Tuesday, May 30, after he allegedly threatened to harm a teacher at

Police were called to Prestonsburg High School to investigate an overnight defacing in which a vandal smeared feathers and sardines on windows.

The events preceded vandals visiting Prestonsburg High School sometime Monday evening. An undisclosed amount of damage was done to the new building.

Officers arrived on the scene to investigate after receiving a 7:30 a.m. call about the damage. That call reported that the school had been broken into.

Southern Water given power to borrow

by RANDELL RENO STAFF WRITER

The Floyd Fiscal Court met in special session Monday morning to officially sign a master lease-purchase agreement, effectively giving the Southern Water and Sewer District certain powers. Those powers will allow the newly-formed district to finance construction projects while leaving the court standing as official liaison.

With the signing, the water district will be able to get a one-half percent lower interest rate on loans, said Judge-Executive Paul Hunt Thompson.

"It is an agreement we need," said the judge "Especially in the southern part of the county, Mud Creek, Left Beaver Creek, and Right Beaver Creek, to guarantee water to 95 percent of the people in the next few years."

The court signed another agreement with the City of Martin. That agreement will allow the processing of the leachate within the Martin sewer system, saving the county hundreds of dollars in transportation costs.

Also on the agenda was the hiring of 11 summer employees for the county's pool at Allen, five employees for the parks, and 33 employees to work for the county road department.

The payment of election officers, polling places and alternates was approved. Election officers are to be paid $60 for working the polls and $15 for

Report: Accident victim had heart attack beforehand

Prestonsburg police officers were called to the scene of a fatal accident at the Nordin Eye Center in Prestonsburg Friday.

Timothy Andrew Bakay was traveling North on Route 321 in Prestonsburg when he began to veer into the oncoming lane just past Prestonsburg High School.

Bakay reportedly crossed the road into the grass in front of Hardee's Restaurant, through the shrubbery, collided into three parked vehicles and came to rest atop a fire hydrant.

Bakay was transported to Highlands Regional Medical Center where he was pronounced dead.

A preliminary autopsy report said Bakay apparently suffered a heart attack, causing the accident.

Crace is survived by his wife, Kim Bertram Crace of Martin, son, Brandon Todd Crace of Martin, and daughters, Gwendolyn Crace of Prestonsburg and Courtney Crace of Allen. He is also survived by his mother, Phyllis Smith Sellards.

Funeral services for Crace will be conducted Friday, June 9, at 1 p.m.

Tips for keeping your back healthy

(NU) - Today's mobile professionals and students are wearing the day-to-day stress of the job on their backs — no wonder they are becoming more and more susceptible to lower back pain.
 Here are some "back breaking" statistics:
 • Back pain afflicts four out of five adults at some point in their lives.
 • Back pain is the leading cause of disability and time lost from work.
 • Medical costs for lower back pain reach the $24 billion mark each year.
 Besides obvious causes such as poor posture or lifting heavy objects incorrectly, chiropractors and pediatricians have identified an increasing number of patients struggling with the debilitating effects of low back pain from carrying laptop computers or briefcases.
 "Since more and more people have started carrying around a 'mobile office,' we've seen a significant increase in the incidence of back problems due to excessive weight placed upon the shoulders," said Dr. Shawn Kimura, D.C., L.A.C. "The force is usually unevenly distributed causing the back to compensate for the weight."

 With this in mind, professional designers in the computer carrying case industry have teamed up with the medical community to develop carrying cases that can help alleviate back pain.
 Targus, a pioneer in the carrying case industry (www.targus.com), has redesigned their best-selling line of cases to help reduce back strain.
 Aside from their backpack and rolling-case models, Targus has developed a line of lightweight top-loading computer carrying cases with a new EqualizerStrap that also aids in carrying heavy loads.
 Made from an innovative shock absorbing material that distributes weight over the shoulder better, the EqualizerStrap reduces strain and provides superior comfort.
 "By evenly distributing the weight, patients will see a noticeable difference and experience benefits on a daily basis," said Dr. Kimura. "This will also help prevent future back pain."

 In addition to taking strain off your shoulders, Dr. Kimura also suggests the following tips to help avoid future back complications:
 • Keep yourself in good physical condition.
 • Maintain a healthy weight - excess body weight puts additional strain on your lower back.
 • Avoid sitting or standing for long periods of time.
 • Avoid lifting while twisting, bending forward and reaching.
 • Always lift with your knees.
 Since back pain is the number one reason for visits to the doctor, people are becoming more concerned than ever about how to prevent back problems before they start. By going back to basic recommendations and strapping into better back alternatives, professionals and students can relieve some stress and feel the benefits of a healthier back.

McDowell man charged with stalking, abuse

Times Staff Report
 A criminal summons was issued for a McDowell man after he was accused of abusing his son and stalking his wife in May.
 Orville Douglas Cook was arrested Monday as he appeared in Floyd District Court and charged with third-degree criminal abuse for the alleged three hour whipping and kicking of his 13-year-old son.

 He was also charged with stalking his estranged wife when he allegedly threatened and stalked her both at home and at work.
 A not guilty plea was entered for Cook in the incidents. He is being held in the Floyd County Detention Center on a $5,000 partially secured bond.

Anti-whiplash seat making impact on safety

(NAPS)-While seatbelts and air bags have cut injuries in front end collisions, they have not made much of an impact in rear end collisions. This may explain why rear-end collisions represent 11 percent of total accidents, while resulting whiplash and related trauma account for 50 percent of all accident injuries with long term consequences and more than 50 percent of long-time costs.
 Simply put, whiplash is the most frequently experienced injury in rear-impact collisions.
 Fortunately, safety experts are working on a solution to this problem. Autoliv for example, has created an advanced anti-whiplash system designed to protect vehicle occupants in low-to-moderate speed rear-impact crashes. Seat dynamics are based on a mechanism that permits parallel movement of the seat backrest rearward and then allows the seat back to pivot an additional 20 degrees to the rear.
 The result of this controlled motion is absorption of injury-causing whiplash forces resulting from a rear-impact crash.
 A spokesperson for Autoliv, the company which created the anti-whiplash system and many other automobile safety devices, says that as long as there are safety needs to protect, we'll keep working with automakers to extend the boundaries of occupant safety worldwide.
 The whiplash device is currently available in some production vehicles, such as the Volvo. Many safety experts feel that U.S. automakers will soon follow suit.
 A variation of this system has been introduced to protect rear seat vehicle passengers. Called SIHR, this device uses air bladders in the headrest and back portion of the seat to protect the occupant.

 To find out more about these whiplash systems write to Autoliv, 1320 Pacific Drive, Auburn Hills, MI 48326.

High blood pressure patients urged to take labels to "heart"

(NAPSA) — Coughing, sneezing, sniffing, achiness, fever. Sound familiar? Fortunately for most, relief can be as close as their medicine cabinet. But, for the 50 million Americans who have high blood pressure, it's not that simple. Some products, most notably OTC medications containing decongestants used to treat colds, the flu and other ailments, can increase blood pressure and interfere with the effectiveness of blood pressure medications. Uncontrolled high blood pressure can potentially increase risk of heart disease or stroke.

Unfortunately, a recent survey shows that high blood pressure patients are not always "taking labels to heart." Eighty-six percent of hypertensive patients surveyed claim that they always or sometimes examine labels; however, when asked what cold and flu product they took the last time they were sick, almost half of hypertensive respondents treated their cold or flu with OTC products containing a decongestant which are not generally recommended for use by hypertensive patients. Only three percent took Coricidin® products which include the CoricidinHBP® line, the only cold and flu products specially formulated for high blood pressure patients.

spotlight on health

"Patients with high blood pressure should consciously read the labels of all food products and OTC medications to make sure they don't contain ingredients which may further raise their blood pressure or interfere with its treatment," said Dr. Randall M. Zusman, Director, Division of Hypertension and Vascular Medicine, Massachusetts General Hospital and Associate Professor of Medicine, Harvard Medical School. "Particularly in the midst of cold and flu season, when many patients tend to self-medicate, they should avoid products containing a decongestant, and consult with their doctor or pharmacist if they have any questions about products they are taking."

Schering-Plough Health Care Products, the maker of Coricidin HBP, has been working with the American Heart Association to educate high blood pressure patients about the importance of reading labels in order to make their medicine cabinets more "high blood pressure friendly." The partners have developed a wallet card which lists types and specific examples of OTC medications that high blood pressure patients should avoid. The wallet card is available at no cost by writing CoricidinHBP Wallet Card at P.O. Box 6336, Young America, MN 55558-6336.

For more information on hypertension and its treatment, visit the American Heart Association at www.americanheart.org/hbp or visit CoricidinHBP at www.coricidin-hbp.com.

The American Heart Association recognizes that certain over-the-counter medications may raise blood pressure and/or interfere with the effectiveness of hypertension drugs in some patients.

If you suffer from high blood pressure, speak with a doctor or pharmacist before taking any of the following medications:

- nasal decongestants (examples: tablets, syrups, or nasal sprays containing pseudoephedrine, phenylphrine, oxymetazoline, phenylpropanolamine)
- appetite suppressants (examples: benzocaine, phenylpropanolamine)

The American Heart Association also recognizes that the chronic use of nonsteroidal anti-inflammatory drugs or NSAIDs may negatively affect the management of high blood pressure (examples: ibuprofen, ketoprofen, naproxen)

Disconnected budget

In April, the Republican-dominated state Senate, imposing its will on the General Assembly, said no to comprehensive tax reform that would have saved about a million Kentucky households a good chunk of change while making the state tax structure fairer and more sensible.

Instead of a reform that included, among other things, an industry-backed plan to impose a flat 7 percent tax on telecommunications services, GOP senators opted for a tax increase on interstate long-distance calls and collection of a tax on long-distance access fees.

Oops.

It is time to say "oops" now, isn't it?

Not only did the GOP's irresponsible approach leave Kentucky's working poor bearing an unfairly large share of the tax burden, it now looks like it will leave the state budget a bit unbalanced.

This week, the federal government and the nation's phone companies reached an agreement on restructuring long-distance rates and access fees. The changes, which will go into effect July 1 (the same day Kentucky's new budget year begins), will cut long-distance costs by up to 50 percent.

That sort of knocks a hole in a state budget balanced on long-distance taxes, doesn't it?

And it could get worse. Down the road, analysts see a time when reaching out and touching someone becomes even cheaper, as the traditional phone companies start offering long-distance service for a flat fee or in bundles of minutes to compete with cellular and Internet services.

Kentucky officials, whether Republican or Democrat, should have seen the agreement between the feds and the phone companies coming. It had been in the works for some time, and its probable outcome had been the subject of discussion for months.

An article in the February issue of State Legislatures, a publication of the National Conference of State Legislatures, even predicted that long-distance calls might be free in the near future. That magazine was available to Kentucky lawmakers a good two months before Senate Republicans decided the state budget could only be balanced with a tax on long-distance services.

Of course, we all know telephone companies aren't going to eat a big loss when they cut long-distance costs to remain competitive. They'll make it up somewhere, probably in areas that would be subject to a flat tax on telecommunications services.

But thanks to the Republican state Senate, Kentucky doesn't have a flat tax on telecommunications services. It has a new tax on interstate long-distance service and a commitment to collect a previously uncollected tax on access fees. Now that those rates and fees are headed downward, Kentucky also has a bit of a hole in its budget.

Oops.

I wanted to take a moment to write and let you know about a special gift that was provided for Jenny Wiley Theatre.

A couple of weeks ago, the City of Prestonsburg donated all the flowers to be planted in the theatre's landscaping. Under the direction of David Click, the 4-H Kids in Floyd County planted all the flowers in one evening.

Both the plants and the planting would have cost the theatre a great deal of time and money, so we are grateful for this incredible service.

The JWT Board of Trustees would like to thank Mayor Jerry Fannin, David Click, the City of Prestonsburg, and the Floyd County 4-H group for being so generous.

Board member questions reorganization

Editor's note: Floyd County Board of Education member Carol Stumbo has sent the following letter to Dr. Kenneth Henry, director, the office of Educational Accountability.

Dear Dr. Henry:

As a member of the Floyd County Board of Education, I am requesting an investigation by your office into the actions that are taking place in our district with the reorganization of the central office staff. I am basing my request on the following concerns:

- Floyd County has a long history of using school personnel to affect the outcome of political elections.
- Central office employees have been an especially important group in the political power structure in eastern Kentucky. Many of them obtained their positions because of their ability to influence large numbers of voters and once employed, they were expected to "buy" their positions by making financial contributions to the campaigns of candidates who were being supported by the superintendent or others.

While teachers received only phone calls reminding them of where their loyalties needed to be at election time, it was not uncommon to see "bagmen" making their rounds among administrators right before an election to collect their contributions.

- Although the district has been under state management for the past two years, the involvement of state officials has not removed politics from the school system. The school system is still the single largest employer in the county; it also possesses the single largest budget of any institution in the district.
- There is little evidence that the level of politics has decreased any in Floyd County. In fact, the May primary seemed to involve the school board in, at least, one local race to a degree that the board had not been involved before.

Two of our current board members were drawn into a very heated controversy surrounding the commonwealth attorney's race in the May primary. The charges and counter charges became so intense that one political analyst characterized the advertisements in this race as "the dirtiest I have ever seen."

The conflict between the two candidates and the board of education members dominated the local paper and local radio and television stations almost completely during the last weeks of the race. Presumably, the final resolution will only occur in the court system.

- There are many other troubling facts about the reorganization of the central office staff in Floyd County that suggest that perhaps political activity is a factor in this action. The manner in which the proposal was developed (limited involvement and discussion with selected staff and board members), along with the timing and the sense of urgency with which it has been presented, gives one cause to stop and wonder and question.

At the May board meeting, we were given the impression by the board chairman that we would hold workshops to deal with our concerns regarding the plan. Despite the fact that the district has until July to make changes, the following week, an agenda for a May 30 special board meeting was distributed with the reorganization listed as an action item.

A. Plans for reorganization have been known for some time by a small group of people.

Hints about changes in personnel and central office positions were first alluded to at a meeting of the school board on April 17 when Donna Collins, the president of the Floyd County Education Association, questioned board members and the superintendent about information that she had regarding the creation of a new district position, that of a chief information officer. This was a full month before some board members learned that these were a reorganization plan.

Mrs. Collins believed that not only was Floyd County going to create the position but she also felt that she knew the name of the individual that would be selected for that position. She was so confident of the validity of her information that she offered to record the name of that person and place it in a sealed envelope and then wait to see if her prediction were true when the position was filled. When board members finally saw the reorganization chart, however, shortly before the board meeting in May, the position of chief information officer was indeed there.

B. Members of the Floyd County Board were given different amount of information regarding the plan and a short timeline in which to consider it.

The proposal for the restructuring of the central office was officially submitted to the Floyd County board or its consideration and support with little preparation on the eve of the May primary. A week before the board meeting when I questioned the superintendent as to why the board had not been briefed on such an important matter, I was told that two board members had seen the plan earlier. I never learned who those members were or when they had been shown the plan. I finally got to see it on the Friday preceding the Monday board meeting because I made it clear that I would not vote if I did not see it.

Although the board declined to take any action on the plan on Monday, May 22, the audience was filled with central office staff and principals that were rumored to be part of the proposed changes.

An all-star board lineup

During a recent board meeting, Johnnie Ross said something about every team having a Dennis Rodman.

I looked at all the board members and none of them had tattoos, were cross-dressed or, as far as I know, dated Madonna, so I did not get the gist of what he was talking about so I just smiled and pretended I got it. (Didn't want to look obtuse, you know).

Well, at the next board meeting Carol Stumbo and Jody Mullins kindly asked Ross not to call them Rodman anymore, saying they preferred to be called Larry Bird and Grant Hill. Ross explained that he meant the person who has been missing several board meetings was the Rodman-like person. Now I may be obtuse but I know it is Don Roberts who has not been attending meetings lately.

Being a fair-minded journalist, I didn't want to let Roberts have his NBA/college basketball connection without at least giving suggestions for the other board members and top school officials. So I decided to make some light-hearted (the key word here folks is "light-hearted") suggestions for those people. If some people get in a fizz, I will conduct a short lesson on satire. You can get a jump start on the lesson by reading "A Modest Proposal" by Jonathan Swift.

Board chairman Terry Dotson could be Latrell Sprewell. Then when Carol Stumbo gets him upset, he can simply go over and choke her until she yells — "I love this game."

For Woody Carter, state manager, we can promote him from colonel to general and he can play the part of Bobby Knight. That way when the board or central office people do not do as he would like, he can have a temper tantrum and throw board books to relieve tension.

As for Stumbo she will be told, "Sorry, Carol, you can't play with us on the gentlemen's team. You can start your own less prestigious league and be the leader of the Region 8 women's team."

Jody Mullins can be Shaq. That way anytime the board puts up one of those ugly plans that he doesn't like, he can smack it back into their faces.

Dr. Fanning will be Rick Pitino. He will tell the board and other leaders, "If you people will let me lead, I can lead you to the promised land — out from under state bondage (oh, I mean management)." He will go on to tell them, "If I don't get some support, I plan to go back to Kentucky (no, I mean Alabama)."

Since Ross got this all started with his analogy, I am going to let him select his own NBA persona. He could be David Stern and fine all the people who don't get along $10,000 each. The money would be donated to the Randy Kimbrough committee whose motto is, "Randy is not a liar and thief, but misunderstood."

You central office workers. Sad to say, all of you will become free agents.

C. The individuals who seem to have been involved in the development of the reorganization plan have been part of past reorganization efforts.

Only a select few, however, in the central office seemed to know the proposed reorganization plan in detail or had any involvement in its design. Some of those involved, however, have also been key architects of previous reorganization efforts, which have resulted in extensive litigation against the district.

Floyd County has been through several central office reorganizations and while they have proved to be beneficial, to the central office staff that planned them and to those who were demoted or removed from their positions, the attempts have ended badly for the district and its children. Legal judgements of hundreds of thousands of dollars have favored the employees, not the district. Improper notification, deciding on actions legally in executive sessions, rather than in the board meetings have led to the awarding of damages and reinstatement of personnel.

Some would argue that the processes were deliberately botched so those individuals could profit at the expense of the district. The fact is also not lost on Floyd Countyans that many of these reorganizations have taken place with state assistance.

Although the superintendent accepts responsibility for the plan, the role of state management in its development is unclear. While the state manager has informed the board that he has complete authority over every aspect of the Floyd County school system, if lawsuits are filed as a result of this reorganization, the state is not liable. Floyd County is, and it is a precarious situation for the district.

The superintendent, though a veteran administrator from Alabama, is not familiar with Kentucky politics or its school laws. The individual that he must seek approval from, the state manager, comes from a military background, and has not been certified as a superintendent.

