Repairs cut off power to 285

Heavy storms overnight Wednesday resulted in damage to American Electric Power lines, requiring a planned blackout yesterday evening.

AEP officials began working to repair damage to the McKinney substation caused by tree limbs felled in the storm.

Repairs forced AEP to shut off power to 285 homes in the Eastern, Drift, Turkey Creek, Stumbo Hollow and Maytown areas. The outage was expected to last one hour.

11 sent to hospital following bus crash

Muddy roadway blamed for mishap

Times Staff Report

An accident involving a Floyd County school bus occurred at 7:30 a.m. on September 21 in the Jack's Creek area near Wheelwright in Floyd County.

The driver of the bus, Rita J. Sparkman of Muddy Gut, informed trooper Rick Conn, of the Kentucky State Police, that she was traveling downgrade on Tackett Branch when the bus slid out of control on a muddy road surface. The bus struck a tree and 11 students, along with the driver, were injured as a result.

All twelve were transported to McDowell Appalachian Regional Hospital. Eight of the students and Sparkman were transported to ARH

Trainer agrees to one-year suspension

Times Staff Report

An embattled jockey and horse trainer has given up his fight and agreed to a suspension from the Kentucky Racing Commission.

The Racing Commission announced Wednesday that Morrow, Ohio-native Jason Brewer had agreed to suspension which will prevent him from training horses for one year and from driving for six months. In addition, he will be prevented from reapplying for his driving license for another six months.

Brewer has been at the center of a controversy which erupted following the death of the horse Dark Skies at Thunder Ridge Raceway in July. Shortly after the horse's death, Brewer was suspended for training the horse in an "unconventional manner" and whipping it in an "excessive and brutal manner."

Brewer had filed an appeal to the suspension and was allowed to continue racing and training horses.

As recently as a month ago, Brewer's attorney, Rep. Greg Stumbo, had vowed that his client would be vindicated. But another attorney representing Brewer, Lexington lawyer

David Franklin, told the Lexington Herald-Leader the jockey agreed to the suspension in order to "get it over with" but that he remained innocent of the allegations against him.

Brewer's agreement to the suspension came at the same time a local prosecutor had decided not to get involved in the case after being urged by People for the Ethical Treatment of Animals.

On Monday, Commonwealth's Attorney Brent Turner announced the results of his investigation into Brewer.

Shannon synonymous with his work

by WILLIE ELLIOTT
STAFF WRITER

Very few people are as closely identified with a church as Ted Shannon. Shannon is the pastor of the Drift Pentecostal Church, but when a funeral is held at the church and someone asks where it will be, locals are likely to say "at Ted Shannon's Church" as they are to call the church by name.

After hearing Shannon's history and the history of the church, it is easy to understand how people would have this perception of the church.

Shannon has been preaching since 1950, when he said the Lord called him to the ministry. He said the only training he has for the job is that supplied by God.

Shannon said he does not prepare his sermons beforehand. He said he tried it once and lost his notes. He goes on the notion that if he opens his mouth, God will tell him what to say. He said his church believes in the Father, Son and Holy Ghost, speaking in tongues and holy baptism.

Shannon worked 32 years in the coal mines, most of that time spent doing his regular job and the work of the Lord. His work record reads almost like a history of the coal industry on Left Beaver as he worked for Beaver Coal, Turner Elkhorn, Cedar Mining, Island Creek and ended his career at National Mines on Caney Creek in Knott County.

To say that his wife, Alberta, and his two daughters, Kathy Stumbo and Peggy Pack, idolize their husband and father would be an understatement.

While Shannon will simply say he is doing his job, the ladies will point out that he is always available to see

Union cries foul over plan to downsize

by RALPH B. DAVIS
MANAGING EDITOR

Union leaders are calling into question Kentucky West Virginia Gas Company's announcement last week that it needs to trim up 110 employees from its workforce, saying the effort is nothing more than an attempt to bust the union.

Last Thursday, Kentucky West told members of the Paper, Allied Industries and Chemical Employees Union (PACE) Local 5-512, which represents 150 of the gas company's workers, that it is offering an enhanced retirement and severance package in order to trim its workforce voluntarily.

A statement from the company attributed the downsizing to Kentucky West's largest customer, Equitable Production, with which it had a well tending and service contract.

But representatives of the union see the development as a ploy.

In an interview with The Floyd County Times, Ralph Hood, secretary/treasurer of PACE Local 5-512 and Merlin SESCO, a member of the union negotiating team, said the loss of Equitable Production's business is not what it appears to be because the two companies are actually owned by the same company, Equitable Resources.

Hood and SESCO say that when gas wells were transferred from Kentucky West to Equitable Production, employees were told that the change was only a formality.

"When this happened, we were informed that this was just on paper to help [Equitable Resources] with their taxes, that it would not affect us at all," SESCO said.

Both Hood and SESCO say that employees are now being told that, even if they lose their jobs with Kentucky West, they might still be able to work the same jobs for Equitable Production on a contract basis. That appears to be an attempt by Equitable Resources to replace union workers with contract employees, the two men say.

"They're wanting us to be the contractors, that's what they're looking for," Hood said. "They want to bring us back with no benefits as independent contractors."

Tom Blake, president of Kentucky West, acknowledged that Kentucky West and Equitable Production are part of the same company — calling them "affiliates of the same parent company" — but denied Hood's and SESCO's claims that Kentucky West's plans to downsize were part of a scheme between the two divisions to rid the company of union workers.

Blake, who served as a vice president and general manager with Equitable Production before going to Kentucky West, said the two divisions actually have little to do with each other.

"I've been on both sides and I can tell you these companies are definitely arms-length companies," Blake said. "There is very little cooperation on either side."

To back up their claims, however, Hood and SESCO produced an internal company document from a lawyer representing Equitable Resources.

The memo, written March 2 by Thomas S. Giotto, a business and labor law specialist with the Klett, Lieber, Rooney and Schorling firm in Pittsburgh, raises seven activities for Equitable Resources to complete "before developing a plan for the upcoming negotiations between Kentucky West Virginia Gas Company and PACE."

According to the memo, Equitable Resources needed to:

■ "[D]etermine whether there are any contractual limitations on [Equitable Resources'] ability to cancel the well tending service agreement with [Kentucky West] and then contract with other well tenders to provide that service."

■ "[D]etermine whether there is any evidence that would support an allegation by PACE that [Kentucky West] and [Equitable Resources] are alter egos or a single employer."

■ "[C]onsider when, after the six month termination notice is given to [Kentucky West], it would be appropriate to..."

the sick in time of need. It is not unusual for him to travel to Lexington or Huntington, W. Va., to be on hand to visit the sick and especially be on hand before a patient undergoes surgery.

Shannon stays with patients until they are feeling better or have passed away. He seems to offer an extra degree of comfort to patients.

Shannon Price, who was named in honor of Shannon, insisted that the ambulance wait until the minister could get to him before they transported him to Hazard.

He gets many calls from people to pray for them. His daughters are quick to point out that he immediately offers a prayer for such people no matter if he is eating or doing some other chore.

Shannon does not let denominations interfere with his work. He goes to minister to the sick as human beings and not as being from a particular denomination or church. He allows other churches to use his church for services, and as his daughter Peggy says, "He does it all without complaining." Peggy puts her father in rather elite company saying, "He's one in a million."

Shannon's wife Alberta is most supportive of her husband's work. She says it has been easy to get along with him all these 50 years (they just recently observed their 53rd wedding anniversary) because he is the same all the time.

