Search for weapon uncovers marijuana

DAVID - A Floyd County man is facing a possible 18 years in prison following an inspection by the Probation and Parole Office eariler this week.

According to reports, a call was placed to the probation office concerning a man who was on that office's caseload.

The caller said that Rick Estep, a man formally convicted of a wanton endangerment charge involving a gun, had in his possession a weapon, a direct violation of probationary guidelines

When probation officers responded to the call and arrived at Estep's home in David, he was not home. However, his wife was present and remained at the residence during the search which revealed, in the end, far more than a weapon at the home.

Before the initial search of the house, a large quantity of alcohol was found in the trunk of Estep's vehicle, prompting officers to move the search into the home.

During the search, two weapons, a shotgun and a rifle, were found in the home, along with what officials say could have been thousands of rounds

Home schooling increasing in popularity

by BRITTANY GREER STAFF WRITER

VIPER — Education tends to rank high on parents' list of concerns. In larger cities, the choice between public and private schools is an important one.

In many rural areas, however, it seems there is no choice. There are no private schools in many areas.

Walking tour a look at the ghostly side of Breathitt

by RENEE M. SNOWDEN BREATHITT COUNTY BUREAU

JACKSON — Approximately 50 people met on Thursday at the Breathitt County Museum for a walking tour of the spookier side of Jackson.

The Breathitt County Museum and the Breathitt County Younger Women's Club joined to stage the first annual "Ghost Walk" around Breathitt County.

The walk was led by historian Stephen D. Bowling, who told stories about Breathitt County's past and the alleged ghosts that allegedly still roam the county.

Allegedly the Breathitt County Courthouse rests on the site of hundreds of shootings that took place in the 1800s and the early 1900s.

The Hogg building is another alleged haunted building in Breathitt County.

The home of Dr. Hogg that sits on Main Street is an alleged haunted place. There have been many stories told about screams that have come from the now vacant home. However, Bowling said it is true that many people died in the home.

Other locations that are rumored to be haunted include the Jefferson Hotel, the Lees College Dormitory, the Hargis building, the Breathitt County Jail, many cemeteries, and many other places.

(See GHOSTS, page two)

Historian Steve Bowling, center, points to a building that used to be a store and is now a Hope Shop. The building is said to be haunted today due to a man being decapitated on the premises. Bowling led a group of roughly 50 people on a "Ghost Walk" through Jackson Thursday evening.

With many college graduates facing the long process of paying back students loans and resting in debt for long periods of time after graduation, the KAPT program could be a starting point in erasing this trend for future generations to come, and comes with few restrictions for choices.

With the new program, full tuition and fees are guaranteed at any public college or university in Kentucky, in addition to private Kentucky or Ohio colleges and other colleges and universities nationwide.

Prospective KAPT investors will choose from three plans including a value plan which will guarantee tuition at most of Kentucky's community and technical schools. A second choice would be a standard plan, ensuring tuition costs at Kentucky's public colleges and universities. The third choice would be a premium plan, intended to cover the average cost of tuition at Kentucky's private colleges, according to the KAPT website.

During the trial last month, the commonwealth argued that Harris was a "big time" dealer, who dispersed quantities of marijuana to other dealers.

Owen argued differently, however, saying that the drugs were only for Harris' personal use.

Following the return of the jury's verdict, Harris, taking the advice of his attorney, agreed to waive his right to proceed with a formal jury sentencing hearing for a persistent felony offender charge.

Instead, he agreed to plead guilty to the PFO charge and entered a plea agreement with the commonwealth's attorney's office, which suggested a recommended sentence of 10 years imprisonment in return for the dismissal of two previous felony charges.

Those dismissed charges stem from an indictment handed down by the grand jury in November 2000 on a fleeing or attempting to evade police charge and another charge relating to possession of "The key is by helping these people gain suitable housing, they realize that other things are possible in their lives, goals they once felt were unattainable," continued Luallen. "And then six months or a year down the road, they too are able to participate in this business we call the 'American Dream.""

According to Luallen, data shows that children who live in safe, secure homes are more confident and do better in school.

'We, at KHC, believe there are five basic elements that make up the quality of life," said Luallen. "Those are, most critically, education, adequate nutrition, affordable health care, affordable housing ... and employment. And [providing housing assistance] is one of the things that makes us part of the whole. We help provide them with that housing they need, and they become more confident and willing to better their lives, which makes a positive difference in the community. The lost time Tackett was referring to at her open house on Friday has been an extended stay with her daughter, Donna Newsome, until her new home could be completed.

The home, which was made possible primarily through the efforts of LINKS, but also aided by many agencies including the Floyd County Fiscal Court and students from both Kentucky Tech and the David School, stood finished Friday as its new owner welcomed dozens of guests with a warm smile.

Tackett spoke fondly of her former home during the open house, but stressed how thankful she was to have a new home for the upcoming winter season.

"It was an old home," Tackett said, "but it was a mansion to me. I lived there most of my life and I tried to fix it but it's hard to fix up an old house like that."

Tackett's new home endured some damage during the flood.

If it had been underpinned maybe it would have been all right, but it wasn't. There was water all under the floor and my storage building with almost all of my personal belongings was washed away.'

The new house, an adequate four room home, was constructed on site by Kentucky Tech at Garth in two separate 12-foot pieces, said Eddie Patton of the judge-executive's office, adding that the work was done exclusively by students at the school.

"This began three years ago when Judge Thompson wanted to find a way to provide lowincome families with housing," said Patton. "But what you see here today is the result of many agencies working together."

Outside the home, friends helped put an American flag in place for Tackett who could not have been happier, as she accommodated the full house with chairs and promised to get everyone refreshments as soon as things "cleared out a little".

No one was more pleased with the efforts than Tackett as she spoke briefly with Patton outside her home Friday.

"This is the greatest day of my life," said Tackett. "I feel like I'm part of another family. This has really changed my life.

Pam Cornett said the biggest disadvantage to home schooling is the public's misconception.

According to Brashear, the main disadvantage to home school is the lack of education for the parents. KAPT will help break down barriers to college

The message we constantly send to our children is that if they work hard and make good grades in school, they'll be able to attend college and enter the profession of their choice.

After all, that's the "American Dream," where anyone from any background can reach the highest levels of success.

Unfortunately, that's all this message is to some kids, a dream. The reality is that soaring tuition costs - which have increased by 53 percent for public universities and 41 percent for private schools over the last 10 years - have essentially priced many kids out of the market.

The Kentucky Long Term Policy Research Center reports that 57 percent of the top students from low-income families say they don't plan to attend college because their family could not

Another 33 percent of 16- and 17-year-olds say that if they attend college, they will depend entirely on financial aid.

These numbers should be distressing to every Kentuckian, considering the state already ranks 42nd in the nation in percentage of adults 25 and older with college degrees.