Adding to the risk is the fact that Floyd County does not have a meaningful evaluation history of any of its personnel. When the state assumed management of the district, personnel records were in a shambles, while necessary paperwork such as certification has been placed in personnel folders, only now is an evaluation process taking place. No documentations exists to support what might be considered a marginal demotion in either roles or pay. The district will have little to support its action if taken to court if suits are filed, and they will be.

Floyd County parents, and children have suffered as a result of past reorganizations that have been implemented with assistance from the state. The current board is still dealing with litigation and judgements that go back to the terms of Superintendent John Brock and Commissioner Thomas Boysen. Are people from Floyd County simply not smart or knowledgeable enough to demote or fire central office personnel? Some state personnel have probably left Floyd County believing that the failures are simply indicators of a lack of knowledge or competency on the part of school personnel. People from the county would argue instead that KDE has, at times, either consciously or unwittingly, become the instrument by which ambitious superintendents or central office staff have profited financially or advanced their own power. In other words, people from the school system are not dumb. They simply have worked the situation to their advantage.

The only group that has truly suffered has been the children. The cost of the previous reorganizations has been enormous in terms of our ability to provide quality instruction and adequate learning facilities for our children. As a result of actions, either properly conceived or implemented, we find ourselves, as a board, having to tell teachers, parents, and students at schools such as Stumbo Elementary on Mud Creek that we're sorry but that we don't have money to supply them with adequate lighting or heating/cooling for their classrooms.

As a board member, I took an oath to serve the children and adults of my community. It is an oath that I take seriously and one that I try to carry out by considering all of the facts carefully. I find myself, however, in a position now where I am unable to do that, because not all of the facts are available to me. They are hidden to me. In addition, I don't feel that I have been given the time to consider all the facts, even if they had been available to me.

I am asking you to investigate the situation in Floyd County to determine (1) if anyone involved in this reorganization will benefit improperly, either financially or politically; (2) if laws were broken and individuals were promised jobs before the board approved the plan; and (3) if those people in a position to give the final approval for this plan (the superintendent, board of education and state manager) have acted in the best interest of the children of the county. I look forward to hearing from you. Thank you.

Pastor responds to letter about Presbyterian Church

Editor:

Concerning a recent letter to the editor about the Presbyterian Church (USA), two points of information, from the Book of Order of the Presbyterian Church (USA), which is Part Two of the Constitution of the Presbyterian Church (USA).

G-6.0106.b reads, "Those who are called to office in the church are to lead a life in obedience to Scripture and in conformity to the historic confessional standards of the church. Among those standards is the requirement to live either in fidelity within the covenant of marriage between a man and a woman (W-4.9001), or chastity in singleness. Persons refusing to repent of any sin or any self-acknowledged practice which the confessions call sin shall not be ordained and/or installed as deacons, elders or ministers of the Word and Sacrament."

W-4.9001 reads, "Marriage is a gift God has given to all humankind for the well-being of the entire human family. Marriage is a civil contract between a woman and a man. For Christians marriage is a covenant through which a man and a woman are called to live out together before God their lives of discipleship. In a service of Christian marriage a lifelong commitment is made by a woman and a man to each other, publicly witnessed and acknowledged by the community of faith."

Our church was founded on December 31, 1899. Last year we celebrated 100 years of ministry in this community. This past Sunday, June 4, we held our annual Homecoming celebration, celebrating our past, our first year in our second century, and our future serving Christ in this place. We invite everyone to join us for worship this or any Sunday morning at 11 a.m. as we rejoice in the boundless love and amazing grace of our God who knows all that there is to know about us and loves us anyway.

Celebrate life,

Kentucky unemployment rate drops to 3.7 percent in April

FRANKFORT — Kentucky's unemployment rate fell to 3.7 percent in April as more than 13,700 people were added to the state's employment.

Kentucky's April jobless rate was below the four percent recorded for March 2000 and below the 4.4 percent rate reported for April 1999, according to the Department for Workforce Development agency.

The U.S. jobless rate in April decreased to 3.7 percent from 4.3 percent in March.

"Kentucky's 3.7 percent unemployment rate for April 2000 is the lowest recorded for any April since 1973 when the jobless rate was 3.5 percent," said Carlos Cracraft, the department's chief labor market analyst.

Five of the nine major job sectors had employment increases in April, while three reported employment losses and one stayed the same, Cracraft said.

Kentucky's job growth in April was led by the services sector. As several services industries started preparation for summer employment, 9,400 jobs were added to the sector. Amusement and recreation added 3,400 positions, agricultural services went up by 1,300 jobs, and hotels and other lodging places increased by 400 jobs due to warmer weather, said Cracraft.

In addition, a gain of 1,700 jobs was reported in business services, 1,100 in social services and 300 in health services. The services category is the state's largest job sector. In the past 12 months, it posted the highest job growth of any sector in Kentucky as 16,500 more jobs were added.

The trade sector showed the second highest employment gain in April as 6,300 jobs were added. Retail trade accounted for most of the increase with 5,800 more jobs in areas such as eating and drinking establishments (3,000), building materials and garden supply dealers (1,100), department stores (600) and miscellaneous retail stores (600).

The third highest gain in jobs for April was in construction where 4,500 positions were added. More than half of the new jobs was in special trade categories such as concrete work, electrical work, and installation of drywall, insulation and roofing. Heavy equipment contractors had 1,500 more jobs in April and general building contractors, which includes residential builders recorded an additional 600 jobs.

The transportation, communications and public utilities sector rose by 1,400 positions in April. Most of the growth was in the transportation area as 1,200 jobs were added in transportation by air, and trucking and warehousing increased by 700 positions. Finance, insurance and real estate had a 400-job increase in April.

The mining and quarrying category had 21,000 positions in March and April.

On the other hand, agriculture had the largest decline in jobs with 1,900 fewer positions in April. Cracraft said agricultural jobs would increase significantly during warmer months.

The manufacturing sector reported a loss of 800 positions in April.

A decrease of 400 positions occurred in electronic equipment, 200 in primary metal products, 200 in transportation equipment, 200 in chemicals and allied products was partly offset gains in areas such as fabricated metal (300), and lumber and furniture (200). Overall, manufacturing was up 1,500 from last April.

The government sector declined by 500 jobs in April. While state government increased by 500 positions, state education rose by 700 jobs and local government went up by 300 positions in April, the federal government had a loss of 1,500 positions, and local education fell by 500 jobs.

The U.S. Bureau of Labor Statistics monthly estimate of the number of employed Kentuckians for April 2000 was 1,900,230. This figure is up 13,709 from the 1,886,521 employed in March 2000, and up 32,975 from the 1,867,255 Kentuckians employed in April 1999.

The monthly estimate of the number of unemployed Kentuckians for April was 72,609. This figure is down 6,525 from the 79,134 unemployed in March 2000 and down 14,237 from the 86,846 Kentuckians unemployed in April 1999.

The monthly estimate of the number of Kentuckians in the civilian labor force for April was 1,972,839. This figure is up 7,184 from the 1,965,655 recorded in March 2000, and up 18,738 from the 1,954,101 recorded for April 1999.

The civilian labor force includes non-military workers and unemployed Kentuckians who are actively seeking work. It does not include unemployed Kentuckians who have not looked for employment within the past four weeks.

Employment and unemployment statistics are based on estimates. They are compiled to indicate employment trends rather than actually to count numbers of people who are or are not working.

BY EXTENSION

Purchasing an extension cord for your home workshop may seem like a simple matter, but there are some important factors to consider. The most important of these are wire diameter and cord length. Generally speaking, a wire with a small diameter cannot carry as much power as one with a higher diameter. The largest diameter has the smallest American Wire Gauge (AWG) number. And, most job-site extension cords have wire ranging in size from 10 to 18 AWG, which is stamped on the cord's insulation jacket. Next, an extension cord that is too long creates a type of resistance known as voltage drop, which increases as the cord gets longer. To avoid voltage drop, select the shortest possible cord.

Using the wrong size of extension cord can be dangerous. Do-it-yourselfers know that here at HINDMAN PROMART they can depend on finding all the equipment, tools, and supplies they need to properly complete just about any project. Come on into our store where you will find our staff very helpful and always eager to answer your questions. We're nearby at #1 Pro St., Hindman (785-3151). We carry Peachtree doors and windows. Most major credit cards accepted. We also rent power tools and shampoos.

HINT: In most cases, the total number of amps being drawn through an extension cord should be limited to 15 amps or less.

Birth certificates needed to register children for school, activities

FRANKFORT — Parents who will need a birth certificate for their child are being encouraged to start now and beat the rush later this year.

And if you act by July 14, you'll save $1. That's when the fee for birth certificates goes from $9 to $10. Legislation was approved adding $1 to the fee to provide prescribed items to uninsured children with inherited metabolic disease.

Summer is the busiest time of the year for birth certificate requests, so it can take longer than usual to get one, said Sandra Davis, vital statistics registrar for the Department for Public Health.

While getting a birth certificate in person is the quickest way, you can also order one by mail or telephone, and you can access information and print the application through the Department for Public Health's home page: <http://publichealth.state.ky.us/vital.htm> on the Internet.

"Demand for birth certificates increases during the summer because of travel, pre-registration of children for school and summer activities such as athletic leagues. People can expect a 30-day wait for birth certificates requested by mail," Davis said.

Davis encourages Kentuckians to have a copy of their birth certificate on hand in case they need it. In addition to summer activities, birth certificates are required for getting a driving permit, a Social Security card, obtaining some types of employment, preparing for retirement and enrolling in some pension plans.

The Department for Public Health files birth certificates only for people born in Kentucky. People who live in Kentucky but were born in another state should contact the vital statistics registrar in that state for their birth certificate.

To get a certified copy of a birth certificate, complete and mail an application, available at local health departments, or write to the Vital Statistics Office, Cabinet for Health Services, 275 E. Main St. 1E-A, Frankfort, KY 40621. Include a check or money order for the correct amount payable to the Kentucky State Treasurer for the number of copies ordered.

Certificates can be requested without an application by providing the following information: full name as it would appear on the certificate, mother's maiden name, date of birth and county of birth.

To order by telephone, it must be charged to the caller's Visa, MasterCard, Discover or American Express account. Telephone orders cost an extra $5. To order by telephone, call 502/564-4212 and dial "0" for an operator.

To request a copy in person, go to the Vital Statistics Office in Frankfort at 275 E. Main St., first floor. The office is open 8 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. The wait is usually about an hour and customers must place their request prior to 3:30 p.m. to receive same day service.

Up in smoke

The truth about tar and nicotine ratings

Why do some smokers choose "low tar" and "light" cigarettes? Because they think these cigarettes may be less harmful to their health than regular cigarettes.

The Federal Trade Commission wants you to know that cigarette tar and nicotine ratings can't predict the amount of tar and nicotine you get from any particular cigarette. That's because how you smoke a cigarette can significantly affect the amount of tar, nicotine and carbon monoxide you get from your cigarette.

Research indicates that many smokers of "low tar" or "light" cigarettes compensate by taking deeper, longer, or more frequent puffs from their cigarettes. The amount of tar and nicotine a smoker actually gets also can increase if the smoker unintentionally blocks tiny ventilation holes in cigarette filters that are designed to dilute smoke with air.

When it comes to "low tar" and "light" cigarettes, the FTC wants you to know:

- The tar and nicotine numbers used in advertising and on packaging are determined using a smoking machine — a smoking "robot" so to speak — that smokes every brand of cigarette exactly the same way.

- The numbers do not represent the amount of tar and nicotine a particular smoker may get. First, people don't smoke cigarettes the same way the machine does; second, no two people smoke the same way.

- Many lower tar cigarettes have filters with very small vent holes in the sides that allow air to dilute the smoke in each puff. It's easy for smokers to cover the holes unknowingly; that results in them getting more tar and nicotine.

- It's impossible to tell from the ratings the amount of tar and nicotine a smoker will get from any cigarette. Smokers of lower nicotine cigarettes tend to compensate for the lower nicotine by taking deeper and more frequent puffs than they would from a regular cigarette.

- The amount of tar and nicotine smokers actually get depends on how deep and how often they puff on the cigarette and whether they block the vent holes.

- Smoking "low tar" or "light" cigarettes does not eliminate the health risks of smoking. If you're concerned about the health risks of smoking, stop smoking.

The amount of tar and nicotine you get from your cigarette depends on how you smoke your cigarette. For more information, call the FTC toll-free, 1-877-FTC-HELP (382-4357) or visit www.ftc.gov for the Commission's 1997 Annual Report on Cigarette Advertising.

Why is it important to have safe communities?

by Lenny Cieslak

Can you remember when people left their doors unlocked at night and could leave the keys in the ignition of the family car without concern? Remember when churches left the light on and doors open as a refuge and shelter for pilgrims 24 hours a day. Times have certainly changed, and we need to discuss the importance of having safe communities once again.

Movie producers like to depict eastern Kentucky and our culture as a variation of the third world, a comical place inhabited by people called "Granny," "Ellie," "Jethro" and "Jed".

This depiction may make for good press and TV, but the reality is that we are a blessed people in many ways. We value families, children, and the elderly. The passing of a loved one is still mourned for three days in most of our communities. Our children are recognized and watched out for by friends, neighbors, and relatives.

This is not to say we are static or satisfied with the status quo, as there is always room for a continuing effort to improve and create.

Safe communities promote life-long healthy lifestyles, from covering prenatal babies to care for our elderly. At what point of life is attainment of peak health not important? The answer is that health is important during one's whole life.

If it is neglected at any point, one's quality of life deteriorates quickly at that point. With the interconnectedness of our lives, we all pay individually and as a community when health conditions decline.

A clean environment is as important to wildlife as it is to us. With the hustle and bustle of daily life, we often fail to realize that the condition of our forests and streams directly affect our health and lives. We are tied, like the wildlife around us, to our natural resources and the water we drink. Our quality of life is dependent on this. Depletion, mismanagement and neglect of resources is similar to fouling a nest.

Our homes and livelihood depend on the quality of our environment. Misuse or destruction effects our families and children for years in the future.

Safety, or 'thinking safe,' is consciousness of safe practices and using them as one goes about daily activities. Safety is more than an attitude. A safe community incorporates safety as a lifestyle, at work, home, play, or while participating in community events.

To feel safe, we must come to think safety. We need to define a mission and goals for what being safe at home and in our communities can provide.

People in a safe community should experience a measurable reduction in all types of personal injury, property damage, and resulting accident statistics. They should see an increase in awareness plus a change in attitudes toward health, safety and loss-control. It embodies the element of trust in our neighbors to do what is right for themselves and the community.

We pride ourselves in eastern Kentucky for our expression of personal freedom. Yet, many of the things we have done as a child, and gave little thought to, are now likely to get us arrested.

The past several decades have seen many laws passed "for our safety." Is not it strange that many people do not feel safer, in spite of these laws?

That which is lacking is trust in others (public servants, neighbors and police) to do what is in the best interests of the people. These laws create a multitude of legalities and obstacles to community that affect our daily lives.

I can remember when retired people routinely sat in the hall of the courthouse whittling cedar with knives sharp enough to shave with. Many sat there right outside the courtroom while hearings were held. Now a little pocketknife used to cut an apple for lunch is confiscated at a place where video cameras, magnetic detectors and deputies guard the door.

Our courthouses have turned into massive buildings full of security devices protecting public servants from the people they serve. Trust in our institutions is essential to have a safe community yet something has been lost on the road to OZ.

There is a perception that nothing is or will be done until pressure is applied on "the system" to force action. Our institutions are definitely suffering in our search for safety.

A "safety net" must be in place to enable people to get back on their feet. Security and individual freedom are always a trade off. Individual freedom should be linked to like-minded goals for community safety. It is a fact that the success of individual freedom may also allow some to fail.

When families in our community are hungry, there must be a system to care for and feed them. People must trust that the system will work for them when needed. That system should foster respect for human dignity, property, independence, and stability.

Individuals should feel safe in the knowledge that they and their family will not go hungry and destitute if they 'fail' in the eyes of their peers. We must remember that mutual concern is the basis of trust in a life style of freedom.

Children are our future and need to grow and develop without fear. Reducing "fear" requires more than government mandates, confiscation or outlawing everything that is deemed "dangerous." Such action leads to fear that our government is heavy-handed in enforcement of laws.

Feeling safe entails trust. Trust that others are positively interested in children's lives frees them to concentrate on building a strong self-image. Children learn to trust others and feel safe through learning and playing safely in their community. A safe community is a vibrant and productive place in which to live and raise a family. It is a fun and safe place for children who are free of fear.

Safe communities are places that provide meaningful employment and an enjoyable lifestyle. On-the-job injuries decrease when a community is safe. Research reveals safety at work directly results in fewer injuries while off the job. Any injuries on or off the job result in lost hours at work and increased health care costs.

Disability compensation and insurance costs are a major consideration for businesses in picking a start up site. People with disabilities also extract social costs from their families and communities.

A sense of community care (self and others) encourages citizen participation through peer acceptance of responsibility and through resulting volunteer groups. Safe communities encourage people to provide representation on issues that involve protection from life's daily dangers. With buy-in, people do things because they are felt to be "right and proper," and not necessarily because they are pressured to do them.

How many people would dispose trash improperly if they understood it was adversely affecting a loved one or endangering the water supply? Clean streams are the prime source of the water we drink and play in. Understanding of the environmental "big picture" enables a community to share the positive benefits of reducing injuries, loss, and environmental problems. Learning to care for our environment is an adventure based on an understanding of what is needed to maintain our quality of life.

What can we do to sell the concept of a safe community?

• Have safety "fairs" to educate and enhance public awareness, enlightening the public on safe lifestyles.

• Initiate safety displays and lectures in our schools. Community partners, such as law enforcement, Department for Protection and Permanency, health department, and fire department, could present the safety programs on a rotating and seasonal basis.

• Fire departments can encourage residents to conduct fire drills, to do safety walks around homes and neighborhoods and to develop exit plans, should there be a fire.

• The health department, local hospitals and drug stores can initiate an annual disposal of outdated and unused medicine.

• Law enforcement could give presentations on their duties/priorities when protecting the communities and enlist help in maintaining safety.

• Law enforcement could provide presentations on how to maintain personal safety and victim prevention.

• Auto service stations/parts outlets can publicize oil collection sites and explain the value of auto maintenance in keeping our environment safe and clean.

• The parks and conservation districts could increase public awareness of proper use of public lands and facilities through the press and schools.

• The public media (radio, TV, and newspapers) can distribute safety tips from the various groups involved all year round.

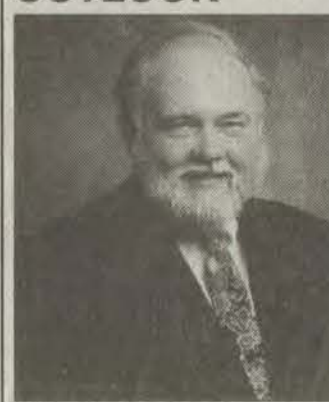

The bottom line is that everybody is responsible for creating and maintaining a safe community. Thinking safety for our communities leads to a life-style of safety that we all can enjoy.

