Murder suspect writes to prosecutor

Turner refuses to disclose details

PRESTONSBURG — Murder suspect James Austin Gunnells will be returning to Floyd County on Tuesday to be arraigned in Floyd Circuit Court.

Gunnells, who is currently being held at the Scott County Detention Center in Georgetown for "security reasons," was arrested on July 11 for the shooting death of Bonnie Jean Fraley Hall, a night-shift clerk at the Watergap/Lancer Cardinal Country Store, during a robbery attempt at the store. Gunnells will enter circuit court proceedings on Tuesday facing nine felony charges including capital murder and first-degree robbery. An order to transport Gunnells, signed by Circuit Judge John David Caudill on August 27, will result in Gunnells' first court appearance since the case was waived to the grand jury in July.

Missing from the list of charges handed down by the grand jury last month was the possible rape charge, first mentioned by Floyd County Attorney Keith Bartley during Gunnells' district court proceedings.

Bartley had at that time informed District Judge James R. Allen that his office had been prepared to present evidence that could have supported an additional charge of rape against Gunnells.

Reports from officials who interviewed Gunnells just after his arrest in July claim that he confessed to shooting Hall and detailed that he and Hall had engaged in intercourse as well. However, Gunnells contended at the time the episode had been consensual.

Commonwealth's Attorney Brent Turner said on Friday that his office had recently received two letters from Gunnells.

Turner said Gunnells "talked about a lot of things" in his letters and that the corre-

New Floyd districts move forward

PRESTONSBURG — Members of the Floyd County Fiscal Court gave initial approval to an ordinance to establish the county's district boundaries during a meeting Friday.

The ordinance was passed without objection and was entered under the same proposal offered to the court on July 17.

The July proposal came about as a reflection meant to comply with votes registered during the 2000 election to redraw the districts and return the county to a magisterial form of government.

The court's makeup currently consists of three commissioners, but will, when officials begin the next term in 2003, be formed by four magistrates, representing four separate districts, a change that will add a seat to the court.

Based on a census count of 42,441 compiled by the members of reapportionment committee, the ideal magisterial district would consist of 10,600 residents.

When the court received the proposed districts in July, two of the four districts — 3 and 4 — fell close to that desired number of residents with District 3 containing 10,200 residents and District 4 offering 10,700.

However, the remaining districts were not so close.

District 1, which reflected a population of 11,950, rests at well over 1,300 residents from the ideal number, while District 2, in stark comparison, varies from the 10,600 mark by 1,200 residents reflecting a population of 9,400.

Friends, fans say goodbye to 'Big Dipper'

HAZARD — "Nobody knew Richard Blount, but you could ask them who the Big Dipper was, and everybody knew," said Jerry Wyrick, a friend of the sports broadcaster who died August 26 at age 56.

Blount was playing pool in Pikeville in preparation for a tournament when he suffered a heart attack and was taken to Pikeville Methodist Hospital.

Wyrick gave a eulogy for the "Dipper" at a funeral, which was held Thursday at Whitaker Athletic Center near Hazard. About 200 people attended, including coaches whose

After three months, town has police officer once more

WAYLAND — The resignation of former police officer Aaron Kidd left citizens of Wayland with mounting concerns about speeding and other prospective criminal dangers. But those concerns may now be relieved after a new police officer began patrolling the streets on Friday.

Wayland commissioners conditionally hired Maytown resident Keith Frasure on July 16 to fill the three-month vacancy left when Kidd resigned, but in order to qualify, Frasure needed to complete all minimal qualifications for police certification required by the Justice Cabinet.

He sought to fulfill those requirements in Richmond, where Frasure said he spent two weeks undergoing physical training, psychological evaluations, and polygraph and drug testing with Kentucky State Police.

Wayland Commissioners Carl Martin, Mike Gibson, Nadine Conley and Curtis Tufts gathered in a special called meeting on Thursday to make Frasure's hiring official.

Frasure, formerly employed at the Floyd County Courthouse as a bailiff, comes to town with high recommendations and expectations from members of the community and the city commissioners.

"I think Keith is what this town needs," said Conley. "What this town

JACKSON — Charles Morgan Sr., 78, was hunting at Punccheon Creek on August 24 when he spotted a squirrel. He lifted his shotgun toward a tree located on a hill and then shot.

Unfortunately, the shot detoured through the woods and hit a 7-year-old boy in the side of the head.

According to police reports, the Kentucky State Police

Dispatch Center received the call concerning the accident a little after 4 p.m. The ambulance, Breathitt County Police Department officials, and Kentucky State Police officers arrived at the boy's home located on Highland Road.

The boy was taken to the Kentucky River Medical Center and was then flown to the University of Kentucky Medical Center in Lexington.

Bloody Breathitt comes alive

Ralph Marcum, grandnephew of J.B. Marcum, reenacted the death of his relative outside the old Jefferson Hotel on Main Street.

by CARA WADSWORTH
STAFF WRITER

JACKSON — There's a part of history many folks in Breathitt County would rather forget, while others research and discover the underlying social and political currents that caused an estimated 700 killings between 1807 and 1972.

That history encompasses the long-standing "Bloody Breathitt" feuds. The feuds became so intense at times the military was called upon to camp outside the courthouse for weeks on end and keep the peace. Participants in the feuds would make the Hatfields and McCoys seem like peaceable folks in comparison.

One descendant of several feuders became fascinated by the feuding stories while growing up and started researching photos and documents as a senior in high school.

Jackson Times Editor Stephen Bowling, 29, later intensified his research to include court documents, census figures, personal interviews, newspaper accounts and any historical documentation available.

His 18-year photo research and six-year writing passion culminated in Passion for Blood, a historical account that Bowling plans to complete by the end of the month.

"This book is the first real attempt to go beyond the hearsay of myth and legend and really look at the facts of what happened using a scientific approach to the history of the county," explained Bowling.

News of his research and writing interested independent film makers, who began working on the feuding documentary using Bowling's book as the reference for their historical documentary, tentatively titled "Bloody Breathitt."

Filming began in April with a reenactment on Saturday, August 18, when downtown Jackson was taped off by police and history repeated itself.

Descendants of the Bloody Breathitt feuds reenacted segments of that history on Main Street, where many of the feuds took place in a violent struggle for political and economic power.

Bowling wore the period clothes and the badge of Sheriff Ned Callahan, supporter of the powerful Judge Hargis.

The time was May 1903 after the railroad came to town bringing new money and opportunity. With the new commerce came a tremendous political upheaval while citizens jostled for power and money, Bowling explained.

On the day of his death, J.B. Marcum stood on the courthouse steps talking with B.J. Ewen, a businessman and owner of a hotel in town.

Marcum was interrupted by Thomas White who nudged him and jokingly said, "It's a good day to die," while he walked down the courthouse steps.

Right afterward, Curtis Jett came up behind J.B. Marcum with two .38-caliber revolvers and shot him point blank in the head. The two hired guns were later found guilty and sentenced to prison.

Bowling discussed the events that led up to the murder. He noted that J.B. Marcum was a lawyer on the Republican Committee who filed a lawsuit claiming Judge Hargis rigged the last election.

Unfortunately for Marcum, the multimillionaire Democratic county judge didn't take kindly to such accusations in court. Hargis happened to own the largest mercantile store in Eastern Kentucky, which was situated right across the street from the courthouse.

The killing of Marcum brought major media attention from across the country and The Courier Journal dedicated three full pages to the sensational story, the most print they've ever written for a story, said Bowling.

Since 1847, The Lexington Herald, the Kansas City Times, the New York Times, the London Times, and the San Francisco Examiner had sent reporters or stringers to stay in Jackson and cover the violence resulting from the feuds.

Sometimes their accuracy was questionable, Bowling noted.

"Quite honestly, there were a lot of mistakes in newspaper accounts with names and places reported inaccurately," said Bowling.

Bowling researched and found many of the 40 killings that followed Marcum's death in less than a year were ambush shootings probably fired from the empty circuit judge's office window in the courthouse.

Sheriff Callahan's office was situated next door to the traveling circuit judge's office and he was conveniently away from the courthouse when the killings occurred, said Bowling.

Producer Matt Hader explained that they wanted to create a historical documentary to reveal the influences and look what was underneath the surface of the violence.

"We are not trying to slam the people of that time. We don't have a script written because everyone has their own version of what happened..." said

Author Stephen Bowling poses with actors on the set. He portrayed Sheriff Ned Callahan in the documentary filmed in downtown Jackson.

Hader. "Everybody knows what happened at the OK Corral, yet this is more important historically. This is a story we think should be told... These people were intelligent and cunning in their struggle for survival and power."

He explained that research on the documentary took two years with seven hours spent interviewing Bowling on tape. They still plan to come back and interview more local residents and shoot additional footage.

The producers have had initial phone discussions with the History Channel, which recently aired a documentary of the Hatfield-McCoy feud. They plan to finish the documentary and contact various television networks within the next six months.

Meanwhile, Bowling continues to finish the first chapter of Passion For Blood and plans to complete the book within the month. He reported that Viking Press has sent a letter of intent with an option to publish his writing.

B.J. Ewen stands in shock as J.B. Marcum falls to the ground after the two assassins, Curtis Jett and Thomas White, leave the scene of the killing. They were later tried and sent to prison for their part in the murder. After Marcum's death, the feuds increased to an estimated 40 killings in 11 months. Many of those fell on Main Street, from snipers shooting out the window of the circuit judge's office next door to Sheriff Callahan's office.

D™ expands Harley-Davidson's legendary line as first performance custom

MILWAUKEE, Wis. — Bold, expressive and powerful are terms used to describe the newest member of the Harley-Davidson family. In motion or portrait, the long, low-slung lines of the V-Rod evoke muscular images, while the power pulsing from the all-new, liquid-cooled V-Twin Revolution™ engine ignites a passion for performance deeply rooted in Harley-Davidson's American racing bloodline.

An extension of a legendary line of motorcycles, the V-Rod represents the first member of a new family of Harley-Davidson motorcycles - the performance custom. A tightly refined package of pure custom Harley-

Davidson style and attitude backed with the performance of the Revolution engine, the V-Rod plays to your senses and your soul.

At the heart of this custom is the V-Twin Revolution engine. Much like the current air-cooled classic Twin Cam 88, the Revolution's attention to detail makes it yet another centerpiece jewel. Acutely framed by an organic-shaped perimeter tube frame and accentuated by anodized aluminum body panels, the V-Rod flows over a stretched and slammed wheelbase featuring aerodynamic lines and muscular rake. Combined with classic Harley-Davidson styling, the V-Rod represents a thoroughbred of motorcycles, balancing exposed elements with bold lines and high-energy muscle.

The V-Rod represents the fusion of traditional Harley-Davidson styling with liquid-cooled, contemporary performance to create a new family of power infused custom motorcycles. "We understand the jewel-like styling which is enduring to our air-twins, and so do our customers," said Vice President of Styling, Willie G. Davidson. "The V-Rod is an extension of our air-cooled V-Twin heritage."

This blend of qualities is designed to endear the V-Rod to traditional Harley-Davidson customers, and attract new members to the Harley-Davidson family as well.

"The V-Rod is the first member of a new family of Harley-Davidson motorcycles," said Vice President of Engineering, Earl Werner. "This all-American custom was inspired by Harley-Davidson's drag racing heritage and the VR 1000 Superbike race engine. It's really a stunning styling and engineering accomplishment."

Harley-Davidson Motor Company, the only major U.S.-based motorcycle manufacturer, produces heavyweight motorcycles and a complete line of motorcycle parts, accessories and general merchandise. For more information, visit Harley-Davidson's web site at www.harley-davidson.com <<http://www.harley-davidson.com>>

Phones are ringing off the hook

Phones are ringing steadily at local Harley-Davidson dealerships with callers inquiring about the new V-Rod, the first member of a new family of performance custom motorcycles from Harley-Davidson. Ben Bentley, manager of Harley-Davidson of Pikeville, said he is amazed that there is so much local interest and excitement about the new model. "It's not expected to arrive in dealerships until late October but we're already getting calls from a four state area asking if we have it."

Bentley said people wanting to know more about it should tune in to the Discovery Channel during the week of October 8. The cable network is airing a documentary called "The Making of the V-Rod."

Customers can register to win a new V-Rod at the Pikeville store now through September 23. The V-Rod will be given away by Harley-Davidson Motor Company as part of a sweepstakes promotion. The winner will be drawn on October 23.

The Harley-Davidson franchises in Prestonsburg and Pikeville will join other dealerships across the nation in celebrating the Harley New Year on Saturday, September 8. It's a one-day event ringing in the 2002 model year motorcycles and featuring the latest in MotorClothes apparel.

State advises against eating fruits, vegetables exposed to recent flash flood waters

The Food Safety Branch of the Cabinet for Health Services advises people not to eat garden vegetables that have come into contact with recent floodwaters. "Flash flood waters may contain any number of chemicals, cleaners, fuels, toxins as well as raw untreated sewage," said Guy Delius, manager of the Food Safety Branch for the cabinet.

Any fruits and vegetables that have come into direct contact with floodwaters should not be consumed, and raw fruits and vegetables that did not come in contact with the floodwaters but may be located in close proximity to flood areas should be thoroughly washed and peeled or cooked before use.

Gardeners who are in doubt about any food's safety are advised to discard it.

Further questions regarding food safety can be answered by contacting the Food Safety Branch at (502) 564-7181.

Corking the straight pipes

Poor Barry Metcalf. He's not around, at least in Frankfort, to accept any credit for a continuing effort that he championed to stop the dumping of raw sewage into Kentucky's creeks and rivers.

It's a campaign that's gaining new momentum, thanks to $24 million in federal grants that will help Eastern Kentucky homeowners replace their "straight pipes" and help small towns build new sewer lines.

When he was a Republican state senator from Richmond, Mr. Metcalf earned the ridicule of media types (who make their living writing stories and headlines) for wanting to see his name in stories and headlines.

His bill to prevent electricity hookups at new houses until proper sewage disposal was assured ran into trouble in the 1998 legislative session. The subsequent media analysis was that he had spent too much time issuing press releases and not enough counting votes. When his bill finally did pass, he got little credit.

And nobody mentioned that he had run a risk, embracing a good cause that was, nevertheless, unpopular with legions of rural voters — those who didn't live on sewer lines and didn't have the money to install expensive home treatment systems of their own.

Thanks to the efforts of U.S. Rep. Hal Rogers, the federal government is beginning to eliminate those two excuses for the continued existence of some 36,000 "straight pipes" in Eastern Kentucky. Never mind the irony that a stalwart of the conservative Republican House is promoting this big federal handout. It's an unadulterated good. People and communities that need help in protecting their water supplies will get it.