It is easy to see how the family remains such a close-knit unit. The two girls live within rock-throwing distance of their father's house, take part in church activities and have the good sense not to let the children cause discord in the family.

Alberta says the only source of friction is the children, and "I just put one in one room and one in another until they can get along."

One woman who has the same respect for Shannon as his family is 93-year-old Annie Stumbo of McDowell. Annie is a member of the Old Beaver Regular Baptist Church of Minnie, but Shannon simply respects her beliefs and goes to see her as a human being — and a very wonderful human being at that.

In a tribute to Shannon, Sandy Holt said, "What a world this would be if everyone was like this man, or pastor, Ted Shannon."

Dr. Dickey Tackett, a dentist in McDowell and member of the church said, "A pastor needs the power of the holy spirit, the love of God, with the grace, wisdom and patience of Jesus Christ, to carry on with the great commission given to him. Pastor Ted Shannon has these attributes and more. I feel he is a true man of God."

The church has about 75 members, with members from Melvin to Prestonsburg, and a visit during non-church time would shed some light on how people are prone to call it Ted Shannon's church. He takes care of the upkeep on the building, does the janitorial work, repairs or sees to repairs to the church, and a series of steps leads directly from the church to Shannon's home.

Church services consist of singing, accompanied by guitars, fiddles and other instruments, and a church group called the Drift Pentecostal Singers that include daughters Peggy and Kathy, Kathy Tackett, Sandy Holt, Jenny Allen and his granddaughter Belinda Stumbo. The church has Sunday school in the morning and regular services in the evening.

Two of his granddaughters Jo Jo Pack Hall and Teddi Pack Frasure, got their early training in music at the church and went on to be part of the Kentucky Opry. They give their grandfather credit for the influences he had on their lives.

Union

appropriate to give notice to PACE, local and state governments, and other non-union represented employees of the decision to terminate the service agreement. Factors to consider include possible work stoppage, sabotage to equipment, decline in productivity, public relations, political pressures, etc."

"[D]evelop an outplacement plan of what benefits [Kentucky West] is willing to offer those employees who are laid off as a result of the termination of the service agreement," including severance payments, after deciding to unilaterally implementing a layoff of employees.

"[E]valuate how the union-represented employees may respond to such a termination." The memo also suggested consulting with "a few trustworthy individuals" about the issue.

"[A]nalyze the economic impact that a work stoppage would have on hourly employees" and "complete a similar economic analysis of the company's costs in the event of a work stoppage."

"[D]etermine how the local politicians might react to this plan."

In response to the leaking of the document, Blake acknowledges its authenticity, saying it was stolen from his desk.

"I hate the fact that that's out there because it is attorney-client privilege," Blake said.

Blake denied that the document is a blueprint for dissolving the union at Kentucky West, as Hood and SESCO claim. Instead, Blake said it was merely a planning tool the company used while preparing for significant restructuring. He said the statement in the memo concerning "evidence" of Kentucky West and Equitable Production being "alter egos" was not an admission that the two companies are.

"Obviously, we don't think that and that's why we asked our attorney," Blake said.

Hood and SESCO also disputed Kentucky West's financial troubles by pointing to the company's record earnings over the past two quarters.

On July 20, Kentucky West reported earnings in the second quarter were 133 percent higher than the same quarter a year ago. That followed an announcement of record earning per share in the first quarter.

Hood and SESCO said that didn't sound like a company under a financial pinch to them.

Blake didn't dispute the recent rosy earnings reports, saying Kentucky West's financial fortunes are part of an industrywide trend. However, he said the proposed cut-backs are necessary in order for the Kentucky West to remain competitive.

Public meeting planned to present environmental study results

Results of the first phase of an environmental study of the Tri-State area will be presented at a public meeting at 7 p.m. on Tuesday, September 26, at the Spring Valley High School, 1 Timber Wolf Drive, Huntington, West Virginia.

The U.S. Environmental Protection Agency, together with the Kentucky Department for Environmental Protection and the West Virginia Division of Environmental Protection, have partnered to conduct this complex study. Representatives will be available to answer questions following presentation of the study's results.

The Tri-State Geographic Initiative is one of the first studies of its kind in America. The project goal was to look at a variety of environmental issues, including air quality, drinking water quality and the levels of pollutants contained in Ohio River fish, to determine the presence and levels of pollution that could cause health problems for the area's residents.

In 1995, the study area, composed of Boyd and Greenup counties in Kentucky, Scioto and Lawrence counties in Ohio, and Wayne and Cabell counties in West Virginia, was prioritized into six smaller areas called clusters.

Each cluster was identified, based on the presence of a concentration of large industries. In 1996, the Initiative began work on the first cluster, named the Kenova cluster because of its proximity to Kenova, West Virginia. This cluster also includes the community of Catlettsburg.

Studies that the Initiative performed for this cluster included air pollution monitoring, air pollution modeling, a drinking water evaluation and a fish consumption study.

Over the years, area residents have been concerned about air pollution. The Initiative spent a large amount of time and money evaluating the area's air quality.

During 1996 and 1997, seven monitoring stations were placed in the Kenova cluster, including a reference location, to collect air samples. Over the one-year period, more than 900 air samples were collected at these stations and analyzed to determine the type and amount of pollutants present.

A mobile laboratory was also placed at four locations within the cluster over a 15-week period, during which it collected more than 1,500 additional samples. Results of analyses indicated the presence of a variety of pollutants.

Initiative partners also worked with the four large industries in the Kenova cluster to evaluate the amount of pollutants emitted and to estimate where the pollutants travel after leaving the facilities.

The Ashland Chemical Company, Aristech Chemical Corporation, Calgon Carbon Corporation and Marathon-Ashland Chemical Company, Aristech Chemical Corporation, Calgon Carbon Corporation and Marathon-Ashland Petroleum LLC assisted in this effort by voluntarily providing daily release information. Initiative partners put this information into a computer modeling system to estimate the concentrations of each of the evaluated air pollutants at a variety of locations including schools, nursing homes and local communities.

Some water quality concerns were also a part of the Initiative's focus. Because numbers of area residents catch and eat fish from the Ohio and Big Sandy rivers, concentrations of contaminants in fish living in these waters were examined. Monitoring results from public drinking water facilities were also evaluated.

At the public meeting on September 26, Initiative partners will provide results from this effort and explain what risks are posed to the cluster's residents. In addition, the agencies will explain what actions are being taken to reduce pollution and risk in the area.

Questions pertaining to this public meeting can be directed to Aaron Keatley at the Kentucky Department for Environmental Protection at 502/564-2150.

Suspension

In a letter sent to Sheriff John K. Blackburn and County Attorney Keith Bartley, Turner said that any charges which might result from Brewer's treatment of Dark Skies would not fall under Turner's authority.

"[O]ur office has determined that if any violation of any criminal law occurred, it would appear to be a misdemeanor offense," Turner wrote in the letter. "Obviously, a misdemeanor prosecution would not fall within the purview of the Commonwealth's Attorney's Office."

In his investigation, Turner had compiled records about the incident, including copies of the suspension and a confidential investigative report prepared by Standardbred Investigative Services. Those have now been forwarded to Blackburn.

"I am notifying the Floyd County sheriff, John K. Blackburn, of this case, and requesting that the enclosed materials be reviewed to determine whether or not charges will be pursued," Turner wrote. "As you know, the Floyd County sheriff is the chief law enforcement officer in the county and has the authority to initiate misdemeanor charges in district court."