CHIROPRACTIC OUTLOOK

TRAUMATIC AUTOMOBILE ACCIDENTS

A car accident that causes head or neck injuries can be so traumatic that a person loses his or her memory or ability to concentrate for a short time after the incident. Pain causes mental foginess, and the drugs taken to relieve this pain can add to the problem. Insomnia is another result of an accident. Many times, people cannot sleep soundly. This lack of sleep again reduces concentration and problem-solving ability. If you are in an accident, ask your chiropractor to recommend some ways to improve your sleep such as biofeedback and relaxation techniques, as well as sleeping in the right position and with the right mattress and pillow.

Your chiropractor can also help with whiplash pain. Through adjustments, chiropractors restore proper function to the joints. They also reset the neurological circuitry of the surrounding tissues. In turn, this allows the joints and tissues to respond and have a speedy recovery.

KDA's farm and home safety plan reprinted

The Kentucky Department of Agriculture has made a second printing of its new Farm and Home Safety Plan in response to public demand.

The 16-page planner, developed in conjunction with state fire and rescue personnel, gives families the tools to establish a personalized plan for situations when emergency help may be needed. The plan touches on topics such as equipment operation and maintenance, chemical storage and containment, and medical histories of family members and employees.

Kentucky Agriculture Commissioner Billy Ray Smith has made farm and home safety a priority of his administration. Commissioner Smith hired a farm safety field officer and, with funding from the General Assembly and Gov. Paul Patton, made available grants of up to $1,000 for each county to set up a farm and home safety program.

"Farm and home accidents can result in loss of income or even loss of life," Commissioner Smith said.

"This plan will provide one more opportunity for farmers and their families to think about safety during this busy season."

The number of deaths on Kentucky farms has decreased from 48 in 1995 to 18 in 1999.

The publication can be obtained by contacting the Kentucky Department of Agriculture at 502/564-4696. It also is available online to all Kentuckians through the Department's Web site at www.kyagr.com.

Governor chosen as ARC states co-chair

Kentucky Gov. Paul Patton has been chosen by his fellow governors of Appalachian states to serve as States Co-Chairman of the Appalachian Regional Commission (ARC) for calendar year 2001.

The governor will succeed Gov. Cecil Underwood of West Virginia, who is serving his second consecutive year as ARC States Co-Chairman.

"I'm truly honored to be selected for this position by my colleagues," Patton said. "I've worked closely with Gov. Underwood and the other Appalachian governors during my time in office, and will continue in our efforts to focus greater attention and resources on distressed counties in Appalachia. This is an important time for us to help those regions that need it most, and to promote a positive image of Appalachia."

When the governor assumes his new post in January, he will speak for the 13 governors of Appalachian states on regional issues and will co-chair ARC meetings, including ARC's annual meeting of Appalachian governors in Washington, D.C.

This meeting will be the governor's first active appearance as co-chair and is slated to take place in February.

During his administration, Gov. Patton, a native of eastern Kentucky, has focused considerable energy on raising the standard of living and creating new economic opportunity throughout the eastern Kentucky region.

In 1996, he reorganized the Kentucky Appalachian Commission, making it accountable to the Governor's Office, and charged the body with examining issues affecting eastern Kentucky and promoting progress in the region.

Among his many other efforts on behalf of the region, in 1999 the governor announced a new push to bring economic development to eastern Kentucky, naming the New Appalachian Action Team and Jerry Johnson as Special Assistant to the Governors Office of New Appalachian Development.

Established by Congress in 1965, the ARC is a unique federal-state partnership composed of governors of the 13 Appalachian states and a presidential appointee representing the federal government. Appointed by President Bill Clinton in February 1994, Dr. Jesse L. White Jr. serves as ARC's Federal Co-Chairman in Washington.

The Commission is dedicated to providing opportunities for economic development and improved quality of life in the Appalachian states and oversees a budget of $466 million.

The Appalachian region includes 406 counties in Kentucky, Alabama, Georgia, Maryland, Mississippi, New York, North Carolina, Ohio, Pennsylvania, South Carolina, Tennessee, Virginia and West Virginia.

Grassroots participation is provided through 71 local development districts, multi-county organizations with boards made up of elected officials, business people and other leaders.

Local women get help with housing

by Susan Jones
Rural Development

In 1960 Hope Whitten moved into her home at 15 Webb Lane in Prestonsburg, a house that was big enough to accommodate her and her husband and four children; a house with nine rooms and three bathrooms.

Whitten felt that this was the last move she would make in her lifetime. This was home.

Whitten found out 40 years later that she was going to have to move. When officials at Prestonsburg High School decided to expand the campus, Whitten and her daughter, Janet Whitten, had to make some hard and fast decisions: where to move to; whether to buy or rent; whether to build or to buy manufactured housing.

This was not an easy decision for the 81-year-old mother and her 61-year-old daughter.

While the Whittens were trying to decide the best route for them to take, the school board threatened to condemn their property. The Whittens decided it was in their best interest to sell and relocate.

They had to relocate themselves not only physically, but also mentally. After all, they were leaving 40 years of memories.

Janet stated, "This is the only house the grandchildren know. We are all going to miss the memories, especially memories of Dad, who has been gone since 1989."

Questions kept coming to mind as to where to start and what to do next. Janet knew about a vacant lot on the other side of town, but it wasn't for sale. She approached the owner and later worked out a deal on purchasing the lot.

Hope and Janet had also talked to Rick Wright of Central Mortgage Co. concerning financing. According to Janet, Wright went that extra mile to help them. He originated a loan for the Whittens through Kentucky Housing Corporation, guaranteed by USDA Rural Development.

Janet is retired from the Prestonsburg City's Utilities Commission. Hope is retired from old Ben Franklin department store.

Now with a lot they can buy and with the financing in place, it was time to look for a home. The Whittens had decided, due to time constraints, that their best option was to look at manufactured housing.

Hope told Janet as she went out looking, "You come back with something or don't come back!" Janet realized that her mother meant business.

Her first stop was at Hylton Homes in Ivel. Morris Hylton showed Janet several units and discussed options with her. "I kept going back to the first unit I looked at. I fell in love with it and nothing that I looked at afterwards compared to it," Janet said.

Hylton stated that this is not unusual. "Most people fall in love with the first home they look at."

The only problem the Whittens face now is how to get all their furniture into their new home; especially the piano from the second floor of their old home.

Janet says that she will miss her old bedroom the most. "However,

I won't miss climbing those stairs every day," she laughs.

Both say they will miss the young neighborhood boys who mow their yard and carry their groceries. "I hope they come and visit us, because I sure will miss them. We just honk the horn and they come running to carry our groceries into the house," Janet said.

"I'm looking forward to moving into this modern, three-bedroom, two-bath home. The upkeep will be easier and the utilities will be cheaper than our old home," Hope commented. "We are grateful to Rick Wright at Central Mortgage and to Morris Hylton of Hylton Homes for helping us relocate our lives."

USDA Rural Development guarantees loans to lenders such as Central Mortgage and Kentucky Housing Corp. Loans are 100 percent, with zero down payment and low interest rates.

Jim Baker of Central Mortgage said, "This program helps people to become homeowners. The staff at Rural Development is truly dedicated to helping moderate income households."

"I enjoy helping people like 'Mother' Whitten," Wright said.

National Homeownership Week is June 3-June 10. This year's theme is "Making the American Dream a Reality in the 21st Century." Homeownership Week is a period to celebrate partnership successes and the benefits of homeownership. Partnerships such as the one mentioned in this story with USDA Rural Development, Kentucky Housing Corporation and Central Mortgage.

Crum deployed to Middle East

Navy Seaman Scottie W. Crum, son of Rosalee and Dallas G. Click of Martin, recently departed on a six-month deployment to the Adriatic and Mediterranean seas and the Arabian Gulf while assigned to the destroyer USS Arthur W. Radford, home ported in Norfolk, Virginia.

As part of the Middle East Force, Crum's ship will participate in maritime interdiction operations to enforce U.N. sanctions restricting trade with Iraq. USS Arthur W. Radford will inspect vessels suspected of transporting contraband cargo in and out of Iraq.

Destroyers like USS Arthur W. Radford have traditionally been the workhorses of the U.S. Navy, defending battle groups against threats from land, air, on and below the sea.

Equipped with Tomahawk cruise missiles, Harpoon anti-ship missiles and Sea Sparrow missiles, USS Arthur W. Radford is capable of hitting enemy targets hundreds of miles away.

In addition, Crum's ship carries two helicopters with sonar and torpedo capabilities, expanding the ship's reach.

Crum, a 1985 graduate of Allen Central High School, joined the Navy in May 1999.

Survey finds people will pay big bucks for summer vacations

The average summer vacation will cost $2,274, according to a telephone survey sponsored by Myvesta.org., formerly Debt Counselors of America. Of the 1,000 people surveyed, 55 percent said they planned to take a vacation this summer.

"Based on the average take home pay of $27,219, a person will have to work more than a month, or 22 working days, to pay off their summer vacation," said Mike Kidwell, vice president and co-founder of Myvesta.org, a non-profit financial solutions organization. "Spending $2,274 means that the average person will use more than 8 percent of their annual income on vacation."

"It's no wonder that almost three-fourths of vacationers will use a credit card to pay for their trip," Kidwell said. The survey found that 73 percent of respondents will use a credit card to pay for their summer holiday.

"Credit cards have pros and cons," Kidwell said. "They offer tremendous convenience and protection for travelers, but people tend to overspend when they use a credit card."

Of the vacationers using their credit cards, 56.7 percent plan to pay their balance off in full when the bill arrives. "For many people that's wishful thinking," Kidwell said. "Too often people pay just the minimum payment not realizing how much the interest will add to the total cost of a vacation."

Based on today's average interest rate of 17.99 percent, paying just the minimum payment extends the credit card payments, for this year's vacation alone, to 34 years and adds $5,974 in interest. The two percent monthly minimum payment starts at $45.48.

By bumping up the monthly payment to $208 and keeping it there, the debt would be paid off in 12 months with a total interest cost of only $227. Thirty-five percent of those surveyed said they pay off their vacation bills in 12 months or less.

To help everyone save money on vacations, Myvesta.org has created a free publication called "How to Come Back From Vacation With Money in Your Pocket."

The free, five-page publication, which includes cost-cutting ideas, can be downloaded from Myvesta.org.

Other vacations survey findings:

- Twenty-five percent of vacationers do not plan to use a credit card to pay for their vacations.

- Younger people will spend more and take longer to pay off their vacations. For example, 18-to-24-year-olds will spend an average of $1,964, while 55-to-64-year-olds will spend $1,668. More than 20 percent of 18-to-24-year olds will take between six and 12 months to pay off the debt, while only 11.5 percent of 55-to-64-year-olds will take that amount of time.

- People living in the West will spend an average of $2,327, slightly more than other regions of the country. (South—$2,320; Midwest—$2,237; Northeast—$2,165)

- Households without children will spend about $500 more on their vacations than those with children. (Households without children plan to spend $2,517, while households with children will spend $1,995).

"Sometimes we all just need to get away for a vacation," Kidwell added. "But vacations can be expensive, and the last thing you want is to come home to a big credit card bill."

Cleaning up at JWT

On June 1, with the staff quietly working, preparing for the summer season, three white vans suddenly appeared at Jenny Wiley Theatre. They parked in front of the theatre and out came 35 young men who descended upon the dirt and mess at the theatre like a school of hungry piranhas who haven't eaten for a week. The young men, who accomplished the cleanup around the theatre, were students from the Kentucky Youth Academy in Pike County. "It is wonderful to see young adults interested in the lives of other people," said JWT Managing Director Marty Childers. "This organization lets young kids know that they are worth a great deal to society and the world can be a better place because of them. We are forever grateful to the students and counselors of the Kentucky Youth Academy."

Grant money available

Funds are available from PRIDE to fund environmental education grants of up to $5,000, and applications are being accepted.

More than three years ago, PRIDE — Personal Responsibility in a Desirable Environment — enacted a plan to clean up southern and eastern Kentucky.

PRIDE offers these grants to educators and non-profit organizations interested in the promotion of environmental education. To date, more than $500,000 have funded about 120 PRIDE Environmental Education Grants.

The grants have been used for the construction of 74 outdoor classrooms, the implementation of 13 recycling projects, the purchase of equipment for classrooms and various other projects at schools throughout the 40-county PRIDE region.

"Grants of this size will make a significant difference in improving environmental literacy in our young people and help to prepare them to make wise decisions about their environment," said Jean Dorton, PRIDE Education Committee chair.

"The committee is anticipating a great response and looking forward to seeing many creative projects being submitted."

For a copy of the grant application, contact Cathy Hall at the PRIDE office, 1-888-577-4339.

PRIDE was started by Fifth District Congressman Hal Rogers and Kentucky Natural Resources Secretary James Bickford in an effort to provide governmental resources to local citizens as they work to clean up the environment in the region.

Rogers emphasizes that a crucial key to solving pollution problems in the rural PRIDE region is education.

Funding for the program is provided by a grant to PRIDE from the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration.

Mayo Moments

by Linda Lyon

Mayo Technical College is open during the summer if you want to take a look at the campus. You may call for an appointment, but it is not necessary. Just drop by.

Browse through the website at www.mayotech.org. For photos and information about the campuses click on the "school information" link. You will find many things there that will be of interest to you, the prospective student, or other interested person.

Campuses are located at 513 Third St. in Paintsville; 150 Industrial Park Road at Hager Hill; and 120 Riverfill Dr. in Pikeville.

Bobby McCool, Interim Director, just returned from a trip to Germany to explore training and apprenticeship programs. Along with nine delegates from Kentucky and delegates from Colorado and New Mexico, he had the opportunity to review the German structure of education and the Dual-System, Business-Based Apprenticeship Training.

By reviewing the German education system, the Americans will have a better understanding of the German people, their culture and how their education system is an interlocking component with business and industry.

The places visited on this trip were the city of Stuttgart, Heilbronn University of Applied Science; CD Cartondruck, where they reviewed apprenticeship training with medium-sized companies; the Chamber of Commerce at Freudenstadt, where they reviewed the role of the chamber and professional training; Hotel Training Center for Hotel and Restaurant Management, Heidelberg Hotel Management School, and International Bund Fur Sozialarbeit to look at training for disadvantaged young people.

"The trip was very informative, and we came back to Kentucky with a lot of new ideas which will be digested and used in the months to come," McCool said. "It helps to see other systems and other viewpoints. I look forward to incorporating what I learned into the planning for our programs."

Two staff members have received training in distributive wiring. Joe Compton, instructor at Pikeville, and Garry Senters, maintenance supervisor, recently participated in a distributive wiring training session in Lexington.

As networks become the main conduit for information exchange and retrieval as well as the newest delivery system for education, it is more and more important to have trained professionals handle the communication wiring in buildings.

News from Sue Garland,

Nursing Department Chair: The Paintsville Practical Nursing Graduating class of December 1999 had 100 percent NCLEX-PN pass rate (State Boards). Also, the Pikeville Nursing Class of 2000 had 100 percent passing on KVAT.

Two Mayo Technical College Students qualify for Bell South. Allen R. Williamson and David Johnson, two students from Jim Conley's electronics class, took the Bell South employment test. They passed both parts of the test and will be going to Louisville for further tests and maybe employment. A two-part test was given, General Qualifications and Basic Electricity. Of those testing, 41 percent qualified on both tests and are ready to make application to Bell South for the physical test and possible employment.

Mayo has two new employees at Pikeville. Daniel Lucas joins the staff as Network Administrator at Pikeville. Daniel, a native of Belfry and a graduate of Morehead State University, reports for duty June 12. His training and experience will make him a valuable addition to the Pikeville staff.

Lisa Johnson joins the Pikeville staff as Staff Associate I. She lives in the Pikeville area and worked at the Pikeville facility when it first opened as a temporary receptionist. She will provide clerical support.

True or False?

Take the contact lens and vision quiz

1) PUTTING CONTACTS IN MY EYES WILL HURT ME!

False. With nearly 75 million contact lens wearers on the planet, and 33 million in the US alone, there are plenty of people to confirm that contact lenses are comfortable to wear. Most first-time wearers, in fact, are delighted with the level of comfort that contact lenses provide. As long as a professional eyecare practitioner performs the initial contact lens fitting, any potential irritation associated with new lenses will be minimized or eliminated. After a brief adjustment period of as short as a few days to one week, most people report they can no longer feel contact lenses on their eyes.

2) TEENAGERS ARE NOT OLD ENOUGH FOR CONTACT LENSES

False. Many parents are surprised to learn that their teenager or child is indeed old enough for contacts. Dr. Barry Weiner, an optometrist in Maryland, is not only a CLC advisor, he is also the past chair of the American Optometric Association's contact lens section. Dr. Weiner has had many patients in their teens and early teens ask him about contact lenses: "How old is old enough?" Dr. Weiner's response? There are no hard and fast rules here — So much depends on the responsibility level of the young patient."

It is important for an eyecare professional to assess a young patient's vision correction needs and to discuss his or her capabilities and maturity level with both the patient and the parents when considering contacts. Personal wear and care regimens may depend upon the type of contact prescribed, the nature of the vision problem being corrected, and the patient's unique eye chemistry.

3) I CAN WEAR COLORED CONTACTS WITHOUT NEEDING VISION CORRECTION.

True. You do not have to have vision problems to wear colored contacts. Some people simply choose non-correcting colored lenses to change their eye color. It is essential, however, that contact lenses be professionally fitted and prescribed. Contact lenses are an FDA-regulated medical device.

4) SITTING TOO CLOSE TO THE TELEVISION WILL RUIN MY VISION.

False. Actually, many children sit too close to the television because they are already nearsighted, and the picture looks clearer up close. One in four children ages 5 to 12 has an undiagnosed vision problem that may affect their educational performance.

Unfortunately, children with vision problems often have no way of knowing that what they are seeing is different from what others see. It is up to the adults in their life to help children reach their potential by ensuring that they are free of vision problems.

All children should have their eyes examined at or before their fourth birthday. If there is a family history of misaligned eyes, childhood cataracts or a serious eye disease, children should have their eyes examined before age three. Vision problems often respond to treatment better during the growth and development of a child's visual system, so early detection could be the key to good vision.

5) CONTACT LENSES ARE THE BEST VISION CORRECTION CHOICE FOR MANY ATHLETES.

True. Sports enthusiasts are finding that contact lenses are more practical than glasses because they can offer improved depth perception and enhanced peripheral vision. Additionally, contact lenses won't steam up from perspiration and they don't smudge or get foggy if you go from cold to warm temperatures.

6) LASER SURGERY CANNOT CURE PRESBYOPIA.