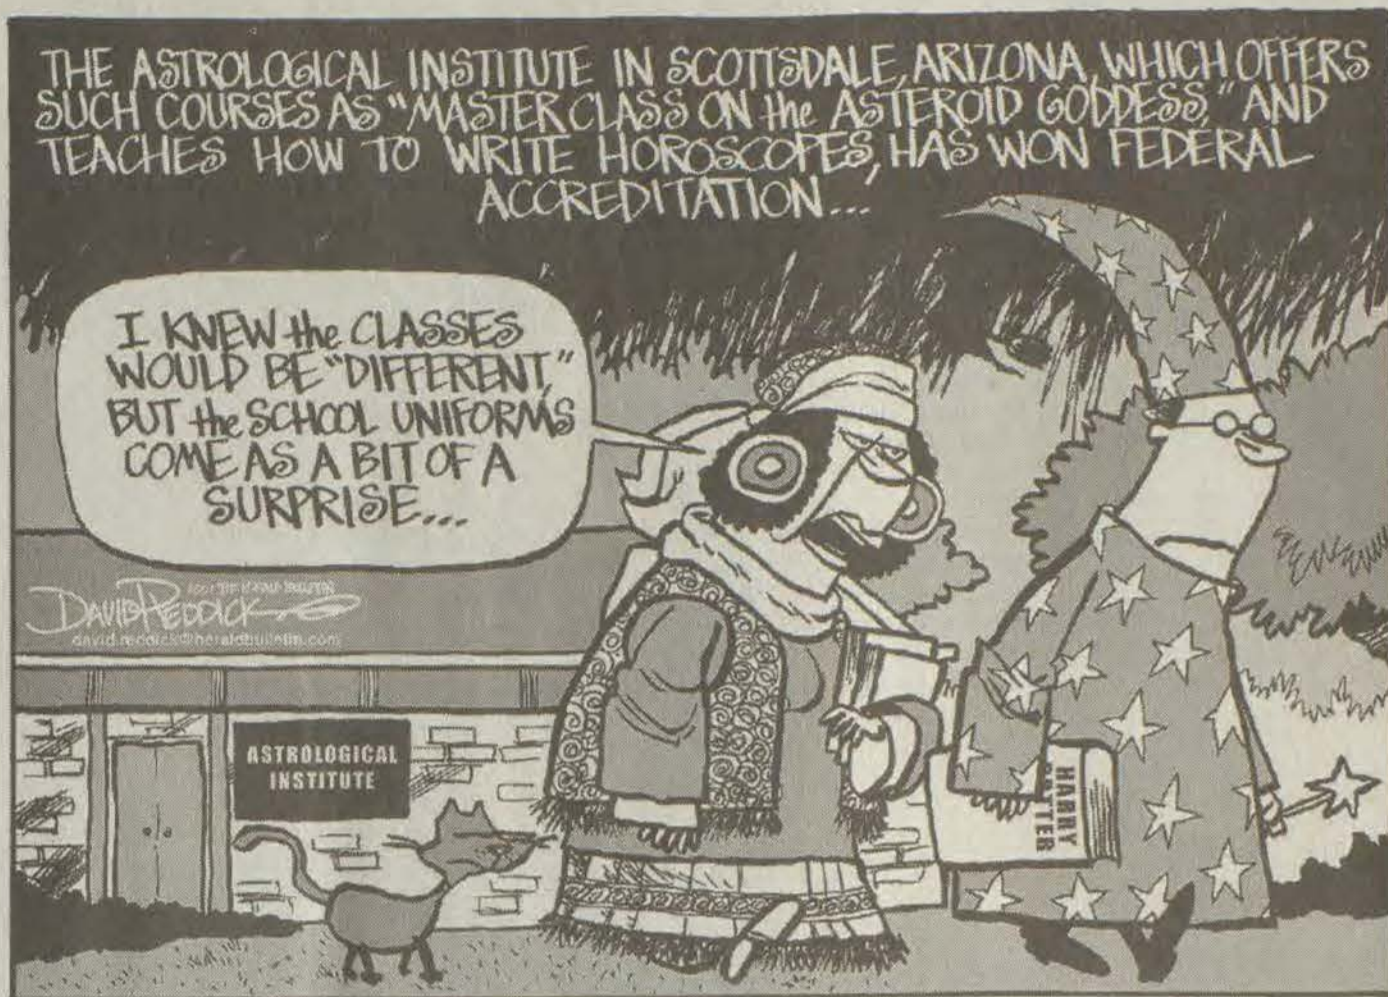

At the time he presided over the resurrection of Mr. Metcalf's bill, then-Sen. Kim Nelson, D-Madisonville, called raw sewage in streams "the No. 1 pollution problem in this state." Certainly, it is the most egregious. Straight pipes are a real, immediate threat to public health.

The fix is less a question of sophisticated technology than of adequate funding. So Rep. Rogers and the federal government intend to throw money at the problem. Good for them.

With these funds becoming available, state regulators promise stricter control of this kind of water pollution in the mountains. State Auditor Ed Hatchett says, after studying the Natural Resources Cabinet's record in this regard, that such a crackdown is long overdue.

The elimination of raw discharge and the extension of sewer service will enhance the quality of life in Eastern Kentucky. Meanwhile, the number of new "straight pipes" is being greatly reduced, too, thanks to Barry Metcalf.

by STEFAN GLEASON

VICE PRESIDENT
NATIONAL RIGHT TO WORK LEGAL DEFENSE
FOUNDATION

While Americans take time out to enjoy the fruits of their labor, countless hardworking Americans have little to celebrate this Labor Day. From the flashing lights of Broadway to the berry farms of California, runaway union power is steamrolling workers from all walks of life.

For union-abused workers, Big Labor's claim to being their "protector" is nothing more than hypocritical nonsense. Consider, for example, three lawsuits recently brought by National Right to Work Legal Defense Foundation attorneys.

Actors Equity Association union officials hit Barry Williams, who played "Greg Brady" on the popular 1970s sitcom "The Brady Bunch," with a $52,000 fine and launched a nationwide smear campaign after he signed on to a non-Equity production of "The Sound of Music."

Williams, who was never told of his right not to join the union, cannot legally be subject to exorbitant fines or any other forms of union "discipline." But those facts haven't fazed union officials, who seem hell-bent on making an example out of him.

In California, berry picker Francisco Alcazar and 150 of his fellow employees at Oxnard Coastal Berry were fired at the demand of United Farm Workers union kingpins. The union, which bills itself as a defender of "exploited farm workers," ordered the mass firing because the workers refused to join the union and pay full union dues.

Meanwhile, Machinists union officials had Iowa single mother Jean Green illegally fired from her job as a United Airlines customer service clerk last Mother's Day for exercising her right not to join the union.

In each instance, union officials violated well-established U.S. Supreme Court precedents, including the landmark CWA vs. Beck decision won by Foundation attorneys, which states that workers cannot be forced to join a union or pay dues attributable to activities unrelated to collective bargaining, like politics.

However, to prevent workers from knowing about these rights, union officials have even gone as far as suing the Bush administration to stop the enforcement of a common sense executive order that merely requires federal contractors to inform employees of their rights. Union bosses ironically complained that the executive order imposes "substantial administrative burdens" on businesses.

Even when workers find out about

Very few are free

Ralph Nader often quotes Cicero's definition of freedom: "The ability to participate in power." An individual being heard by his speech or his vote. To have access to those elected by his vote. By those standards, few Americans are free.

In today's politics where citizens groups find doors shut and only those with money have access, in today's politics where only those with millions can by access to the media, in today's politics when candidates are barred from public debate, we Americans can no longer consider ourselves free.

Today's marriage of government to the corporations is not benefitting the average citizen. The average worker today doing the same job he did in 1970s has less, not more, buying power. Our standard of living has declined from number one in the 1950s to number six and is dropping. While schools crumble, our tax dollars go to subsidize private enterprise relocating our jobs overseas. The last and unforgivable assault on our freedom is the turning over to the World Trade Organization the power to overturn our trade and environmental laws, our sovereignty, our right to pass and enforce laws democratically passed by our representatives in the interest of the American people.

On September 29, it is estimated that some 40,000 demonstrators will descend upon Washington D.C. to protest a meeting of the WTO. I ask all veterans and all those who have had family members who served in the defense of freedom and democracy to join them. Let the Democrats and the Republicans know that they can no longer give away our freedom.

KFTC 20th anniversary

I doubt that a certain handful of citizens woke up on August 17, 1981, with the idea that they would change history. They were focused on reversing some grievous and historic wrongs, and by doing so improve life for their neighbors and community. Meeting in Hazard, their anger and hope took the form of a new organization, the Kentucky Fair Tax Coalition. Today, we're known as Kentuckians for the Commonwealth, KFTC.

John Rosenberg, Mike McCarthy and David Rubenstein from Floyd County were among those in Hazard that day. We've worked with many other Floyd County individuals and groups since, including Parents for Better Schools and Floyd Countians in Action.

In those 20 years, many caring and committed women and men have helped challenge and change numerous injustices, ranging from neighborhood issues to the state constitution. Folks in Floyd County are responsible for helping bring millions of dollars in additional revenue for our schools, giving landowners the right to stop unwanted strip mining on their own land (under broad form deeds), promoting recycling and responsible solid waste management, and winning many other issues that affect our quality of life.

As we mark our 20th anniversary, we wish to publicly acknowledge and thank all who participate in or support KFTC's activities. It is their courage, insight and perseverance that have helped make our democracy more real and Kentucky a better place for us all.

sion. KPhA and KSHP and their members condemn such behavior as a breach of the public trust held by pharmacists.

Such allegations not only violate the code of ethics for pharmacists, but also state pharmacy practice acts and the profession's fundamental responsibility — ensuring that patients receive the correct medication and understand how to make the best use of that medication.

Beyond the allegations of illegality, the actions with which this pharmacist is charged violate the elements of the code of ethics for pharmacists, which states, "a pharmacist places concern for the well-being of the patient at the center of professional praction." The code continues, "Considering the patient-pharmacist relationship as a covenant means that a pharmacist has moral obligations in response to the gift of trust received from society. In return for this gift a pharmacist promises to help individuals achieve optimum benefit from their medications, to be committed to their welfare, and to maintain their trust."

KPhA and KSHP are committed to assuring that the citizens of Kentucky receive the best care possible from pharmacists. their rights, union officials often resort to harassment, intimidation and violence to keep them from exercising those rights. The National Institute for Labor Relations Research has documented nearly 10,000 media-reported incidents of union violence since 1975 and estimates that there have been an additional 80,000 incidents within that same time period.

For example, during a strike at a General Motors brake supplier, Shucheng Huang exercised her right to work in order to provide for her children. United Auto Workers union militants responded with a vicious campaign of terror in which they placed a freshly-severed bloody cow's head on the hood of her car, smashed her windows and followed up with death threats. UAW toughs terrorized other non-striking workers by slashing their tires, destroying workstations, hurling tools and auto parts at them and even pouring hazardous chemicals on them.

Fortunately, justice was won in this case, as Foundation attorneys forced the payment of an undisclosed monetary settlement. But many employees still live and work in fear when they confront union tyranny.

On this Labor Day, these recent stories of union abuse should lay to rest union official's false claims to be defenders of working Americans. When, in their pursuit of power, union bosses systematically trample the civil rights of working men and women, not even their slick lawyers and spinmeisters can conceal the fundamental hypocrisy.

Established in 1968, the National Right to Work Legal Defense Foundation is a non-profit, charitable organization which provides free legal aid to employees whose rights have been violated by compulsory unionism abuses. The Foundation can be reached at 1-800-336-3600 and its website can be accessed at www.nrtw.org.

Kentucky unemployment rate makes unusual July increase

FRANKFORT — Several factors have caused Kentucky's unemployment rate to increase to 5.1 percent in July from a revised 4.7 percent in June, according to the Department for Employment Services, a Cabinet for Workforce Development agency.

The U.S. jobless rate remained at 4.7 percent from June to July.

In 32 years of tracking comparable statistics in Kentucky, the unemployment rate has never increased from June to July. Part of the reason for this year's increase may be explained by a federal government change in the way the statistics are gathered.

"The U.S. Bureau of Labor Statistics has increased the number of households surveyed across the United States. As a result, Kentucky's survey size went up 23 percent to 1,010 households. At this point, we don't know how much of an effect this has had on the rate," said Carlos Cracraft, the department's chief labor market analyst.

Cracraft said that typically in July the unemployment rate decreases because there are more Kentuckians with jobs and fewer unemployed people. This July, the opposite occurred.

"We won't know if this is a trend or just a glitch until the next set of statistics comes out in September," he said. The 5.1 percent unemployment rate for July is the highest rate since February 1999 when it was 5.2 percent.

Five of the nine major job sectors had employment increases in July, Cracraft said.

Agriculture led all other sectors in July with 2,300 new jobs.

The transportation, communications and utilities sector was second with 2,200 more positions in July. "Many of those jobs were the result of the end of a three-month strike in the transportation industry," he said.

Construction had the next highest number with 1,300 new jobs in July. About 800 of these jobs were in special trade categories such as concrete work and installing drywall and roofs. Another 300 positions were added in general building contractors and 200 were in heavy construction work.

The services sector added 100 jobs in July. Seasonal job losses totaling 600 occurred in areas such as membership organizations, educational services, and agricultural services, Cracraft said. However, hotels and other lodging places added 200 positions and business services reported a record gain of 800 jobs in July. Over the past year, the services sector has recorded the most growth of any sector with 17,600 more jobs than in July 2000.

The finance, insurance and real estate sector added 100 jobs in July.

The mining and quarrying sector had the same number of jobs in June and July.

Of all the job sectors, government showed the largest decline with a loss of 16,100 in July. Local education had 16,000 fewer jobs as schools closed for the summer. Many of those jobs are hourly and will pick up again when school resumes.

The manufacturing sector had 4,500 fewer positions in July than June.

"The manufacturing sector has lost jobs in each of the first seven months of 2001. Typically, July is a month when manufacturing employment declines because many factories shut down for a week or two to retool and upgrade equipment or make yearly product changes, and for summer vacations. Such temporary work stoppages result in laying off some employees who have not been employed long enough to qualify for vacation pay," Cracraft said.

In July, durable goods manufacturing jobs declined by 4,600, while nondurable goods positions rose by 100.

The trade sector fell by 600 jobs in July. About 400 of those jobs were in retail establishments and about 200 were in wholesale trade. Within retail trade, food stores fell by 800 jobs, department stores declined by 400 jobs, miscellaneous retail stores decreased by 300 positions and building materials and garden supply stores went down by 200 jobs.

The U.S. Bureau of Labor Statistics monthly estimate of the number of employed Kentuckians for July 2001 was 1,929,797. This figure is down 4,439 from the 1,934,236 employed in June 2001, and down 9,121 from the 1,938,918 Kentuckians employed in July 2000.

The monthly estimate of the number of unemployed Kentuckians for July 2001 was 103,661. This figure is up 8,053 from the 95,608 unemployed in June 2001, and up 21,304 from the 82,357 Kentuckians unemployed in July 2000.

The monthly estimate of the number of Kentuckians in the civilian labor force for July 2001 was 2,033,458. This figure is up 3,614 from the 2,029,844 recorded in June 2001, and up 12,183 from the 2,021,275 recorded for July 2000.

The civilian labor force includes non-military workers and unemployed Kentuckians who are actively seeking work. It does not include unemployed Kentuckians who have not looked for employment within the past four weeks. Employment and unemployment statistics are based on estimates. They are compiled to indicate employment trends rather than actually to count numbers of people who are or are not working.

Pride of the Counties— Kentucky State Fair

Kentucky Farm Bureau Insurance sponsored the Pride of the Counties for the 16th year at the 2001 Kentucky State Fair. The Pride of the Counties offers Kentucky counties the opportunity to showcase their tourist attractions, industries, businesses, arts and crafts, historic sites, and distinctive foods and festivals to fair visitors.

There were 48 exhibits that made up the 2001 Pride of the Counties, with 53 counties being represented throughout the 11 Kentucky Farm Bureau Districts.

This year Woodford County won the Kentucky Farm Bureau Insurance Best Exhibit Award, which was voted on by a three-person committee comprised of representatives from the Kentucky Fair and Exposition Center, the Kentucky Tourism Commission, and Kentucky Farm Bureau Insurance.