State Treasurer Jonathan Miller unveiled a plan last week that he believes will help turn around these numbers. The Kentucky Affordable Prepaid Tuition program (KAPT) will allow parents a way to lock in college expenses at today's rates and pay them off through a monthly savings plan that can last as long as 16

The premise is pay now and save later, based on the assumption that tuition is rising up to 6 or 7 percent each year. For example, a family can sign up for the Standard Plan, which guarantees the cost of four years at a Kentucky public college at $14,968. The family can then pay off that amount over a number

Better yet, the savings are not subject to either state or federal

It's far too early to tell what kind of success the program will have, though several other states have had similar programs that work well. We support the idea because it offers the prospec of creating a better educated work force, which eventually will benefit the state's economy.

The unemployment rate for Kentuckians with a bachelor's degree is 1.9 percent, compared to 4 percent for those with a high school diploma and 7.1 percent with less than a diploma. The median yearly earnings for a person with a bachelor's degree is $45,000, compared to $26,000 for a high school education and $19,800 for no diploma.

But we also have concerns that this program won't reach those who need it the most. Low-income children often have parents who don't think about college. The state needs a concerted long-term effort to educate these families on the program and how they can get involved.

To his credit, Miller says he is organizing a "grassroots network," to get the message out. He's recruiting hospital associations to give information to new mothers, meeting with school boards and talking with urban leagues and farm bureaus.

He's also encouraging employers to offer payroll deduction and to consider matching contributions, similar to a 401K pro-

A culture change is needed, and that won't happen in just a couple of months or even years, Miller said.

That change can't begin until we start breaking down barriers to college for every child, something we think this program could help achieve.

A little good news, after all

by DONALD KAUL

With all the bad things happening these days, it might be useful to look at the bright side or, at the very least, the not-quite-so-dark side. For example: These terrorist attacks might be just what we need to become a better society - less self-involved, less materialistic, braver. Lord knows, we could use improvement in those areas.

Haven't you felt for a while now that our society has been taken over by money-grubbers, that our value system has been skewed in the direction of greed? People didn't even bother to apologize for being greedy; they were too busy sneering at those with less. Making the next buck, buying the next thing - those were the important goals our children were being taught to achieve. Self-sacrifice? That was something you saw in old, corny movies.

I sense a change now. Remember how, as recently as two months ago, there were no heroes? Magazines ran articles about it, how we didn't have anyone to look up to, the way former generations did.

What they meant was that the traditional heroes of society - athletes. movie stars, politicians - had all-toooften become, in the public mind, thugs. punks and hypocrites. The magazines were right, of course, but not because the heroes of bygone eras were nobler than their counterparts today. Given the nature of the media these days, we simply knew more about them.

But on September 11 the terrorists struck, and suddenly thousands of heroes materialized to meet the crisis.

Foremost among them, of course, were the police and firefighters in Manhattan who entered the burning World Trade Towers in an attempt to put out the fires and save people. And when the towers collapsed, burying hundreds of their colleague, they ran not away from the exploding inferno, but toward

There is no heroism in the mythology of war to surpass such courage.

They were not alone. I remember seeing an interview with a man who described himself as a "hazardous materials technician." His job, he explained, was to crawl into the still-burning rubble and search for holes and air pockets to look for sur-

Then there were the minor heroes the construction workers from all over Manhattan who dropped what they were doing when they heard of the attacks, and rushed downtown with their tools to help; airline pilots and flight attendants who went back to work despite the possibility of more hijackings; airport security people who checked luggage which might or might not have bombs inside.

Heroes all, people who put aside their fears and just did their jobs, sometimes for a minimum wage.

How can we not be better with examples like that before us? I hope I'm not being too optimistic. Some of the other early indications are less than encouraging. The very first thing our leaders told us, after urging us to keep calm, is that we should go out and buy things. That would show the terrorists that they couldn't interfere with the American way of

Which may be good advice as far as the health of the economy goes, but I'm not sure it captures the sense of shared > sacrifice that we associate with a nation at war.

I was but a child during World War II, but I remember rationing. You were only allowed to buy a limited amount of certain foods and a minimal amount of gasoline each month. You carried around ration cards, which you had to show a merchant in order to obtain your allotment. People who subverted this system were considered hardly better than criminals.

The great heroine of World War II was "Rosie the Riveter," the woman who left her home to work in a defense plant. In this war, apparently, she has been supplanted by Sheila the Shopper. I can see the War-on-Terrorism poster now: "Hoarding Helps."

So OK, maybe we can't quite be another Greatest Generation. But we're well on our way to being a Pretty Damn Good Generation. And that's good news.

letters to the editor

No longer 'one nation, under God'

I'm writing this letter in response to Mr. James L. Hartley's letter to the editor titled, "Stop the blame game."

In his letter, one statement that caught my attention was, "Maybe if Bush hadn't been so eager to blur the line between church and state with his misguided and unconstitutional Faith Based Initiative, he would have been more alert to the threat." I think it's pretty evident from this statement and a few others in his letter what his beliefs about God are.

What is wrong with our nation today is that we've put God out of our lives. The scriptures say in Isaiah 57:21, "There is no peace, saith God, to the wicked." When Americans are told that judgment is coming to this nation for the same reasons it came to Sodom and Gomorrah, they mock the messenger as a "right-wing, Bible-believing radical, a homophobic misfit who needs sensitivity training to become politically correct.' Our national conscience is dead.

American society, founded upon the principles of faith and freedom, has left its moral understandings and chased after the wind. Our society, like Sodom and Gomorrah, is headed for destruction, America is no longer "one nation, under God." We have ridiculed the truth of the word of God and called it pluralism. We have worshipped other gods and called it multiculturalism. We have rewarded laziness and called it welfare. We have polluted the air with profanity and pornography and called it freedom of expression. We have institutionalized perjury and deception in government and called it politically correct.

America, unless we once again become "one nation, under God," we are on the path to certain destruction!

HAZARD - Dacker Combs has been hired as interim principal for the rest of the 2001-02 school year at Perry County Central High School.

Combs was hired after Yvon Allen left and he also took the place of Doug Campbell, who served as interim principal for a number of weeks.

Combs is retired after working for the school system for 35 years. He began teaching at Vicco Elementary his first year and went on to Dilce Combs High School to teach for two years.

He later worked for Hazard city schools for four years before becoming principal of M.C. Napier High School for five years and then Dilce Combs High School for seven years.

After so many years away, Combs said, "I enjoy being back in the school system after seven years of retirement. I have a very fine faculty and staff to work

He also said because so much of his time is spent disciplining students, he regrets he does not get to spend more time with those who are always on their best behavior. From New York

by BILLY REED TIMES COLUMNIST

ELMONT, N.Y. - On Saturday night, as I watched the musical tribute to New York's firefighters and policemen from Madison Square Garden, I marveled, yet again, at the power of music. No matter how hard we ink-stained wretches may strive, we seldom will be able to stir emotions and raise aspirations the way that Billy Joel, Paul McCarmey, Elton John and so many others have done on a regular basis. They are the Shakespeares of our time.

magical poets who know how to touch our hearts and souls.

When I was a youngster in the 1960s, I loved the rock-n-roll of Elvis, Chuck Berry, the Beetles, and the Rolling Stones. They were fun. But what touched me deepest was the folk music of Bob Dylan, Joan Baez, Joanie Mitchell, and the Kingston Trio.