True. Presbyopia is the loss of the ability to focus on close objects. A natural occurrence that starts around age ten and affects nearly everybody by the age of 40, presbyopia usually makes reading and close-up work more difficult. Presbyopia is an entirely natural and normal phenomenon, affecting almost 90 million people. Each year, an estimated four million more people become presbyopic, making this group the swiftest growing demographic segment requiring vision correction. While presbyopia is impossible to prevent and will not go away—our eyes will never learn to accommodate again—there are many simple and effective ways to deal with it.

Laser surgery, however, can do nothing to prevent or cure this condition. Most patients that have had laser surgery are likely to end up needing additional correction—such as contact lenses or glasses—later in life.

7) EYE EXAMS ARE ONLY FOR PEOPLE WHO ALREADY HAVE VISION CORRECTION.

False. Good vision is important for everyone. Routine eye exams can uncover conditions such as near-sightedness, far-sightedness, astigmatism, and eyestrain early on, allowing for fast treatment of most problems. Eye exams can also provide evidence of other serious, but hidden, medical conditions, including high blood pressure, diabetes, inflammations, infections and the hardening of arteries. Eye ailments have also been linked to learning disabilities that can be treated with vision correction.

There is no better time than now to start the habit of regular eye exams for you and your family. If you have not had an exam within the last two years, schedule one now. During your exam, your eyecare professional will help set a regular schedule for future exams tailored to your personal situation.

8) CONTACT LENSES MAY IMPROVE MY LOVE LIFE.

True. A recent poll conducted by Roper Research shows that 56 percent of contact lens wearers are more satisfied with their intimate relationships since they started wearing contacts. An even larger percentage — 61 percent — said that they thought wearing contact lenses instead of glasses "could increase their chances of good things happening to them." After all, who can forget the old line: "Boys don't make passes at girls who wear glasses!"

9) I WILL MISS OUT ON WEARING NEW FASHIONABLE SUNGLASSES IF I WEAR CONTACT LENSES.

False. Wearing contact lenses will actually give you greater fashion flexibility with new and trendy sunglasses, and allow you to save money, too! The contact lenses will correct your vision, so you can combine less-expensive non-prescription sunglasses for fashion appeal and UV-ray blockage.

10) BIFOCAL CONTACT LENSES ARE AVAILABLE TO REPLACE MY GRANNY GLASSES.

True. Bifocal lenses are readily available in a multitude of optical designs, including, segmented, simultaneous vision, and monovision, and are made in both soft and RGP lens materials. For more on bifocal lenses, see your eyecare professional, or visit our website www.contactlenscouncil.org.

The CLC is a non-profit organization serving as an educational resource on vision correction and is dedicated to promoting the safe use of contact lenses and lens care products. The CLC information line (1-800-884-4CLC) is a free service offering consumers the most up-to-date information on contact lenses and lens care products.

The American Optometric Association, Contact Lens Association of Ophthalmologists, and the Contact Lens Society of America are advisory members of the CLC. The CLC is sponsored by Alcon Laboratories, Allergan Optical, Bausch & Lomb, CIBA Vision, Cooper Vision, Vistakon, a division of Johnson & Johnson Vision Products Inc., and Wesley Jessen.

Blood donors needed

The need for blood is always critical during summer months. Vacations and factory shut downs cause many people to forget about donating and the need for blood. Also, warm weather means more outdoor activities and traveling, which leads to a greater number of accidents. Therefore, less blood is available while more blood is needed.

How can we fight this potentially dangerous situation? The solution begins with blood drives, like the one in Floyd County. Our Lady of the Way will sponsor the next county blood drive, Tuesday, June 20, from 11 a.m. to 3 p.m., at the front entrance of the hospital.

Donors are needed at this drive to help fight summer shortages and to help patients in central and eastern Kentucky hospitals. Anyone who is in general good health, is 17 years of age or older, and weighs at least 100 pounds is eligible to donate. Donating only takes a few minutes and can mean a lifetime to someone in need.

For information, contact Dawn Wheeler at 606/432-4979.

Water: Ten reasons to drink up

by JoAnn Prophet, MS, RD
American Institute for Cancer Research

Friends asking for nutrition advice are often surprised when my first recommendation is to drink more liquid. Water is an important nutrient and has a vital role in maintaining good health. Don't assume that you are drinking enough just because you are not thirsty. As we age, our sense of thirst diminishes, so we don't realize as easily when our body needs more fluids. Further, many older persons who suffer from arthritis and similar problems that make moving painful, deliberately decrease their fluid intake in order to reduce trips to the bathroom.

Water is essential to our body functions. It is a major component of blood and body fluids (saliva, digestive juices, intracellular fluids, and joint compounds), and key to the digestive process. Water moves food through our system and transports nutrients to various body locations. It is also critical to the body's waste system as it helps to filter and eliminate toxins and move waste materials through the intestines.

Experts have recommended 6-8 cups per day for years, but recent studies have raised this amount even further to 10 cups for women and 12 cups for men. All liquids count toward the 10 to 12 cup goal, but bear in mind that both caffeine and alcohol acts as diuretics and may actually increase normal fluid losses.

Ten good reasons to increase your fluid intake:

- Jump start your body: While your brain may respond to caffeine in the morning, water helps the rest of your body get moving. It starts by helping to relieve dry mouth and continues to work the magic of motion throughout your system.
- Avoid constipation: Something as simple as fluid plays a major role in preventing constipation. Not only does the liquid encourage bowel movement, but it also softens the stools.
- Help Nutrient Absorption: Water is the carrier that helps the body transport and absorb the nutrients in the food we eat. Water moves these nutrients through our cells and ensures that the nutrients are available when and where we need them.

• Make the medicine go down: Instructions for nearly all medications are to take with water. Pharmaceutical companies want their medicines to function in the most effective way possible.

• Moisturize your skin: Water is the single most important element for cellular integrity. Keep your skin in good shape from the inside out by getting plenty of water.

• Flush your system: Our kidney system is unique in its filtering capabilities and totally dependent upon water in order for it to work. Daily fluid intake is essential to its efficient operation, particularly because there is some decrease in function with age.

• Avoid muscle cramps: Although not the only element associated with muscle cramps, athletes have long recognized that even mild dehydration can produce cramps.

• Prevent kidney stones: Stone prevalence is documented as being higher in those persons with low urinary volume. "More fluids" is the first and foremost treatment when kidney stones occur.

• Avoid dehydration: An alarming number of hospitalizations of older persons include dehydration as part of the diagnosis. This can be avoided by monitoring your fluid intake. Both mental and physiological performance may be impaired with even mild-dehydration.

• Keep well: In addition to being critical to digestion, nutrient absorption, and waste removal, water is a major player in regulating body temperature and in maintaining electrolyte balance. New studies have also shown a possible correlation between low fluid intake and bladder, colon, breast, prostate, kidney, and testicle cancers.

Be sure to drink even more fluid whenever you increase your physical activity, when eating a high fiber diet, during hot weather, at high altitudes, in low humidity locations, and when you're sick, especially if you have a fever, vomiting, or diarrhea. Check your urine color. It should be pale, almost clear. A dark yellow means you need more fluids.

Start drinking water early in the day, and always drink water after going to the bathroom. Refresh yourself by adding a slice of lemon or lime, like they do at the spas. Or try sparkling water for a change!

Last Friday's events at the Riverside Raceway saw six competitive races and five winners at the go-kart race track in Dwale.

The first event, the heavy division, saw Steve Bailey's #00 finish in first place for the night. He was followed by Anthony Huff's #13 at second and Dwight Fuller's #24 for third.

Shawn Campbell's #29 got the checkered flag for the medium-class race. At his heels were Jason Setser's #44 at second and Scott Smith's #5 at third.

The lightweight division winner was #29 Shawn Campbell for his second win of the night. Following him across the finish line were Scott Smith's #5 for second place and Jimmy Lindsey's #68 finished third.

Greg Dawson's #3 led the pack for a first-place finish in the limited class. Accompanying him were Rex Combs' #1 at second and Kennis Burchett's #21 at third.

The Briggs class saw James Hale's #10 roar across the finish line. He was seconded by Nick Jarrel's #1.

And Justin Adkins' #99 took the trophy in the sportsman #1 division as he won the event. Placing second was Josh Bolen's #1 with Patrick Setser's #43 finishing third.

The next scheduled race night at the track is Friday, June 9.

Cats scratch out finishes at state track meet

Prestonsburg High School sent a pack of students to the University of Kentucky Shively Athletic Center in Lexington last week for the State Track and Field competition.

Out of the 15 region, the school had several student athletes advance from regional competition to the Commonwealth's highest competitive level. Prestonsburg High School sent 13 Blackcat track and field regional winners to compete against the best the state had to offer.

Preliminary events began Friday, with the finals on Saturday.

One Blackcat clawed his way to a fourth-place finish in the 400-meter dash. Austin Clark placed fifth in the semi-finals heat at a quick 53:01 seconds. He bettered that time by running a 52.87 seconds race for the state final, which placed Clark at an honorable fourth fastest in the state for the year.

Clark placed highest on the finishes for the statebound Blackcats, but the nervous teens still managed to finish better than last place in every event, said Dewey Jamerson.

With a throw of 98 feet, Chris Spriggs placed 14th in the discus competition. Matt Clay placed 17th in the pole vault event at eight feet. Long jumper Kevin Woods placed 15th as he bounded 17 feet, 6 inches in the long jump.

The 800-meter relay team of Chris Spriggs, Andrew Howell, Matt Slone and Kevin Jervis placed 13th with a time of 1:44.60. Prestonsburg also sent a 400-meter relay team, but they were disqualified when an early exchange was made at the first pass of the baton. The 400-meter team consisted of Austin Clark, Matt Clay, Kevin Woods and Kevin Jervis.

Martin Rangers beat Prestonsburg Reds

by RANDELL RENO
STAFF WRITER

Until Friday, the cross-district play between the Prestonsburg Little League and Martin's Little League had left nothing but the dust. Martin had dominated the play in every game save one. That pace continued as Friday night's results were in. Martin teams split the night 1-1.

The doubleheader night began with the Prestonsburg Reds playing host to the Martin Rangers in Archer Park. In the first inning, the game appeared to be in the Reds' control as pitcher Brooks Herrick tossed three strikeouts. The Rangers reached base once in the inning on an error by the first baseman.

Martin pitcher Alex Hammond allowed the first two Reds on base with walks. But the Reds failed to score as the next two batters were called out on strikes and a play at first ended the inning.

Martin's Evan Johnson jumped on a pitch by Herrick in the second, launching a triple into the outfield. He was the only runner to make it to base as the next three batters were fanned. Prestonsburg fared no better as they went down three out of four.

The Reds saw the 0-0 tie quickly evaporate as Martin put the first two batters on board. The bases were soon cleared as Ed Osborne stepped to the plate and launched a rocket across the fence in right center field. A fly out, a walk and two strikeouts got the Reds back into the dugout and ready to even the score.

Martin pitching allowed two walks in the top of the third as Michael Lackey and Sam Chaffin got aboard. Lackey pickpocketed his way all the way home on some aggressive base stealing. Chaffin made it to second but was soon back on the bench as Michael Stephens got to first on a short fly to right field with an RBI.

BOTH ROBINSON AND BENTLEY STOLE THEIR WAY HOME FOR THE RAYS' FIRST TWO RUNS.

■ Devil Rays vs. Rangers

Both the Devil Rays and the Rangers jumped on the scoreboard in the first inning last Thursday.

Rays lead-off hitter Billy Robinson went 3-for-3 for the day as he got the ball rolling for his team by singling on. He was followed to the base path by Kristen Bentley and Jody Tackett after they were walked by pitcher Seth Hackworth.

Both Robinson and Bentley stole their way home for the Rays' first two runs.

The Rangers scored their first four batters as three of four were walked. Starting pitcher Jody Tackett faced some control problems, walking six batters in the inaugural inning.

Six runs were scored by the Devil Rays with Jody Tackett scoring on an inside-the-park home run in the second. Although the inning began with a strikeout for the pitcher, his control had to be reeled in as the Rays sent nine batters to the plate. The final two batters were fanned.

Down just 4-2, the Rays regained their composure and took the Rangers out 3-of-4 in the second.

The Rays continued their winning ways as they entered the third with momentum. Batting around again, Dewey Meade led off with a walk but came home after Alex Shepherd tripled. Shepherd scored on a Timothy Marsillett triple. Walked batters, stolen bases, and singles by Billy Robinson and Travis Welch resulted in seven runs by the youngsters.

Behind 15-4, the Rangers put together a three-run inning bringing them closer to getting back in the game at the top of the third. Four bases on balls were given up, effectively loading the bases for the Rangers. The combination of walks and singles by Meagan Gobel and Steven Boatwright allowed three runners to cross the plate.

The Rays put two more runs on the board in the fourth setting the stage to invoke the mercy rule as they went ahead 17-7. The game ended when Rays struck three of the final four batters.

■ Devil Rays vs. Diamond Backs

Monday night action by the Prestonsburg Little League paired Devil Rays' pitcher Jody Tackett against Diamond Back hurler Justin Montgomery.

The three-and-a-half inning game was a nail-biter as the teams played a nip-and-tuck game. Rays starting shortstop Billy Robinson began the scoring for the Rays as he doubled in the first. Robinson stole his way to home plate as the Diamond Backs walked one more batter

Ed is away time to say

by RANDELL RENO
STAFF WRITER

As Ed is on vacation this week, I thought I'd poke my nose back into the world of sports to cover the goings on. For now Little League baseball is the only sport in action for the week.

Teams getting the exposure are the teams that are submitting scores. Those teams have been from the Prestonsburg Little League.

The games are rarely graced with Ed's presence because to get to them all he would have to be everywhere at once.

If you want your team in the paper please submit the score sheets to Ed or fax them to him at 886-3603.

Let the games begin. University of Kentucky standout Tayshaun Prince is a finalist for the 2000 USA Basketball World Championship for Young Men Qualifying Team. As one of 16 chosen from a group of 25, Prince must make one more cut during the July 10-17 training camp to make the under-20-year-old team of high school and college players.

Other standouts that survived the latest cut were Carlos Boozer and Mike Dunleavy of Duke, Steve Blake of Maryland, Kenny Saterfield of Cincinnati and Joe Johnson of Arkansas.

Tonya Harding, the death princess of ice skating, has recently struck again. According to a recent report Harding was arrested for attacking her newest boyfriend.

The Oscar-nominated tears at the Olympics and her other less than noble exploits seem to suggest Harding has missed her calling entirely. If she would research the possibilities, women like Chynna and Stephanie McMann may be in for a world of hurt. Thus far, Harding doesn't pull punches. She lives in the RWF, Real World Federation.

Thankfully Jerry Jones has finally seen the folly of hiring Deion Sanders. The "other worldly" safety/comerback/wide receiver/Christian was released by the Cowboys last week. Sanders spent most of last year on the injured list and was mostly ineffective when he did play thanks to his turf toe.

He is one of a long list of free agents seeking an exorbitant amount of money for playing a game.

Rumors around the camp say Dallas will be seeking a backup quarterback with the freed up $8 million relieved for the aging and oft sore Troy Aikman. Cowboys officials are flirting with Randall Cunningham, who was recently released and may yet be forced into retirement.

As a Laker fan, I was glad to see Los Angeles pull their noses out of the sky and play ball this week. Up by a 3-1 margin and coasting in most of those games, the proud peacocks of the NBA got a comeuppance thanks to a spirited team leader named Scotty Pippen, who rallied his team by showing his trophies (rings) to his teammates.

Herrick was walked to first. He stole his way to third and then tagged up to score as Zach Ousley fled out to left.

Martin allowed two more walks in the inning but combined a strikeout and a fly out to end the inning down 3-2.

The deficit was quickly erased as the next six batters for Martin scored. The scoring barrage began with an error at third, putting Ranger Stephen Slone aboard. An error by the center fielder allowed the second runner on and the bases were loaded when a third batter was walked.

Ed Osborne was credited for three RBIs as he smashed a triple to right field. Josh McKinney gained a RBI when he doubled to left. He scored on an error by the catcher. A double into right by Evan Johnson was the final base runner for Martin but he failed to get home as the next two batters were fanned and a grounder to first ended the inning.

With the score 9-3, Martin hurlers shored up their lead with Weird but true. Even though Mark Martin has been consistently in the NASCAR top 10 for the last few years and a contender for the Winston Cup title the last two, Valvoline has dropped its sponsorship.

The Kentucky based company decided that $6 million-plus was far too big a price for the advertising of about 40 races a year.

Martin, who almost always runs in the front of the pack, has provided the corporation with a lot of air time, putting the Valvoline name in millions of households for years.

Martin, who also drives for Team Winn-Dixie in the Busch Cup series, may soon see a change of colors on that car. Corporate rumors have Safe-Way, the nation's largest supermarket chain, possibly buying out Winn-Dixie.

 With summer coming soon, I hope that each of you will become more athletic in your daily lives. I was utterly amazed that I could be so out of shape but never realized how much until my son beat me soundly in a one-on-one game of basketball in March.

Since that astounding revelation I have religiously rode my bicycle throughout Prestonsburg. I have not become Michael Jordan but I can at least drive the basket more than once on my 11-year-old.

So, please for your own sake, plan to walk, ride a bike, go hiking, camping, or even swim as much as possible. You'll be amazed how different it will make you feel.

then closed the inning with a strikeout and a quick-thinking double play by left fielder D.J. Ousley.

Ousley, a minor league player standing in for absent players, caught a pop fly in shallow center and then threw out Rays' center fielder Kristen Bentley, who was attempting to go to third.

The Diamond Backs stepped to the plate scoring four runs in the first as Rays pitching allowed five walks. In a league where theft is not a crime but actively taught, the snakes scored five times by taking advantage of the bases on balls and tallying two singles.

The first three Rays batters were given first base to open the second but the team failed to get a hit. Dewey Meade was the only batter to score as he stole three bases after being walked.

The Diamond Backs put three more scores on the board after Whitney Caudill was walked, Cameron Tincher singled and Joseph Collins was walked. All three tagged home after taking free bases and the Rays walked two more batters.

Down 7-2 the Rays put together a scoring drive in the third. A walk and a single were followed by a one-out triple by Alex Shepherd, scoring two. Now 7-5, the rattlers walked five of the next six batters. A mix of stolen bases and free passes allowed the Rays to put four more runs on the scoreboard for the lead.

But the Backs managed to regain that lead in the bottom of the third, scoring three runs that began with two walks. The quick base runners needed just one single to allow Joseph Collins to cross the plate for the winning run.

The Rays fell one, three, four, with a walk in the fourth to fall 10-9 to the Diamond Backs.

superb throwing. Although the first of four batters walked, the next three went down in flames.

Martin continued its assault in the top of the fifth as Reds pitchers walked on two batters and Osborne gained RBIs six and seven for the night by sending one deep over the left center fence. Josh McKinney doubled on and then came home on a double to center by Brock Kidd. A groundout put Reds pitchers closer to closing the inning before Martin doubled on yet another base runner. A strikeout closed the inning with Martin ahead by a steep margin.