Governor Paul Patton, Marshall Coyle, first vice president, Kentucky Farm Bureau and Roger Simpson, executive Vice President, Kentucky Farm Bureau Insurance, presented a plaque on Farm Bureau Day at the Fair to Evelyn Green and Debbie Pierce, Woodford County volunteers. Martha Newby with the Woodford County Conservation District did the planning and organization of the Woodford County booth. The selection for this award is based on overall effectiveness of display, appropriateness of message, clarity of message, creativeness, and professionalism.

The Pride of the Counties had a good year for participation in 2001, and is looking forward to a successful event at the 2002 Kentucky State Fair.

2001 SALE OF CHAMPIONS— KENTUCKY STATE FAIR

Kentucky Farm Bureau Insurance and the Jefferson County Farm Bureau donated the Reserve Grand Champion Steer to Kentucky Harvest.

Rotary members help in free clinic

Rotary Club International members Dr. John Shiber, a PCC biology professor, Dr. Gan Maddiwar, a Floyd County physician, and Surekha Maddiwar, an adjunct professor of business in area colleges, together with Dr. Shiber's wife, Elaine, of Van Lear, were among the nearly 600 professionals and support workers to participate in the Remote Area Medical free clinic in Wise County, Va., on July 20, 21 and 22.

RAM is an international organization based in Knoxville, Tenn. Relying solely upon the generosity of medical professionals, businesses, clubs and private citizens, RAM, under the direction of its founder, Stan Brock, gives free medical care to people living in rural areas all over the world who cannot otherwise afford to get it. The group also provides medical care for livestock and domestic animals.

The Wise County clinic was the second free clinic in the region this year. The first was at Mud Creek in Grethel last April, during which Dr. Maddiwar, a veteran RAM volunteer, helped to coordinate at the local level.

The Wise County RAM project was held at the Lonesome Pine Airport — about 2,682 feet above sea level — and took care of the medical needs of over 2,000 people from the region.

Besides general medical check-ups, patients were able to get dental work performed, with free dentures made for a chosen few; eyes examined, with free prescription glasses for those needing them; blood, lung and bone marrow screening; colon cancer screening; drug/alcohol and mental health counseling; women's health services, such as pap smears and mammographies; heart and circulatory testing; nutrition counseling; and many other things. There were even volunteer babysitters for parents' children.

Meals, with abundant food, snacks and soft drinks, were available for everyone present through donations of numerous local food stores, restaurants and national organizations. The dining tents were open as long as the clinic was — 6 a.m. to 6 p.m. each day.

Chiefly responsible for coordinating the event was the Virginia Lions Club, which provided nearly 200 of the volunteers from within their ranks. With the hard work and support of local and state police, the National Guard, local bus companies, personnel from the University of Virginia in Wise and the contribution of people of all ages from Wise and elsewhere within and outside of the state, their efforts were successful.

RAM is always looking for medical professionals to volunteer their services during three- to seven-day clinics set up at various locations around the world. Some of the sites scheduled to host RAM for the remainder of the year include Chattanooga, Tenn., Guyana (South America) and Siberia.

RAM also plans to be in Mud Creek again next year.

Anyone interested in volunteering for or learning more about RAM can visit the group's website at www.ramusa.org or write to them at their headquarters, 1834 Beech Street, Knoxville, Tenn., 37920. The organization's telephone number is (865) 579-1530.

Random winners will be selected throughout the contest period from Food City's east Kentucky, Tri-Cities, and Knoxville regions. The Food City Treasure Hunt Team will visit the homes of perspective winners on September 15th and 29th and October 13 and 27.

Each winner will receive $200.00 for presenting their Food City ValuCard to the Treasure Hunt Team. An additional $100.00 (up to a maximum of $10,000 per winner) will be awarded for each Food City, Food Club, Pet Club, Top Crest or Top Care corporate brand product shown.

"Last year's promotion was a huge success," commented Steve Smith, chief executive officer and president for K-VA-T Food Stores Inc., Food City's parent company. "We're really looking forward to visiting the homes of this year's winners. You can imagine the excitement that mounts as we inventory the corporate brand products and award the cash prizes. Maryland veteran elected American Legion leader Marylander Richard J. Santos today was elected national commander of the 2.8-million member American Legion, the nation's largest veterans organization.

Delegates to The American Legion 83rd National Convention in San Antonio, chose Santos to lead the National Organization for a one-year term. A career insurance-claim representative, Santos served on active duty in the U.S. Navy during the Vietnam War.

Prior to becoming the Legion's top officer, Santos, 57, a Greenbelt resident and a member of Greenbelt American Legion Post 136, held numerous leadership positions at the organization's post, state and national levels. He also has been serving in gubernatorial appointments to the Maryland Veterans Commission and the Maryland Military Monuments Commission.

Santos will testify September

11, before a joint session of House and Senate veterans-affairs committees. He will focus on funding and improving health care and benefits for America's veterans.

He and his wife of 33 years, Linda Lee, have three children.

Santos took the oath of office along with eight other newly appointed national officers. Serving as Santos' regional vice commanders will be Russell H. Hanseter, Seymour, Wisconsin; Charles R. John, Duncan, Oklahoma; Terry D. Lewis, Philadelphia, Pennsylvania; James F. Mareschal, St. Louis, Montana; and Dale R. Salmen, Round Mountain, Nevada.

National Historian Walter L. Davis of Spring Arbor, Mich.; National Sergeant at Arms Raymond P. Jacques of Laurel, Maryland; and National Chaplain Dr. David Russell of Spotsylvania, Virginia, also participated in the swearing-in ceremony.

UK to honor teachers who made a difference

Is there a teacher or professor who made a lasting impact on your life?

That's a question the University of Kentucky College of Education is asking of Kentuckians in its fourth annual "Teachers Who Made a Difference" program. The nominated teachers will be honored at UK's homecoming Saturday, October 13.

To nominate a teacher, use the online nomination form on the UK College of Education website at www.uky.edu/Education, or send a written nomination to Mary Ann Vimont by fax at (859) 323-1046, or write to University of Kentucky, College of Education, 103 Dickey Hall, Lexington, KY 40506-0017. Deadline for nominations is Friday, September 14.

Since its inception, 310 Kentucky teachers have been honored in the Teachers Who Made a Difference program.

Dermontti Dawson, a future NFL hall-of-famer and former lineman for the UK Wildcats, is the spokesperson for the 2001 Teachers Who Made a Difference program.

Dawson earned his bachelor's degree from the College of Education in 1988 and has gone on to establish a graduate fellowship in education at UK with his wife, Regina.

"Too many times we don't realize the difference teachers make in our lives until we're grown," Dawson said. "I know that my teachers at Meadowthorpe Elementary, Leestown Junior High and Bryan Station High School all had a great influence on me. This program gives anyone the opportunity to thank that special teacher in their lives and I'm glad to offer my support to the program."

The Teachers Who Made a Difference program includes a special recognition event starting at 9 a.m. October 13 in the W.T. Young Library auditorium. A reception will precede the program in the library's gallery.

Big Dipper remembered

by RICK BENTLEY
TIMES COLUMNIST

I've come to expect anything when the phone rings in my office. That's especially true when the other end of the conversation is someone from the newspaper building.

But as long as I live, I doubt I'll forget the call I got last Monday morning.

Late in that conversation, Tom Kopacz apologized for "dropping a bomb" on me. I suppose he had. It was a call I certainly wasn't expecting, and definitely didn't want.

He had told me my friend Richard Blount had passed away.

Most people didn't know Richard Blount was the real name of the Big Dipper. Most people don't know Sting is Steve Borden, or the Undertaker is Mark Calloway. They use these names because it adds to the character, giving them something unique.

Allow me to assure you that Richard Blount needed no help with his character. He was one, and he had a lot of it.

I'll never forget the booming voice that greeted us each Wednesday night during football and basketball seasons these last 10

Keith gets honor from alma mater

First class inducted into Lindsey Wilson College Athletic Hall of Fame

TIMES STAFF REPORT

COLUMBIA - Three former student-athletes and a former men's basketball coach made up the first class that has been inducted into the Lindsey Wilson College Athletic Hall of Fame.

Former basketball stars Doug Peadygraft, Bobby Keith, and Donna Burden-Owens were inducted along with former men's basketball head coach Doug Hines.

Hines, who was Lindsey Wilson's head coach from 1956-60, is still active as the head boys' basketball coach at Union County High School in Sturgis, Kentucky. He recalled with fondness his Blue Raider teams that compiled a record of 109-45 and reached the National Junior College Athletic Association National Tournament in 1959 and 1960.

"We had some great teams back in those days," Hines said. "We routinely beat the freshman teams of some of the finest NCAA Division I basketball programs in the country. Doug Peadygraft and Bobby Keith were two of the better players we had, and they are also two of the finest gentlemen I've ever had the pleasure of knowing."

Marshall appealing student-athlete penalties

TIMES STAFF REPORT

HUNTINGTON, W.Va. - Fourteen Marshall University student-athletes have had their eligibility reinstated by the NCAA, with conditions.

The student-athletes, 12 football players and two men's basketball players, were originally declared ineligible by the University as a result of receiving extra work benefits prior to February of 2000.

The conditions of the reinstatement, pending appeal, are that the student-athletes must sit out a percentage of games during the coming seasons. Two football players will be required to miss 10 percent of the season, or one game. Ten football players will be required to miss 30 percent of the season, or three games.

The two men's basketball players will both be required to miss 30 percent of their season.

Pending appeal of these penalties, the student-athletes will begin serving their penalties immediately.

"This is unfortunate, but I prefer to reserve further comment on this situation until we know the result of our appeal," Marshall football coach Bob Pruett said.

Free elk viewing tours offered by KDFWR

FRANKFORT - The Kentucky Department of Fish and Wildlife Resources (KDFWR) will offer free tours to see and hear rutting elk in Eastern Kentucky this fall.

Biologists with the KDFWR will be leading guided tours on the Addington Enterprises WMA near Hazard each Saturday and Sunday in September (excluding Labor Day Weekend) to catch all the action of the newest addition to wildlife diversity in the Bluegrass State.

Kentucky's elk herd now numbers approximately 1,200 animals in 14 counties in Southeastern Kentucky. Biologists expect that numerous older bulls will be sparing and bugling to gather cows into harems for the breeding season. This activity makes for spectacular observation of wild animals displaying their natural tendencies - activities that until recently haven't been seen in Kentucky for more than 150 years.

The guided tours will be limited to 25 people per day, and will run on September 8, 9, 15, 16, 22, 23, 29 and 30. To participate, observers must contact the KDFWR and pre-register for a specific date. Call 1-(800) 858-1549 weekdays between 8 a.m. and 4:30 p.m. Eastern to register. There is no charge for the tour; however, participants will be required to provide their own transportation to the tour site.

Later this fall, the first elk hunt in Kentucky in 150 years will take place. Twelve people will participate.

Blackcats

halftime (14-7), no, not happenin' on this night.

The Prestonsburg offensive line blocked. The defensive line got a great rush all night long on Tiger quarterback Chas Harmon, a senior. The Blackcats ball carriers, Matt Slone, Mikeal Fannin, Chris Jervis, Matt Setser - all got their 'knocks' in as the Blackcats beat Paintsville 43-23 on a night in which Blackcat Josh Francis was honored and remembered when candles were lit following the conclusion of the opening home game.

Prestonsburg Coach John DeRossett was pleased with the way his team came out and performed amid the hoopla-filled atmosphere. The Blackcat mentor felt his squad contained a very athletic Chas Harmon. He was impressed with Paintsville's work-like attack. "Paintsville came in ready to play tonight," said DeRossett at the conclusion of Friday night's game. "Chas Harmon is a gamer, he's a tough kid. We couldn't get a glove on him all night long. He reminds me a whole lot of the Allen Sperry kid from Breathitt County. Paintsville is a good football team. They'll be a force in the single A playoffs."

Paintsville won the opening coin toss and opted to receive the football to start the game. Faced with a third and 23, Paintsville could get nothing going early on and on fourth down decided to punt the ball away. Prestonsburg, after going on an unsuccessful first drive that included a 29-yard pass to senior end Brandt Brooks from junior quarterback Joey Willis, scored on their second drive of the game. Tommy Nelson scooped up a fumble and darted 40 yards and change for a score at the 3:04 mark of the opening period. The Blackcats could not convert on an extra point attempt.

Paintsville got the ball back before the first quarter came to an end, only to come up unsuccessful on another drive. Willis found receiver Chris Jervis for a score at the 8:56 mark of the second frame to make it 12-0 in favor of the hosts. Senior Austin Clark made successful on a two-point conversion run to put the Blackcats up 14-0.

Paintsville tight end Ryan Jarrell put the Tigers on the scoreboard courtesy of a 20-yard touchdown strike from Chas Harmon. Paintsville place-kicker Jeremy Runyon, a sophomore, made good on the extra-point kick to make it a 14-7 game with 4:36 left to play in the first half.

Coach David LeMaster's Paintsville team had another opportunity to score prior to the end of the half, but instead, gave the ball back to the Tigers when after two timeouts, nothing was doing. Host Prestonsburg had two plays before the end of the half but could not capitalize. LeMaster was pleased with his team's strong first half effort. "I thought we came out that first half and played pretty good," said LeMaster. "I thought the kids played real hard. In my opinion we played the best football team in Eastern Kentucky here tonight in Prestonsburg."

Prestonsburg got the football to begin the second half and it didn't take long to put a score on the board. Senior Matt Slone got the football and took it 68 yards to paydirt. An Aaron Neeley extra-point kick put he Blackcats up 21-14.

Veteran sports broadcaster and Floyd County native Joe Back was on the Prestonsburg sideline. Back commented that he asked Slone for a quick score and he willingly delivered. "I told Matt to get it in the endzone," said Back. "And it that's just what he did - in just one play."

The visiting Tigers stormed right back when Chas Harmon found younger brother junior Tate Harmon on a 42-yard touchdown pass-catch. Senior Dustin Hall was found in the endzone on the conversion to cut the Prestonsburg lead to a 21-15 advantage with 10:45 to play in the third quarter. An eight-yard touchdown run from Slone capped off by a two-point conversion scamper from Joey Willis and a 70-yard touchdown run from a virtually untouched Kevin Jervis put the Blackcats up 35-15. Clark added another two-point conversion run and Prestonsburg enjoyed their biggest lead of the game, a 37-15 advantage. The Tigers got their final score of the game with 48.3 seconds remaining. The two-point conversion was also good. Not to be outdone, Prestonsburg speedster Kevin Jervis nailed the door even more shut on the Tigers when he scored a 36-yard touchdown with just 7.7 seconds left in the game.

With Friday's game in the books, both teams now turn their focuses to their upcoming opponents. For Paintsville, it's Fleming-Neon. For Prestonsburg, it's Whitley County.

A district win is at stake for the Tigers. "We've got to get ready for Fleming-Neon," said LeMaster. "That's a big district game for us. Hopefully we can get back to work and get ready for Neon."

The Blackcats want to make it 4-0 when they go into Whitley County. "Whitley County is a bear," said DeRossett. "They're a big, physical team and like tonight, we've got to come out ready to play."

At 3-0, Prestonsburg still struggles with the tragic loss of junior student-athlete Josh Francis. All the wins in the world cannot make up for the loss of

Purdue

Cooper and Jimmy Dykes providing the game commentary.

Bearcat bobble head dolls will be distributed to the first 3,000 UC fans at the game, courtesy of Pepsi One.