How many roads must a man walk down before they call him

The answer, my friend, is blowin' in the wind.

Such lyries make you think when you're confronting serious life choices such as whether to join the Army during the Vietnam War, Music, at its best, does that. It causes you to deal with your character and your feelings. It politics, a former JCHS basketball player was named the new head coach. Les Trimble got the nod and it was deservedly so. out from under the goal to fill the 3-spot and shooting roll. Polly Sebastian will remain at the point with Bertha Sebastian filling the 2-guard spot. Perry Central will be able to keep up the relentless pressure as Chasity Napier and Beth Davis will come off the bench to spell the backcourt with little drop off in talent.

Under the goal will be where the Lady Commodores will show the most improvement. The post will be anchored by senior forward Ashley Shouse. Shouse came on late in the season to lead Perry Central on the defensive end of the floor, and her efforts were rewarded by being named to the 14th region all-tournament team. In the center, Britta Maggard and Brittany Baker will cause opposing defenses a lot of trouble. The two play as hard as any pair in the region, and are not afraid to get on the floor after a loose

Once again, the Lady Commodores are loaded. They have speed, size, experience and depth, a combination that is hard to beat. Perry Central has all the tools they need to build a 14th Region dynasty, and should repeat as regional champions again this year.

On the other side of town, the Hazard Lady Bulldogs are poised to make a run at the regional title. The Lady Bulldogs were All 'A' regional champions and 14th Region runners up last year. They return all of their starters from last year's team and should put a solid team on the floor again this year.

Hazard sports the premier center in the region in senior Teasha Haynes. Haynes missed the later part of the season last year due to an automobile accident, but should return to the court with authority November. The 5-11 center created problems in the middle for teams across the region with her shot blocking and rebounding ability. She also runs the floor well and is seldom out of posi-

The Lady Bulldogs' attack will rely on their speed at the guard position. Most of the Hazard offense comes from pressure created by their guards. The speed of Lindsey Sidwell, Sarah Cox, and Brittany Campbell create a multitude of turnovers that are quickly converted to easy baskets on the other end. Campbell is also a threat to shoot from the outside.

When Hazard is forced to work out of the half court set, Romilda Haskins will carry the load for the Lady Bulldogs. The 5-7 forward plays with the ability of a six-footer. Haskins is able to take the ball to the hoop with authority against much bigger players and come away with the basket. Her rebounding ability allows Hazard to get out on the fast break and score in transi-

The amount of time that this squad has spent together as a starting unity will make them tough to beat. They have played together so long that they know each others' moves before they make them. In the past, support from the bench has been a problem for the Lady Bulldogs, but this year they should have several players capable of coming off the bench to give their starters a rest. Look for Hazard to create problems for most of the teams in the 14th Region, and they should repeat as 14th Region All "A" champions.

South Floyd took the football to begin the game and went to the 8:50 mark of the first quarter before getting the first score on the board.

Brandon Little found the endzone from inside the 10-yard marker and put the Raiders ahead 6-0. Junior Josh McCray scored on the two-point conversion attempt to make it a 8-0 South Floyd lead.

Elkhorn City was held scoreless in the first period. The Raiders took an 8-0 lead into the second period.

South Floyd managed to recover an Elkhorn City fumble just before the end of the first period to go into the second quarter on an even more positive note.

A successful fake punt put the Raiders back in offensive business in the second period. Brandon Little took the South Floyd offense inside the 10-yard line where quarterback Josh Johnson set up camp. Senior Jeremy Tackett made the most of a carry from the nine-yard line by scoring. Johnson completed the conversion pass to McCray to give the host Raiders a 14-0 lead with 6:05 left in the first half.

Lady Hawk Tip-Off Classic schedule set

by STEVE LeMASTER SPORTS EDITOR

The season for many high school basketball teams, both boys and girls, begins right after Thanksgiving. A very short holiday break doesn't give too many hoops teams the chance to let their Thanksgiving turkey even digest properly. Well, it might not be that short of a break, but teams do get right back to the hardwood following the holiday break. Such is the case for eight area teams from two separate region -the 14th and 15th - who will vie for a championship in what has become one of the best season-opening events in all of Eastern Kentucky.

Some of the very best girls basketball teams in Eastern Kentucky will venture to Pike County to take part in a five-day

Coach Tammy Tussey will once again bring teams into her home Pike County Central court to begin the season. The eight teams in this year's Lady Hawk could very well be the best eight to ever play in the event at one time.

Beginning Monday, November 26 and running for five days before ending Saturday, December 1, the Tip-Off Classic gives all eight teams three games apiece which is something very appealing to many coaches.

The Belfry Lady Pirates under second-year head coach Mark Gannon open the tournament against Leslie County on Monday, Nov. 26 ar 6:30 p.m. Host Pike Co. Central debuts in the second game of the opening night taking on a much-improved Magoffin County team coached by Neil West.

The second night of the tournament, Tuesday, Nov. 27, has Breathitt County taking on Elkhorn City in the opener at 6:30 and Coach Cindy Halbert's Allen Central Lady Rebels taking on another Class A school, Pikeville, in the nightcap at 8:15.

The tournament takes Wednesday, Nov. 28 off and resumes on Thursday (Nov. 29) with winners of the games on Monday and Tuesday squaring off with one another. On Friday, the losers from the first two nights of the tourney will play each other. Four games are set for the final day of the tournament, Saturday, Dec. 1 with the championship game set for a 7:15 start.

Two teams who took part in last year's Lady Hawk Tip-Off Classic but will not take part in this year's event are 58th District teams South Floyd and Prestonsburg.

Lady Hawk Tip-Off Classic will be Nov. 26,27,29, and Dec. 1. All teams will play three games.

Mon., Nov. 26 6:30 Belfry vs Leslie Co. Tues Nov. 27 6:30Breathitt Co. vs Elkhorn 8:15Allen Central vs Pikeville

Thurs, games will be winners of Mon. and Tues, es will be the teams who lost on Mon, and Tues Sat. All teams will play 3rd game. Games will run 2:00, 3:45, 5:30, and 7:15 will be the championship game.

NASCAR announces 2002 Winston Cup schedule

DAYTONA BEACH, Fig. (September 10, 2001) - The National Association for Stock Car Auto Racing (NASCAR) has announced a 36-race schedule for the 2002 NASCAR Winston Cup Series season. For the first time in the 54-year history of NASCAR's premier series, the schedule will end in the state of Florida.

The season begins with the 44th running of the Daytona 500, Feb. 17 at Daytona International Speedway. The season finale is set for Nov. 17 at Homestead-Miami Speedway,

In addition to the 36 races that will count in the NASCAR Winston Cup Series point standings, there again will be two "allstar" events: the Budweiser Shootout on Feb. 10 at Daytona and The Winston, May 19 at Lowe's Motor Speedway in Charlotte, N.C.

The season will have three off weekends, affording NASCAR Winston Cup Series teams welldeserved breaks amid their quests for the series championship.