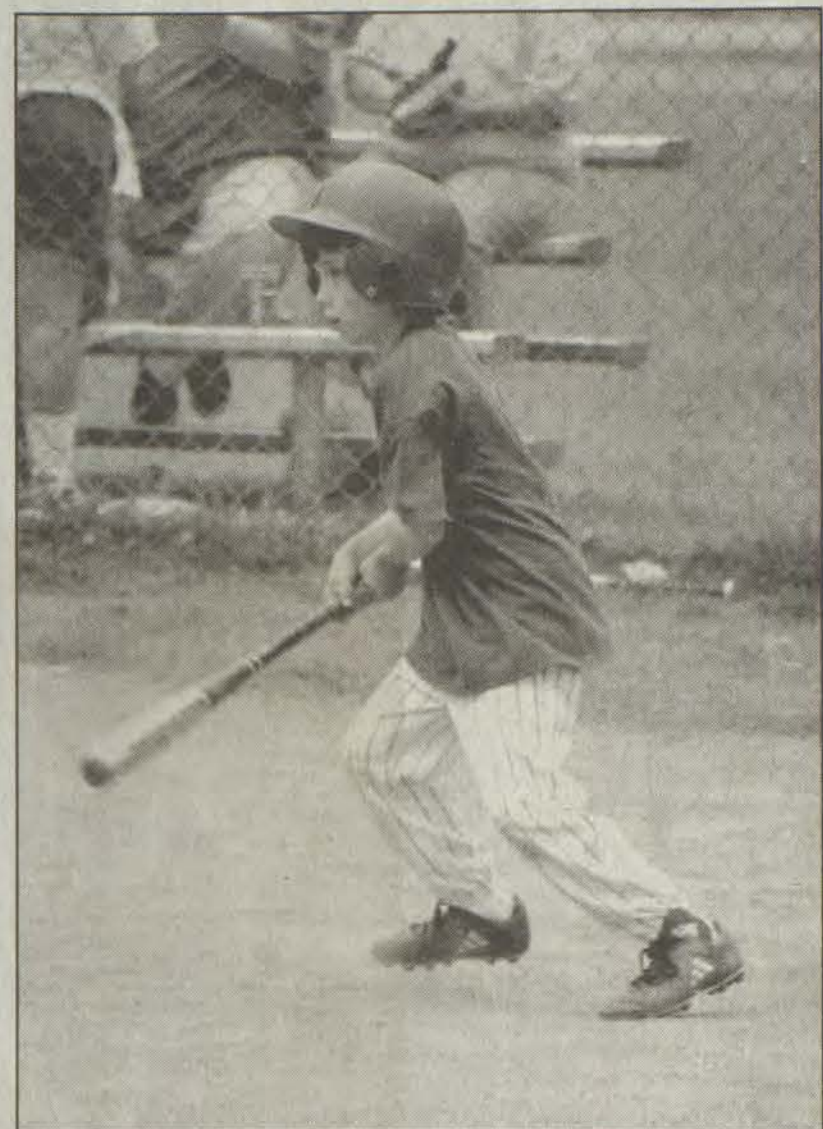

The Reds came to bat determined to get back into the game that now saw them nine runs down. But they could only erase one run as Zach Ousley was walked aboard and then made it home through a series of steals and a single to right by Chris Watkins.

The final inning was a replay of the previous three as Martin scored three more times, putting five runners on base. The Reds got back to dugout on a double play that ended the attack by the Rangers.

Michael Stephens and Zach Ousley both scored in the sixth for the beleaguered Reds but it was far too little to even the score.

The Rangers walked away with a resounding victory of 16-6 as they continued the Martin onslaught against Prestonsburg teams.

Brandon Conley of the Prestonsburg Minor League Rangers gained an RBI Monday night as he singled against the minor league Reds.

GRIFFEY AND HIS WALKS

Ken Griffey Jr. has not seen too many good pitches this year and all that has led him to lead the major in walks with 48 in the first two months of the season.

Griffey has been brooding over the pitches he is not seeing but all that is measuring out in walks. Doesn't a walk count anymore? Every now and then you can even get an RBI if the bases are loaded.

Griffey is batting a robust .212 at this time of writing. Not very good by any stretch of the imagination, but the center fielder is driving in runs with 38 already on the season.

How does the average fan feel about the walks Griffey has been getting of late? Well, if you were to ask them, especially those who turn the turnstiles because they are paying customers, they came to see Junior hit the long ball and not walk or whiff, which he also has done a measurable number of times this season.

When the announcement came officially that Griffey was coming to the Reds, the excitement in the Queen City was ecstatic. Not only there, but throughout Redsland. But even the front office and others are admitting that the honeymoon with Junior is about over and they want to see some production from the plate.

Griffey has been stuck on 14 home runs for awhile. He hasn't even been snipping the ball of late. In his last 44 at-bats, Griffey has collected four safeties with no home runs.

Reds manager Jack McKeon is still contending that Griffey will hit. Those could be his same words after the all-star game while doing an interview while he is cleaning out his desk at the Cinergy Field office.

Surprising in all of this is the fan vote for next month's all-star game. Griffey, with a meager .212 average, is leading all outfielders in the first released all-star ballots. Now tell me players make the elite team because of the type of season they are having. It has always been and will continue to be a popularity contest with the fans.

Experts, and some locally, say that Griffey will still hit 45 home runs and pick over 120 RBIs despite his anemic batting average.

Word has it that Junior has been putting in extra batting practice and for that he is to be commended. Dad Griffey has been working his all-star sibling and hopes to help get his swing to where he can concentrate on hitting line drives.

The American League teams will be coming to Cinergy Field next week and the National League team can use the Designated Hitter. Griffey could see some time on the bench defensively anyway, but not offensively.

We will have to wait until the end of the season to see if the multi millions the Reds agreed to pay Junior was a good one. But right now, sitting here, it looks like a bad deal for the Reds.

HOW SHOULD THE NEW REDS PARK SHAPE UP

There have been a lot of pros and cons concerning the stadium being built to house the Reds in the year 2003. Some are calling for a design that would bring a little of the nostalgia from the past to the stadium, some of a Crosley Field look. To get that, fans are asking for a terrace to be built in the outfield (remember that one).

While I was one of those who enjoyed the confines of old Crosley Field, yet if you are going to be a modern park then stay with it being a modern park. Looking at and reading about the park's layout, I like the openness the outfield will show.

Anything would beat the look of Enron Field in Houston.

NOTES...

• Reliever Scott Williamson leads the major leagues in wild pitches — 12.

• Four Reds players had 14 RBIs during the month of March: Dante Bichette, Aaron Boone, Griffey and Dmitri Young.

• Boone is closing in on Griffey for team leadership in home runs. Boone has yanked out 10 this season.

• Reds outfielder Alex Ochoa underwent appendix surgery last Wednesday.

Caudill collects three hits but D-backs fall

by ED TAYLOR
SPORTS EDITOR

Whitney Caudill collected three hits for the Prestonsburg Diamondbacks but her team felt the wrath of the Prestonsburg Rangers in the 9- and 10-year-old league at Archer Park in dropping a 13-5 decision.

The Rangers, who only had three hits in the game, scored six times in the third inning to put the game in the win column.

The Diamondbacks, jumped out to a 1-0 lead after batting in the top of the first inning. Nathan Ousley walked, stole second and came home of Whitney Caudill's first hit of the game.

The Rangers sent 11 batters to the plate in the bottom of the first inning and pushed across five runners to lead 5-1. Two walks and an error loaded the bases for the Rangers and Steven Perry singled home two runners. With one out, the next four batters drew walks forcing in the other three runs.

The Rangers added a single run in the second inning on a walk to Allen Craynon, who scored on a passed ball.

In the Rangers' third, 10 batters paraded to the plate with six scoring for a 12-2 lead. Wesley Hall had a base hit and Seth Hackworth double home two runs.

The Rangers plated their final run in the fourth inning on a walk to Steven Boatwright and Craynon's run scoring double.

Three runs scored for the Diamondbacks in the fourth inning for the final 13-5 margin. Two walks and James Absher's two run single added the runs.

15th Region Baseball...

PIKEVILLE - After the 1995 season, Paintsville baseball coach Charlie Adkins retired.

He tried for two years to make the Senior PGA Tour and then he said that he realized a couple of important things.

"After two years, I came to the conclusion that I didn't have the ability or the money," Adkins said.

Now three years back leading the Tigers' baseball program, Adkins is back as a regional winner.

Paintsville used the hot bat of junior shortstop Brad Turner and the strong pitching from sophomore Chas Harmon en route to an 11-3 victory over cross-town rival Johnson Central Thursday night at Pike County Central High School.

"The two turned in a great effort tonight," Adkins said. "I'm proud of this entire bunch. I really didn't imagine this at the beginning of the year because we have some young players."

Turner turned in a 4-for-4 championship game and finished his three region games 8-for-12. He had three doubles, one home run and added eight RBIs in leading the Tigers to their first title since 1990.

"I don't think I have ever had anybody that hit the ball better in a regional tournament," Adkins said. "Like I said before, he has done that all year."

For the season, Turner is now 56-for-108 for a .518 clip.

Paintsville (27-9) wasted little time pushing three runs across in the bottom of the first.

Matt Brown led off with a walk, stole second and one out later scored on Turner's single. Jason Kinner brought Turner home as he smacked a two-run homer off starter and loser Brandon Pack to put Paintsville up 3-0.

The Golden Eagles (23-13) tied the game in the third inning. Pack led off with an infield single. Kyle Jennings singled to center field and the ball got through the defender and went all the way to the fence. Pack scored on the hit and Jennings ended up at third on the two base error.

A Josh Banks' ground out scored Jennings to get the Eagles to within 3-2. Josh Cochran doubled, moved to third on an out, and scored on a wild pitch to deadlock the contest.

Paintsville took the advantage for good with a three-run third. Brown and Travis Preston opened the inning with singles and came home on a double by Turner, who later scored on a hit by Will Lauffer that put the Tigers on top 6-3.

Johnson Central threatened in the fourth inning, but Harmon worked out of the jam and allowed only four more baserunners for the rest of the contest.

Leading 6-3, Paintsville added three more runs in the fourth. Turner collected his third hit that drove in Joe Kinner, who started the frame with a double. Later in the inning, Jason Kinner was intentionally walked to load the bases and was followed by a Mitchell Grim double that plated two runs and put the Tigers ahead 9-3.

Grim added another two-run double in the sixth to finish out the Tiger totals.

While Paintsville didn't have much trouble hitting the ball, Harmon kept Johnson Central off balance. Over the final three innings, the righthander allowed only four hits and struck out six.

"He's a bulldog on the mound. To be as young as he is, he doesn't hurt himself most of the time," said Adkins. "You have to give (coach) Mike's (Collins) bunch a lot of credit. They are a fine team and had a great season."

The win is Adkins' 13th regional title as the coach of Paintsville. He is now 13-1 in championship games, the only loss came in 1995 to Johnson Central.

"I guess that it is a little pay-back, but Mike has gotten us some, too," said Adkins, who now has won 698 games at Paintsville High School in his 29 years.

"I'm glad I came back. I told our principal that I really liked this bunch and plan to stay a little longer."

Paintsville will now take part in the Section IV next week at Corbin.

Martin knows the price

by STEVE MICKEY
 NASCAR COLUMNIST

Last season, Tony Stewart came into Winston Cup and stole the hearts of many fans on his way to being named Rookie of the Year. He put up some numbers that were equal to or in many cases better than those of the late Davey Allison, Jeff Gordon and Dale Earnhardt put up in their initial campaign.

Stewart had raced in several different racing series before coming to Winston Cup, but none of them had prepared him for the demands that would be made of him once he was established at the Cup level. The incredible year that he put together created a strong fan following that soon began to elevate the Home Depot driver's life into that of a superstar in the sport.

Like in other sports, when you reach that elite status of being one of the best at what you do there is a price that you pay. In Winston Cup, that price relates to the amount of free time that you have to give up to satisfy your fans.

Stewart recently lashed out at the Winston Cup fans to the point that he said he really wasn't enjoying the series as much as he did last year because of demands being made of his time. He noted that it had got to the point that he and his girlfriend couldn't go out to dinner without being interrupted by a fan wanting an autograph.

Stewart said that he couldn't even step outside of his hauler in the garage area without being overwhelmed with autograph requests. He even vented some of his anger toward his fellow drivers for not speaking out about the situations concerning the fans.

Stewart's open wheel background didn't prepare him for what to expect when he came to Winston Cup. In the open wheel series, fan accessibility to the drivers is very controlled and limited. A series such as Indy or CART severely limits the accessibility of drivers to the point that some drivers and owners give the impression of actually being aloft from the fans.

Mark Martin knows that the popularity of Winston Cup was built on accessibility and that it is never going to change. Mark remembers watching Richard Petty when he came into the sport spend hours satisfying his fans.

He said, "I watched my heroes in the sport do everything they could to satisfy the fans and that will always be ingrained in not only me but everyone else that was in the sport at that time."

Martin notes that this newer generation of drivers wasn't around when the sport was still climbing to the level which it is at today. For many of the drivers such as Stewart they came into a great situation with sponsors willing to shell out huge sums of money for their services. It didn't just end with the sponsors either as fans routinely line up to buy whatever product is produced with the likeness of their driver on it.

Martin understands what Stewart is going through. In 1990 when he was battling Dale Earnhardt for the championship, he almost drowned in the attention that he started attracting. He knew then that his life would never be the same, but it was a choice he made.

During his highly successful career, Mark has learned to live with the fact that losing much of his private life was part of the price of becoming a Winston Cup driver. It is a fact that he doesn't like, but one that he and his family have accepted.

Mark may have been able to accept it because he came up when you still had guys like Richard Petty paving the way for the Stewarts of the future. He found out firsthand what the sport demanded of a driver. When he compared the amount of personal time he was willing to lose against the opportunity to drive a race car, it seemed a small price to pay while being elevated to herolike status!

Stewart and the rest of the young drivers in the sport could learn from Martin. It isn't like you wake up one day and discover that you have lost much of your private life; it is as much part of the sport as standing in victory lane.

Kentucky Sportsline...

by TOM LEACH

So much for a quiet summer in Wildcat country.

Kentucky football is topic number one in these parts today as Big Blue fans await Coach Hal Mumme's slant on his apparent decision to reverse his decision on naming Dusty Bonner as the starting quarterback.

We say "apparent" because the coach himself has not yet made a public comment or at least confirmed the switch but Bonner's coach at legendary Valdosta High School in Georgia talked about Bonner's demotion to Danville newspaper columnist and WLAP talk show host Larry Vaught over the weekend.

If nothing else, such a move by Mumme would clearly come under the heading of "bold."

After watching the first two scrimmages in April, Bonner clearly had the upper hand, as Mumme acknowledged. And yet if one wanted to make a case for Lorenzon, there were always a few plays in any scrimmage or practice that featured Lorenzon doing something Bonner would never be able to do — a quick release, a long throw with little arc, etc.

I can remember a day before Mumme had announced his choice and Lorenzon was driving the first-team offense down the field in a drill designed to simulate game situations. Near the goal line, Lorenzon dropped back and rifled a perfect pass to a slanting Mike Beirne for a touchdown, prompting an exuberant Mumme to bound off the sideline to exclaim his praise for a "great play."

It was the kind of throw Bonner is just physically not able to make and yet Mumme's system is based on a high completion percentage, to maintain ball possession. Lorenzon's arm is definitely stronger, but the Kentucky attack is based on Mumme's axiom of "throw it short to people who can score."

That efficiency is where Bonner seemingly had the significant edge on Lorenzon at this stage of their respective careers.

But perhaps Mumme was dogged by the flashes on plays like that one Lorenzon made to Beirne. I believe there's a real confidence on the Kentucky staff that they finally have the parts in place to put some pressure on the likes of Florida, Georgia and Tennessee, so was Mumme envisioning how he might feel if he lost a close game to one of those teams because he had opted for the safer choice at quarterback? But just because the Kentucky Derby winner will miss this race along with Preakness winner Red Bullet, don't subscribe to the notion that the Belmont is wide open, despite what will surely be an overflow field.

It says here that either Aptitude or Wheelaway will win the mile-and-a-half Belmont, but don't expect to get a big payoff. Wheelaway, trained by New York favorite John Kimmel, is sure to attract a good deal of support, although Aptitude figures to be the favorite.

The value for handicappers in the Belmont will come in the hope that those two horses will fail to run 1-2. In my opinion, Impeachment will be overbet. Yes, he finished well in the Derby and Preakness, but he was also running on the best part of the track each time. In other words, his performance perhaps looked better than it really was.

Unshaded might come back into the picture now that Pegasus is out, and trainer Carl Nafzger has prepared his horse with the possibility of a Belmont run in my mind, even though he ultimately opted against it last week. If Unshaded does run, you can expand the list of possible Belmont winners to three.

However, if Unshaded stays in the barn, then keep an eye on the Godolphin Stable entry of Curule and Chief Seattle. I think either is capable of hitting the board and that could be the best shot at getting even for those of us who dug a handicapping hole in the first two legs of the Triple Crown.
 Good luck.

'Riverboat gambler' Hal Mumme shuffles Bonner, plays Lorenzen card

In the first place, let me cast an "aye" vote on Hal Mumme's seemingly impetuous change of quarterbacks. Jared Lorenzen is in. Dusty Bonner is back to clipboard and baseball cap.

Those who paid homage (and lip service) to UK's coach the last three years, casting him as a Clark Gable riverboat gambler are obliged to back their man now when he pushes all his chips to the center of the table.

As for the sanctity of fairness and loyalty to Bonner, why question Mumme's decision? He is paid to win games. Isn't this the same coach praised mightily for discarding Billy Jack Haskins for Tim Couch and Mummeball when he arrived? Same coach who recruited Danville quarterback Chase Harp then made him a tight end, sent quarterback Mike Scipione packing, and reneged on a promise to let Derek Smith play for Tubby Smith.

Please. Why change QBs three months before the season opener? Perhaps it was linked to the start-up of summer workout programs this week. Or...

1. Politics. At Valdosta, Ga., Bonner's high school coach Mike O'Brien says Mumme has ruined Bonner, that UK's coach had succumbed to alumni pressure to play Lorenzen. If true, isn't it ironic that Bill Curry stayed with Billy Jack Haskins despite fan and media pressure to "turn the Deuce loose" two years ago?

2. Best risk. Mumme believed Lorenzen might leave UK and made the change believing an upset Bonner would be a better risk to take than a no-longer-available Lorenzen, who Mumme keeps chirping, "has a great future."

3. Better tools. After viewing spring practice film maybe Mumme decided Bonner has little or no deep throw capability and is not big or fast enough to be an effective run option. At 6-feet-5 and 270, Lorenzen is both.

4. Motivation. Knowing personalities, maybe Mumme figures Lorenzen starting out with the job to lose instead of having to win it from Bonner in the fall is a better option.