Religion in public life

The separation of church and state is a remarkable political invention that protects every American's religious freedom. It guarantees that the government won't tell anyone when or what or how to worship. But it is not a muzzle on free religious expression.

Some strict separationists seem to have forgotten that in their criticism of voluntary prayers at school football games and of Sen. Joseph Lieberman's professions of faith during stump speeches. The football prayers and Lieberman's speeches are examples of the vibrancy of the First Amendment.

The Founding Fathers knew a lot about religious persecution. That's why they came here and prohibited an establishment of religion. The Establishment Clause means that the government can't endorse one religion over another or religion over nonreligion. Earlier this year, the U.S. Supreme Court said it also meant that public schools could not orchestrate a student prayer before a football game.

This didn't go over well in the South, where there is no separation between church and football. In response, fans at some games have begun rising to pray.

Some separationists complain that this violates the Establishment Clause. But they are shortchanging the First Amendment. Just as it protects the right of people against the government telling them how to pray, it also protects the right of people to pray. It may not be sensitive for Christians to recite the Lord's Prayer when Jews and Muslims are part of the crowd. But as long as the school isn't involved, they have every right to pray in public — as do the Jews and Muslims.

The same values are at stake in Lieberman's campaign speeches in which he said that "there must be a place for faith in America's public life." The Anti-Defamation League called on Lieberman to stop making overt expressions of religious belief, saying they are contrary to the American ideal. The league sent similar letters earlier this year to other candidates after George W. Bush identified Jesus as his favorite philosopher and Al Gore talked about being born-again.

The league says there is a point where religious speech "becomes inappropriate and even unsettling." Some of Lieberman's statements may have seemed unsettling to some voters, such as when he said, "As a people, we need to reaffirm our faith and renew the dedication of our nation and ourselves to God and God's purpose." But these voters can vote against him if they don't like what he says.

Granted, politicians often seem like religious exhibitionists — showing off their piety to garner votes. But Lieberman and all of the other candidates have every right to invoke their religious faith in their political speeches and to describe how their prescriptions for America stem from their beliefs — whether they be secular or religious.

American presidents have sought God's help for centuries. Religious faith has fueled the civil rights movement, just as it fuels the Religious Right. Only by maintaining the ingenious balance of the First Amendment can America remain the most free country in which to speak and worship.

-Guest Column- Who's negative?

by SHELDON RICHMAN

Why is it considered negative campaigning to say, "My opponent has a credibility problem," but it is not negative to say, "We're for the people; they're for the powerful"?

According to virtually all mainstream observers, the first is a vicious accusation, while the second is a constructive discussion of the issues. But the second is as much an attack on credibility as the first. It's just more subtle.

When Vice President Al Gore says Gov. George W. Bush favors the rich and powerful over the people, he performs by calling him a scoundrel and a liar.

Take taxes. Bush proposes to reduce tax rates across the board, giving every taxpayer a tax cut. Gore says this is a "giveaway" to the rich at the expense of working families. That's a serious charge. The implication is that Bush wants to take something that belongs to working families and give it to rich people. That's not quite what he would do.

First, as the Wall Street Journal points out, the tax cut would give a bigger cut, in percentage terms, to lower-income people than to high-income people. The taxes of a family of four making $35,000 would drop 100 percent, while people with incomes over $100,000 would see their taxes fall by only 10 percent.

But let's assume Gore is right that the tax cut is mainly for the rich. Is something unseemly going on? No, because the rich pay most of the income taxes. A recent Statistics of Income Bulletin points out that in 1997 the top 1 percent paid more than 33 percent of the revenue hauled in by the personal income tax. The top 5 percent paid more than half! The bottom 50 percent of earners paid a mere 4 percent.

In what way could a tax cut for the rich come at the expense of others? Money belongs to those who earn it, and a tax cut simply leaves money in the hands of its producers. It is taxes, not tax cuts, that deprive people of money to which they are entitled.

Perhaps Gore means that working families would be better off if the government had the rich people's money. But we know that is nonsense.

The rich do most of the saving and investing. That raises everyone's standard of living by providing better and cheaper goods and services, and more productive jobs. The rich consume only a tiny percentage of their income. But even their consumption makes others better off.

Back in 1990, Congress, in a fit of class envy, passed a tax on yachts and jewelry. Guess what happened. The rich bought fewer luxuries or bought imports. This put American workers out of jobs, so the Democrats repealed the tax — a tacit confession that "trickle-down" economics (more like cascade-down economics) is valid.

Good things happen when the rich (and everyone else) keep their money. The same cannot be said when the government gets it.

Government is big on promises and bigger on not fulfilling them. The history of the federal government is a chronicle of boondoggles, corruption, and the destruction of wealth. As Henry David Thoreau once said, "This government never furthered any enterprise but by the alacrity with which it got out of the way."

If Bush wanted to get really negative, he could say that Gore apparently wants people to die, because his prescription drug plan will inevitably impose price controls, which will prevent development of lifesaving medicines. It would be a nasty thing to say, but the underlying logic would be valid. That's exactly what the Gore plan would do. Bush, alas, has disarmed himself by embracing his own brand of prescription-drug socialism.

Since wealthier people tend to be healthier and live longer, Bush might further point out that by impeding the creation of wealth, Gore's policies would condemn the poor to poor health and shorter lives. I'm sure Gore is not motivated by a wish to see people suffer. No, he's motivated by a condescending desire for power and is just too busy to figure out what the consequences would be.

Pray for the football team

Editor:

Regardless of what the Supreme Court says, it is time to pray. Our football teams' game scores have fallen until they are lower than our schools' academic scores. I didn't think that was possible, but it is a grim reality.

For years, decades, Prestonsburg High School has been little more than an enabler, a stage or backdrop against which the football team can legitimately obtain resources for a rather luxurious operation. Indeed, just about every aspect of our (oxymoron) educational system seems to have been sacrificed on the altar of the football god. Land, buildings, money and faculty time have been stripped from other programs and laid at the feet of this dubious deity.

Rather like the homage feted to a white elephant, the sacrifice to football grows more costly as a function of time. Can you imagine the screams of anguish if the school spent about $1 million to construct a place where mathematics students could go to think, practice and play at solving problems. The screams would rent the veil in the temple, even though every high school student is required to take math courses. Yet no one raised a whimper when the school spent about 30 percent of its budget on the 1 percent or less that play football.

If football is to be our god, we definitely have problems. To have a losing god seems to be an oxymoron. We need a new god or new high priests. Maybe both. Really, doesn't it seem dumb to sacrifice to a lesser god? Or worse yet, to a losing god?

In the meantime, regardless of what the Supreme Court says, pray. Maybe we can whistle up some divine guidance for our team. The don't appear to have much earthly guidance.

Wayland, Maytown homecomings were excellent

Editor:

To all who were instrumental in getting the Wayland and Maytown homecomings organized, you did a fine job.

At the Wayland building, it was so impressive and the rocking chairs were so inviting they suggested, "Come and sit a spell and reminisce," which I am sure will happen and be enjoyed for generations. With continued financial and physical help, it will be long enjoyed. Congratulations to all concerned on a job well done for the homecoming celebration.