Befitting the series' burgeoning popularity and the record television ratings posted throughout the 2001 season, all 36 NASCAR Winston Cup Series races in 2002 will be nationally televised; a total of 26 events will be televised by the NBC and Fox networks, starting with NBC's telecast of the Daytona 500. Cable networks TNT and FX will televise a total of 10 events.

In addition, TNT will carry the Budweiser Shootout and the Feb. 17 Gatorade 125s - the two exciting, 125-mile qualifying races for the Daytona 500 - on Feb. 17. Also, FX will carry The Winston.

A total of 13 tracks will host two point races apiece: Atlanta Motor Speedway (March 10 and Oct. 27); Bristol Motor Speedway (March 24 and Aug. 24); Darlington Raceway (March 17 and Sept. 1), Daytona (Feb. 17 and July 6); Dover Downs International Speedway (June 2 and Sept. 22); Lowe's Motor Speedway (May 26 and Oct. 13); Martinsville Speedway (April 14 and Oct. 20); Michigan International Speedway (June 16 and Aug. 18); New Hampshire International Speedway (July 21 and Sept. 15); North Carolina Speedway (Feb. 24 and Nov. 3); Pocono Raceway (June 9 and July 28); Richmond International Raceway (May 4 and Sept. 8); and Talladega Superspeedway (April 21 and Oct.

The following facilities will host one event: Las Vegas Motor Speedway (March 3); Texas Motor Speedway (April 7); California Speedway (April 28); Sears Point Raceway (June 23); Chicagoland Speedway (July 14); Indianapolis Motor Speedway (Aug. 4); Watkins Glen International (Aug. 11); Kansas Speedway (Sept. 29); Phoenix International Raceway (Nov. 10) and Homestead-Miami Speedway (Nov. 17).

2002 NASCAR Busch Series Schedule

DAYTONA BEACH, Fla. -The National Association for Stock Car Auto Racing (NASCAR) has announced a 34-race 2002 schedule for the NASCAR Busch Series, Grand National Division, the second-most popular motorsports series in the United States.

The popularity of the NASCAR Busch Series is topped in the U.S. only by the NASCAR Winston Cup Series, a status illustrated by the fact that all 34 NASCAR Busch Series races in 2002 will be nationally televised. Clearly, the NASCAR Busch Series has outgrown an outdated reputation as being merely a training ground for NASCAR Winston Cup Series, and has firmly established itself on its own merit.

The 2002 NASCAR Busch Series schedule will begin Feb. 16 with the annual 300-mile event at Daytona International Speedway, and will be highlighted by a return to Daytona on the night of July 5. That will mark the first time the NASCAR Busch Series has raced twice at Daytona in the same sea-

The season will end on Nov. 16 at Homestead-Miami Speedway, a facility that has hosted the NASCAR Busch Series season finale since 1995. The intensely competitive NASCAR Busch Series has produced impressive television ratings throughout the 2001 season, part of an overall growth in the popularity of NASCAR racing. Overall, combined television ratings for the NASCAR Winston Cup and NASCAR Busch Series are up more than 20 percent compared to

Not only intensely competitive, the NASCAR Busch Series is increasingly competitive. Through 26 races this year, there have been 16 different winners, including six first-time winners. By comparison, there were 14 different winners all of last season with only two firsttime victors. So far this season with seven races remaining to be run - 135 different drivers have competed for more than $21 million in posted winnings; last season had a total of 119 different competitors. In addition to the second Daytona event, the 2002 schedule will feature one other new race - the Nashville 300, June 8 at Nashville Superspeedway.

Daytona will be one of eight facilities hosting two NASCAR Busch Series races. The others: North Carolina Speedway (Feb. 23 and Nov. 2); Darlington Raceway (March 16 and Aug. 31); Bristol Motor Speedway (March 23 and Nashville Aug. 23); Superspeedway (April 13 and June Richmond International Raceway (May 3 and Sept. 6); Lowe's Motor Speedway (May 26 and Oct. 12); and Dover Downs International Speedway (June 1 and Sept. 21). The following facilities will have one event: Las Vegas Motor Speedway (March 2); Texas Motor Speedway (April 6); Talladega Superspeedway (April 20); California Speedway (April 27); New Hampshire International Speedway (May 11); Nazareth Speedway (May 19); Kentucky Speedway (June 16); The Milwankee Mile (June 30); Chicagoland Speedway (July 13); Gateway International Raceway in St. Louis (July 20); Pikes Peak International Raceway (July 27): Indianapolis Raceway Park (Aug. 👟 Michigan International Speedway (Aug. 17); Kansas Speedway (Sept. 28); Memphis Motorsports Park (Oct. 19); Atlanta Motor Speedway (Oct. 26); Phoenix International Raceway (Nov. 9); and Homestead-Miami Speedway (Nov. 16).

"As in years past, the new schedule provides a variety of tracks," NASCAR Vice President of Corporate Communications Jim Hunter said. "The NASCAR Busch Series will go to places like Talladega's 2.66-mile monster trioval, and to Indianapolis Raceway Park's six-tenths mile. That diversity will ensure a mix of superspeedway drafting drama, plus the sort of short-track, paint-trading action that. honors - and embellishes NASCAR's roots."

forces you to look at yourself in New York will be the pounding the mirror.

By now, you're surely wondering what this has to do with sports. Well, sports has a music of its own. It's not choreographed. It's spontaneous.

It's called the standing ovation, which has a rhythm and a spirit that would make a musician weep.

This Saturday at Belmont Park, the Long Island track very near the carnage and devastation of the World Trade Center, thoroughbred racing, which has been straining to regain a spot in the mainstream of American sports, has a unique opportunity to make beautiful music. It has an opportunity that doesn't belong to the World Series or the NFL or the NBA.

Several of the Breeders' Cup favorites are owned by Arab sheiks. Maybe they'll win and maybe they won't. But wouldn't it be something to see the Belmont crowd stand and applaud them as a symbolic gesture of unity and respect? Sheik Maktoum bin Rashed al Maktoum of Dubai, through Keeneland, has pledged $5 million to the American relief effort. He's the power behind the Godolphin Stable, a major player in worldwide racing.

To me, that's music of the most soaring kind.

At the Breeders Cup, I always pull for the horses who are the best prepared and the most deserving. This year, however, I may have a bit of bias toward the foreign-based horses. Has America ever had a better friend than Great Britain? Isn't Tony Blair the most eloquent British prime minister since Winston Churchill? And don't we appreciate the support of our Islamic friends?

This Breeders Cup will be about more than horse racing. It will be about symbolism and unity and rage against the terrorists. And it will be about the music of hands clapping and spirits soaring and good hearts pounding with pride.

The only tip I can give you is bet on New York. Bet on America. Bet on good triumphing over evil. Bet on our loyal and decent friends.

I will enjoy the racing. I will toast the winners. But, mostly, I will be happy for any event that sustains the spirit of New York. I'm sure that Billy Joel, Elton John, Paul McCartney and others would understand.