I remain among those who believe the jury is still out on Hal Mumme, football coach at Kentucky, as we seem to have come to the end of the media honeymoon with Hal.

The list of columnists willing to criticize Mumme seems to be growing and it is a good thing. We should be adversaries. But criticizing UK's coach for changing quarterbacks at his pleasure should be seen as part of the charm that brought Mumme media hype praise. The riverboat gambler part.

IDEAS DEPT.

Kentucky fans who swooned over Florida Coach Billy Donovan, hoping he would be UK's next hoops boss now have six million and one reasons to forget it.

Donovan signed a $6 million five-year extension last week to go with a verbal commitment from 6-11 powerhouse Kwame Brown of Brunswick, Ga.

For Indiana basketball coach Bob Knight, a book recommendation. Read: "Who Moved My Cheese?" by Dr. Spencer Johnson, author of The One Minute Manager.

Money, money, money! J. Bruce Miller and Louisville friends hammer away on the same theme as they push for an NBA franchise in Louisville. Maybe Miller and friends should be heard spinning: "product, product, product." Not possible?

MILESTONES

Shelby Valley High School's softball team not only upset 15th Region favorite Pikeville High 3-2 to win the school's first region softball championship last week, the BatKats did it behind the pitching of Courtney Bentley, a sixth grader ... who "aced" the regional.

"Three straight games, 21 innings, over a three-day period by an 11-year-old. Who would've thought it?" Shelby Valley Coach Greg Napier told Brad Lockard of Pikeville's Appalachian News-Express.

Indeed, Courtney Bentley, an 11-year-old sixth-grade winning pitcher. Anybody top this?

KNIGHT CALLED SHOTS ... AGAIN

In chess parlance, Knight to Queen's bishop four and checkmate.

ESPN was the latest to be maneuvered by Bob Knight. Not manipulated so much as moved around. First, the mountain not only came to Mohammed, but set up cameras in Assembly Hall where America's most famous general since Schwartzkopf, has dispensed stormy directions to players and referees with impunity for 29 winters.

With the week-long hype and promotion the all-sports network put into its "live" interview with Indiana's coach, one would have thought ESPN could have done better than Roy Firestone and Richard "Digger" Phelps, both of whom have done buddy-buddy interviews with IU's coach in years past.

This was television's equivalent to sending Jerry Springer to Belgrade or Barbara Walters to Baghdad to ask tyrants questions like, "did you have a tough home life growing up?" ... "what are some things that make you cry?"

Since Mike Wallace was not available, too bad ESPN could not enlist one of college basketball's more talking heads, Billy Packer. And no, John Feinstein would have been a bad choice to do this interview for the same reasons Digger Phelps was a bad choice. No objectivity.

Indiana's unrepentant coach seemed to revel in Firestone's struggle to stay on the offensive. And Knight dismissed criticisms from college basketball's most revered voice, John Wooden.

Less complex questions would have been better. For starters ...

"Why would a grown man who quotes Abraham Lincoln tell a crowd of fans he wants to be hung upside down and let his critics kiss his ...?"

"Why are you a bully?"

"Why after seeing videos of your public displays of temper, haven't you learn to control it next time?"

"Why do you try and intimidate people?"

"What specifically about the media infuriates you?"

"You like drawing attention to yourself?"

"You're enjoying having an ESPN audience focused solely on Bob Knight, aren't you?"

JUST WONDERING DEPT.

Lemme see if I have this straight II: UK basketball fans say their Wildcats 1998 national championship was won "by Rick Pitino recruits," while UK football fans praise Hal Mumme for "taking us to a bowl game" ignoring that Tim Couch was recruited and signed by Bill Curry.

Whatever happened to ... Chris Harrison, (UK '95), native of Tollesboro where he scored 3,542 points, fourth best all-time in Kentucky?

Does Illinois Coach Lon Kruger going to the Atlanta Hawks remind anybody else of Howard

Schnelleberger moving to Oklahoma? We all know how that worked out.

Florida sweetened basketball coach Billy Donovan's bank account last week, a five-year contract extension to more than a million dollars a year. Question we never see asked/answered: What is Donovan's commitment to Florida? Is his contract open-ended as is usually the case (see Tom Izzo, Michigan State and Lon Kruger, Illinois), allowing him to walk away to a better offer with impunity from breach of contract?

Was Bob Knight really a candidate to replace Tom Izzo, had Michigan State lost its coach to the NBA Hawks? So says columnist Hubert Mizell of The St. Petersburg Times.

Comment: Wonderful leverage for General Bob when he stopped by IU Prez Myles Brand's house weekend before the famed "zero tolerance" press conference.

Lemme see if I have this straight: University of Tennessee increased basketball coach Jerry Green's pay to $600,000 a year and hiked Pat Summitt's salary to $550,000. A review of the record shows Green's team has qualified for and been unceremoniously dumped in two NCAA Tournaments while Summitt teams have won six NCAA titles.

PARTING SHOT

What will retiring Indiana Pacers Coach Larry Bird do with himself after coaching basketball? "Prepare myself for death," he quipped.

And so it goes. Have a point of view you would like to share? Write to Bob Watkins at P.O. Box 124, Glendale, Ky. 42740 or on the internet at Sptsinky@aol.com. And visit our website www.bobwatkins.com.

NASCAR In Kentucky

by AMANDA VINCENT
CONTRIBUTING COLUMNIST

Owensboro native Jeff Green finished fourth in Dover on Saturday to hold on to his points lead.

"The reason we're leading is because we go after it every week," Green said.

The Busch boys will be in South Boston this weekend and then at Myrtle Beach on June 12. Myrtle Beach is kind of where it all got started for Green.

Green had one special "date" on the beach during the summer of 1994 that turned into an enduring relationship, but it would take almost five years to blossom.

In June of 1994, Green was working on fellow Owensboro native, Michael Waltrip's NBS team. Green had previously competed in 25

Busch events, but did not have a full-time ride at the time.

Chad Little, had broken his shoulder during the Charlotte event in May and needed someone to substitute for him for the Myrtle Beach event. Green was asked if he would be up to the task and he immediately accepted. Little led the event and at the first caution, Green hopped in the car. He had to drive it from the back of the field because they lost so many positions under caution making the driver change, but Green managed to pull out a fifth-place finish with a team he had never worked with before.

"Not many teams produce a top-five finish on their first outing together," said Green. "Usually it takes awhile for a team to gel, to understand one another, but we clicked right from the start."

This spark was apparent to crew chief, Harold Holly, as well. When Greg Pollex started a new NBS team in 1999, he hired Holly to be the crew chief and asked Holly who he wanted to drive the car. Holly's first and only reply was, "Jeff Green."

"Jeff and I knew from that weekend in Myrtle Beach that we worked well together and that doesn't come around very often," said Holly. "We decided that if the opportunity ever arose for us to work together again, we'd take it."

Pollex, who owned Little's team in 1994, offered Green a full-time NBS ride for 1999 with Holly as the crew chief. Three other team members from the summer of 1994 would reunite to turn wrenches for Holly with Green behind the wheel.

The combination was magic, and in their first season together they produced three wins, 15 top-fives and 19 top-10s in 31 starts. Green recorded his highest points finish ever in the Busch series, finishing second.

One of the three wins occurred at Myrtle Beach, the site of where it all started.

"Harold Holly has become one of my best friends," said Green. "It is not very often when you have this kind of chemistry both on and off the track. I trust him completely, even if he says something is white and I know it is black, and he is the same way with me. I know this trust and faith in one another is what sets us apart from the other competitors and is one of the factors why we are performing so well."

Talk is still going on about Busch Series/Brewco Motorsports driver Casey Atwood making an official announcement to drive a Ray Evernham Winston Cup Dodge in 2001.

Until being approached by Evernham, Atwood made it clear on numerous occasions that he wasn't ready to make the jump up to Winston Cup and he was in no hurry.

Apparently, Evernham said something that changed the young man's mind.

"He (Evernham) can help me more than anybody else can," Atwood said. "It's just a great opportunity for me."

Atwood says that he would have turned anybody else in the garage down if they made him the same offer, but who could turn down Evernham and the opportunity to be a teammate to legend Bill Elliott, Evernham's other driver for next season?

"He could teach me a lot along with Bill Elliott," Atwood said.

EXCELERATORS

Dale Earnhardt Jr.

Earnhardt Jr. and Kenseth are overachievers in the 2000 rookie class and finished fourth in the point standings last year, nobody thought that other rookies would be able to live up to those standards. Instead, they're surpassing it.

But how? Many veterans think part of the reason is money — money that wasn't available to them when they made the jump to NASCAR's elite circuit. Today's younger drivers are set up with equipment that veterans had to work for years to get.

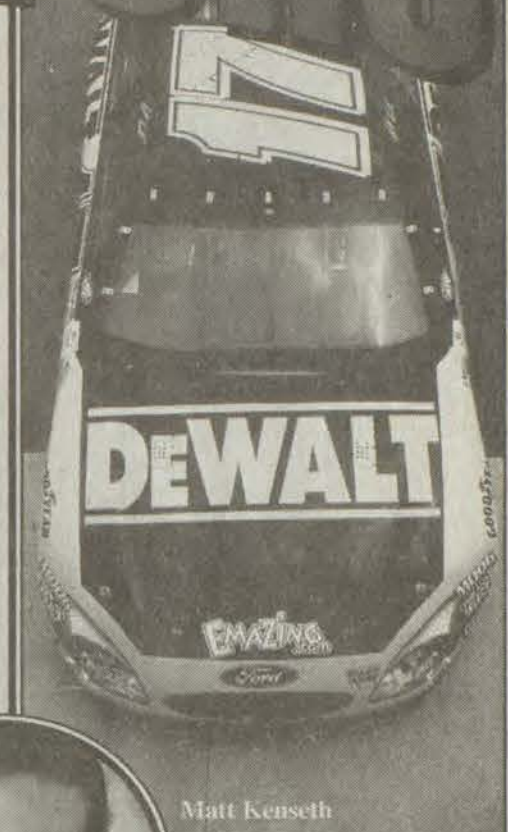

"My first year, we did everything we could to run well, but we were looking for sponsorship at the same time," said John Andretti. "We needed to run well to get sponsorships. We needed sponsorships to run well."

That hasn't been a problem for Earnhardt Jr. or Kenseth. Junior has his dad's famous last name to attract attention, and Kenseth had Mark Martin singing his praises long before most fans had ever heard of the youngster. Both, of course, also have driving talent.

"Good equipment, good teams and good drivers are going to win races and run up front," said Jeremy Mayfield, one of 11 winners so far this year. "Maybe inexperience has been a factor in some races for them, but other than that, they have what it takes."

"When I started in Winston Cup, it was with a brand-new team. There we were, with a team trying to figure things out and a driver trying to figure things out. That was like putting a monkey in a dynamite factory. Once I started getting some experience and once I was running with experienced teams, we started finishing better and better."

Kenseth and Earnhardt Jr. are 12th and 15th in the point standings, respectively. Junior is the only driver with more than one win this year, and he dominated the two-week span in Charlotte, winning The Winston and then the pole for the 600-miler. Kenseth and Earnhardt Jr. both have four top-10 finishes, which is equal to or greater than 18 of the top 30 drivers.

None of the other rookies who are part of what is being heralded as possibly the greatest rookie class ever, are in the top 30. Stacy Compton is the closest at 33rd.

Sterling Marlin says it basically comes down to drivers such as Junior and Kenseth being groomed to be superstars. They have everything they need around them, if they don't, they can get it, and all they have to be concerned with is driving the car.

"Now these guys are climbing into cars with winning, experienced teams. Look at Junior," said Marlin, driver of the No. 40 Coors Light Chevy. "He has a car with a ton of money, an owner like Dale Earnhardt talking to him, a championship crew chief with Paul Andrews, a big-time manager with Steve Hmiel, and probably anything he wants from [Richard] Childress."

"Then you've got Kenseth, who has Roush engines, guys like Mark Martin and Jeff Burton working with him, and all the knowledge of those five teams."

"These ain't your daddy's rookies, you know? Put a pretty good driver in those kinds of cars with those kinds of teams, and they are going to be tough to beat." That's bad news for the veterans.

By HENRY MILLER

THE secret is out: This isn't a normal rookie class.

In fact, Dale Earnhardt Jr. and Matt Kenseth are making this year's crop of Winston Cup up-and-comers an abnormally good rookie class, just as Ken Griffey Jr. made his rookie class so outstanding. By the way, can anyone remember who else was in Griffey's rookie class? I didn't think so.

So far, Earnhardt Jr. and Kenseth have combined to win nearly one-fourth of this season's Winston Cup races. Junior has a pair of wins (and The Winston victory), while Kenseth is coming off his first victory in the Coca-Cola 600 at Lowe's Motor Speedway.

Ironically, it was Earnhardt Jr. who dominated that race before giving way to Kenseth after a late caution was called. Junior said he expected nothing less than a top-notch performance from his good friend.

"I said during the rain delay that Matt was going to be really tough," Earnhardt Jr. said. "He's been so consistent all year, and this one makes up for the race they almost won in California."

In baseball, just when you think the home run barrage couldn't get any heavier, it does. After Tony Stewart won three times

Park is doing his best to steer clear of silly season

By HENRY MILLER

STEVE Park is working hard right now.

He's working hard to win a race, to be consistent, to fulfill the star potential that so many people recognized a few years ago, and most important, to not be a casualty of "silly season" — that time of year when drivers lose and/or change jobs and/or sponsors.

Park, who drives the No. 1 Pennzoil Chevrolet for Dale Earnhardt Inc., is in his final year of his contract. He says he and Earnhardt, who also owns Dale Earnhardt Jr.'s car, are working hard to find the most agreeable situation.

"We've been in heavy negotiations. Dale has done a great job of making it a priority for me to get something in place so that I can get back to concentrating on trying to win our first race and not be a part of that big silly season at the end of the year," Park said. "There are opportunities out there right now that might not be opportunities in the next few months."

"Dale and I are both working hard to get something done." As of late, Park has looked like he's been trying to get something done on the track, too. He was first identified as a potential star during his rookie season in 1998, and he's shown glimpses of greatness ever since. That rookie season, however, was marred by a broken leg suffered in Atlanta and, as a result, a season that lasted just 17 races.

So far in his career, Park has four top-10 finishes and one top-five finish. He started on the pole at Bristol in March and finished seventh. Twice this year he's gone from starting 18th to finishing ninth, at Rockingham and Charlotte.

His most recent string of finishes (16th at California, 11th at Richmond and ninth at Charlotte) has helped the Northport, N.Y., native climb from 23rd to 17th in the Winston Cup point standings. Park finished 14th in his first full season on the circuit last year.

"We're not putting any undue pressure on ourselves," said Park, a former NASCAR Featherlite Modified Tour star. "By looking at our record of top-10s, we've put ourselves in position to win a lot. It just needs to click. We need to be near that top five toward the end of the race, get a good pit stop, get out in the top five and race for the win."

Park said there is no added pressure having Earnhardt Jr. as a teammate, even though the rookie, who has two wins, is getting a ton of press and is just ahead of Park in the standings.

"They have a team that's been together for a long time, and they're like a family," Park said. "They've obviously jelled in the Busch series with two championships. They've moved that whole team up to Winston Cup and continue their success. We're just finishing our building stages."

Park just hopes that he doesn't have to rebuild somewhere else when this season is over.

Not the pits

Jeff Hammond became the only active crew chief to have 500 starts under his belt when Chad Little started the No. 97 John Deere Ford in Sunday's MBNA 400 at Dover Downs International Speedway. In his 500 races as a crew chief, Hammond has amassed 43 victories, including a trip to victory lane in the 1989 Daytona 500. Some of Hammond's other memorable moments include winning The Winston (1985), the points championship (1982 and 1985) and the pit crew championship (1989). Hammond entered NASCAR in 1974 as a tire changer for Walter Ballard. Eight years later, he was given the chance to take charge of a championship-caliber team with team owner Junior Johnson.

Winnie's trunk

The long lost trunk of Winnie Fitzpatrick Johns, Part one

by Robert Perry
 Contributing Writer

This is the story of a cheerful little lady who lived in Prestonsburg's oldest house and kept in her attic an old trunk containing some of Floyd County's oldest documents. It is also the story of two of the town's oldest families. Twenty-one years ago, the lady went to her reward, and eight years later, her house was damaged by fire and subsequently torn down. Until recently, everyone assumed that the fire had destroyed the trunk.

The lady in question was Winnie Fitzpatrick Johns (1822-1979), known all over eastern Kentucky as "Prestonsburg's Happy Weaver." The house in question was the historic Johns-DeRossett House on Front Street, which was Winnie's residence for more than 60 years. The trunk in question is an old wooden trunk with metal reinforcements now sitting on the front porch of Jim Daniels' camp house in Auxier. Until recently, it was filled to the brim with old books, old letters, old photographs, and rare old court documents.

For most of her long and productive life, Winnie Johns lived in the house which she had inherited from her husband. In 1985, six years after her death, the old structure was badly burned. Afterwards, Winnie's Salisbury relatives (her daughter Evelyn had married Herbert Salisbury Sr.) came to town and began sorting through what was left of her belongings. When her famous trunk turned up missing, they decided that it had been consumed by the flames.

Today, I am happy to report that they were wrong and that the trunk was not destroyed. Several months ago, Jim Daniels, president of the Floyd County Historical and Genealogical Society, was contacted by Betty Ratliff Stallard of Coeburn, Virginia. She reported that the trunk was in her possession and that she wished to donate it to the society. At that point, of course, she had no idea how important the trunk really was.

Its precious documents have been sorted and placed in protective envelopes. Their survival is entirely due to the efforts of Mrs. Stallard, who deserves our heartfelt thanks for preserving them all these years and for having the persistence to see that they were finally returned to us.

By the way, I also want to thank Jim Spencer of Martin for helping me sort through the documents and place them in protective envelopes.

How did the Floyd County Historical Society acquire the trunk? In 1987, Stallard, a native of Johnson County, was building a house on U.S. 460 near Paintsville. Arvel Nelson, the contractor hired to do the job, was also tearing down the previously-mentioned Johns House. One day Nelson mentioned to Stallard that his men had found an old trunk in the attic of a house he was tearing down and asked her if she would like to have it.

"What about the people who own the house?", she asked him. "Don't they want the trunk?" Nelson assured her that they had taken everything out of the house that they wanted.

After she agreed to take the trunk, Nelson delivered it to her and placed it in a metal outbuilding she had erected on her property. At one point, she opened the trunk and looked briefly at the papers stored in it. She was saddened by the sight, because she realized that she was looking at the history of someone's family.

Several years after she acquired the trunk, she vacated her Johnson County home and moved to Coeburn, Virginia, leaving the trunk in the metal outbuilding. Before she left, she made several unsuccessful attempts to contact the trunk's previous owners.