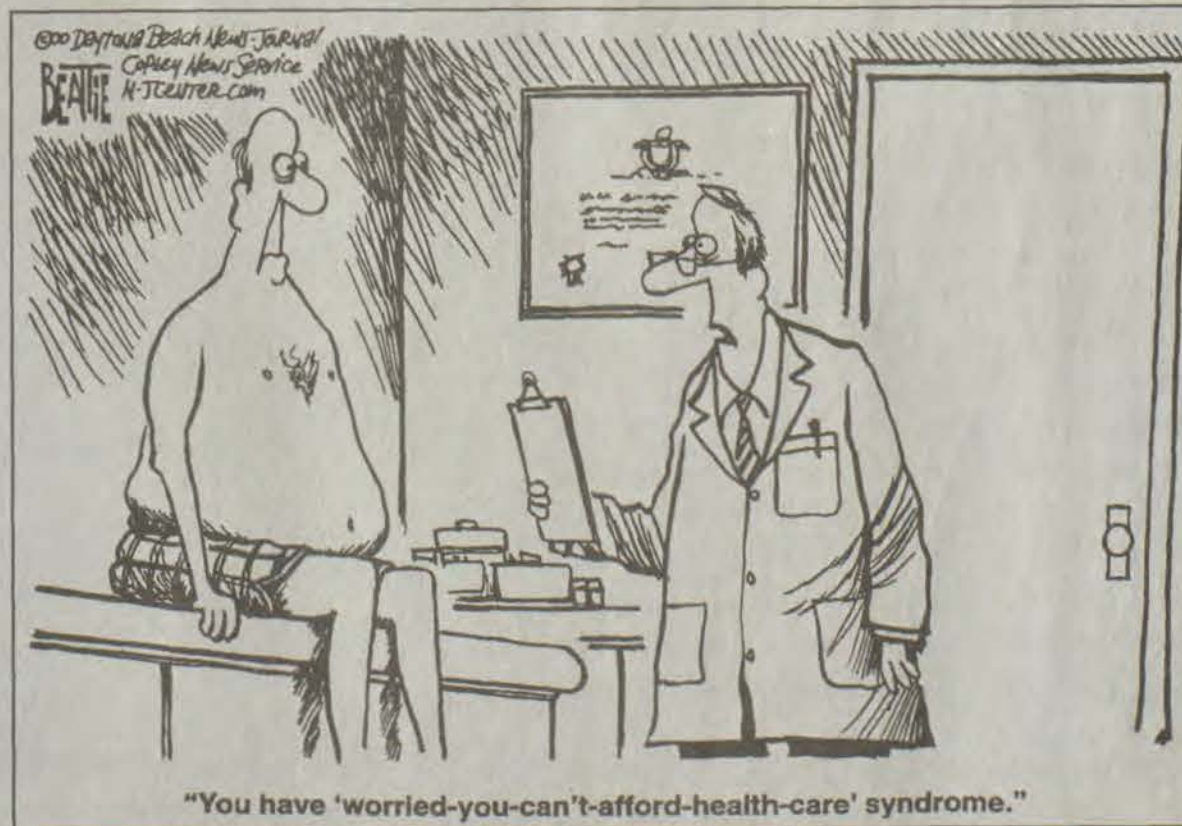

At the Maytown Homecoming, the same. You did an excellent job. To all who worked or participated in any way, friends from Texas and Michigan and areas in between were thrilled and enjoyed being there.

A special thanks goes to Father Ralph Beiting. In his stated remarks, he has big plans for Maytown and knowing him as I do, he will deliver. With financial and physical help, his plans will be realized.

Again, thanks and congratulations on a good job to all.

Lucy Belle, a Tennessee Walker coon hound, is looking for a home after suffering a great deal of abuse.

In search of a good home

by WILLIE ELLIOTT
STAFF WRITER

Penelope Roberts, of Penelope's Pets, has rescued yet another animal and now is looking for a home for the pet.

Roberts said she got about four calls from residents in Goble Roberts community about a dog that was being abused.

Roberts said the residents reported that the dog was being rocked and beaten by the children in the neighborhood.

Roberts went to Goble Roberts and rescued one-year-old (Roberts says she can tell the age of the dog by looking at her teeth) Lucy Belle, the temporary affectionate name she has given the Tennessee Walker hound.

Roberts hopes a good family will adopt Lucy Belle for that — a pet. Even though she is a Walker coon hound, Roberts says she is not capable of hunting due to her condition, which includes being blind in one eye and having had one broken leg.

Roberts also says the adoption would be contingent on the family having Lucy Belle spayed.

Roberts explains that due to her physical condition, the dog would not be able to withstand the rigors of giving birth to a litter of pups.

The vet who examined Lucy Belle said the Walker hound had an excellent disposition and would make a wonderful pet for a family with children.

Roberts expressed a concern about the lack of concern local people have for our animals. She said it would be expected that we would have a great deal of respect for our animals, but she said the exact opposite seems to be true.

Roberts said there are rumors that someone in the Goble Roberts Addition setting out antifreeze to kill dogs. She said her personal pet had been poisoned that way.

She told people that they should not take their frustrations out on the dogs (and other animals) but go after the people who abandon them at a whim. She pleads with people to spay and neuter their animals and the problem of strays will be diminished dramatically.

If interested in Lucy Belle or helping Roberts in her effort to protect our animals, call her at 889-0570.

Kick-off ceremonies for regional tourism initiative scheduled

An new regional tourism initiative is underway and you can get all the details on how you and your community can benefit, on Monday, September 25, at The Center for Rural Development in Somerset.

Thanks to the efforts of Congressman Hal Rogers, (R) 5th District. The Center received a $500,000 grant from the federal Economic Development Administration to develop and implement a regional marketing strategy for the tourism industry in southern and eastern Kentucky.

Just as the Congressman joined with Secretary of Natural Resources, James Bickford, to launch the successful PRIDE Program. (Personal Responsibility in a Desirable Environment), he has partnered with Secretary of Tourism Ann Latta for this initiative.

"The PRIDE Program introduced the concept of 'Clean up,' and I want to expound on that to say, 'Yes, clean up...company's coming.' Because we have improved the visual appearance of our region so dramatically, I believe we are ready to begin marketing our tremendous tourism industry," Rogers said.

The Center for Rural Development is spearheading the new tourism initiative. As part of developing the strategic plan, its tourism team traversed the 40 county-region to meet with individuals and obtain their input as to their specific tourism needs and ideas. The information gathered has been analyzed and added to the overall plan.

On Monday, September 25 at 10 a.m., The Center for Rural Development will host the Tourism Initiative Kickoff. Congressman Rogers, along with Secretary Latta, will be making several tourism related announcements regarding the study to tourism professionals, business leaders, and civic and community officials.

A strategy dedicated to building and marketing the region's rich history, culture, and outdoor recreational opportunities will be unveiled.

"Travel and tourism generated more than $732.7 million to The Center's 40-county service area's local economies and it provided more than 17,194 tourism-related jobs in the region," said Hilda Gay Legg, executive director and CEO of The Center.

"Anyone interested in learning about how this initiative will entice more visitors to the region or about the region-wide image campaign is welcome to attend."

Attraction exhibits will be on display to help attendees discover the treasures of the region's tourism industry, and by visiting each display, viewers will be registered to win dinner, an overnight stay, and breakfast for two at Jenny Wiley State Resort Park in Prestonsburg.

For more information, or to pre-register, contact The Center for Rural Development at 606/677-6000, or register online at www.centertech.com. The first 100 people to pre-register will be entered in a drawing to receive two free tickets to a performance at The Center.

Child care forum slated

A public forum on the quality rating system for child care providers is set for Monday, September 25, from 7 to 8 p.m. at Jenny Wiley State Resort Park.