On Saturday, the music of Leading the way for Alice Lloyd and Gibson is senior forward Jason Collins. A strong candidate for Appalachian Athletic Conference Player of the Year, Collins averaged 20 points and 9 rebounds per game last season as a junior. He hails from Man, W.Va. Collins is one of four players on the Alice Lloyd roster from Man. The other three hoopsters are freshmen,

Two Eastern Kentucky players who fared quite well last season in freshman campaigns were Knott Central's Todd Craft and Johnson Central's Tommy McKenzie. Craft averaged seven point in his first season of college basketball while Craft averaged nearly eight points per game.

Sophomore Jimmy Burchett also returns for the Eagles, Burchett, a Johnson Central High product, averaged 3.5 points a contest last season. Nick Samons of Allen Central and Ryan Shannon of South Floyd, both guards, also return.

Junior center Greg Potter returns in the middle for Alice Lloyd. Potter (6-7, 240), who played his high school roundball at June Buchanan under Gibson, is a force on the inside.

Several newcomers expected to make some noise are redshirt freshman Kent Campbell (6-6, 220) of Perry County Central and Shelby Valley guard Shannon Akers (6-1, 195). Other true freshmen. coming in include John Meade (South Floyd, 6-1, 175), Sean Noel (Man, W.Va., 6-8, 240), Josh Vance (Man, W.Va., 6-1, 180), Jimmy Stumbo (South Floyd, 6-6, 270).

Mid-Continent enters its second season of college basketball. The ougars went 6-25 last season under first-year coach Gree P Now, this season, Pruitt is out, and another Greg, Greg Ross, is in.

Today's matchup will be the first-ever meeting between the two schools. ALC and Mid-Continent are scheduled to tip things off at 2

Does Medicare help to pay for mammograms?

Yes. Medicare Part B covers two types of mammograms, screening and diagnostic. For both type of mammograms the facility where the test is done must be certified by the Food and Drug Administration.

What is the coverage for a screening mammogram?

The screening mammogram is done for the Lpurpose of early detection of breast cancer. No symptoms must be present for the service to be considered covered under Medicare guidelines. Medicare covers one screening mammogram every 12 months for women age 40 and older. Screening mammograms are not subject to the Medicare Part B $100 deductible. The patient would owe 20 percent of the Medicare approved amount for this service.

When would I know if I need a diagnostic mammogram instead of a screening mammogram?

Your doctor will know if you need a diagnostic mammogram instead of a screening and will order the test for you. Many times diagnostic mammograms are done because of symptoms present, a previous abnormal or questionable screening mammogram, or a history of breast cancer. Medicare covers this test when the patient shows any signs of breast disease and the doctor orders the test. Diagnostic mammograms are subject to the Medicare Part B $100 deductible.

Where can I get more information about breast cancer and Medicare coverage of mammograms?

You may call 1-800-MEDICARE (1-800-.633-4227) or call the National Cancer Institute's Cancer Information Service at 1-800-4-CANCER (1-800-422-6237). Locally, your health department may be able to answer your questions. It is also a good idea to talk to your doctor about your need for a mammogram.

Sisters, students,

MOREHEAD Sisters Michelle McKee and Stephanie Polley of Maysville have done many things together, including enrolling as non-traditional students at Morehead State University.

Once they began taking classes. the pair declared industrial technology with an option in construction/mining technology as their major. They also became partners in Super Scrubs, a cleaning operation.

The entrepreneurial enterprise started last year when they got a job cleaning apartments for the Housing Authority in Maysville. Today, their business keeps them busy Tuesday through Saturday, whether it is cleaning government offices in Mason County, a law office, the Environmental Protection Agency facility at Maxey Flats or six houses.

'Mondays are reserved for classes and tutoring or studying," Polley said. "We don't want our grades to go down because of all of this."

There was a time last year, however, when the pair wondered if Super Scrubs would make it. "Around Christmas time we were making about $50 a week. The work wasn't consistent," McKee said. "Now, we have steady jobs."

In addition to themselves, the company employs their mother who helps with their children and some of the cleaning. Mckee has four children - Corey, 14; Kayla, 13; Carolyn, 11; and Kami, 9. Polley has a daughter, Heather, who is 9 years

Heather and Kami are in the same class in school, Polley said. "We were glad about that because we know how much it helps," she added. The cousins also are in the same Girl Scout troop and take gymnastics lessons together.

Even though the women are busy, husbands Mark McKee and Jeremy Polley, support their endeavors, "You have to make sacrifices to go to college," McKee said. "I wouldn't change it," Polley said.

After graduation, both women want to be project managers at construction sites, working for someone else. "I want to live in a motel from the time I'm 40 until I'm 65," McKee said. "My husband and I will build a little cabin as our home base and I'll travel with a big construction

'My goal when I'm out of school is to hire someone to clean my house," Polley joked.

They plan to pass their cleaning business on to their daughters so that they may have money for college.

HUD awards millions to protect children

Housing and Urban Development Secretary Mel Martinez recently announced more than $67 million in grants aimed at protecting children in low-income households from lead-based paint and other public health and safety hazards during a joint news conference with EPA Administrator Christie Whitman and Health and Human Services Secretary Tommy Thompson.

The HUD grants, announced after the first meeting of the President's Task Force on Environmental Health and Safety Risks to Children, will fund programs in 21 states to eliminate lead hazards in low-income housing, promote educational programs and conduct opportunity to grow up in safe and healthy homes," said Martinez, "These grants are an investment in our children and the future generations of America."

"America's children should have the fund:

Martinez announced $59 million in Lead Hazard Control grants to remove lead hazards from approximately 7,000 privately owned homes in 16 states.

In addition, more than $8 million in grants will fund local projects under HUD's Healthy Homes Program to address a multitude of health hazards relating to the condition of housing. Healthy Homes research funding will also support programs to develop new methods for assessing and controlling home health hazards.

Blood testing for children living in low-income housing:

Removal of lead-based paint hazards from privately owned low-income homes and apartments: ■ Inspecting and testing low-income housing for the presence of lead hazards;

■ Temporarily relocating families during lead control work; Community education and outreach; Job training for lead hazard control workers; and Collecting and analyzing data to identify housing with lead hazards, While lead-based paint was banned from residential use in 1978, many older homes still contain lead. Lead exposure causes reduced IQ, learning disabilities. developmental delays, reduced height, hearing loss and a host of other health problems in young children. Many of these effects are thought to be irreversible. In later years, lead-poisoned children are much more likely to drop out of school and demonstrate antisocial behavior.

At higher levels, lead can damage a child's kidneys and central nervous system and cause anemia, coma, convulsions and even death. Nearly one million of the nation's 22 million children under the age of six have blood lead levels high enough to impair their ability to think, concentrate and learn.

U.S. Representative Harold nial "Hal" Rogers (KY-5) says the Department Agriculture's Rural Utilities

Service has agreed to provide loans totaling $23,657,000 to NorthStar Technology Corporation to provide modern digital wireless telephone service to a 26-county region

The project will create 150 customer service and skilled technical jobs over the next 24 months and be headquartered in the new Valley Oak swearing-in Kentuckian Hilda Gay Legg as the new Administrator of the Rural Utilities Service.