Opening week has been a successful one for UC with the Bearcats owning a 67-36-10 mark in openers. This will be the sixth straight year that Cincinnati has opened the season at home.

The Bearcats will put on the line a six-game home winning streak, the longest since 1981-82.

The Bearcats return 10 starters from the 2000 squad that finished with a 7-5 record and played in the Motor City Bowl. Leading the returners is All-America kicker Jonathan Ruffin, who made 26-of-29 field goals to win the 2000 Lou Groza Award.

Purdue returns 16 starters from last season's squad that won a share of the Big Ten title, ending the year ranked 13th in both major polls.

The head coaches:

The second-winningest coach in Bearcat football history, Rick Minter (Henderson State '77) enters his eighth season at UC with a 34-44-1 record. He trails only Hall of Fame coach Sid Gillman on the UC career wins list and joins Gillman as the only coaches to lead Cincinnati to multiple bowl appearances. Prior to taking over as the Bearcats' head coach in December of 1993, Minter served as the defensive coordinator at Notre Dame from 1992-93, helping coach the Fighting Irish to a 21-2-1 record, two Cotton Bowl victories and a pair of top four national rankings. He was an assistant coach for 16 years at Notre Dame, Ball State, New Mexico State, North Carolina State, Louisiana Tech, Arkansas and Henderson State. Minter has never faced Purdue as a head coach.

Purdue head coach Joe Tiller (Montana State '65) has a 33-16 record beginning his fifth year as head coach at Purdue. He has an 11-year head coaching record of 72-46-1, including a 39-30-1 mark in six seasons at Wyoming. He has guided the Boilermakers to bowl appearances in each of his four seasons, including a Rose Bowl appearance in 2000 when Purdue claimed a share of the Big Ten title, ending the year with a No. 13 ranking in both major polls. Tiller has never faced Cincinnati as a head coach.

UC & the NCAA statistics:

Several Bearcat players received mentions in the final 2000 NCAA statistics. Highlighting the list was junior kicker Jonathan Ruffin, who led the nation with 26 field goals. A complete listing follows:

Bearcat Village

Highlights UC Football Festivities:

Tailgating has once again been made easy for Cincinnati football fans as Bearcat Village returns for a seventh year. Bearcat Village is the cornerstone of all pregame festivities surrounding all football home games. Bearcat Village is fun, food and a festival atmosphere that takes place on the practice fields adjacent to Nippert Stadium prior to each home game. The festivities begin three hours before kickoff (11:30 a.m. for the Purdue game) with live music by the Dixie Highway Band on the WLW/City Beat Stage. Food from The Montgomery Inn, Skyline Chili, LaRosa's and Hillshire Farms is available as well as beer and soda with all food items being reasonably priced. There will also be appearances by the UC Band, cheerleaders and dance team.

Bearcats Catch The Bobblehead Fever:

The first 3,000 Bearcat fans attending the UC-Purdue game will receive a limited edition souvenir Bearcat Bobble head doll, courtesy of Pepsi One. The doll features the Bearcat mascot wearing the home black No. 1 football uniform and holding a football.

UC & ESPN:

The Purdue game will be the seventh Cincinnati game televised by either ESPN or espn2 over the last five years. The contest will be broadcast live on espn2. Cincinnati has posted a 2-4 record on the networks, defeating Boston College and Utah State (in the 1997 Humanitarian Bowl) on espn2 and losing at East Carolina on ESPN in 1997 and falling to East Carolina on ESPN and Syracuse on espn2 in 1998. The last appearance was a 25-14 loss to Marshall in the Motor City Bowl last year.

Purdue game a sellout:

The season-opener against Purdue reached sellout status on Aug. 22, nine days before kickoff. The sellout, the first since Nippert Stadium was expanded to its current 35,000 seat configuration in 1992, guarantees a new single game attendance record will be established. The current mark of 32,924 was set last season in Cincinnati's 45-15 win over Miami University. This will be only the third sellout since the stadium was expanded to 28,000 seats in 1954, and the first achieved before game day. It joins the crowd of 29,546 that saw UC face Miami (Fla.) on Oct. 18, 1986 and a 27,291 crowd for the Sept. 26, 1987 contest vs. Miami (OH). The listed capacity for both games was 26,592.

For openers:

The Bearcats have historically played well in season openers, compiling a 67-36-10 mark in the previous 113 openers. UC opened the 2000 season with a come-from-behind 23-17 win over Army.

A rare freshman start:

Since Rick Minter took over as head coach of the Bearcats in 1994, only two true-freshman have started the first game of the season. A third is expected to accomplish this against Purdue as Doug Monaghan has taken over the starting strong safety slot. Monaghan, who was a first team all-state choice as a senior at Colerain High in Cincinnati last year, will join teammate Josh Gardner and current NFL Bearcat Derrick Ransom (1994) as freshman starters.

UC faces the Big Ten champs... again:

The Purdue game will mark the third straight year that Cincinnati will face the defending Big Ten Conference champions and the second time that the game will be played in Nippert Stadium. UC played Wisconsin the last two years, winning at home in 1999 and falling in overtime in Madison last year. Ohio State is the only Big Ten team on the schedule for 2002.

Home field turf advantage:

The Purdue game will mark the beginning of the second season that the Bearcats have played on the FieldTurf surface in Nippert Stadium. The surface, which combines the properties of natural grass with the durability of a synthetic surface, was installed as part of a $2.3 million upgrade to Nippert Stadium and Meyers Field during the summer of 2000. The Bearcats took little time in adjusting to the new playing surface, winning all six home games last year. The six straight victories is tied for the eighth longest home win streak in Nippert Stadium history and the longest since an eight game streak from 1981-82. The record for the longest home the sport seasons of fall, winter and spring," says NAIA President and CEO Steve Baker. "Of course, the event that is the most familiar to this city's residents and the one that most people have asked about was our Division I men's basketball tournament. Their parents or grandparents had taken them to NAIA games or they had used their lunch hours to catch games when the tournament was here before. We're confident we can revive those traditions and make a prominent contribution to the community once again."

Recently formed by the Olathe Chamber of Commerce, the Olathe Sports Advisory Council will coordinate various aspects of the tournament including housing, transportation, event staffing, marketing and promotions.

The NAIA began as the National Association of Intercollegiate Basketball (NAIB) through the initial tournament and instituted the name change with the addition of new sports in 1952. Municipal Auditorium remained the home of the men's basketball tournament through 1974 when it moved to Kemper Arena for a 19-year run from 1975-93. Tulsa, Okla., hosted the last eight championships at three different sites, the Mabree Center (1994-98), the Donald W. Reynolds Center (1999) and the Tulsa Convention Center (2000-01).

Much of the Division I men's tournament's storied history lies in Kansas City. The first tournament was the brainchild of basketball's creator Dr. James Naismith, Baker University (Kan.) Athletics Director Emil S. Liston and Frank Cramer of Cramer Chemical Company, who first conceptualized the idea over a kitchen table. With the support of many Kansas City businessmen, eight teams appeared in the first tournament.

Municipal Auditorium officially opened one year prior to the birth of the NAIA in 1936, and it has since hosted nearly every type of event from U.S. Presidential Campaigns to the NAIA Indoor Track and Field National Championships. With barrier-free access to the main floor, it has comfortable seating for 10,700 people, including 7,300 permanent upholstered seats.

Perhaps the biggest milestone in NAIA history came in 1948 when, behind the vision of future NAIA executive director Al Duer and Naismith Memorial Hall of Fame basketball coach John McLendon, the NAIA became the first organization to offer post-season opportunities to black student-athletes. Clarence Walker, a reserve guard on John Wooden's Indiana State University team became the first black player to appear in the post-season. In 1953, historically black institutions were voted into NAIA membership and McLendon's Tennessee A&I squad became the first historically black institution to appear in the tournament that year. Four years later, his team also became the first to win the NAIA championship with the first of three straight titles.

Many notable student-athletes played in national tournaments at Municipal including Willis Reed, Earl Monroe, Dick Barnett, Al Tucker and James Spivey. The University of Rio Grande's (Ohio) Clarence "Bevo" Francis, who still holds the record for the greatest one-game scoring performance in college basketball history with 113 points, appeared in the tournament in 1954. Despite averaging 46.5 points per game during that season and 48.3 in the previous year, Francis was held to 28 points in his Municipal debut in front of more than 10,000 fans.

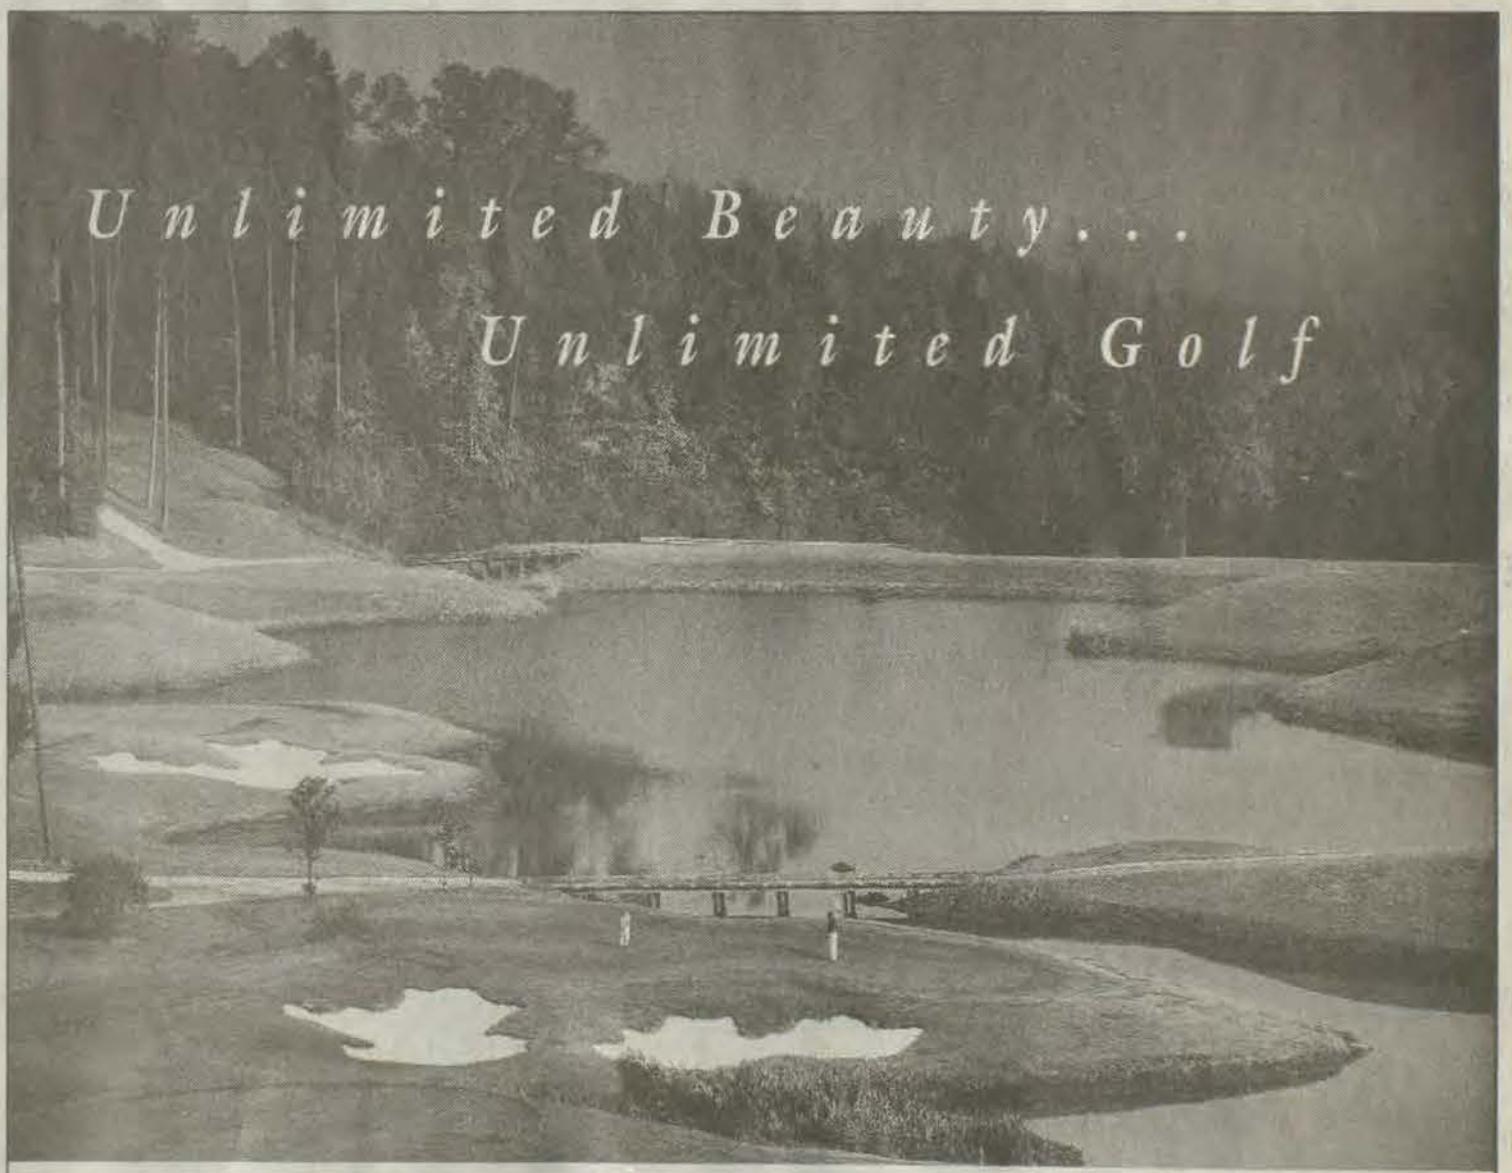

Kentucky State University's Travis "Machine Gun" Grant, the tournament's all-time leading scorer set the mark for points in one game with 60 in 1972. Zelmo Beaty of Prairie View A&M University (Texas) pulled down 96 rebounds in five games (19.2 per game) to become the 1962 MVP. And the "Rockhurst Rule" was created in 1964 when hometown Rockhurst College created one of the biggest traffic jams in Kansas City history with a 7 p.m. tipoff for its first game of that tournament. Thereafter no team from the area could play in a game scheduled near rush hour.

There are many lasting memories from the Kemper tournaments as well including the longest game in NAIA history, a five-overtime thriller won by Grand Canyon State University (Ariz.) over Central State University (Ohio), 88-82, in 1978. College basketball's top two scorers of all-time, John Pierce and Philip Hutcheson of Lipscomb University (Tenn.), played at Kemper as did Southeastern Oklahoma State University's Dennis Rodman, who scored 46 points and grabbed 32 rebounds in a 1986 tournament game.

The six-day NAIA tournament follows a 32-team, single-elimination, Wednesday-to-Tuesday format with 31 games over six days leaving Sunday as the only open date. The NAIA has maintained a 32-team field since 1938 with the exception of the 16-team national tournament held in 1945. The 1944 tournament was canceled due to World War II. NAIA basketball was split into two divisions in 1992. The Division II Men's National Championship is currently held in Branson, Mo., on the campus of the College of the Ozarks.

Don Fields and Pro-Fitness plan on forming a race team for the 2002 season.

Dipper

years or so. His tag line was, "Good day, sports fans!" Dipper delivered it just like he meant it — with gusto.