The rating system relates to KIDS NOW (Kentucky Invests in Developing Success), the governor's Early Childhood Initiative.

The forum offers an opportunity for the public to study and provide feedback on the preliminary recommendations from the Quality Rating System work group.

Input is encouraged from child care providers, parents, public officials, and anyone interested in the well-being of children and families.

Justice graduates

Army Pvt. Bobby R. Justice has graduated from One Station Unit Training (OSUT) at the U.S. Army Infantry School, Fort Benning, Columbus, Georgia. The training consisted of basic military training and advanced individual training (AIT).

During basic training, the trainee received instruction in drill and ceremonies, map reading, tactics, military customs and courtesies, physical fitness, and first aid. The recruit developed combat skills and handled various weapons available to the infantry soldier.

During AIT, the soldier received instruction to qualify as a light-weapons infantryman and an indirect-fire crewman assigned to a rifle or mortar squad. Instruction included weapons qualifications, tactics, patrolling, field communications, combat operations, and survival during a nuclear, biological or chemical attack.

Justice is the son of Susan Ousley and stepson of Tim Ousley of Prestonsburg.

I Want You To Know

A brief moment of darkness was all that I knew, before Heaven's Gate came into my view.

Loved ones and friends I had missed for many years, welcome me with open arms and many happy tears.

All the hurt, fear, and pain that I have ever known, is gone from my life, I am finally home.

I gazed upon the Lord's sweet smiling face, and for the first time in my life I knew I felt his grace.

I know that you miss me, but please dry your eyes, I will always be watching and loving you from my home in the sky.

Rebels

"Their fullback runs the ball hard and they have a good tailback that can get it outside and who runs well in the open field. Allen Central runs the ball and the quarterback can air it out. If we get the defensive effort we got out of our kids last week then I think we'll be all right."

Despite not competing in district play the Allen Central Rebels know an eight-man state championship is still up for grabs. Wins now become even more important in this mid-late regular season. The eight-man post season tournament pairings are based on winning percentages, therefore wins now become even more important for the Rebels.

"Matewan is ranked second in Class A over in West Virginia so you know they're a real sound football team," said Coach Kevin Spurlock. "Matewan's not real big but they execute real well on offense and defense. They throw a lot on offense and they like to option out of the shotgun. On defense they run a 52 and a 53 and they tackle real solid."

Injuries have plagued the Allen Central football team all season long. Two-way line starters Jared Harlow and Z.W. Chaffins remain out of action due to injuries suffered. Harlow will likely return in two weeks. Chaffins has developed a blood clot in his leg and could possibly be out for the season. Quarterback Jonathan Ellis will start tonight's game despite being hampered by an early-season ankle injury.

The Allen Central players have had their backs to the wall before and tonight will probably be their biggest challenge of the season. "We're gonna try to survive these next two weeks, so we can get ready for the South Floyd game," said Spurlock. "We want to try to build up a little momentum heading into the eight-man."

Kickoff for tonight's Allen Central-Matewan game is slated for 7:30.

five-team district.

Whitesburg comes to Prestonsburg as the only unbeaten team in Region 4 with a perfect 4-0 mark. Prestonsburg is 1-3 on the year, losers of their last three games. The Cats opened the season with a convincing 48-0 win over Perry Central, a team that Whitesburg defeated 48-6. Give one point to the Prestonsburg defense.

Tony Sargent, head coach at Whitesburg said the quick start has rather been a surprise.

"Yes, it has. Whitesburg hasn't had a winning season in several years," he said. "We have put a lot of work into the program in hopes of turning things around and getting back to winning consistently."

The Yellowjackets own a victory over highly regarded Matewan, W. Va., in the Coca-Cola Bowl at Shelby Valley. Last Friday night, Whitesburg posted a 38-6 win over a good Leslie County team.

"Leslie County is down some and they are trying to rebuild," said the Whitesburg coach. "I think Prestonsburg beat them in a grid game earlier."

COACH SARGENT SCOUTING REPORT

"Prestonsburg is a team that runs the football and does it well," said Coach Sargent. "They are quick and like to run the sweep. They are a power running team. The (Matt) Stone kid is quick and strong."

"On defense, they like to swarm to the football and we look at them as a team that we have to beat if we are going to turn things around here."

Coach Sargent admitted that Belfry and Prestonsburg have dominated the upper echelon of the district and a win on their home field would be a big plus re-establishing some credibility to the Whitesburg program.

KEYS TO A WHITESBURG WIN

"Because they are so quick and pressure you so much, we need to make the big plays offensively," said the Whitesburg mentor. "Prestonsburg is a team that you are not going to score on an 80-yard drive. We have to make the big plays."

In Whitesburg's first four games, they have been prone to turn the ball over frequently. Coach Sargent said that was an area the Yellowjackets need to improve on.

"We have fumbled the football too many times in our first four games," he said. "We have to eliminate that."

While tonight's game has the big game flavor, Coach Sargent admits Prestonsburg is not an easy place to play.

"It is tougher on us at Prestonsburg," he said. "But like I said, if we are going to turn our program around, then we need to beat Prestonsburg."

Whitesburg returns 10 seniors from last year's team but seven of those start. "We have a lot of juniors," said Coach Sargent.

There have been no cupcakes on the Blackcats' schedule through the first four games. After Perry Central the Cats faced a strong Pikeville team and fell hard to a very good Sheldon Clark squad. Last Friday night, Prestonsburg played strong, Grundy tough for three plus quarters before falling 27-13.

According to Coach Derossett, the Yellowjackets will mirror the Grundy team that ran a lot of cross sweeps last Friday night en route to the victory. Look for Whitesburg to do much the same.

Prestonsburg shook things up some last Friday night as far as their starting roster went. Sophomore Joey Willis was at quarterback and passed for 134 yards and two touchdowns. Sophomore Michael Fannin was moved to fullback.

But on the playing field, some unnecessary penalties negated some good runs by junior Matt Stone.

The ground game was there for Prestonsburg against the bigger Grundy team. The Blackcats could face the same situation against the Yellowjackets.

Game time is set for 7:30 p.m.

Take a trip down Abbey Road with the 'lads'

Beatlemania invades eastern Kentucky

Who can resist the opportunity to take a trip back in time — before the innocence was lost? If you're of a certain age, you'll probably get a little nostalgic, and if you're so inclined, you may even yield to the temptation to sing along.

The Mountain Arts Center on September 30, is hosting "Getback!" featuring cast members of the original Broadway and London productions of "Beatlemania!"

The performers create the illusion of John, Paul, George and Ringo — the Beatles — using authentic costumes, vintage instruments, state-of-the-art digital orchestrations and realistic characterizations.

The two-hour musical and visual experience has thrilled audiences throughout the world. The show includes more than 30 Beatles songs, three costume changes and the recreation of three different eras: the Ed Sullivan Show, Sgt. Pepper and Abbey Road/Let It Be.

Showtime is 8 p.m. For ticket information, call, toll free, 1-888-MAC-ARTS, or locally 886-2623.

Salome's STARS

ARIES

(MARCH 21 TO APRIL 19)

Too much daydreaming could cause you to lose momentum on your current project. Stick with it until it's done. Then indulge in some well-earned woolgathering.

TAURUS

(APRIL 20 TO MAY 20)

Your common sense is warning you to be cautious about committing to a new romantic situation. Listen to your head before you give in to your heart.

GEMINI

(MAY 21 TO JUNE 20)

You still need to be wary of potential schemers who are prepared to double-talk their way into your confidence. Continue to avoid being pulled into workplace intrigues.