The announcement was made recently at USDA headquarters in Washington during an event featuring the ceremo-

The agency provides grants and loans to local governments and utilities for electricity systems, telephone and telecommunications service, as well as water and wastewater systems.

Rogers said the loan package for NorthStar was assembled with the assistance of the Southern Kentucky Economic Development Corporation. NorthStar is currently building a $1.6 million facility in Pulaski County at the new Valley Oak Technology Park. That facility will be the company's corporate headquarters, main switching center and customer service center.

The 150 jobs created will provide a combined annual payroll of $4.8 million with an average annual salary of $30,000 to include a generous benefits package.

Rogers utilizes his seniori-House the on Appropriations Committee to secure federal resources for economic development projects and new job opportunities in southern and eastern Kentucky.

Lech Walesa, former Polish president and legendary labor leader, spoke recently at the University of Kentucky.

Former president of Poland addresses UK college students

LEXINGTON — Lech Walesa, the former president of Poland (1990 to 1995), addressed a large audience of University of Kentucky students and faculty members Oct. 23 at the Singletary Center for the Arts in Lexington.

Walesa played a major role in the destruction of the Iron Curtain in the 1980s and early 1990s. In 1980, he was one of the principal founders of "Solidarity," an independent labor union. He challenged the Communist dictatorship in his own country and helped bring about democratic reforms. In 1983, he was awarded the Nobel Peace Prize. Following the overthrow of the Communist regime, he became the first popularly elected president of Poland.

Walesa asserted that we are at the dawn of a new era in history. Formerly, he said, land was the basis of wealth. But now, information and intellect are more important than the control of land. The inevitable result, Walesa said, is the process of "globalization."

According to Walesa, the world is currently witnessing the globalization of information through the internet, the globalization of environmental protection and the globalization of the economy due to the vast increase in international trade.

Walesa believes that as we embark upon this new era of globalization, the people of the world face three great challenges — conflict over borders; anti-Semitism, racism and ethnic cleansing, and terrorism. He said the majority of people throughout the world want to follow the leadership of the United States, but as the world's only superpower, many will envy and resent nerica.

Therefore, he said, the world community must reorganize in order to help lift the sole burden of world leadership from the shoulders of the United States, Walesa urged people to participate in their democratic institutions. Failure to do so, he said, would result in the 21st century being known as the "Century of Terrorism."

Professors Thomas D. Matijasic and Robert McAninch of Prestonsburg Community College attended the lecture. Both said they were impressed by Walesa's comments.

McAninch felt that Walesa could have improved his presentation by giving shorter answers to questions posed by the audience after the conclusion of the address, Matijasic said he was gratified to hear Walesa praise the democratic institutions of the U.S. and to express sympathy for the victims of the Sept. 11 terrorist attacks.

Prestonsburg Community College, Morehead State University at Prestonsburg, and the East Kentucky Science Center will host a groundbreaking ceremony for the Classroom and Health Education Building, Northeast Regional Postsecondary Edu-cation Center and the East Kentucky Science Center and Zeiss Planetarium.

The joint ceremony will be held on Friday, Nov. 9, at 2:30 p.m. in the Pike Technology Building Auditorium on the Prestonsburg Community College campus at One Bert Combs Drive in Prestonsburg.

Participating in the ceremony will be Gov. Paul Patton; Dr.

Michael B. McCall, president of the Kentucky Community and Technical College System (KCTCS); Dr. Ronald G. Eaglin, MSU president; Dr. George D. Edwards, president of PCC; John Rosenberg, chairman of the board of directors for the East Kentucky Science Center (EKSC), and Raymond Shubinsi, EKSC director; Dr. Margaret Lewis, director of MSU Prestonsburg; area legislators and local officials.

These state-of-the art buildings were designed by two firms: Classroom and Health Education Building by Ross-Tarrant Architects, Inc.; Northeast Regional Postsecondary Edu-cation Center and East Kentucky Science Center by Nolan & Nolan, Inc. Architects and Engineers.

The Classroom and Health Education Building was conceived as a two-phase project. The first phase, consisting of 29,000 square feet, was funded in 1996 and the bid was awarded on July 24. The building will function as a student center housing a bookstore, food service area, game room, lounge area, classrooms and office space for student service personnel. Funding was made available from state funds in the amount of $5,500,000 with the first phase scheduled for occupancy in January 2003.

The Northeast Regional Postsecondary Education Center will be jointly occupied by Pres-tonsburg Community College and MSU at Prestonsburg. The building will provide both office and classroom space. Site preparation began in June with completion anticipated in the summer of 2003. State funds in the amount of $6,650,000 were appropriated.

The East Kentucky Science' Center, an educational resource center of 11,000 square feet, was designed to promote and increase awareness of the sciences for the citizenry of East Kentucky, particularly elementary students. In addition to a classroom, demonstration lab, 3000 square feet science exhibit hall, gift shop, and offices, the center will have a state-of-the-art planetarium. More than 25,000 visitors, primarily school children, are expected annually. Site work began in June with completion anticipated in the summer of 2003. State funds were made available for the project in the amount of $3,640,000. The functions and programming of the building will be developed and managed by a non-profit corporation, the East Kentucky Science Center, and its director. The building will be owned and maintained by KCTCS.

Immediately following the program, the three education entities will host a reception in the Magoffin Learning Resource Center Art Gallery in celebration of the three new buildings.

Looking back on one of her earliest experiences as a nurse, Simpson remembers a preacher 'praying over" a patient in the hospital. Whenever this would happen. Simpson observed that all activity in the room would come to a standstill, including patient care, as the other visitors and patients joined in prayer. In her dissertation, she describes a similar experience five years later while working as a charge nurse on the midnight shift. The patient, an elderly gentleman with endstage emphysema, was not expected to live through the night.

"About 2 a.m., several family members asked to have prayer with the old gentleman. As I went about my tasks at the nurses' station, I heard the family praying at the patient's bedside. Shortly, the

The incidents shaped her perspective from viewing prayer as that which kept her from providing patient care, to viewing faith and prayer as inseparable from and beneficial to the healing process.

UK Announces Compliance

Kentucky President Lee T. Todd Jr. along with UK Athletics Director Larry Ivy today unveiled an enhancement to the UK Athletics Association's Compliance Program entitled "Comply Cats" - a toll-free telephone number that will allow employees, student-athletes and the general public to report potential misconduct or ask compliance-related questions anony-

The new program is the first of its kind in a Southeastern Conference (SEC) athletics department and is believed to be the first introduced by a National Collegiate Athletics Association (NCAA) member institution. It's modeled after a similar, successful program that was established by the Office of Compliance at the UK Chandler Medical Center in 1999

"The administrative staff of the University of Kentucky Athletics Association has determined that this compliance effort will help us prevent and detect the types of violations which occurred in the majority of the allegations detailed in the NCAA official letter of inquiry into the University's football program," report anonymously without fear of retribution. Employees who fail to report such suspected misconduct could result in disciplinary action."