In 1999, Stallard asked her brother, Ray Ratliff, to remove the trunk from her metal outbuilding and move it to his garage. There it stayed until January of this year, when she paid Ratliff a visit and noticed the trunk sitting in his garage.

Winnie Johns' trunk was rescued from the partially-destroyed Jones-DeRossett House by Paintsville contractor Arvel Nelson and given to Betty Stallard. Earlier this year, she donated it to the Floyd County Historical Society.

Once again, they opened it and looked at its contents.

"Somebody needs this stuff," she said, and once again she began calling people who might be able to help her track down its owner. Someone told her about Daniels and the historical society. She placed a call to Jim, and the rest is history.

Winnie Fitzpatrick Johns was the daughter of Jasper and Rosamund Parsons Fitzpatrick of Prestonsburg. On April 10, 1884, the Ashland Independent ran this item in its "News From Prestonsburg" column:

Jasper Fitzpatrick & Co. have erected a grist mill just opposite Prestonsburg. Good for Hopper; hope they may do well. It was a thing much needed.

We know very little about Jasper Fitzpatrick, but it is probable that he was fairly well-to-do, because the 1900 US Census shows Winnie, age 16, and her sister Edith, age 6, living with their parents in a house on today's Arnold Avenue. Jasper's and Rosamund's neighbors were Michael and Belle Richmond, Greenville and Laura Davidson, and Andrew and Josie Davidson. Josie was the author of "Josie M. Davidson, Her Life and Works" (Prestonsburg, 1922), a charming look at life in Prestonsburg during the latter half of the 19th century.

Winnie's sister Edith grew up to become Edith Fitzpatrick James, piano teacher, director of the Jenny Wiley Chanters, founder of the Kentucky Highlands Folk Festival, and nationally-known collector and preserver of Appalachian folk songs.

Sometime around 1902, Winnie married Thomas P. Johns, son of John Graham Johns, a well-to-do Prestonsburg merchant during the 1880s and a descendant of Judge John Graham, land agent for Colonel John Preston and first surveyor of Floyd County. The Johns family was one

About cats and stuff

When I was growing up in Muddy Branch, we had an old one-eyed, black and white cat that always hung around on the back porch. If you weren't careful, every time you'd open the screen door, he'd dart between your legs and run into the house. "Hey, the cat's in the house," one of us would yell, and whoever had let him in would have to grab him and sling him back out into the back yard.

I don't suppose this cat could have exactly been considered a pet, because I can't even remember him even having a name. I guess he earned his keep by being a pretty good mouse catcher.

He also could have been the reason for the old saying, "I wish you'd look what the cat just drug in." I remember that he was especially fond of fish heads, which were apparently in ample supply, since neighbors on both sides of us kept trotlines in the river practically all the time. Naturally, when we'd find a fish head on the porch, we'd sling it out into the back yard, too.

When I think about it, I can't remember anybody in the neighborhood who didn't have a cat or two hanging around, but at the same time, I can't remember any of them being real pets...at least not in the same sense as we think of pets in today's society.

Anyway, what brought up the subject of cats in the first place was an ad I saw in a magazine for "The Video Cats Love to Watch." The tape, according to the ad, was designed to "treat your cat to an adventure-filled journey without leaving home."

By contrast, when I was a kid, I think everyone in our house, and perhaps the entire neighborhood, would have been tickled to death if our old cat had left home...and stayed. Now, though, here's this video that you can buy your cat/so he can be entertained "when he's home alone."

Maybe this tape is the very thing that cats nowadays need, but my question is, when, on the ladder of evolution, did cats suddenly need help in the entertaining department? It certainly must have occurred within the last 40 or 50 years, for I suspect that the loss of our old cat's eye was nothing more than the result of a night of...entertainment.

Since I got a note via e-mail about two weeks ago saying the note writer read my "stuff" on the Internet, then a few days later a woman came into the office and told me she read my "stuff" in the paper, I think I know.

Stuff is a noun referring to highly intellectual ramblings of a super-talented writer. For exam-

She was quite a lady

by Dorothy Ringlesbach
 Special to the Times

I first heard of Winnie Johns back in the spring of 1943 when I started dating her grandson, however the war intervened and it wasn't until three years later that I met her personally.

Granny, or Granny Winnie, as the family always called her, said her grandson took up with this "Yankee" girl while he was attending college in northern Indiana. However, she accepted me as only she could do and I loved her dearly from the first day I met her.

Granny, in my estimation, was truly a genteel southern lady from all the descriptions I had read in novels. She was a dear—but woe unto those who dared to disagree with her or cross her. She was, in those days of the late '40s and '50s, what we would call eccentric, and in today's vernacular, you would think of her as a "character."

Granny and her sister, Edith (James), were always "about" something as she would say. Both were very talented women and contributed so very much to the county and the people of the area.

The first time I saw Granny in action was right after Bob Salisbury and I

Brief ownership

Eulavene Conn is a delightful lady who is now retired from a 33 year teaching career at Betsy Layne Elementary School. She has a wonderful sense of humor and often shares a story about her experiences in the class room. Some of them are about things her students did or said.

But some of her stories are on herself and her students, if they could hear, would find them very amusing. One concerns a time she and her husband Fed had gone into Pikeville on some errand. She had a package to exchange at one of the stores and, since parking spaces were a bit hard to find, she asked Fed to let her out in front of the business so she wouldn't have to walk so far. He would find a space and come back to meet her.

She finished her errand and Fed still wasn't back so she walked out on the street to watch for him. Then she spotted the familiar car parked a short distance from her and figured he had thought of something he wanted to do in another direction. She just went to the car and sat down, laying her package beside her on the seat.

After a bit, a man came and stood looking in at her. She felt a bit uncomfortable but just turned her head and looked the other way. He finally walked away.

But soon he returned and looked a little harder and a little longer. This time she stared back at him until he finally walked away again. This time she decided to lock the doors and was hoping a policeman would come by so she could register a complaint.

She decided she ought to lock all the doors just in case he came back again, but when she turned to reach a rear door she saw somebody else's coat and hat and realized it wasn't their car after all. She gathered up her package and hurried back inside the store she had just come from.

The man might have had a policeman when he came back again, and she didn't want to see either of them.

Karen and Dean Cecil of Stanville have sent me a story that is a good example of father-son discussions. They wrote:

milestone of living one full century. After about an hour of singing and eating ice cream and other refreshments, six-month-old Karys, Virgie's great-great-granddaughter, arrived at the party with her parents Eric and Belinda Lafferty Conley much to the delight of Virgie.

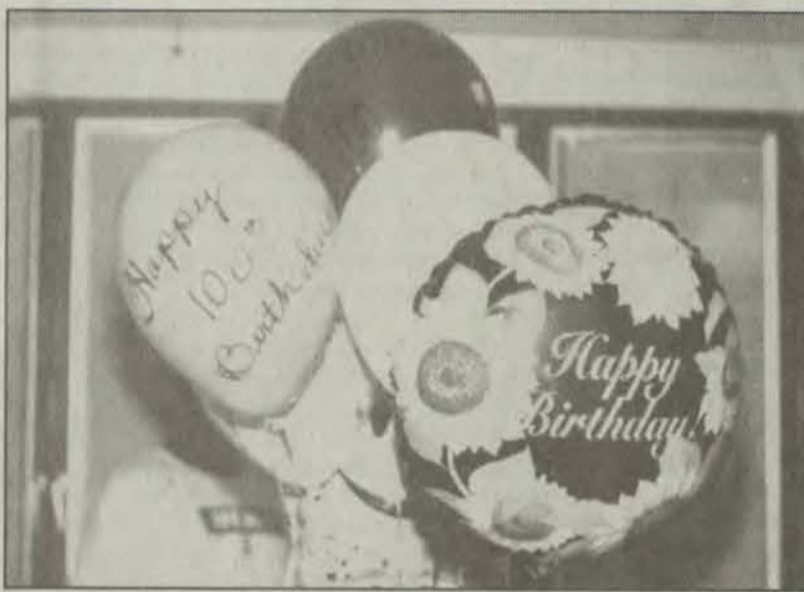

The native of Rock Fork at Garrett may be 100, but her love for babies is still easy to see as she cooed and spoke to the child in a loving voice. Karys did her part by returning the attention with smiles and squeals of her own.

While sitting next to his great-grandma, Drew Walters, who says he is going to be a journalist, received affectionate pats and rubs from Virgie.

Virgie had two sisters and one was on hand to share in the celebration. Thelma Chaffins, 87, sat and fondly remembered some special times. Virgie has one sister, Cassie Lambert, who has died.

Two of her four children were also on hand to share the special moment. Sons Iraland and Monte Conley took turns talking to their mom and helping with gifts and serving cake and other refreshments. One daughter, Girlie Chaffins could not make the celebration and a son, Hubert, is dead.

Virgie, who has a hearing problem, read some of her cards aloud, but sat in deep thought on others. It was apparent that she was taking in all the messages and processing them with all those years of experience.

The significance of Virgie's long life was highlighted when five generations were arranged for a photograph. The photo included Virgie, her son Iraland, his son Gary, his son Eric, and baby Karys.

There in Martin were five generations spanning a century and including parts of two millennia, plus all the love and good will that is generated in a century of living and raising a family and seeing the process repeated four more times.

Those in attendance included Monte Conley, his wife Ann, their daughter Sherry Conley and their son Rob Conley; Carol and Dan Shepherd and their granddaughter LaKeesha, along with Faye Chaffins (Faye and Carol are daughters of Virgie's sister, Girlie); Iraland Conley, with his children Gary Conley and wife June, and Mary Lynne Walters, Drew's mother; sister Thelma; and Eric Conley, wife Belinda and Karys Conley. Also in attendance was Linda Elliott.

June is busy for Extension activities

A quilt show, sewing camp and new Homemaker clubs make for a full calendar for the Family and Consumer Sciences division of the Floyd County Cooperative Extension Service.

A summer Quilt Exhibit is being co-sponsored with the Mountain Arts Center. Quilts by area quilters will be on display at the MAC from June 23 through September 5.

The goal of the exhibit is to allow local residents to showcase their work. "Additionally, we want to promote the rich heritage of quilting in our area," said Theresa Scott, County Extension Agent for Family and Consumer Sciences.

Area residents who would like to exhibit a quilt(s) should call Scott at 606/886-2668. Quilts may be hand or machine made, new or old, wall size or bed size. Quilts should have a muslin sleeve three inches wide attached to the underside for hanging. Any items exhibited should include the name of the quilt and the name of the owner and/or person who quilted them. Registration deadline is June 13.

Youth sewing camp

The extension service, in conjunction with the Auxier Lifelong Learning Center, will hold a sewing day camp for youth, June 27, 28 and 29, from 9 a.m. to 12:30 p.m.

The camp will be at the center, which is the old Auxier school.

Pre-registration is required by June 20, and includes a $2 camp fee to cover materials and a daily snack. The camp is open to youth ages 10-18.

Campers will make shorts and a tote bag. Class size is limited.

To register for the sewing camp, call Sue Schaffer at the Auxier center, 606/886-0709, or Scott at the extension office.

Homemakers to meet

The David Area Extension Homemaker Club will meet Friday, June 9, at 10:30 a.m. at the St. Vincent Mission building, next to David Appalachian Crafts. The program will include information on cooking with herbs, and plans will be made for a workshop on family memory quilts. Call Joyce Mitchell at 886-2513.

The Auxier Extension Homemaker Club will meet Monday, June 19, from 6 to 8 p.m. at the Auxier Lifelong Learning Center.

Homemaker Club membership dues are $4.25 a year, and $1 of the dues goes directly, as a donation, to the University of Kentucky Ovarian Cancer Center. For information about the Homemaker Clubs, call Scott at the extension office.

Not your ordinary philanthropists

by Richard H. Middleton Jr. and Penny Gold

In 1989, Rogelio "Roger" Benavides was walking across a chemical storage tank at his job at American Chrome and Chemicals Inc. (now Elementis Chromium) in Texas when the tank collapsed, dropping him into a solution of the chemical, sodium sulfide. Benavides was killed.

Ten years and two trials later, a Texas jury handed down a $25 million punitive damages judgment against American Chrome. (Punitive damages punish defendants for willful wrongdoing).

Following the verdict, the Benavides family—Roger's wife, Linda, and his two young sons, David and Paul—received a settlement on an undisclosed amount from the plant's owners.

What the Benavides family did next deserves recognition. Through their grief, the Benavides family saw an opportunity to help other industrial workers and their loved ones while also creating a lasting legacy for Roger Benavides.

At their insistence, the settlement between the Benavides family and the plant established and funded the Rogelio "Roger" Benavides Memorial Chair at Texas A&M University-Corpus Christi.

This $1 million endowed professorial chair in engineering technology will enable the researching and teaching of industrial safety.

At the news conference announcing the endowment, Linda Benavides was asked why she and her sons gave away $1 million.

Her reply: "We had to think about the hundreds of strangers who passed through those gates every day to earn paychecks to support their families. To prevent what happened to us from happening to even one of those individuals is our heartfelt wish."

Throughout their decade-long ordeal, the Benavides family was bolstered by the steadfast support and deft legal expertise of Bill Edwards, of The Edwards Law Firm of Corpus Christi.

So committed was Edwards to the family's purpose that he vigorously encouraged them to pursue the settlement for the industrial safety Chair endowment, even though it meant foregoing part of his fee.

The Benavides family and Bill Edwards should make all of us proud of our civil justice system.

Small World

A young boy had just gotten his driver's license. He asked his father, who was a minister, if they could discuss his use of the family car. The father said, "I'll make a deal with you. You bring your grades up, study the Bible some and get your hair cut. Then we'll talk about it."

A month later the boy came back again and asked his father if he could use the car. The father said, "Son, I'm really proud of you. You brought your grades up and have studied the Bible some, but you didn't get your hair cut."

After waiting a bit, the young man said, "You know, Dad, I've been thinking about that. You know Samson had long hair as well as Moses and Noah. Even Jesus had long hair."

"Yes," the father agreed, "and they walked everywhere they went."

ple, Shakespeare wrote stuff. Mark Twain wrote stuff. F. Scott Fitzgerald wrote stuff.

Of course, that definition is contradictory to one I found in my desk copy of The New Merriam-Webster Dictionary: "writing, talk, or ideas of little or transitory worth."

For the record, transitory is defined as being "of brief duration" or "short lived."

I'm a great lover of books and really hate to throw one away, but this highly misleading, totally incorrect little dictionary of mine is history. It's trashed.

In a very real way, the Benavides' whisper of humanity quiets the shouts of those who seek to quash the rights of the American worker and consumer.

The civil justice system does work, but not by default. It takes guts and determination on the part of the small guy. It's an endeavor from which it is easy to shrink.

Yet, isn't it a beautiful thing when right triumphs over might?

The Benavides family turned their personal heartache into something positive for their community. They are more than just philanthropists; they are true American heroes.

Lady

were married. I had two weeks vacation time left—I was a student nurse—and we had gone to Prestonsburg so I could meet the family, and Bob, having recently returned from service, could visit with them. Granny had been unable to attend our wedding as she stayed home to care for Evelyn Elizabeth Salisbury, who was only six months old at the time. The baby's parents, Herbert Jr. and Nancy were to be a part of our wedding.

Soon after we arrived, Granny decided a reception for us was called for and out went invitations to a good number of Prestonsburg people. Since she hadn't seen the wedding, she decided I was to wear my wedding dress, so a call was placed to Ft. Wayne, Indiana, to send my dress and veil, pronto. She then arranged for flowers and told Claudia Lee exactly what she wanted.

The big night arrived and she placed us in what they called "the upper room," and had Val Strahan, the local photographer, come and take pictures before she would allow anyone to enter the house.

As the guests came, Evelyn, Granny's daughter and Bob's mother, welcomed them at the door and showed them in to meet and greet us. From there they went on into the dining room for refreshments and then into the sitting room where Granny sat in her rocker "holding court," as we kiddingly told her later. I later saw her organize many other events in Prestonsburg.

Granny was very civic-minded and would do anything she could to promote her town. She knew everyone and everything that was going on. She served in many capacities in various and sundry organizations. Many of her activities were the culmination of ideas she had and finally brought, with the help of others, to fruition.

I can remember when Bert Combs was elected governor, she said things would begin to happen in eastern Kentucky. She said that the Mountain Parkway, which Combs was promoting, would open up the county to tourism. She went on to say that the next thing the county needed was a state park as she felt that where there was water, people would come with boats, and she felt that Jenny Wiley should be remembered by naming the park after her.

She operated swiftly, and anyone who owed her a favor knew she would call it in. I often wondered how family and friends knew when we arrived in Prestonsburg and I soon found out, and wondered if she was born with the phone attached to her ear. After she died I wondered how the Floyd County Times was ever able to put out a paper without her help.

Granny could be very child-like at times, and all children adored her—until they crossed her—which they soon learned it was best not to do. When the great-grandchildren walked in the door she would swoop down on them, hugging and kissing each one. This was fine when the children were small, but later the boys would hang back hoping all the kissing would be over by the time she got to them.

There were times I would tell my children they couldn't have or do something, but Granny always came through for them. If it was food, toys or money they wanted, Granny would slip it to them behind my back.

Oftentimes when she was working for the Save The Children Federation, she would come home with butter or a brick of cheese and, upon questioning, she would tell how a mother came into the shop with a child needing shoes or a child saw a dress or shirt that the mother couldn't afford, so Granny would give it to them. The next time the parents came to town they would bring her something they had received through the surplus food supply project. The old barter system still worked in those days.

One never knew what to expect out of Granny. One day I walked into the sitting room and she was in her rocker in front of the window. She handed me a pair of "spy glasses," as she called them, and asked me to "fix these so I can see that house up the hill across town. Some new people moved in and I want to see what is going on." One of her more eccentric moments.

Whenever we visited over a weekend, we always had to attend church on Sunday, and, when I left the house, I had better be wearing a hat and white gloves or she would stop me and remind me to get them. She always had a pot of coffee, ready because she knew family and friends would stop by for a cup and a short visit.

She loved people and would sit on the front porch in nice weather or in her rocker by the window in inclement weather and watch people going by the house. She always spoke to everyone passing by. If you asked her who the person was, she might reply, "don't know their name, but people feel better after someone speaks to them." Still good psychology today.

Granny was a Christian Scientist and read her book daily and believed in its teachings, however, she was the first one to want you to call Dr. John or Dr. George Archer if someone was ill.

After Medicare went into effect, she would walk each month to their offices to have her blood pressure checked—said she had it coming to her even if she didn't have any problems and she was going to use it. Another side of her eccentricity?

Granny was quite a seamstress, and for years she would shorten and cuff trousers for Francis Department Store. One time she made what she called a "party dress" for me for Christmas and it fit perfectly. I always wondered how she did it as she had not taken any measurements or fitted it to me. She always wanted the children and me to look nice, as we represented the family.