CANCER

(JUNE 21 TO JULY 22)

Single or attached Moon Children can expect to see their relationships grow stronger this week. A misunderstanding might create confusion for a while, but it is soon explained away.

LEO

(JULY 23 TO AUGUST 22)

Be ready to expand your new career situation as opportunities start to come your way. Personal relationships are favored for both single and attached Leos and Leonas.

VIRGO

(AUGUST 23 TO SEPTEMBER 22)

A family member shows distress at something you said. Reach out to comfort and reassure your loved one so that the wound can be healed and your relationship restored.

LIBRA

(SEPTEMBER 23 TO OCTOBER 22)

Education looms large in your career aspect this week. Take the time to learn more so you can soon earn more. Also, make time for a long-overdue fun family weekend.

SCORPIO

(OCTOBER 23 TO NOVEMBER 21)

This week can put even your well-developed sense of self-control to the test. Be careful about overindulging in anything, including food, fun — or even work.

SAGITTARIUS

(NOVEMBER 22 TO DECEMBER 21)

A flurry of demands might fluster the usually calm and cool Archer. Instead of trying to deal with them all at once, target just one at a time.

CAPRICORN

(DECEMBER 22 TO JANUARY 19)

You Gorgeous Goats need to take some time away from the hectic pace of your workaday world and kick up your heels with some well-earned fun and games.

AQUARIUS

(JANUARY 20 TO FEBRUARY 18)

Someone who was once a part of your life might be trying to reconcile with you. Spend time getting to know each other again before rushing into any commitment.

PISCES

(FEBRUARY 19 TO MARCH 20)

Some opportunities might demand changes in your life that you're reluctant to consider. But be flexible and avoid making a decision until you know all the details.

YOU WERE BORN THIS WEEK: You have a pioneering spirit that encourages you to look beyond the here and now, and toward whatever might lie beyond the horizon.

Huntington to host circus

The World's Only Living Carousel gets top billing in the 129th edition of Ringling Bros. and Barnum & Bailey Circus, set for the Huntington Civic Arena on October 26-29.

Described as a "masterful display of human and animal collaboration," the carousel features athletes, acrobats, elephants, ostriches, alpacas, yaks and more — "breathtakingly adorned in a montage of dazzling bejeweled costumes," according to the promotional material.

This year's circus also showcases circus families, presenting acts that have spanned several generations. Skills passed from father to son feature masters of the highwire, trapeze, "Globe of Death" and "Wheel of Wonder."

Ringmaster and "vocal virtuoso" Johnathan

Lee Iverson will introduce the audience to the various acts in the three rings.

Ticket holders who arrive an hour before showtime can join Clown Alley's Masters of Mayhem as "they take a powder, get painted and mix it up."

Five performances are scheduled: October 26 and 27, 7:30 p.m.; October 28, 11:30 a.m., 3:30 p.m., and 7:30 p.m.; and October 29, 2 p.m.

Tickets are $15 and $20 and are available at the Huntington Civic Arena, ticketmaster.com, and all Ticketmaster centers. For ticket information, call 304/696-5990.

For information about the circus, visit the web site at www.Ringling.com.

Filmmaker takes Travelogue audience into the past

The Kentucky Center for the Arts in Louisville hosts Sandy Mortimer in its Travelogue Series, Sunday, October 29, at 2 p.m., in Bomhard Theater.

Mortimer will present her film "Belize and Guatemala: The Legacy of the Maya."

Mortimer takes viewers along with her on an informative and enthralling journey from the modern bustle of Guatemala City to the stunning craftsmanship of native artisans in the coastal village of Dangriga to the historical wonders of Altun Ha, a Mayan city that was rebuilt 17 different times over the millennia.

Along the way, Mortimer captures all the charm and beauty of Caribbean markets, lush forests and a cultural mix that combines the ancient and the contemporary.

Mortimer is president of the International Motion Picture and Lecturers Association and has presented films at such prestigious venues as the Carnegie Institute in Pittsburgh and the National Geographic Society in Washington, D.C.

Tickets for this Travelogue Series event are $4 and $8, and can be purchased at the Kentucky Center for the Arts Box Office, or charge by phone at 502/584-7777 or 1-800-775-7777, or visit the Web at www.kentuckycenter.org.

The Kentucky Center Travelogue Series is presented with the support of Carlson Wagonlit Travel.

Don't hold your breath

In this past Sunday's Parade Magazine, Dr. Isadore Rosenfeld suggested 12 ways to stop hiccups. And while hiccups may be an aggravating and oftentimes embarrassing malady, I personally fail to recognize the importance of devoting a third of a page to a condition that can be easily relieved without benefit of medical science.

The article stated that while doctors can explain almost every bodily function, the reason for hiccups remains a mystery. And while there are many medical interventions that are used in order to stop them, none work predictably.

Since most hiccups go away on their own regardless of what you do, you may elect to forego some of the following methods:

1. Pull your tongue forward as far as it will go, or have someone do it for you. (Personally, I don't think I'd ask someone to pull my tongue out of my mouth on purpose. And, anyway, I don't think there would be any takers.)
2. Have someone raise your uvula (the little thingamabob that hangs down from your soft palate—you can see it when you open your mouth wide). I was glad the location of your uvula was clarified in the article because if I asked someone to raise mine, it would be essential that they knew me intimately.
3. Have someone tickle your throat with a cotton-tipped swab, a tongue depressor or a finger, but make sure they stand clear if you've just eaten.

(Somehow I can't imagine anyone gitchy, gitchy gooing down my gullet.)

4. Take small sips of ice water. (I've been told that adding rum and cola to this recipe also represents a cure of sorts.)
5. Gargle with water. (See number 4 and swallow.)
6. Hold your breath, or do a Valsalva maneuver (you might want to do this in private): Breathe in deeply, hold it, then strain down without exhaling. Of course, remember that failure to exhale can result in coma or death.

7. Hyperventilate (breathe deeply, rapidly). Dr. Rosenfeld didn't say exactly how to accomplish this procedure, but I've found that bank overdrafts, leaving the burner on the stove on, and rear-ending moving vehicles cause my respirations to increase.
8. Cough. (Self-explanatory, I suppose, if you're not hiccuping.)
9. Pull your knees up to your chest. (That's easy for Dr. Rosenfeld to say! The last time I got my knees up to my chest my feet were in stirrups.)
10. Put a tablespoon of granulated sugar on the back of your tongue. Let it dissolve. (I tried this one, but I think it would have worked better if I'd left off the peanut butter and Cool Whip.)
11. Tickle your nose until you sneeze. (You may be unaware of this, but it is extremely difficult to tickle your nose. Try a few "knock, knock" jokes. If that fails to arouse a chuckle, spring for a Jeff Foxworthy CD.)

12. Breathe deeply into a paper bag. (Preferably an empty one.) Once, when I had a bad bout of the hiccups, my mother told me to breathe into a grocery sack and I almost died of asphyxiation because I used one of the plastic variety.

Needless to say, eastern Kentuckians know the best way to cure the hiccups is simply by providing a good, old-fashioned scare. (My father once told me that a friend of his had hiccups that were relieved when his wife caught him with her best friend. He also mentioned that a few other things were relieved simultaneously and embarrassingly.)

However, Dr. Rosenfeld felt that startling or frightening a hiccuper, especially if the person was old, fragile or sick, was not a good idea. Maybe the good doctor should add "compromising situations" to the list of remedies.