"This initiative is an important addition to the regular efforts of our compliance staff," Ivy said. "This reinforces our commitment to maintaining an athletics program that not only is compliant with SEC and NCAA regulations, but also other human resource issues."

"The University of Kentucky is to be congratulated for developing the means for allowing its fans, alumni, boosters, employees and student-athletes an opportunity to inquire about compliance issues," Commissioner Roy Kramer said. This should serve as an outstanding tool for everyone who follows Wildcat athletics to get an understanding about issues that are so important for all intercollegiate athletics departments."

The UK Athletics Association has hired an independent contractor - Pinkerton Services Group of Charlotte, N.C. - to establish and monitor the tollfree telephone line, (866) 275-CATS, 24 hours a day, seven days a week and every day of the year at a cost of $3,500 annually. Pinkerton, which also monitors the UK Medical Center's compliance line, is professionally trained to take calls about possible misconduct, or to arrange for callers to receive answers to any questions they may have about compliance issues.

The Compliance Office will conduct mandatory educational sessions with employees and student-athletes to inform them of the new program. Employees and student-athletes not only will be trained how to use the telephone line, but also will be informed of legal and institutional protections for those reporting suspected misconduct. Night-night book

Wouldn't it be amazing if our kids loved to go to sleep at bedtime? Well, they usually don't, and that's where the bedtime ritual comes in to help wind things down after a busy preschool day.

Although challenging, bedtime can also be the sweetest of all time we spend with our children. The magic begins the moment we utter the words "Once upon a time," The beauty of storytelling is that tales can come from anywhere. including the vivid imaginations of our children. With this bedtime activity, your children are the authors of their own "nightnight book," where each page represents something in their world they're familiar with, something they see or use each day. As you read it over and over, new stories will emerge, giving a boost to language development and a love for books and reading.

Use a sheet of construction paper for each page. The illustrations of objects and people in your child's life can come from magazine pictures, family photos, found objects, drawings and stickers. Glue a picture or object to each sheet and print the name of it below, after the words "night-night." For example, "night-night shoes" (attach real shoestrings to a drawing of shoes to practice tying). It's especially fun to include the actual words your child uses, such as "night-night jammies" instead of "pajamas." The final page could be a poem:

Dear Diane...

Extravagance not necessarily a bad sign

DEAR DIANE: I've been dating "Aaron" for three years. I love him very much and I know he loves me. Lately, we've been talking about the prospect of marriage, which has me over the moon!

However, there is one small problem. Aaron and I have been out window-shopping for engagement and wedding rings. Although Aaron isn't rich, he is hardworking and honest, and the cost of the rings is often a little out of his price range. I know it must be hurting him that he can't afford to buy the rings he'd want

Here's the kicker, though: Last week, I came home and Aaron (who is a huge movie fan) had bought a new DVD player and had three very expensive vintage movie posters newly framed and hanging in the living room.

For what he spent on improving his home theater, he could have put a down payment on an engagement ring for me. I was crushed and

What was Aaron thinking? Is this his way of saying he doesn't want to marry me anymore? - NOT ENTERTAINED IN EDMONTON

DEAR EDMONTON: I don't think Aaron was trying to tell you that he doesn't want to marry you. So, calm down.

What's going on here is a simple case of a young man trying to regain his pride. Your window-shopping forays did nothing but remind Aaron that he wasn't making the Big Bucks or at least bucks big enough to afford the ring of his (and your) dreams.

So, in order to feel like he wasn't a no-good, poverty-stricken bum, he went out and spent a bunch of money on the posters, framing and the DVD player. In a way, it was his way of showing you that he was capable of making a big

Be patient with him. And the next time you go window-shopping, try showing enthusiasm for rings that aren't out of your boyfriend's

Shingles — the chicken pox virus coming back for an encore

DEAR DR. DONOHUE: My dad is 83 and lives by himself. He called to say he thinks he has the shingles. I want to take him to the doctor, but he says there is nothing to do for it. Are there any medicines? - K.B.

ANSWER: Everyone who has ever been infected with the chickenpox virus is a candidate for breaking out in shingles. That includes almost every adult. Chickenpox is a highly contagious virus, and few pass into adulthood without having been infected.

The chickenpox virus sequesters itself within nerve cells. When an older person has a fleeting breach in immunity, the virus leaves the cell body and travels down the nerve cell rootlet to the skin. There it shows itself in the typical blister rash of shingles.

The dust mites danced in the ray of sunshine that provided the only light in the rabbi's office. He rocked back in his office chair and sighed as he stroked his beard. Then he took his wire-rimmed glasses and polished them absent-mindedly on his flannel shirt.

"So," he said, "you were divorced. Now you want to marry this good Jewish boy. What's the problem?"

He nestled his grizzled chin in his hand and smiled softly at me.

I wanted to shriek. What's the probtem? First of all, I'm Christian. Second. I'm older than he is. Third - and not least, by any means - I'm divorced! Instead, I looked back into his soft brown eyes and tried to form the words.

"Don't you think," I stuttered, "that

He settled back in the office chair and stretched so that he was looking at the ceiling. He stroked the scraggly beard that covered his chin and his neck. Then, he returned to his spot behind the desk and leaned toward me.

Say you have to have surgery. Say you have a choice between two doctors.

Who are you going to choose? The one right out of medical school or the one with experience?"

The one with experience," I said. His face crinkled into a grin. "I would, too," he locked his eyes with mine. "So in this marriage, you will be the one with experience. That's not such Often, marriages tend to drift. They get caught in dangerous currents. They get off course and head toward hidden sandbars. No one notices until it is too late. On your face, I see the pain of a marriage gone bad. You will notice the drift in this marriage. You'll call out when you see the rocks. You'll yell to watch out and pay attention. You'll be the person with experience," he sighed. 'And believe me, that's not such a bad thing. Not bad at all.

He walked to the window and pecked between the slats of the blinds. You see, no one here knows about my first wife. I don't hide it, but I don't make a big deal about it. She died early in our marriage before I moved here. Now, late at night, I think of all the words I never said. I think of all the chances I let pass by in that first marriage, and I believe I'm a better husband to my wife today because of the woman

For the first time, the sadness in his eyes had meaning. Now I understood why I chose to come talk to this man about marriage instead of taking an easier route and getting married outside both our religions. The word "rabbi" means teacher. Somehow I sensed he could teach me, or even lend me the courage I needed in order to try again, to marry again and to love again.

"I will marry you and your David," said the rabbi. "If you promise me that you will be the person who yells out when you see the marriage is in dan-

I promised him I would, and I rose to leave.

"By the way," he called to me as I hesitated in his doorway, "did anyone, ever tell you that Joanna is a good Hebrew name?" Sixteen years have passed since the rabbi married David and me on a rainy October morning. And, yes, I have called out several times when I sensed we were in danger. I would tell the rabbi how well his analogy has served me, but I cannot. He died two years after our wedding. But I will always be grateful for the priceless gift he gave me: The wisdom to know that all of our experiences in life make us not less valuable, but more valuable, not less able to love, but more able to love.