I've often wondered just how she and her son-in-law, Herbert Salisbury Sr., felt toward each other, as they bickered constantly, and how did Evelyn put up with it? I found out the hard way that I couldn't live like that.

The summer of 1952, Bob was to go to the Army Hospital in Battle Creek, Michigan, for six weeks as part of his ROTC training. He didn't want me to stay in Louisville alone with our six-month-old son while he was gone, so he took us to Prestonsburg.

That was all well and good, until I got there and found that Evelyn had gone to summer school at Morehead College and the two oldest children of Herbert Jr. had been sent up from Texas for the summer.

I could cope with three young children, but coping with Granny Winnie and Herbert Sr. was another story. One would tell the children they couldn't do or have something, and the other immediately told them they could.

They bickered, argued, mumbled and grumbled between themselves, but they then decided to involve me and each came to me to tell their side of the incident. After a couple of days of this, I would just agree with each one and let it go at that. Evelyn was a life saver when she came home on weekends.

After a couple of weeks of this, I had come to the end of my tolerance and patience, and took my son and returned to Louisville. To this day, I can't remember the reason I gave for leaving, how I returned to Louisville as I didn't have a car nor what arrangements had been made for help in regard to caring for the children, meals etc.

All I knew was that I had to get out before I did or said something I would later regret. I never heard a kind word pass between the two of them.

Today, when I think of Granny Winnie, the picture of the family matriarch of the past comes to mind. She was sweet, kind and generous, and I loved her dearly, but she ruled her family and her household with an iron glove. She did so much to help the many people in Floyd County. Her legacy will always remain as you drive down the Dogwood Trail or enjoy a day at Jenny Wiley State Resort Park, and she will pop in and out of the minds of Floyd County people much as she did in their lives.

Yes, Winnie Johns was quite a lady!

of the county's oldest, and Thomas and his bride took up residence in the Johns-DeRossett House on Front Street, the oldest house in Prestonsburg.

The Johns-DeRossett House was an historic house for several reasons. For one thing, its weatherboards enclosed the log cabin that had been erected by Prestonsburg fur trader Solomon DeRossett in 1823. But DeRossett wasn't the only famous person associated with the house. During their retreat from Cynthiana on June 12, 1864, General John Hunt Morgan and his men stopped in Prestonsburg to rest their mounts. While they were doing so, according to Henry Scalf, Morgan stopped at the Johns-DeRossett House to visit the Johns family and spent half an hour resting, drinking a glass of water, and chatting with his lady admirers.

One of the letters found in Winnie's trunk confirms this story. Writing to Kentucky historian Willard Rouse Jillson on November 9, 1963, Winnie disclosed that her mother-in-law, Elizabeth Harkins Johns, an eyewitness of the event, later told her mother, Rosamund Parsons Fitzpatrick, that "John Hunt Morgan stayed in her house (my present house) during his stay in Prestonsburg. Elizabeth was about 23 years old at that time." Winnie's motive in writing the letter was to persuade Jillson to place the John Hunt Morgan Highway Marker in front of the Johns-DeRossett House. The marker was dedicated on May 9, 1964, and Found in Winnie's trunk, this photograph is probably of her father, Jasper Fitzpatrick. According to the 1900 US Census, he was born in Kentucky in 1846.

Our Lady of the Way

honors employees

Our Lady of the Way Hospital knows what it takes to be the best in health care — the teamwork and dedication of all employees.

"Our employees are the reason why Our Lady of the Way received the '100 Top Hospitals: National Benchmarks for Success' award in 1999," says Lowell Jones, president and CEO.

To recognize employees for their contribution to this success, the hospital administration hosted a cookout in Martin on May 26.

The celebration included drawings for a number of prizes, among them Wal-Mart gift certificates, a portable CD player, 35 mm camera, and a 25-inch television.

In addition, Jones announced that all employees would be given a bonus day off with pay.

Festivities were concluded with a 100 Top Hospitals flag-raising ceremony.

"It's quite an honor for Our Lady of the Way to be designated as one of the 100 Top Hospitals in the nation," said Kathy Stumbo, Chief Operating Officer. "The flag will be flown over the hospital for the rest of the year to remind the public of the caliber of hospital we have right here in Floyd County."

The hospital was recognized in December 1999 as a recipient of the award of excellence. The hospital's recognition for clinical excellence and efficient delivery of care was published in Modern Healthcare magazine, a leading health care industry publication.

Other activities to celebrate the award will be held throughout the year.

Only one other hospital in Kentucky — Maysville's Meadowview Regional Medical Center — was on the top 100 list.

The celebration of employees at Our Lady of the Way included some time to relax and enjoy good company.

New publishing company opens

Two veteran journalists have formed a new venture to publish works by individual authors, corporations and non-profit organizations.

The name of the new company is Harpeth House Publishing. It is headquartered in Brentwood, Tennessee.

Pulitzer Prize winner Wendell Rawls, a former New York Times Southern Bureau Chief and editor at the Atlanta Journal-Constitution, and Jack Hurst, longtime nationally-syndicated journalist and historian, will also re-issue a select number of out of print books that have enduring appeal in targeted consumer markets.

Hurst and Rawls both are published authors. Hurst most recently with his widely hailed 1993 biography of Civil War General Nathan Bedford Forrest. Recognized as a leading authority on country music, Hurst also authored a landmark history of the Grand Ole Opry and has long been a writer for the Chicago Tribune.

Rawls is the author of "COLD STORAGE," a fact-based expose of brutalities and atrocities inside a Pennsylvania mental hospital. The book is drawn from investigative reporting for which he was awarded the Pulitzer Prize when he was a national correspondent with the Philadelphia Inquirer, where Hurst was also a distinguished writer.

The two started their careers at The Tennessee newspaper. Hurst was a reporter and a city editor before becoming a veteran of the Vietnam War. He returned to become the newspaper's first time music columnist. He was the first journalist ever to be honored by the Country Music Association, receiving its inaugural national Media Achievement Award in 1981, while he was a columnist for the Tribune.

The partners said the company, which is already involved in a number of book projects, will publish individual authors on a broad and general range of subjects, providing creative analysis, editing, design, printing and marketing direction.

The firm also will publish the works of a select number of previously unpublished writers in the South as well as other regions of the United States.

In addition, Harpeth House will provide turnkey production services for companies and executives seeking to publish corporate books for historical documentation and marketing purposes. They will provide similar services for schools and other non-profit organizations for their use in fund raising and development.

Future plans call for separate publishing divisions for different types of books based on the markets they are designed to attract.

"The publishing industry is being revolutionized by new technologies, and Harpeth House is dedicated to the proposition that the written word will not be lost in the cyber shuffle," Rawls says. "Harpeth will be working with outstanding authors. We are committed to the idea that great writing must be sustained in a place of honor in the new and evolving communications culture."

Rawls said that he and Hurst both have extensive experience with publishers in New York and other major markets. "We know that the corporate culture at Harpeth House will offer authors a happier relationship."

Hurst added that Southern writers would be a high priority of the new company. "In addition to the very pragmatic business aspects of this venture, Wendell Rawls and I share a love of the region and its writers and know their appeal to be universal," he said.

"Both of us have lived, traveled and reported all over America, and we've observed that the Central South is a primary crossroads of ideas—and a special place."

Manuscripts and other communications may be submitted to Harpeth House at P.O. Box 1267, Brentwood, Tennessee 37024. Manuscripts will not be returned unless accompanied by stamped self-addressed mailing material. The company may also be reached at HarpethHouse@aol.com.

How healthy businesses adapt to change

(NAPSA)—What's true in the animal kingdom also holds true for organizations and businesses—the ability to adapt to change is a key to survival.

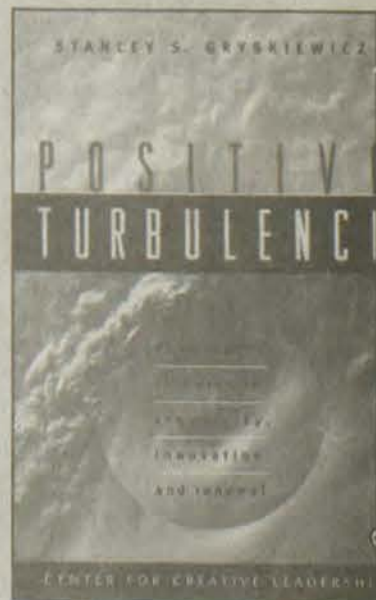

Businesses, both large and small, often struggle to find a balance between structure and spontaneity, order and innovation, change and predictability.

In practical terms, these struggles emerge when companies face issues like integrating new technology in the work place, opening new markets or responding to industry deregulation.

A new book proposes several practical steps that a company's management can take to help a business adapt and thrive on change, both internally and in the world around it.

According to Stan Gryskiewicz, author of Positive Turbulence, companies can do the following:

- Encourage employees to read outside of their field of professional expertise. By engaging in such reading, employees are exposed

New technology makes it easier for small business to own a phone system

(NUE) - Technology for small business is finally getting a face lift, thanks to cutting edge products from New Hampshire-based manufacturer and developer Bizfon Inc.

With their new affordable phone system, they are revolutionizing business communications.

Although there are about nine million small businesses in the United States that employ between two and 25 people, fewer than 10 percent of those businesses currently own an automated phone system.

That's because most phone systems are very expensive. The typical full-featured phone system including voice mail costs anywhere from $10,000 to $20,000 installed, a price that is out of reach for small businesses.

That's why small business owners will be glad to know that they can get a Bizfon system at an affordable price — less than $1,500.

Bizfon has developed a full-featured, affordable phone system for the SOHO (small office/home office) market. It helps make small businesses more available, informative and responsive to customers.

The primary product, the Bizfon 680, is a complete system that has the ability to handle up to six calls simultaneously, so all callers receive prompt attention.

In addition, it has built-in voice mail with private mailboxes for all extensions, five-party digital conferencing, automatic fax detection, external paging, caller ID, and both local and remote call forwarding.

And when callers are placed on hold, Bizfon doesn't forget them. Instead, it automatically tells callers how they can reach another extension, continue to hold, leave a voice

Jody Collins, manager of Highlands Terrace Apartments, was chosen Property Manager of the Year—Elderly Properties, during the annual state HUD conference. With her is Charles Shive Jr., director of the Louisville Multi-Family Program Center.

Kay Ross, second from right, and Fran Howell, right, accepted the award for the Best Neighborhood Network Center in the state during the HUD conference. They were congratulated by Charles Shive and Janice Page of HUD's division in Louisville.

Housing group wins awards

Floyd County's Church Housing Association won two of 12 awards at the annual conference of the Louisville Multi-Family Program Center, a division of the US Department of Housing and Urban Development.

Jody Collins, manager of Highland Terrace Apartments, was chosen as Property Manager of the Year—Elderly Properties. She has managed the complex since August 1966.

Church Housing won the HUD award for Best Neighborhood Network Center (NNC) in Kentucky. Accepting the award were Kay Ross, director of NNC, and Fran Howell, administrator.

Ross, who oversees programs and activities in three centers, has been with the association since 1997. Howell began her career with the association in 1989 as assistant project manager and was promoted to project administrator after the death of Julia May in early 1997.

Church Housing has a Neighborhood Network Center at each property — Highland Terrace, Cliffside Apartments and Highland Heights. The centers are computerized learning centers established to help residents become knowledgeable about economic, social, civic and government issues.

The centers make computer hardware and software available to the residents to enhance employment and educational opportunities. Children in the residences can also go to the center for help with homework and to access the Internet.

Other activities, including wellness programs, are also provided to residents.

The theme of this year's conference was "Millennium Magic — Celebrating our 25th Year." About 650 people, representing Section 8 multi-family and elderly properties throughout the state, attended the conference at the Galt House in Louisville.

For information on the housing facilities, call 886-0608 for Highland Heights, 886-1819 for Cliffside Apartments, or 886-1925 for Highland Terrace.

Office computers connect faster with 'LazrSPEED'

(NAPSA)-Who wins in today's competitive business environment?

Companies with the fastest networks, says Lucent Technologies, which just introduced the LazrSPEED™ fiber cabling system. The LazrSPEED solution connects office computers over networks at speeds 10 times faster than other systems.

The added speed reduces significantly the time required for all computer networking tasks, whether routine data entry or complicated research. That's because desktops connected with Lucent's Systimax® LazrSPEED solution can move information at ten gigabits per second, or ten billion bits of information per second.

"Today's 'super users' are demanding gigabit network speeds," said Jan Mul, director of Lucent's Systimax family of cabling for buildings and campuses.

"Just a few years ago 100 megabit-per-second speeds were used only on computer networks," said Mul. "Today's users require gigabit connectivity and, in the near future, networks will operate at speeds up to 10 gigabits."

Although some fiber systems may support 10-gigabit speeds, they do so for less than 100 feet. LazrSPEED allows link lengths of 100 feet, enabling workers in an entire building to have ultra high-speed networking capabilities. Lucent Technologies' Web site is at www.lucent.com.

to new ideas and practices, some of which have yet to find their way into the mainstream.

• Encourage employees to attend conferences which are outside their own field of study. Again, this exposes employees to new ideas and concepts from other fields that can spark new ideas in their own work.

• Create cross-functional teams to resolve problems and stimulate new ideas. This kind of teamwork builds mutual respect among departments and can improve company performance.

• Bring in outside experts to make presentations to the staff. This can expose an organization to entirely new ways of thinking and new methods.

He believes that harnessing positive turbulence is what give companies the ability to adapt to change and, ultimately, the competitive edge.

BUSINESS professions

Businesses improving productivity and profits

(NAPSA)-For growing and mid-sized companies (20 to 500 employees), the Internet provides the ability to compete successfully and expand the business while maintaining the intimacy so important to successful customer, partner and employee relationships.

A properly designed Internet business solution can help companies looking to:

- Drive up revenues through "high-touch" relationships;
- Improve productivity;
- Increase profits; and
- Strengthen relationships with customers, suppliers and partners.

Like all businesses, growing and mid-sized companies are constantly challenged to achieve new operational efficiencies, shrink their expense lines and improve company-wide communications. The Internet is central to achieving these goals through enabling collaborative computing within a company, streamlining internal business processes and providing access to information anytime.

According to Access Media International, more than 50 percent of growing and mid-sized U.S. businesses expect to increase their data communications spending in the next 12 months. Many of these companies have local-area networks, with approximately two out of five deploying wide-area networks to link remote offices, employees and business partners. Cisco Systems, Inc. (NASDAQ:

CSCO) has assumed a business partner role with numerous growing and mid-sized companies to help them realize these and other networking benefits. These companies need reliable, secure, high-performance Internet business solutions backed by comprehensive services and investment protection.

Through the Cisco Resource Network the company helps align information, solutions, resources and partnerships among software providers to ensure carefully planned and executed solutions. The use of networking technologies proves that growing businesses can indeed cast long and influential shadows. Stronger and more intimate customer relationships lead to increased loyalty and revenues. Tighter connections with suppliers and partners contribute to enhanced relations and an improved competitive stance. And streamlined business processes and improved employee productivity can cut expenses and lead to higher profits.

Is outsourcing hurting your bottom line?

(NUE) - Businesses would likely save more money by using their own in-house color-printing and scanning equipment than by going to an outside source, a survey commissioned by Hewlett-Packard Company found.

Owning your own equipment can positively affect a business's bottom line, the survey revealed.

The nationwide poll of copy chains, office super stores and local copy centers helped determine the average costs for color prints, transparencies and scans.

According to the survey, conducted by market-research firm Roper Starch Worldwide Inc.,

median prices for outsourced services were as follows:

- $1.25 per color-print page. Forty-one percent of survey respondents also charged a set-up fee that averaged $10.
- $2.19 per transparency.
- $9 per scanned page. Twenty percent of respondents also charged a set-up fee averaging $10 per job.

The averages, when compared with printing- and imaging-industry data, showed that many companies could save by using in-house color printing and scanning for presentations, sales literature, marketing materials and information printed from the Internet.

"Better technology at lower prices now makes top-quality color printing and imaging practical for businesses of all sizes," said Greg Wallace, worldwide marketing manager for HP's inkjet systems organization.

"For the equivalent of producing a little more than 300 outsourced color prints - or about $399 - companies could receive thousands more prints from a good desktop or networked inkjet printer and at a much lower price per page."

Color printers reviewed between 1997 and 1999 by Blackstone Research Associates showed in-house printing- per-page costs for supplies at street prices ranging from 16 cents to 83 cents for color inkjets and 11 cents to 41 cents for color laser printers.

With the median price of $1.25 for an outsourced color print, in-house color printing could save a company as much as 42 cents to $1.14 per page.

Businesses can save even more with the addition of more expensive media such as transparencies.

For high-volume projects, HP research found that retail copy centers may be a good alternative. The survey found that the average turnaround time for obtaining 100 color prints at a copy center chain was one hour and 40 minutes.

Investment: A capital idea

(NAPSA)-Whatever items your company may sell or services it may provide, chances are pretty good it involves something shipped by freight train. That's because 40 percent of all U.S. shipping is by rail.

One reason freight trains can do such a good job carrying goods is that they were partially deregulated in 1981. This gave railroads the means to invest in their own futures. They could earn revenues sufficient to cover their costs of operation. As revenues increased, investment increased. Investment led to greater efficiency, sharply improved safety, better service and dramatically reduced rates-down 55 percent since 1980.

In fact, U.S. freight railroads invest more in plant and equipment as a percent of revenues, these days, than does any other major industrial sector.

Prior to 1980, railroads lacked adequate funds to invest in maintenance and capital improvements, and their capital shortfall ran into the billions of dollars.

As the railroads experienced in the days before the Staggers Rail Act of 1980, the system deteriorates rapidly when railroads are capital-starved. Reports the Association of American Railroads, all major U.S. freight railroads are privately-owned and operated. Because they receive no appreciable government funding, they must earn enough year after year to cover the massive spending they require to get the goods to the stores and factories awaiting them.

Economists estimate railroads will have to invest $162 billion in capital improvement the year 2020-the cost equivalent of rebuilding the entire rail system twice over-simply to maintain their current 40 percent share of the freight market. This can only occur if railroads are allowed to operate under a stable and limited set of regulatory constraints, such as they do now.

If, as some have proposed, the government imposes more stringent regulations on the industry, it could be bad economic news for anyone who makes, sells or uses goods shipped by rail.

A big help for many small businesses is the partial deregulation of freight railroads 20 years ago, since that helps keep delivery quick and prices low.

(F) Any purchaser shall have the privilege of paying all or any part of the purchase price or paying said bond or bonds before maturity by paying the balance of principal, together with all accrued interest thereon.

(G) Upon default of said deposit or posting of bond by the purchaser, the Special Master Commissioner shall immediately resale the property upon the same terms and conditions set out herein.

(H) The Special Master Commissioner, before said sale, shall advertise the time, place and terms thereof by inserting a notice of the time, place and terms of said sale, together with a description of the property to be sold in a newspaper approved by this court in this county.