I've listened to Dipper hundreds of times, and been fortunate enough to be a guest on dozens of shows. He was always kind, always told his listeners I was a little better writer than I really am, and usually gave me a little too much credit as an authority figure on mountain sports.

But that was the Dipper. He wanted us to feel welcome, to feel appreciated, and that we did. Whether it was in the radio station at WIFX or WSGS, or in his home, or in any one of a number of restaurants where he held his radio show these last many years, Dipper was always large, always in charge.

And he was always a friend. I looked forward to state tournaments, because the Dipper was always there. Dipper held court in many a hospitality room, always with a story, always leaving them laughing. Get there early enough before a session, and you were likely to find him holding court out on the court. It didn't matter to Dipper. Anyplace was good enough for him.

Heck, I must confess that Julian Tackett and I once were guests in a Dipper bull session held in a men's room under the stands at Richmond's McBrayer Arena. We were a captive audience, you might say.

He was always there for a pat on the back, always called me his "old buddy," always wanting you to know you were valued. He always succeeded in that.

But Dipper was at his best when he was at his post. I'd hate to have paid his telephone bills these last dozen years. He stayed busy calling media in the dreaded "Golden Triangle" — Lexington, Louisville and Northern Kentucky.

He always had a child to promote, a lineman from Evarts or a point guard from Whitley County. He wasn't bashful about calling the statewide press, insisting that they remember the mountains when it came time to cast ballots for all-state teams. As our friend Mike Fields of the Lexington

Herald-Leader said, "Who's to say it didn't affect me?"

Indeed it did. The Dipper affected us all. He reminded all of us to remember those close to home, that they were as deserving as the players from the Triangle, and if we didn't vote for them, who would?

Many times during my tenure as sports editor he called me, asking me to vote for certain players and asking whom he should support. "They need two votes to get honorable mention," he'd say. "If you vote for them and I do, they'll at least get that."

Most people who saw the Dipper noticed he was a big man. But I'm convinced a man like the Dipper couldn't have survived in a small body. He had too much heart for that. His passion and love of life needed room that isn't available in a lean physique.

Dipper had his own way of honoring these student-athletes. Each January and May, he held a banquet to announce his All-Mountain Team. Seniors from across the region were honored that day.

"This may be the only time these kids are recognized," he once said. "We need to do that, to make them feel important."

I was fortunate enough to be honored at one such banquet. Two years earlier I had presented the first John Bastolla Gridiron Award to John's wife, Ella.

It was shortly after he had passed. On this afternoon, he gave it to me.

That plaque is hanging at the top of a collection in my office, and I'm probably more proud of that than any of the others.

It's ironic I mention John today. It was the Dipper who called a few New Year's Days ago to tell me our friend had passed away. Those are two of the best friends I've made in this business, and now they're gone. If they play high school sports in Heaven, I know who's in the press box.

During the peak of Dipper's popularity, my friends Jason Blanton, Ed Taylor and I decided to have our own banquet to honor players in the 15th Region.

It was a one-time shot, but we wanted to do it up as nice as we could. After dinner that night, it was my task to introduce the speaker. He'd driven over from Hazard to talk to these athletes, to congratulate them, and he'd done it for nothing. It's how he was. When we told him we couldn't pay him, he scoffed. "I don't want paid," he said. "It's an honor to be asked."

When I stood that night, I asked how many people knew his name. Not one person raised their hand — not a player, a coach or even a media member. But they all knew the kind, friendly gentleman who stood before them that night. They all knew the voice. They all knew the passion. They all knew the Dipper. And they all loved him. It was an honor to know the Big Dipper. Good day, sports fan.

 man year. We started the season 1-12 that year, but we showed a lot of improvement and managed to finish with a .500 record.

"After that, things just seemed to take off for me and Lindsey Wilson became like a home to me. I'm really honored to be going into the Hall of Fame and I'd like to personally thank the coaches — Dean Adams and John Wethington — who brought me here and made all this possible."

Plaques honoring the Lindsey Wilson College Hall of Fame inductees are on display in the Cralle Student Union Building.

"We're really pleased to be inducting such a prestigious group in our first Hall of Fame class," said Lindsey Wilson College Athletic Director Bill Elder. "All four members represented Lindsey Wilson with class and dignity, and they've gone on to great careers in their chosen fields."

"Lindsey Wilson College has a great athletic tradition, and we're going to continue to recognize that by honoring our most successful student-athletes and athletic department personnel in the Hall of Fame in years to come."

More Stadium Improvements:

There were additional improvements made to Nippert Stadium over the summer as a new scoreboard was added in the north endzone, complete with state-of-the-art video capabilities. A smaller scoreboard was erected in the southeast corner of the Herschede-Shank pavilion and approximately 10,000 seats were upgraded with new chairbacks.

Ruffin The Kicker:

Hollywood couldn't have scripted a better story than Jonathan Ruffin's season in 2000. The sophomore, who had made just one of his final seven attempts in 1999 and was twice replaced as the regular kicker, was a consensus All-America choice and the winner of the Lou Groza Award, signifying the nation's top kicker. Ruffin, who made 26-of-29 attempts during the year, paid tribute to Groza, who had passed away the week before he received the award, by wearing Groza's No. 76 in the Motor City Bowl. In 2000, Ruffin:

- Set school and Conference USA single-season records for field goals made.

- Led the nation in fields goals made, finishing the year with the sixth highest total in NCAA history.

- Contributed 26 of UC's 29 team field goals, allowing the Bearcats to equal the NCAA team record originally set by UCLA in 1984.

- Set a school record by making a field goal in all 11 games breaking David Rowe's school record of 10 consecutive games with a field goal set in 1991.

- Equalled the school mark for field goals in a game with four vs. both Tulane and UAB and added three field goals in a game against Army and Syracuse.

- Had 104 points to easily surpass the previous school record of 84 kick scoring points set by Tom Dallen in 1993.

- Shattered the school mark for consecutive field goals made with 12 consecutive kicks over a five-game span early in the year.

It's A Consensus — Ruffin Is An All-American:

Jonathan Ruffin was rewarded for his record-setting sophomore season by being named a consensus first team All-America selection. He received All-America accolades from the Football Writer's Association of America, the Walter Camp Football Foundation, the Associated Press, The Sporting News, BCSFootball.com and collegefootballnews.com. He was only the fourth player in school history to receive first team All-America recognition and the first since 1977. In 1975, linebacker Tom Marvaso was a first team choice by The Sporting News and linebacker Clarence Sanders was a first team honoree by Pro Football Weekly. The most recent selection came in 1977 when linebacker Mike Woods was named to the All-America squads by the Associated Press, The Sporting News and the Newspaper Enterprise Association.

Honor

Pendygraft played at Lindsey Wilson from 1958-60, earning NJCAA first-team All-America honors in 1960. He was also voted MVP of the 1960 NJCAA National Tournament after scoring a record 63 points in a game and leading the Blue Raiders to a third-place finish. The Parksville, Kentucky, native went on to play two years for the legendary Adolph Rupp at the University of Kentucky.

"Lindsey Wilson has always been a very special place to me," said Pendygraft, who currently works for the Lincoln County Board of Education in Stanford, Kentucky. "I have a lot of fond memories of my days as a player, and I'm very honored to be going into the Hall of Fame."

Keith was known as a defensive specialist on Lindsey Wilson's 1959 and '60 teams that finished fourth and third, respectively, in the NJCAA National Tournament. He later spent 28 years as the head boys' basketball coach at Clay County High School in his hometown of Manchester, Kentucky, compiling 767 wins, which is third-most in state history. His 86.1 winning percentage is a state record.

"I can honestly say the success I've enjoyed in life would not have been possible if not for Coach Doug Hines and Lindsey Wilson College," Keith said. "If Coach Hines and Lindsey Wilson had not provided me with a full scholarship, it would have been difficult for me to even afford to go to college. I'm very honored and humbled to be included in this first Hall of Fame class."

Burden-Owens signed with Lindsey Wilson in 1988 after a very successful high school basketball career at Ohio County High School, near her hometown of Centertown, Kentucky. The sharp-shooting forward went on to become Lindsey Wilson's all-time leading scorer (male or female) with 2,233 points. Burden-Owens was named All-Kentucky Intercollegiate Athletic Conference and All-NAIA District 32 in 1990, '92, and '93. She also established a Lindsey Wilson women's basketball record when she scored 46 points in a single game. She is now an English teacher and the head girls' softball coach at Taylor County High School in Campbellsville, Kentucky.

"When I first came to Lindsey Wilson I never would have dreamed of being included in the Hall of Fame," Burden-Owens said. "My career got off to kind of a rocky start my fresh-

Caudill promoted at Mayo

PAINTSVILLE — Bobby McCool, chief administrative officer of Mayo Technical College, announced today that Clyde Caudill has been assigned the duties of coordinator of dual credits for Mayo.

Caudill will be working with high schools and area technology centers in Pike, Floyd, Johnson, Martin and Magoffin counties to assist students with enrolling in programs which will earn credit at Mayo as well as high school credit.

"We look forward to strengthening the relationship between Mayo Technical College and the Area Technology Centers," McCool said. "Mr. Caudill is in a unique position to work with these students because he served so many years as an advisor in an area technology center. It is very important that we assist the students to get an early start so that they will be better prepared for a technical career."

Caudill has worked in technical education for 30 years, since 1972. He worked at Belfry Area Technology Center and Millard Area Technology Center in Pike County before coming to Mayo Technical College to teach math. He was recently promoted to associate professor.

Caudill and his wife Dana have two children, Jennifer and Jason.

Hatfield named chairman at Morehead State

MOREHEAD — Dr. Robert Daniel Hatfield, associate professor of management, has been named chair of the Department of Management, Marketing and Real Estate at Morehead State University.

He succeeds Peggy Osborne, associate professor of marketing, who has returned to full-time teaching.

A faculty member in the College of Business since 1997, Dr. Hatfield received the college's 1999-2000 Deans Award for Teaching. Described as an innovator in using online technology in the classroom, he recently led a Human Resource Management class for a job evaluation and review project with the Fleming County Hospital. On the campus, he was highly involved in helping to create a local chapter for the Society for Human Resource Management, which now meets regularly.

Dr. Hatfield has co-authored six refereed journal articles and three textbooks, including "Human Resource Management in South Africa" with Pearson Publishing. He has presented numerous papers at scholarly conferences and has led various seminars and training programs, including the preparation of the Human Resources staff from MSU, St. Claire Hospital and other local employers in becoming certified Human Resources Professionals.

A participant on the University's Student Life, Academic Standards and Appeals committees, Dr. Hatfield is chair of the Faculty Development and Intellectual Contributions committee, and a member of the American Association of Colleges and Schools of Business Accreditation (AACSB) committee, both in the College of Business.

Glasser named 10th president of ECU

Joanne K. Glasser

RICHMOND — Joanne K. Glasser has been named president of Eastern Kentucky University.

The selection of Glasser as the University's 10th president was announced at a special meeting of the ECU Board of Regents Friday, Aug. 24, and follows a nationwide search that culminated in campus visits the previous week by Glasser and four other candidates.

ECU's first female president will begin her new job Monday, Oct. 29. (Mary Roark served as acting president of Eastern from 1909 to 1910.)

"The search process produced five excellent presidential candidates," said C. Fred Rice, chair of ECU's Board of Regents. "Ms. Glasser's qualifications and experiences more closely meet our expectations, and she impressed the University community with her enthusiasm and focus on meeting student needs."

Glasser, 50, comes to ECU from Towson University in Maryland, where she has served as executive vice president of institutional advancement. She was named vice president for institutional advancement in 1995 and was promoted to executive vice president in 1999. From 1993 to 1999, she also served as executive assistant to the president and was the University's fair practices/Affirmative Action officer 1993-95.

Workshop to focus on giving students a greater world view

MOREHEAD — Morehead State University will be the site of a two-day discussion that will focus on promoting cultural diversity on the campus.

"Internationalizing the Campus," a faculty development workshop, will be offered on Friday and Saturday, Sept. 7 and 8, in the Adron Doran University Center.

Current and future faculty, staff and students will reap rewards from this program, according to Dr. Janet Gross, campus coordinator of the workshop.

"Ideas will be presented on ways faculty members may revise current curriculum to incorporate an international dimension into their courses," she said.

"While revising classes currently being offered, MSU will be working toward achieving its general education goals as the campus becomes more culturally diverse and its environment more globally aware," Dr. Gross said.

Instructors for the workshop will include: representatives from the Center for the Study of Global Change at Indiana University in Bloomington; Brian Winchester, director; Dr. Kenneth Steuer, assistant director; and Dr. Bob Goehert, consultant on library acquisitions and electronic media; Roberto Garcia with the MBA Program in the School of Business at IU, and Ann Jean Wilson with the School of Education at the University of Kentucky.

Dr. Roy Ginsberg, professor of government at Skidmore College in Saratoga Springs, N.Y., will be the keynote speaker at the Friday evening dinner. The meal is free to the first 30 registrants; all others will pay $10.

The workshop is funded by a $134,000 grant from the U.S. Department of Education's Undergraduate International Studies and Foreign Language Program. The grant project will be co-directed by Dr. Robert Frank, associate dean of international

"I am deeply honored and extremely humbled by the expression of confidence the Eastern Kentucky University Board of Regents, its faculty, its students, staff, alumni and Richmond community have placed in me," Glasser said.

"Eastern Kentucky University is a wonderful place to learn, to live and to work. As a dynamic center of learning it is a critical resource to the citizens of Kentucky," she added. "I look forward to continuing to expand Eastern Kentucky University's role in offering opportunity, support and cooperation with the community and the region. I also look forward to working with all the people in forging a partnership that will continue to move this institution to even greater regional and national eminence."

While at Towson, Glasser directed a $17.5 million capital campaign, the first major campaign in the institution's history, and developed a University-wide marketing initiative. Her campaign to develop a new institutional corporate identity received national recognition. Towson University is a comprehensive institution serving about 16,000 students.

The Daily Record, a statewide business and legal news publication in Maryland, named Glasser one of Maryland's Top 100 Women in 1997 and again this year.

A native of Baltimore, Md., Glasser earned a bachelor's degree in political science from George Washington University in 1973, a law degree from the University of Maryland School of Law in 1976, and a certificate from the Institute of Education Management in the Harvard Graduate School of Education.

Prior to joining Towson, she served as Baltimore County labor commissioner 1980-86 and as assistant county attorney 1978-80.

She has two children, Jared,

25, and Jacqueline, 15.

The 13-member EKU Presidential Search Committee, chaired by Rice, reviewed applications and nominations and conducted neutral site interviews before selecting five candidates for campus interviews. The committee — composed of student, faculty, staff, alumni, community and Board of Regents representatives — was assisted by A.T. Kearney Executive Search, Alexandria, Va.

Dr. Eugene M. Hughes has served as interim president at EKU since July 1.

Mayo Tech woodworking student makes bunk bed

PAINTSVILLE — Robin Blanton, a mother of three, made a bunk bed in woodworking class this year.

The bed is a solid pine bunk bed for her two boys. It is made of white and spruce pine and stands almost 7 feet tall. It is 36 inches wide and comes apart for easy moving. She hand carved the designs for the headboard and foot boards with each having different designs. There is also a carved side board for the top bunk.

Blanton had no previous experience in wood carving or bed construction. She just decided this is what she wanted to make in this class.

All of the carvings were made with wood chisels and a small sander. The finish is golden oak. The designs on the bed include log cabins, bears, trees, lakes, fish jumping, birds and a possum in a tree.

New classes in woodworking will begin September 10 and are open to all levels of skills.