And, for the record: Joan Williams of Oil Springs passed these "Best Newspaper Headlines of 1999" via internet to her family and friends. I'd like to share a few of my favorites with you: "Something Went Wrong in Jet Crash, Experts Say," "Iraqi Head Seeks Arms," "Is There a Ring of Debris around Uranus?" "Clinton Wins Budget, More Lies Ahead," "War Dims Hope for Peace," "Man Struck by Lightning Faces Battery Charge," "Typhoon Rips through Cemetery, Hundreds Dead."

Thanks, Joan. It was the hardest I'd laughed in ages.

Brown, Williams on tap for Paramount

Junior Brown's comedy songs can make you cry from laughing, but his guitar playing can make you cry in awe of his skill in coaxing sound and emotion from a rather commonplace instrument.

Brown is appearing this evening, September 22, at the Paramount Arts Center in Ashland.

Country music legend Don Williams will perform at the Paramount on October 13. His rich voice has made him a platinum selling recording artist, which such songs as "Livin' on Tulsa Time" and "I Believe in Love."

NEWS OF THE WEIRD

by CHUCK SHEPHERD

Campaign 2000: In September, Robert Salzberg finished a strong second (26 percent) in the Democratic primary for a U.S. House seat from Sarasota, Florida, despite revealing that he would soon plead insanity (that a robot was attacking him) to a charge that he beat up a police lieutenant inside a station house in March. In Maryland, the estranged wife of U.S. Rep. Albert Wynn (husband and wife are black) is contributing a political telephone ad for his opponent, charging that Wynn "does not respect black women (because) he left me for a white woman." And Lanett, Alabama, city councilman Barry Waites was defeated in August, largely through the effort of candidate Rod Spraggins, who finished fourth but whose only issue was to accuse Waites of murdering his own wife two years earlier (but Waites was never charged).

Among recent news reports of stupefyingly high real estate prices in the San Francisco area: a plain three-bedroom house in a nice Palo Alto neighborhood, offered for $3.5 million (renting for $12,000 a month), and a 1,000-square-foot house in San Francisco that "needs everything done to it," according to an agent, offered at $279,000 but which will sell for much more because as of the first of September, 48 people had bid on it.

Rights in Conflict

Newsstand clerk Mike Redina, 44, who is blind, was fired in July because an underage boy illegally bought cigarettes from him (Hauppauge, New York). Chevron lost an employment discrimination case in May because its doctor recommended rejecting an application from a man with a liver disorder because the work site was a highly toxic part of a refinery, and the company would almost certainly have been liable if the man had gotten sicker (El Segundo, California). Parents Michael and Jill Carroll were forced by a court to give their son, 7, his prescribed Ritalin to regulate his school behavior despite the boy's loss of sleep and appetite (Albany, New York).

Grown-ups Setting Examples

Never Laid a Hand on Him: Otto Benjamin II, 39, was arrested in May in Fayetteville, Arkansas, and charged with second-degree battery after police found that he had been disciplining his 15-year-old son by biting him, including several recent incidents that had left permanent scars (on the ear, upper nose area, lip, finger, left thigh, shoulder and right forearm).

Teachers as Role Models: Columbia University literature professor Edward Said, 65, visiting Lebanon on July 3, was photographed throwing stones at Israeli soldiers at the border. (He later explained, "The spirit of the place infected everyone with the same impulse, to make a symbolic gesture of joy that the occupation had ended.") And two weeks later, New York City high school teacher Ryan Ward, 30, was charged with grand larceny after he allegedly rode his bike past a woman on East 26th Street in Manhattan and swiped her purse.

Des Moines, Iowa, anesthesiologist Eric Meek filed a lawsuit in July against surgeon Scott Neff over a February incident that Meek felt took their ongoing professional feud too far. Meek said that when he walked into the operating room to work with Neff on a routine hip replacement at Mercy Medical Center, Neff grabbed the hose attached to a fluid-draining machine and banished Meek from the room by spraying him with a "blood-laden" liquid.

Ironies

Jeff Schmidt was fired in May after 19 years

"American Masters" kicks off season with vibrant portrait of Clint Eastwood

From the moment he walks on screen, the Western hero poses two dramatic questions: Where did he come from and where is he going?

In literature and later in film, the Western became a framework for the exploration of quintessentially American concepts such as freedom, independence, manifest destiny and the ongoing struggle of man against nature.

On the silver screen, no actor of his generation has come to symbolize the myth and ideal of the Western hero more than Clint Eastwood.

Eastwood is the subject for the premiere episode of the 15th season of "American Masters," the award-winning series of documentary profiles examining the lives and achievements of important figures and their indelible impact on the nation's cultural landscape.

"Clint Eastwood: Out of the Shadows, an American Masters Special," a 90-minute portrait of the actor, Academy Award-winning director, musician and international star, airs Wednesday, September 27, at 8 p.m. on KET and Friday, September 29, at 8 p.m. on KET2. The program explores the man and his art by juxtaposing each major stage in Eastwood's life with a corresponding stage in the thematic development of his work.

In this first, in-depth documentary portrait of Eastwood, he tells his own story, from his childhood in Depression-era Northern California to life in the stratosphere of fame and fortune.

Interviews with Eastwood's colleagues, friends and family offer further insight on one of Hollywood's most private and enigmatic personalities.

Sharing their thoughts are Gene Hackman, Meryl Streep, Donald Sutherland, Rip Torn, Eli Wallach, William Goldman, Walter Mosely Jr. and Forest Whitaker.

"Clint Eastwood: Out of the Shadows, an American Masters Special," produced by WNET/New York, Rhapsody Films and BBC, is closed-captioned for the deaf and hard-of-hearing.

News of the Weird

energy to the job. He was canned after a supervisor came across a publicity interview by Schmidt, admitting playfully that he had sometimes worked on the book during office hours at Physics Today.

In July, Genevieve Simenon, a great niece of the late French mystery writer Georges Simenon, confessed to killing her husband and expressed dismay that, but for one detail, she would have gotten away with it, just as the perpetrators in Georges Simenon's stories believe they will. Genevieve had injected her husband with Valium, then beat him to death, scrubbed the crime scene, and convinced the family physician that her husband had merely suffered a heart attack and that the bruises on his face came when he hit his head on a table. However, the funeral director looked under the husband's long hair and noticed that his ear had been beaten off in the attack.

Additional Recent Ironies: An arsonist burned down the Heart of Fire Church (Fern Creek, Kentucky, June). The founder of an alcoholics' self-help group that advocated allowing recovery through moderate drinking pled guilty to DUI that caused the deaths of two people (Ellensburg, Washington, June). A very abled executive with the Massachusetts Commission for the Blind was fined $100 for issuing himself a handicapped parking card (Boston, August).

The Unhygienic Lawyer

In July, the Law Society of Alberta, Canada, announced it had begun an inquiry into whether lawyer John M. Grindley should lose his license to practice because he had harmed the reputation of the profession. Grindley had been convicted in June of drunk driving, but the Law Society filed charges against him only later, after a residential eviction order had been upheld against him based on an inspector's having declared Grindley's home so grungy and putrid-smelling that it was a hazard to public health. Grindley admitted that his apartment is "messy" but said he would fight the charge.

Recurring Themes

One of the most widely circulated offbeat stories of 1999 was the Michigan conviction of canoeist Timothy Boomer under a seldom-used state law banning public cussing. (He used the F word at least 25 times, in an area occupied by recreational boaters, including many kids.) In May 2000, Sioux Falls (South Dakota) high school senior Oakly Haines, who had just won the gold medal in the 400-meter dash at the state track tournament, was disqualified when two volunteer officials overheard him cuss at himself ("damn it" and "son of a bitch") that he had failed to beat the record time of his older brother. Said one of the tattling officials, "When you have children, you want them to be exposed (only) to wonderful, good things."