The classes are held in the carpentry shop lab, room 102 Bldg. D, from 6 until 9 PM on Mondays. Call Michael Froman at 606-789-5321 ext. 285 for more information on this class.

Remember to visit the Mayo website (www.mayotech.org) for complete information on becoming a student at Mayo Technical College.

Hatfield

Before joining MSU's faculty, Dr. Hatfield was an associate professor at West Virginia State College and the University of Louisville, and was an instructor at Bellarmine College. While a doctoral student at Indiana University, he was an associate instructor in the management department.

A former manager of industrial relations/personnel for the Fortune-500 Marley Company, he has also been a management consultant for various firms and an arbitrator/mediator in union and labor relations. Some may say it is ironic that Dr. Hatfield serves as a mediator since he claims heritage to the "feuding" Hatfields of West Virginia.

Dr. Hatfield, earned a Ph.D. degree in management with a minor in the public policy from IU and a law degree from U of L School of Law, where he was the winner of the National Book Award in Administrative Law. An honors program graduate at Western Kentucky University, he earned a Bachelor of Arts degree in speech communication with minors in government and mass communications.

He is a member of the Academy of Management, Midwest Academy of Management, Southwest Federation for Administrative Disciplines, Allied Academies and the Gateway Chapter of the Society for Humane Resource Management.

Medicare AND YOU

Q Does the original Medicare plan cover mental health care in the hospital?

A Medicare covers outpatient and inpatient mental health care. Mental health care includes services and programs to help find, diagnose and treat mental health problems. Medicare Part A helps pay to 190 days of inpatient care in a Medicare certified psychiatric facility during your lifetime. There is no lifetime limit on inpatient care given in general hospitals. You may get care in general hospitals after you reach the 190 day lifetime limit in specialty psychiatric hospitals. There is only a certain number of days in each benefit period that Medicare will help to pay for your care in a general hospital.

Q What Part of Medicare helps pay for outpatient mental health care?

A Medicare Part B will help pay for mental health services given outside a hospital. This would include the care you receive in the hospital's outpatient department that do not require an overnight stay. You might also get this care in a clinic or the office of a doctor or therapist.

Q Will Medicare help pay for services of any provider of mental health care?

A No. It is important to know that Medicare only pays for these services when they are given by a health care professional that can be paid by Medicare. You should ask your psychologist, social worker or other health professional if they accept Medicare payment before you schedule treatment.

LEXINGTON — Cardinal Hill Rehabilitation Hospital, Lexington, was named one of "America's Best Hospitals" in an annual report released by U.S. News and World Report. The report ranked Cardinal Hill as the 30th, and the 50th hospital in the areas of rheumatology and neurology and neurosurgery, respectively. Fun, education and more fun describes OLW 'Kids Health Kamp'

MARTIN — Our Lady of the Way Hospital's community health education program recently conducted their 10th annual "Kid's Health Kamp" for area youth. The camp provides activities, entertainment, educational programs, healthy meals and competition for the attending children.

The camp was begun in 1992 and has been co-sponsored by Christian Appalachian Project since 2000. It is designed for children ages 7-13 who have asthma, diabetes and/ or weight control problems, as well as for children who might not otherwise have had an opportunity to attend a summer camp of another nature.

Thirty-four campers attended this year's camp session.

Kicking off the first night of camp after a day of crafts, nature walks, swimming, basketball and Bingo was a traditional campfire segment where children enjoyed socializing and treats. The following day, the campers began a week of educational sessions covering their particular area of need along with more fun outdoor activities. The campers were also treated to a night at the Jenny Wiley Theatre to see "The Legend of Jenny Wiley."

Fun and competition were the emphasis during the middle of the week, with the Land and Water Olympics. These games consisted of water relay, underwater relay, biggest splash, topside relay, backward relay, basketball free-throw, 100 yard dash, sack race, and spoon race. Campers and counselors alike were treated to a carnival of games and prizes following the day of exercise and activity.

Justice receives state recognition

MARTIN — Pamela Justice, city clerk for the City of Martin, has been awarded the Certified Kentucky Municipal Clerk designation. Justice received her award on August 10 at the Kentucky Municipal Clerks Institute in Lexington.

In order to be eligible for this recognition, Justice was required to complete 100 hours of instruction over a three-year period through the Kentucky Municipal Clerks Institute, an International Institute of Municipal Clerks Accredited Certification program. Completion of this level of training allows municipal clerks to become eligible for certification on the international level.

Justice was among only eighteen Kentucky clerks who, at the end of the three year period, achieved this accomplishment. Since the program's inception in 1981, only 262 municipal clerks have completed the program.

The program is conducted annually by Skills Development Institute, a division of Paul Combs and Associates, Inc.,

The ABC's of Marketing the Small Business

MOREHEAD — The Morehead State University East Kentucky Small Business Development Center recently sponsored a workshop entitled "The ABC's of Marketing the Small Business," this past month on the Morehead State University Prestonsburg campus. Dennis J. Hillen, senior vice-president and director of marketing and sales for Community Trust Bank, was the featured speaker.

Several small business owners attended and were able to take advantage of the opportunity to discuss marketing strategies with an experienced and knowledgeable marketing professional.

Throughout his presentation, Hillen stressed to the group of entrepreneurs that consistent marketing strategies play a vital role in the success of any business venture. He advised them to identify their target customer and to devise marketing strategies that will capture the atten-

State announces 'Buy Kentucky' survey

LOUISVILLE — Consumers will help the Kentucky Department of Agriculture design a new marketing program through their input in an ongoing survey, Agriculture Commissioner Billy Ray Smith announced Thursday.

The results of the survey will form the basis of "Buy Kentucky," a marketing program intended to get more Kentucky-made food products to consumers and to make Kentucky farms more profitable.

"Through several outlets, the Department is polling Kentucky's food buyers to determine where they shop and what they buy," said Commissioner Smith at the annual Kentucky Commodity Group Appreciation Breakfast, held at the Kentucky Fair and Exposition Center.

"This survey is asking consumers what influences their buying decisions, whether they show a preference to Kentucky-grown products, and if not,

AAA says plague of unstable gas prices returns to midwest on refinery outage

ORLANDO, Fla. — A major gasoline refinery shutdown in the Midwest has boosted retail gasoline prices by more than 20 cents per gallon in many markets throughout the central United States in the last week, AAA reported today.

"The projected six-month shutdown of a Citgo refinery due to structural problems caused by a fire on August 14, has created the exact market conditions AAA and others have been warning about for more than two years," said Susan Pikrallidas, AAA vice president of Public Affairs.

"The U.S. gasoline refining industry is stretched too thin to meet the needs of America's motorists at a consistent price, and — as illustrated by this month's refinery fire in Lemont, Ill. — the nation continues to be only one major supply disruption away from sky-rocketing gasoline prices and possible shortages," she said.

With retail gas prices again over $1.70 per gallon in many midwestern cities, AAA again called on the federal government to look for ways to streamline its overly complex system of regional gasoline standards, and carefully review the effects industry consolidation is having on consumer prices and supply.

As the nation's largest motoring and leisure travel organization, AAA provides its more than 44 million members with travel, insurance, financial and automotive-related services. Since its founding in 1902, the not-for-profit, fully tax paying AAA has been a leader and advocate for safety and security of all travelers.

Logan Corporation president elected to KMAC board

Cal Nelson, president and chief operating officer of Logan Corporation, a Huntington, W.Va., firm, has been elected to the Kentucky Manufacturing Assistance Center (KMAC) Board of Directors, according to KMAC President Lynn A. Witten.

Logan operates Kentucky facilities in Middlesboro and Prestonsburg.

Nelson joined Logan in 1983 after nearly 20 years of executive management experience at companies serving the mining industry. Prior to that, he attended Michigan Technological University, an engineering, science and technology school in Houghton, MI.

"KMAC is a unique organization that provides services that make a difference to Kentucky manufacturers," said Nelson. "Technology has forced manufacturers, particularly smaller manufacturers, to become more productive, efficient and responsive to the marketplace if they want to survive. Sometimes that's difficult for smaller companies. That's why I think KMAC is important. I'm proud to be a member of KMAC's board and part of their effort to help Kentucky manufacturers become more competitive."

Logan Corporation is a privately held, diversified company that manufactures and distributes a wide range of mining, industrial and construction parts and supplies. Logan also is the exclusive distributor for genuine General Electric Locomotive renewal parts.

KMAC, Kentucky's affiliate of the national Manufacturing Extension Partnership (MEP) Program, is a private, not-for-profit corporation. The Logan Corporation's Prestonsburg office is located at 1993 Route 321.

tion of their target group.

Hillen also stressed to the assembled group that newspaper advertising still remains primarily as the best value for their marketing dollar. According to Hillen, it is imperative to the success of the small business to "get their name known," and to experience a return for their marketing dollar. Newspaper advertising successfully manages to create a lasting impression on the reading public. Explained Hillen, "people do believe what they read."

"We are pleased that the funds have been released to start the antenna relocation and to connect science and research to the region and to provide more telecommunications infrastructure for economic development," said MSU President Ronald G. Eaglin.

"We are deeply indebted to Congressman Rogers for his strong advocacy of this project and his assistance in linking our efforts with those of the Center for Rural Development, a national leader in economic development and telecommunications."

MSU will establish an Office of Economic Development and Research Outreach at its Institute for Regional Analysis and Public Policy (IRAPP) to manage the delivery of useful research to the business community, according to Dr. Eaglin. He described the GPS technology as a "critical tool" in economic development.

Dr. Eaglin said the funding would cement the University's partnership with NASA, the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration, the Small Business Administration and the Kentucky National Science Foundation Experimental Program to Stimulate Competitive Research (EPSCoR) program.

The New Space Science Center at MSU will be administered through the College of Science and Technology.

why not. We want to know what the consumer wants and thinks.

"Buy Kentucky" will be a long-term program with several goals, Commissioner Smith said, including:

- designing a unified logo for Kentucky products;
- promoting consumer awareness of Kentucky agricultural products;
- providing quality Kentucky products for consumers;
- encouraging the development of value-added products;
- preserving green space in Kentucky by keeping farms profitable;
- providing incentives to consumers to buy Kentucky-grown products.

Surveys will be available during the Kentucky State Fair in the Department's marketing areas, located in the West Hall and in the South Wing. In addition, the survey is available on the KDA Web site at www.kyagr.com. Deadline to return the survey to the Department is Sept. 21.

"Through this survey, the Department will determine the best and most feasible way to promote consumer awareness of Kentucky agricultural products," Commissioner Smith said. "We also want to strengthen distribution channels for our quality farm products."

Toward that end, part of the "Buy Kentucky" effort will be the design of a unified logo for all agricultural products in the state. Currently, several logos are used to identify Kentucky-grown products under KDA's "Where Quality Grows" program. Among the logos now in use is the familiar fruit/vegetable logo as well as those for grapes/wine, Christmas trees, nurseries and greenhouses, and aquaculture.

The consumer survey will help the Department determine the identity of the logo as well as the direction of the "Buy Kentucky" program.

"We are starting from the ground up in a grass-roots effort with this program," Commissioner Smith said. "We believe this survey will tell our Department how best to serve the farmers of Kentucky as well as the state's food buyers."

For more information on the survey, log onto the KDA Web site at www.kyagr.com.

Cardinal Hill received this ranking, based on a number of criteria which includes: being recognized by board-certified physicians, the mortality rate of Medicare patients who have been discharged from the hospital, the quality of inpatient care (specifically nursing care and the use of technology), and discharge planning, including patient education and case management.

U.S. News and World Report began identifying hospitals with unique capabilities in 1990. The methodology for their "America's Best Hospitals" report was created in 1993 by the National Opinion Research Center at the University of Chicago.

Get Wrapped Up in the Taste

Tortillas are rolling across America! That's right, versatile tortilla products have made their way into just about every imaginable cuisine under the sun. From French to Italian, Asian to American, tortillas are being used in unexpected ways to offer new and creative meal ideas. The days of tortillas being known solely as a traditional Mexican bread are long gone. Now the fastest growing segment of the baking industry in the U.S., tortillas are becoming popular among people of all cultural backgrounds.

To honor the tortilla's growing popularity and freedom from conventional meals, September has been designated National Tortilla Month—a month that now celebrates the independence of Mexico and tortillas. Tortillas have made their way into the hearts and homes of America. From sandwiches and casseroles to desserts and snacks, from family feasts to breakfast-on-the-go, tortillas now come in a variety of sizes to accommodate a wide range of tastes and needs. The idea is simple. Tortillas allow you to spend less time preparing meals and more time enjoying them! And not only are tortillas being celebrated, they're now being honored! Because the tortilla, a traditional Mexican food, is such an integral part of the history and cultural richness of California, The Walt Disney Company asked Mission Foods to build a tortilla factory within their new theme park, Disney's California Adventure,™ located next to Disneyland™ in California. The result is the Mission Tortilla Factory—a working facility that produces Mission's world-famous tortillas. Located in the heart of the new theme park, the Mission Tortilla Factory allows guests to watch the tortilla-making process from beginning to end, leaving the factory with a warm tortilla in hand.

"We are proud to feature the tortilla in our new theme park, Disney's California Adventure.™ Our park celebrates the excitement of California's lifestyle, features and culture, and we are pleased that this attraction shows our guests how tortillas are made and tells them about the influence of ethnic foods in our society," said Klaus Mager, Director/General Manager of Food Operations at Disney's California Adventure.™

TASTY TORTILLA TIPS

Serving Tips:

To heat and soften tortillas for table use or recipes, place one tortilla at a time directly over low gas flame or on a medium-hot ungreased nonstick skillet, turning over frequently until hot.

For crispy tortillas, fry both sides of the tortilla on an oiled nonstick skillet. To crisp oil-free, toast tortilla in warm oven or on a nonstick cookie sheet until golden brown.

For quick and easy quesadillas and tortilla snacks, put shredded cheese on a tortilla, heat and voila!

Storing Tips:

Place tortilla package on flat surface and press air out at open end. Reseal and refrigerate package.

Tortillas can be frozen in air-tight containers, defrosted and reheated for later use.

Turkey Cashew Wrap

BACK to school, back to work

by JACQUELINE CUTLER

Parents who want their children to be educated as well as entertained by television will do best to stick with existing shows this season, save one exceptional new program.

Sagwa, the Chinese Siamese Cat, premiering Monday, Sept. 3, on PBS, is lushly drawn cartoon based on the book by Amy Tan (The Joy Luck Club). The best-selling author wrote the book for her cat who had been diagnosed with a terminal illness. Given only a month to live, the cat survived four more years after being read the story, Tan says. Set in a Chinese palace around 1900, the show tells stories from the perspective of Sagwa, a kitten with the endearing qualities of an 8-year-old child, the high end of the show's target audience.

Sagwa has a big brother named Dongwa and a baby sister named Sheegwa, and her best friend is a bat named Fu-Fu. Each half-hour episode offers two 11 1/2-minute segments and a related educational interstitial. In one story about the Chinese New Year, a rat convinces Sagwa to pretend to keep catching it so she looks good and the rat can stay in the palace. But soon her conscience kicks in and triumphs. Sagwa strives to help 5- to 8-year-olds make sense of the world. "The first goal is to provide them insights into the kinds of socio-emotional issues they will be confronting," says educational consultant Eve Hall. "It's broken into subgoals of getting along with others, dealing with honesty, figuring what it means to be open-minded and tolerant, and defining oneself."

"The cultural diversity of the show is very unique and special," says executive producer George Daugherty. "It shows children another view of another time and place, another culture. ... At the same time, it has a universality that hopefully kids will come away with the realization that they have a lot in common with other cultures." Or, as in the case of a 7-year-old girl who watched a review tape, they may simply say, "I just love Sagwa. She's so cute." And cute abounds in Oswald, a new Nickelodeon show about a blue octopus that premiered last month and features the voice of Fred Savage (The Wonder Years). Its whimsy may drive older children from the room, but a 3-year-old intently followed Oswald's search for an ice cream truck and rejoiced when it finally was found. Nickelodeon's other new series is The Nick Cannon Show, premiering Saturday, Sept. 29.

Cannon, 20, stars in and produces this children's comedy show that takes on daily life and features guest stars including Eddie Murphy. The WB Network airs more Japanese anime this season, beginning on Sept. 15. Based on a comic book series, Yu-Gi-Oh! follows a teen-ager named Yugi who is picked on by bullies. Pokemon: Johto League Champions is yet another spinoff of the original series that continues to air weekdays. WB's other two new Saturday morning shows are The Mummy, a cartoon featuring an 11-year-old who travels the world with his parents as they search for powerful scrolls, and The Nightmare Room, a live-action anthology series based on R. L. Stine's stories.

Monday, Sept. 17, brings the premiere of Rescue Heroes: Global Response Team, which follows extreme emergency teams. The Big Three don't have much new programming for children. Indeed, CBS gets its lineup from Nickelodeon, including Oswald and Bob the Builder beginning Sept. 15. On the same day, ABC adds the animated series Mary-Kate and Ashley in Action

The subject of expanding their family has come up before, but now it's in Doug and Carrie's (Kevin James, Leah Remini) faces in "Pregnant Pause." Yep, she's expecting, and that means big changes in the Heffernan household. Should she quit her job to stay home with the baby? If so, will they have enough money? What happens to Arthur (Jerry Stiller)? And will the sitcom prove immune to Mad About You syndrome, the sometimes-fatal malady caused by adding an infant to the mix? Stay tuned. The conclusion of last season's two-part finale airs next week, and the adventure continues the following week in the new season premiere.

8:30 p.m. UPN
One on One
 Flex Alexander (Santa and Pete, She's All That) stars in this new sitcom as a sportscaster — also conveniently nicknamed Flex — who finds the rules of the game changing at home. His ex-wife has taken a job out of the country and left their daughter, Breanna (Kyla Pratt, Dr. Dolittle 2) in his care. Being a full-time single dad is hard enough, but it's especially challenging when the child in question is (a) 14 years old, (b) female and (c) as spirited as Breanna. Kelly Perine also stars in "Pilot."

9 p.m. ABC
Movie: The Glimmer Man
 A CIA assassin-turned-peace-loving Buddhist cop (Steven Seagal) is in Los Angeles to help a buddy in blue (Keenen Ivory Wayans) solve a mysterious series of murders. When his own ex-wife becomes a victim, he becomes a suspect and seeks help from his former military mentor (Brian Cox), not knowing the man is up to his elbows in shady dealings with a local crime boss and the Russian underworld. Bob Gunton, Michelle Johnson and Steven Tobolowsky also star in this 1996 thriller.

9 p.m. ESPN
Major League Baseball
 If their worn-down bodies allow it, two of the all-time greats will be the featured attraction tonight when the St. Louis Cardinals visit the San Diego Padres. Too often, though, fans have been deprived of seeing the Cards' Mark McGwire and the Padres' Tony Gwynn this season because of injuries, and in the Cardinals' case, Big Mac's absence may have cost them a shot at the playoffs. The Padres are in another rebuilding mode, and the 42-year-old Gwynn has been relegated to mostly a pinch-hitting role. He'll retire at the end of the season, then wait until he's elected on the first ballot to the Hall of Fame.

School: The Story of American Public Education

Filmmakers Sarah Mondale and Sarah Patton spent almost a decade on this ambitious two-part history of the public school system, traveling across the country and interviewing teachers, principals, librarians, bureaucrats, journalists and graduates. The opener, The Common School/As American as Public School, recalls how the public education system evolved in the late 18th and the 19th centuries, and how it was transformed in the early 20th century by the immigration boom and the rise of restrictions on child labor. The conclusion, airing Tuesday, looks at the role of schools in the civil rights movement and the school reform efforts of the past two decades. Interviewees include authors Jonathan Kozol (Death at an Early Age) and Bel Kaufman (Up the Down Staircase); Linda Brown Thompson of Brown vs. Board of Education fame; and ambassador-turned-professor Julian Nava.

9:30 p.m. CBS
Becker
 Mariel Hemingway guest stars in "Sue You" as Becker's (Ted Danson) lawyer, who urges him not to fight Vinny's (Alan Blumenfeld) malpractice suit. Vinny's the man who had a heart attack after Becker coerced him into getting some exercise. The stakes are too high, she says; he could lose his practice. But Becker wants to be one of the few, the proud, the principled who stand up for what's right. Terry Farrell and Hattie Winston also star.

Greta Garbo: The Lone Star

Greta Garbo had a big mouth! That's one of the revelations in this new profile of the famously gorgeous and reclusive Swedish-born actress. It comes from friend and co-star Karen Morley (Mata Hari), who says Garbo's reluctance to be interviewed, at least early on, was the creation of a studio publicity machine terrified of the actress's outspokenness (shamelessly blurring out that she and Swedish director Mauritz Stiller lived together, for example). Also sharing their recollections are biographer Karen Swenson; film critics Molly Haskell and Ty Burr; director George Sidney; and Leatrice Gilbert Fountain, whose father, John Gilbert, romanced Garbo on and off the screen.

Lost

Like its CBS rival The Amazing Race, this new entry in the reality endurance competition genre has teams of two covering lots of ground. But there are only six players here, and all are in it for the long haul — no voting anyone out. The players, armed only with clothes, sleeping bags, toiletries, two days' worth of food and $100 each, are flown to a remote, undisclosed location; divided into three teams of two; and sent on their way. The first team to find its way home — to the Statue of Liberty, to be exact — wins the big money.

8 p.m. WB

Movie: It Could Happen to You

Charlie (Nicolas Cage), a good-hearted New York cop, finds himself short of money to tip the coffee-shop waitress (Bridget Fonda) who served his lunch. So he promises to split his winnings with her if his lottery numbers come up. And guess what, Charlie is tempted to renege on his pledge — and his wife definitely likes that idea — but those darned morals keep getting in the way. Rosie Perez gives one of her trademark over-the-top performances as Charlie's Mrs. in this 1994 comedy-drama, which also stars Wendell Pierce and Isaac Hayes.

American Justice

"The California Killing Field" tells the grisly story of Leonard Lake and Charles Ng. The latter left the country when he learned police were seeking to question him about a petty theft. The former, his friend, committed suicide during questioning, leaving a note with Ng's name. That led police to a horrifying discovery: a field of mutilated bodies and charred bones, a torture chamber, and a video of two of the men's victims. Ng was arrested in Canada, but technicalities and sheer luck kept him from being tried for 13 years. The program includes interviews with Ng's lawyer, prosecutors, jurors and victims' relatives. Bill Kurtis hosts.

9 p.m. ABC

The Drew Carey Show

In "Drew and the Trail Scouts," Drew (Drew Carey) finds a much-needed respite from his recent stresses — specifically, his job loss and his pretend "marriage" to Mr. Wick (Craig Ferguson) — in his new avocation as a scoutmaster. But hasn't he been reading the news? The scouts have this policy against gays. And while Drew isn't a gay guy, he does play one at the immigration office. So here's the deal: He either gets kicked out of the scouts or gets Wick kicked out of the country. Diedrich Bader and Ryan Stiles also star.

9 p.m. CBS

The Amazing Race

Think Survivor on a grand scale — with more teams (albeit smaller ones) and a far wider geographical range. In this new reality competition, 11 pairs of players compete to complete a round-the-world race, be the last team standing and win $1 million. In another twist, each team is made up of two folks who already know each other, including two married couples, an engaged couple, a mother and daughter, a gay male couple and several pairs of friends. Phil Keoghan hosts.

9 p.m. LIFETIME

Movie: The Advocate's Devil

Not to be confused with the Al Pacino-Keanu Reeves tale of a lawyer from hell, this 1997 made-for-TV drama, based on a novel by Alan Dershowitz, stars Ken Olin (Thirty something, L.A. Doctors) as an attorney whose career needs a jump-start. It gets one from a new client, a

Movie: Wolf

Bedeviled by personal and professional crises, a New York book editor (Jack Nicholson) discovers his wild side after being bitten by a wolf. Michelle Pfeiffer, James Spader and Kate Nelligan also star in this sophisticated, contemporary werewolf tale with plenty of ironic bite. Mike Nichols (Primary Colors, The Birdcage) directed the 1994 horror drama.

Biography

The Love Boat remembers the series that defied the critics' predictions and stayed afloat for almost nine years. Set on a cruise ship, with a core cast playing the captain and crew, it brought new passengers aboard and told new tales of shipboard romance each week. And with all those guest roles to fill, there was plenty of room for both old favorites and hot new faces, so the show appealed to just about all ages. The nostalgic cruise includes behind-the-scenes footage; clips from memorable episodes; and interviews with cast members Gavin MacLeod, Bernie Kopell, Fred Grandy, Ted Lange and Jill Whelan.

8 p.m. FOX

Guinness World Records: Primetime

It's called "Extreme Guinness Special Edition No. 2," but this hour looks pretty much like business as usual for the series. You'll see how long a person can survive being on — or in — ice (didn't magician David Blaine cover that one a few months ago?) and find out how long a second-born twin can delay its entrance into the world. And have you priced bathroom fixtures lately? A segment on the world's most expensive toilet may put things in perspective. Mark Thompson hosts.

8 p.m. MTV

2001 MTV Video Music Awards

Fatboy Slim is the man to beat as the birthplace of the music video boom honors the genre's best. His "Weapon of Choice" video, notable for a dancing Christopher Walken, is up for nine awards, including best video of the year. Missy "Misdemeanor" Elliott has two chances to win that prize; her solo effort "Get Ur Freak On" is nominated, and she's also featured in "Lady Marmalade" with Christina Aguilera, Lil' Kim, Mya and Pink. Jamie Foxx hosts the telecast, which includes performances by Elliott, *NSYNC, U2 and Alicia Keys.

8 p.m. NBC

Friends

Kathleen Turner guest stars as Chandler's (Matthew Perry) estranged father. Yes, you read right. He's a Las Vegas drag queen who goes by the name Helena Handbasket. Bugged that Chandler has had nothing to do with Dad in years, Monica (Courteney Cox Arquette) arranges a trip to Sin City in hopes of reconciling them. The elder Bing isn't the only guy running around in women's clothing, though. Joey (Matt LeBlanc) discovers that Phoebe's (Lisa Kudrow) new boyfriend enjoys the feel of female undergarments and decides to give them a try himself. Jennifer Aniston and David Schwimmer also star in "The One With Chandler's Dad."

8 p.m. SHOWTIME

Movie: Dangerous Minds

Can you stand another movie about a dedicated teacher who turns around a class of under-achievers? How about if Michelle Pfeiffer is in it? OK, thought so. Pfeiffer plays LouAnne Johnson, on whose memoir this 1995 drama is based. On her first teaching gig, she's assigned a class of smart but unmotivated students. After establishing that they'd better not try anything — she's an ex-Marine who knows karate — she proceeds to turn them around with a reward system, the music of Bob Dylan and other innovations. Courtney B.

Vance and George Dzundza also star.

8 p.m. UPN

Manhunt

When this reality series started, there were 13 players on the trail of a treasure somewhere in the jungle on a South Pacific island, with three "hunters" poised to take them out with paintballs. Now it comes down to the end. Tonight, one of the "surviving" players will win the treasure — $25,000 — by crossing the finish line first. If you're one of the show's 1 million or so fans, tonight's finale is your last chance to see it. Dogged by controversy over the reshooting of some scenes in a Los Angeles park, it probably won't be back.

9 p.m. FOX

Dark Angel

Which side is Lydecker (John Savage) on, anyway? In ... And Jesus Brought a Casserole," his efforts to stay one step ahead of Madame X (Nana Visitor) force him to hook up with his former "children," who have been rounded up by Max, Logan and Zack (Jessica Alba, Michael Weatherly, William Gregory Lee) for an all-out attack on Manticore. Richard Gunn and Valarie Rae Miller also star.

10 p.m. NBC

Law & Order: Special Victims Unit

In "Countdown," Benson and Stabler (Mariska Hargitay, Christopher Meloni) are on the trail of a serial killer who is fixated on two things: little girls and the number three. His M.O. is kidnapping and raping girls, then killing them on their third day in his clutches. One 7-year-old victim has escaped, but he's just captured another, giving the Special Victims Unit only three days to find him and save her. Ice-T, Dann Florek and Stephanie March also star.

THE RAIN IN SPAIN

by SARA H. BLAIR

There were several reasons Spain was not our favorite port of call. Number one of which was the fact that the mass transit system had gone on strike leaving us with no transportation to and from the ship thus forcing us to walk miles and miles in the scorching heat on ember hot pavement without a tour guide.

Or number two, it could have been the derogatory remarks from the shop owners and street vendors about President Bush and his recent comments regarding Europe's pollution problem that made us feel that we were treading on shaky ground. But whether or not we liked Bush, it was disconcerting to be in a foreign country where the people talked so openly to us about their hatred for our President.

Aside from these two minor disruptions, Barcelona wasn't all that bad except when we asked the price of the souvenirs and the customary reply was, "Cheaper than home." Cinder and I took their response as an omen that we should buy while the buying was good.

"Oh, look at these fans!" I exclaimed. "They're good for hot flashes."

"Well, you'll have to talk to someone who knows about such things," Cinder replied, indignantly.

As I scanned the hundreds of fragile, handmade fans, my thoughts flashed back to the old funeral home fans that used to be so bountiful in our church. I can still remember all the older women fanning themselves in the dead of winter and now I was privy to their secret.

"I'll take 10 of these," I said.

"That's a lot of souvenirs to take back," Dan commented.

"You'd be better off selling these fans than those hormones," I laughed.

We continued to walk down the wide sidewalks darting in and out of shops searching for treasures to bring home. While Cinder hunted for postcards and Devon videoed the pigeons (we have aviary footage from every country), I looked for wine corks. A word to the wise, if you're asking for wine corks in a foreign country, any country, learn the specific phrase or the results could be embarrassing).

After an hour of exhausting shopping among people who hated our President, we decided to start back to the ship. It was getting close to 4, and we had to be on board by 5.

"How far is it?" I asked.

"Oh, not very far," Dan replied.

"Far is a relative term," Cinder scowled.

"Just keep walking until you see the ship," Dan stated.

"Or until you feel the blisters on your feet," Devon grinned at me.

Since we didn't have a pedometer, the only way I could gauge approximately how far we had walked was when I lost the feeling in my right foot — that was 1 mile. At two miles, my right foot turned in and I held onto Dan for support. Mile three was when the pad of my left foot went numb and my heel started tingling. At least by this time the ship was in sight.

"How are you doing?" Cinder asked without even looking over her shoulder to look my pain in the eye.

"Is that a drawbridge up there?" I asked.

"Yes, and we've got 2 minutes to make it across before it opens," Devon yelled. "Step on it!"

Step on it? I couldn't even feel what to step on. At that command, I lost feeling from the waist down and Dan dragged me over the bridge seconds before it raised to let a boat pass.