Thinning the Herd

In June, a 16-year-old boy accidentally fatally shot himself in the head while fleeing a sheriff's deputy who had tried to question him; according to the deputy, the boy had clumsily attempted to shoot back by firing over his shoulder on the run. And in August, during a workplace scuffle in Irvine, California, one man grabbed another in a headlock, pulled his gun, and shot him in the face, but the bullet passed through the target's cheek and into the shooter's own chest, killing him.

Also, in the Last Month ...

Federal prison officials, angered at a recent bribery convict's boast that he planned a lot of golf at a minimum-security facility, shipped him instead to the same New York lockup as John Gotti's son (Lake Placid, New York). A veteran skydiver got his foot caught outside the airplane door two miles up and dangled for 30 minutes, and was still hanging during the landing, but was not seriously hurt (Pittsburgh). A 36-year-old driver was shot in the abdomen during a one-vehicle collision when a handgun in the glove compartment fired as it was jarred by the impact (Eastford, Connecticut).

Crazy quilter, tattoo parlor, Dawson Springs' baseball heritage featured on Kentucky Life

KET's award-winning series Kentucky Life explores some of the many ways Kentuckians express themselves, Saturday, September 30, at 8:30 p.m. on KET. Dave Shuffett hosts.

First, Kentucky Life visits Kay Wimsatt of Whitesville in Daviess County. The former seamstress has "pieced" together a whole new way of expressing herself.

Known as a "crazy quilter," Wimsatt creates quilts that are quite a departure from traditional quilt designs.

Next, Shuffett takes a look at one of the world's oldest forms of art—body art. These days, museums can be found for just about everything—even tattoos. Louisville's Tattoo Charlie's, one of only three tattoo museums in the world, opens its doors for Kentucky Life viewers.

Then, Kentucky Life introduces a man whose art is even more "underground" than tattoos. David Gulotta finds inspiration in the shadowy world of Mammoth Cave.

While most visitors come to the cave to marvel at its natural beauty, Gulotta sees this subterranean world in a whole different light. In this segment, viewers accompany him to the Mammoth Cave depths and see the abstract works that the cave inspires.

Finally, Kentucky Life turns back the clock in the little town of Dawson Springs, which was a thriving resort town in the early part of the 20th century.

That reputation drew the Pittsburgh Pirates to make their training camp there. Now, the city pays homage to its baseball past at Riverside Park, an authentic wooden baseball park.

Kentucky Life is produced and directed by Joy Flynn. Series writer is Ellen Ballard. Segment producers for this program are Gale Worth, Dave Shuffett, Cheryl Beckley and D. Anthony Noel. Craig Cornwell is executive producer.

Six new Saturday morning children's series, based on popular books, premiere on KET

The best in children's programming just got better as KET premieres "PBS Kids Bookworm Bunch," a new, three-hour block of six Saturday morning programs based on popular children's books. Airing Saturdays at 8 a.m. on KET beginning September 30, the programs offer preschoolers an educational alternative to action-based, Saturday-morning cartoons designed for older kids.

Based on the book by Don Freeman, "Corduroy" follows the explorations of a teddy bear and Lisa, his human friend, as they discover the sights, sounds, smells and tastes of a world teeming with unexpected adventures.

The program helps children develop imagination and inventive skills, while introducing core knowledge highlighting life in an urban environment.

"Elliot Moose," based on the work of author Andrea Beck, follows an optimistic contemplative moose and his friends as they fanaticize about sailing on the open sea or flying off to outer space. The program emphasizes effective soil interaction by teaching youngsters to build meaningful friendships.

"George Shrinks," adapted from the book by William Joyce, details the adventures of George, a boy only three inches tall, as he adapts to the challenges of being small in a very large world. The program encourages self-acceptance, the ability to work within limitations and creative problem-solving strategies.

Based on the book by Betty and Michael Paraskevas, "Marvin the Tap Dancing Horse" follows friends from a carnival—Marvin, Diamonds the elephant, Elizabeth the pig, Stripes the Tiger and Eddy Largo, a nine-year-old boy—as they overcome challenges while reveling in the excitement of carnival life.

The program highlights the importance of true friendship, focusing on caring, understanding, loyalty, cooperation and helpfulness.

"Seven Little Monsters," based on the work of author Maurice Sendak, details a family of siblings who are each 10 feet tall. Like all kids, these "children" live in a community, go to school and are expected to do their chores. Like any family, they bicker, support, nurture and love each other. The program encourages ethical behavior and effective co-existence.

"Timothy," based on the book by Rosemary Wells, details the discoveries of a bashful, five-year-old boy as he faces new challenges—such as the first day of school and meeting new friends. The program teaches children about social diversity while developing their social, emotional and school readiness skills.

"PBS Kids Bookworm Bunch" is produced by Nelvana Limited.

'Debating our destiny' on KET documents 40 years of US presidential debates

As Al Gore and George W. Bush gear up for a series of debates to clarify their stances on key issues of the 2000 US presidential race, "Debating Our Destiny: 40 Years of Presidential Debates" documents some of the most memorable moments in four decades of face-offs between US presidential and vice-presidential candidates.

The program airs Sunday, September 24, at 9 p.m. on KET.

The documentary features highlights of debates from 1960 through 1996, as well as exclusive interviews with nearly all of the debate participants—including Presidents Reagan, Clinton, Carter, Bush and Ford; Vice Presidents Quayle and Mondale; and candidates Geraldine Ferraro and John Anderson—conducted by veteran political journalist Jim Lehrer over the past 10 years.

"The presidential debate has become a defining event in American politics," says Lehrer. "It has also become a required gauntlet for anyone attempting to lay claim to the Oval Office. The conversations featured in 'Debating Our Destiny' reveal the stories behind these unforgettable political high-wire acts which helped chart the course of modern American history."

The former candidates offer recollections and candid assessments of their participation in the debates and examine how the debates helped to make or break their campaigns.

Jimmy Carter, for example, recalls how he capitalized on a table-turning gaffe by Gerald Ford, while Geraldine Ferraro discusses both the opportunity and burden she shouldered as the first-ever female, vice-presidential debate participant.

"Debating our Destiny: 40 Years of Presidential Debates," produced by MacNeil/Lehrer Productions, is closed-captioned for the deaf and hard-of-hearing.

Viewers can find out more about programming on KET by visiting the KET Web site at <http://www.ket.org>, a Kentucky.com affiliate.

TELECOMMUNICATIONS TECHNOLOGY

Like Communications Network Technology, the NMETS Communications Technology program is unique. We have developed our program to a high-tech level unequaled by any other; the level needed to prepare you for the communication field of today.

You will learn the latest techniques for installations on the latest in telephony equipment and technologies. With proper training and actual experience, you will develop skills as simple as mounting a bay or as complex as performing a live power cut. You may work for a small independent telephone contractor or a very large, international communications firm.

Our strong relationship with companies allows us to give you this combination of knowledge and experience. By graduation, you will be a skilled technician ready to install, modems equipment such as fiber optics, digital switches, digital cross-connect system and other sophisticated electronic devices.

In an "Information Age," telecommunications is a career field full of opportunities. New Millennium Technical School, Telecommunications Technology program will help you get started.