"I wanted to visit Europe before I died," I gasped. "And I think I just got my wish."

"Oh, Sara," Cinder chided. "Don't be so melodramatic. Just think, tomorrow we'll be on the beautiful island of Majorca."

I was glad Cinder had reminded me of our quick jaunt over to the island of her mother's past — a beautiful, Mediterranean paradise off the coast of Spain. Cinder's mother, Jean, had journalized her trip 20 years earlier and had mentioned that the island was her favorite spot.

"Oh, by the way. Are you superstitious?" Cinder asked.

"Who me?" I sputtered. "No way. What a silly question. Why do you ask?"

"Well, our flight number over to the island is 666," she nonchalantly answered.

"SIX, SIX, SIX!" I screamed. "YOU HAVE TO BE KIDDING!"

"I thought you said you weren't superstitious?" she queried.

"Cinder!" I railed. "We're not talking about walking under a ladder, or a black cat leaping in front of us. SIX, SIX, SIX is NOT just ANY number, it's the number of the devil, Satan, Lucifer himself. And as paranoid as I am of flying you can't expect me to climb aboard that little puddle jumping connector flight with the sign of Beelzebub stamped on our tickets? I can't imagine any airline giving that flight number out."

I listened as Devon laughed hysterically at me while she leisurely ate her pizza. "Oooooo," she howled. "The devil's gonna get you, Sara."

"Does this mean you aren't going?" Cinder asked.

"Oh, no, I'm going," I said, assuredly. "I've got Valium."

Fortunately, for the entire flight crew AND my traveling companions, Majorca was even more beautiful than I imagined. Since this would be our last night in Europe, it was wonderful that we had such magnificent scenery to enjoy. Wanting our last night to be special, we asked around for a restaurant which served authentic Spanish cuisine.

Next week: "You call these things scallops?"

Critter Corner...

BY DR. CAROL COMBS-MORRIS, DVM

I read recently that Jenny Wiley Theatre is presenting "Annie!" again this summer, but I'm not going. I love this show, but it brings back too many memories that I don't think I'm able to handle yet. I spent a whole summer backstage during its production several years ago.

Having had a life long fear of public speaking, I never had any desire to act. I totally blew the two lines I had the last time I was talked into a Christmas play at church. I also never really cared that much for musicals, so the last thing I ever expected to do was to be involved in a major stage production.

Looking back, I can't even recall exactly how I got involved with the whole thing. Somebody was apparently talking to somebody else, and eventually an idea was hatched to use the whole orphan-and-stray dog theme to help bring in funding to the animal shelter. Sounded like a really neat idea and before long the kennel club was also involved.

My original assignment was to construct an eye-catching donation box for the shelter to be placed near the concession stand. Somehow I came up with the idea to build a larger-than-life size replica of Little Orphan Annie's dog, Sandy, out of chicken wire and papier-mâché. Had I ever worked in this medium before? Of course not. After several weeks I had a four-foot tall hideous facsimile of Sandy, blank white eyes and all, but not before I completely freaked out the man who had come to fix the clinic washing machine. I had placed Sandy on the surgery table to make it easier for me to give him his base coat of white paint. The repairman passed the surgery door, gasped, and said, "What happened to that poor dog?" He thought I had a live dog in a body cast!

Anyway, the kennel club tried to help out Jenny Wiley Theatre by putting on a "Canine Good Citizen" demonstration to help draw people and their dogs out to the tryouts for the role of Sandy. Except for kennel club members and theatre representatives, about three people and no dogs showed up for the event. The theatre people needed two dogs for the two casts of orphans that would rotate the shows throughout the season. John Faulkner and I had brought our dogs for the CGC demonstration—his Golden Retriever, Keeper, and my Golden Retriever-Chow mix, Casey. "How about those two dogs?" the lady from the theatre asked. John and I gave each other deer-in-the-headlights looks and mumbled out something about having no experience with this sort of thing.

The dogless theatre lady was undaunted. "They're trained, aren't they?"

We tried feebly to explain that training for formal obedience competition doesn't exactly qualify a dog to be a stand-in for Lassie. As a mixed-breed, Casey couldn't even compete in real shows. We had only done a few fun matches. I tried not to think about the time he got tired, walked out of the ring, and watched me do a whole "Heel Free" exercise alone. I didn't know he was AWOL until the judge was nearly in tears with laughter. Dog people expect that sort of thing. Audiences probably wouldn't.

To make a long story short, we suddenly found ourselves the handlers of two canine actors, and were plunged into the world of live theater. Since each cast rehearsed separately, we wouldn't even have the support of the other lost soul, but we each dutifully showed up for our respective first rehearsals.

What I had not counted on was the professionalism of the children cast in the roles of "Annie" and the other orphans! They immediately fell in love with Casey, and he adored them. I soon learned to ask the kids if I had a question about something. Kristen Everage was "Annie" for our cast. She and Casey clicked right away, and the bond was obvious even to the audience.

Kristen may have been only twelve years old, but I told her early on that I would need her help, and she quickly became my mentor. She showed me where to stand to be out of the way, what cues to listen for, which way was "stage right" and "stage left", and how to maneuver around the scenery without causing an accident. I taught her how to use Casey's training to make things easier - keeping him on her left side, using very subtle commands for "heel", "sit", and "stay", and doing things consistently. In the audience one night, my husband overheard someone remark, "I think that child is giving that dog HAND SIGNALS!" He was right.

At the end of the first act, "Sandy" has to make a stage crossing alone, a lost dog looking for "Annie". This scene follows a large musical production number with lots of activity. It took both of us to come up with a way to pull this off. Casey knew the hand signal for "come" and he was fairly reliable, but I had to get his attention across that huge expanse of stage! As soon as the musical scene started, I left Kristen holding Casey and sprinted for the other side. At Jenny Wiley, this is more difficult than it sounds, because "backstage" is crammed full of backdrops and props for the other shows of the season, so you have to go downstairs, through a "tunnel" UNDER the backstage, upstairs and around to the opposite end of the stage. It took a lot of practice (and a lot of running) to get Casey used to the idea that I was going to pop up on the other side, but eventually he learned to look for me. Now I had to help him focus on where I was among all the movement in the darkened area behind the curtain. I decided to try an ultrasonic dog-training device similar to a "silent dog whistle". It was perfect! He could actually hear this over all the music and commotion - his ears tipped forward, and he looked straight at me the first time we tried it during a full rehearsal! He never flubbed that scene.

Actually, he only messed up twice that I remember. He wandered offstage once instead of coming to Kristen, but she never missed a beat - she recovered the dog, ad-libbed a line, and went on as if nothing had happened. I was mortified, but one of the other actors laughed and said, "Now you see what live theater is all about.

The unpredictability is what makes it so much better than a movie." Maybe. I don't see why all stage actors aren't committed to a mental institution after one season. Anyhow, Kristen fixed the problem next time by rubbing hotdogs on her hands before this scene. My chowhound stuck to her like glue from then on.

Casey's other act of "unpredictability" during one performance was to emerge from a large Christmas box during the finale - butt first. He essentially mooned the audience. Kristen called it a "sense of comedy"; I couldn't disagree, remembering the look on his face when I found myself alone in the ring at the dog show. I could swear he was grinning.

By the end of the season, both of us were having a ball. Casey had learned the cues and would sometimes start to move offstage before Kristen could get her last line out. We found out that he could keep time to music with his tail. The kids were all ready to help hold a leash, exchange the ratty "orphan dog" rope collar for the glittery bow that Sandy wears to Daddy Warbuck's Christmas party, or just give him a good pat or a last-minute brushing. At the end of each performance, he stood in line with the other actors to meet the audience and give autographs (I helped out with a paw-print stamp). John was reporting that Keeper was enjoying similar popularity. We were all tired, but we hated to see it end.

I had always hoped to let Casey do this production again, but it came around too late for both him and Keeper, who both passed away long before we were ready to let them go. I can't hear "Tomorrow" without imagining a tail thumping in perfect time. I hope this season's Sandy is having as much fun as we did.

LEAD STORIES

■ Curt Storey, 62, who lives near Pittsburgh, Pa., filed a wrongful-discharge lawsuit in August against Burns International Security Services, claiming he was fired from his job because he refused supervisors' demands that he cleanse his lunchbox and pickup truck of Confederate flag decals, orders that he calls illegal national-origin discrimination. Storey claims he is a "Confederate Southern American," even though he is a lifelong Pennsylvanian and even though courts have not recognized CSA as a protected class under anti-discrimination law.

■ Paul Morgan of Biloxi, Miss., has been busy the last few weeks lining up Web site viewers, at $20 each, to watch him slice off both his feet on Oct. 31 with a homemade guillotine. Morgan's feet are nonfunctional because of an automobile accident, and he wants hydraulically operated prostheses to make him more mobile, but this is the only way he knows to raise the $200,000 to buy them. Although traffic on CutOffMyFeet.com is heavy, as of mid-August, Morgan had signed up only 10 viewers.

■ In August, Naples (Fla.) City Councilman Fred Tarrant demanded that local artist Ted Lay's "Famous Tongue Mona Al Monica" painting (side-by-side impressions of Mona Lisa, Albert Einstein, and Monica Lewinsky sticking their tongues out) be removed from its place at a Naples municipal art center because he thinks Lewinsky's "tongue" too much resembles a penis (which Lay denies). According to a Naples Daily News report, Tarrant is in fact blind but said various advisers have assured him that the tongue is a penis.

Good Ol' Boys Out of Control

■ In May in Stroudsburg, Pa., Noah Berryman, 19, was convicted of involuntary manslaughter; hours after earning his driver's license, Berryman was trying to get his car airborne on a hill (he launched 63 feet on the fourth attempt) when he hit a tree, killing the two friends riding with him. And in February, a 52-year-old man shot a 21-year-old man to death on I-75 in Tennessee as the men hauled 30 fighting roosters to a cockfight in Kentucky; the older man was angry that the younger man kept kicking the back of his seat. And in June, as Knox County (Tenn.) sheriff's deputies surrounded an auto parts store looking for suspect Charles "Cracker" Dunn, his brother, Melvin "Squirt" Dunn Jr., jumped on cars, waved his arms and defiantly challenged them, before they stormed the store and arrested him (but not Cracker, who wasn't there).

Unclear on the Concept

■ In July, according to police, an unidentified man stole an ax from a Home Depot in Oklahoma City and used it menacingly to rob a clerk and shortly thereafter did the same at two other stores, including a Wal-Mart. On interviewing witnesses, police learned that a Wal-Mart door greeter had seen the man enter carrying the ax, but his only impulse was to make sure that he did his job and placed a sticker on the ax so that when the man later tried to exit the store, he wouldn't be charged for it.

■ In May, a court in Edmonton, Alberta, sentenced William Piggott, 55, to 18 months' house arrest for three 1999 offenses in which prostitutes had turned him in for talking too dirty. According to court records, Piggott had merely asked the women if they would have sex with dogs.

The Litigious Society

■ In May, several months after the Escondido, Calif., library's resident cat attacked Richard R. Espinosa's 50-pound Labrador-mix assistance dog, Espinosa filed a $1.5 million claim against the city, alleging that he was in bad shape because of the dog's injuries. According to the legal papers, Espinosa suffers "significant lasting, extreme and severe mental anguish and emotional distress including, but not limited to, terror, humiliation, shame, embarrassment, mortification, chagrin, depression, panic, anxiety, flashbacks, nightmares, loss of sleep (and) loss of full enjoyment of life as well as other physical and mental afflictions of pain (and) suffering."

■ In June, Mary Lee Sowder filed a lawsuit in Roanoke, Va., against the local PetsMart store for $100,000 for injuries to her knee that she suffered when she slipped and fell on "dog slobber," which was allegedly drooled upon the floor by the manager's own huge dog (of unspecified breed).

■ Kevin Mackle died at age 21 in 1998 when a Coke machine he was rocking in a dorm at Bishop's University in Lennoxville, Quebec, fell on him. In July 2001, Mr. Mackle's family filed a lawsuit for about $660,000 (U.S.) for wrongful death against the machine's manufacturer and distributor, and Coca-Cola, and the university. The lawsuit claims that each defendant was negligent in not posting signs on the machine that college students should resist the temptation to rock it. According to the coroner's report, the late Mr. Mackle was well-known by his friends for securing free sodas by rocking the machine and was once again engaged in his craft when the fatal accident occurred.

People Different From Us

■ According to police reports in the Daily Independent (Ashland, Ky.) in June, Clark Schneeberger, 44, heard that his father-in-law, Richard J. Kouns, was angry that his daughter and Schneeberger had fought several days before and was on his way over to defend his daughter's honor. Schneeberger prepared for the interfamily visit by strapping on body armor and equipping himself with a bayonet and brass knuckles. Kouns arrived swinging, and the two battled until Schneeberger subdued Kouns by biting off part of his nose (an attack that earned Schneeberger a grand jury indictment several days later).

Undignified Deaths

■ A 26-year-old SWAT police officer in Dallas was accidentally shot to death by a colleague in June as the two men showed trainees how to react to a gunman in a public place. And a 14-year-old girl died when the all-terrain vehicle in which she was riding smashed into a tractor-trailer; she was in the vehicle because she was visiting her father's workplace as part of Take Our Kids to Work Day (Welland, Ontario, November 2000, and for which a lawsuit was filed in May 2001). And the Alcoholics Anonymous chapter in Milwaukee still does not know who the man was who collapsed and died during a meeting on May 23 (because those attending meetings usually do so anonymously).

Tyranny of the Minority of One

■ In July, the University of South Florida agreed to pay $25,000 to a former art student to settle her 1999 lawsuit claiming that she felt sexually harassed by a class-discussion photograph of a naked white woman clinching a naked black man, despite the fact that that day's topic was controversial art and that all 250 students in the class had been warned of the nature of the class and advised they would not be penalized for missing it. (Shortly after the class, the woman's father complained, and the graduate assistant who supplied the photograph was transferred, which ignited a public protest by all the rest of the students in the class.)

Also, in the Last Month...

■ Benjamin Sharpe, 47, charged with stabbing a friend, insisted he had to do it because his buddy had vowed to drive home, though inebriated (Aiken County, Ga.).

■ A conference paper by British scientists concluded that female cockroaches lower their standards for a mate as their biological clock runs down (Manchester, England).

■ Accused sex-assaulter Kevin Erwin was cleared by a jury, which found his torturing of his girlfriend consensual, that she for some reason had failed to use the "safe" words to get him to stop ("tomato" and "pepper") (Canton, Ohio).

The Japanese firm Takara said it will soon market a "translator" that will interpret barking and other dog sounds, expressing them with a 200-word vocabulary (e.g., "happy," "annoyed," "frustrated").

In an episode called "The Indigestible Wad," superheroes Crag, Rip, Slab and Chunk battle a piece of gum that jumps from the mouth of one unsuspecting human to another, sucking bodily fluids. Totally Spies, a cartoon about three Beverly Hills teen-agers who become spies and must balance their careers in espionage with life at the mall, premieres Saturday, Oct. 1. It premieres Sept. 15. Disney's less-entertaining cartoon The Proud Family premieres Friday, Sept. 21. Though it's wonderful to see a black family featured, the father is a dope, and the life lessons hit with the subtlety of a jackhammer.

The show's best feature is its theme song, performed by Solange and Destiny's Child. Oct. 17 brings the premiere of Totally in Tune, a reality show about members of a high-school orchestra. Finally, Go For It!—an extension of a 5-year-old touring show that combines music, sports and appearances by athletes—begins Sept. 15 on the USA Network.