The Miocene Arrow

fantasy books touting space wars or variations on Tolkien's creation, a few authors struggle to expand the boundaries of this saturated market by doing what science fiction originally set out to do; to imagine how today's events will impact tomorrow's humanity.

In "The Miocene Arrow" as in the first book of this series, "Souls in the Great Machine" author Sean McMullen presents a vividly imagined future, one so densely structured that the reader's mind struggles to catch up with an American civilization far removed from the one in which we now live.

Two thousand years from now, a rough conglomeration of ration, combined with a fast-a world where even humans have little control. Besides the devastation caused by nuclear war centuries before, the invisible wave of the Call sweeps across every landmass, triggering a mindless impulse to walk straight toward certain death. Ancient satellites sweep across the sky, vaporizing machinery impossible.

Amid the constant jockeying for supremacy between citystates, a war is sparked and inflamed by a mysterious group of travelers, rumored to be immune to the effects of the

That disorientation doesn't stop one from turning the pages, though; in fact, the best way to experience the author's America is to keep reading.

> 'The Miocene Arrow" skillfully changes one's perception and making electric generation of how the world works, and forces the reader to wonder what a different person he or she might become in such a harsh environment. This isn't always an enjoyable read, but it stays true to what science fiction should be: a mirror of ourselves in a future of our own making.

When in Delaware, beware of flying pumpkins

Halloween will soon be over; what to do with all those leftover jack-o-lanterns? Let's see, you could chop them up and make a slightly charred-tasting pumpkin stew, or you could build a machine that would hurl it the better part of a mile. Tough choice? Not for some.

At the intersection of routes 305 and 306 in Millsboro, Del., you'll hear this not-so-familiar phrase: Beware of falling pumpkins. This is no joke — the boys in Delaware take their punkin' chunkin' seriously. What started as a testosterone-charged challenge in 1986 has grown over the past 16 years into a one-of-akind event to promote the concept that pumpkins DO fly. Contestants and spectators upward of 30,000 - gather each year to cheer them on.

Here's the basic blueprint: You take 60 or so teams of varied firepower and let them loose chuck their pumpkin the farthest. How can you go wrong? And anyone can become a contestant. The slots (those that aren't taken by defending champions) open up mid-summer on a first-come, first-saved

The categories range from human-powered, to air cannons, to "Unlimited Machine." There is even a youth category. There are only a few rules: The pumpkin must weigh 8 to 10 pounds, it has to leave the machine looking like a pumpkin, and no explosives can be used.

All of the spots for competiroom to spectate - and plenty to do besides chunkin'. The events start on Friday,

Nov. 2, with a Chunk for Charity. The teams aim for targets, not distance, and if they hit them, money is donated to a charity of their choice. Last year money went to the Salvation Army and the American Heart Association, as well as the Sea

On Saturday, events warm up at 9 a.m. with the youth competition, and it goes all day. The big boys — that's the electrical motorized nightmares with names like Old Glory (defending champion with a 4,085 foot launch) and The Q36 Punkin' Modulator - set off at High Noon. And these machines aren't small, folks; they are HUGE.

There will also be a Punkin' Cooking contest - so you with pumpkins. Their goal is to tion are taken for this year's might get some of that stew after

You may ask, "Why?" According to the Punkin' Chunkin' mission statement: "We believe that the best a person can achieve can only be realized through competition, and that backyard ingenuity is what has made America the leader in the industrial world." Happy launching.

Putting the fun back in exercise

When it comes to exercise. the main way to stay motivated is to find something that is fun for you. Doing pushups and sit-ups week after week will eventually become stale. That's when a lot of people put exercise on the back burner.

Instead, why not stimulate vour interest and take up an activity that you used to do as a kid?

For example, how long has it been since you laced up your skates? You can get a great aerobic workout on ice or inline skates by keeping a steady pace for about 30 minutes. Put some headphones on and listen to some '80s skate music to take yourself back to the disco nights of "iron-on" T-shirts and glow sticks. A more advanced person can try skating uphill for an anaerobic workout.

Just remember that what goes up must come down: Skating can be high risk for injury. Be sure to wear the proper protective pads for the head, elbows, wrists and knees. A good pair of regular or inline skates can cost anywhere from $100 to $300 an investment that will help you feel young and in shape.

When was the last time you had a good bounce on a trampoline? Trampolines are finding their way onto just about every kid's Christmas list;

they're also taking the nation's fitness facilities by storm. Mini-trampolines, which can be bought for about $40 to $60, provide excellent fitness opportunities. Jogging in place, jumping jacks and cross-country skiing are just a few things you can do on a trampoline. If the weather is too wet or too cold (or both) to exercise outside, just haul out that mini-trampoline and exercise while you're watching your favorite TV show.

No matter what your fitness level is, exercise should be more than a grim routine. Try something you haven't done in a while. Have some fun like you did when you were a kid.

Yes, there are medicines for shingles — the "vir" triplets: acyclovir, famciclovir and valacyclovir. When one of those medicines is given early in the course of a shingles outbreak, it can generally speed recovery.

The terror of shingles is the pain that sometimes persists long after the rash has gone. That pain is called postherpetic neuralgia. The virus has damaged the nerve, and the pain lingers and lingers.

Pain treatment is the goal of postherpetic neuralgia treatment. Lidocaine, a numbing agent, comes in a patch that can be applied to the painful skin. It controls the agony for some. Gabapentin, a drug used for epilepsy control, also has found a niche in treating the persistent pain that too frequently appears after a shingles outbreak. Amitriptyline, a depression medicine, has a place in controlling persistent shingles pain, too. All three of these drugs require a prescrip-

INFOLINK Audiogalaxy is next-generation Napster

Let's say that public libraries don't exist. Do you think that if some legislator proposed the idea of a public library today, it would fly? My guess is it wouldn't, because of the overstepping of the so-called battle for intellectual property. Yet today, you can go to your public library, check out a dozen CDs, take them home and make copies for yourself. All with the government's blessing.

Because Napster and other music-sharing services aren't owned and run by the government, they don't have the protection of a public library. And frankly, that's why Napster is reeling. Yet Napster and others like it are founded on the same premise. Public libraries have been around for thousands of years, and yet it's funny how the publishing business hasn't gone under yet. People still want to buy and own books. The same goes for music.

Think of music-sharing services as public libraries whose continued existence depends upon their technological ability to stay one step ahead of intellectual property laws written to satisfy special interests.

Now that Napster as we knew it is dead. its users are flocking to other peer-to-peer (P2P) file sharing services, which are different from Napster in that there is no central database, just computers talking to each oth-

LimeWire (www.limewire.com) and BearShare (www.bearshare.com) are both based upon Gnutella, and have been around almost as long as Napster. The interface is intuitive, but downloads can be slow and inconsistent.

MusicCity's Morpheus (www.musiccity. com) was selected as ON Magazine's favorite of the P2P file sharing applications. That's what I love about this country we're all entitled to our opinions.

While I found Morpheus' interface warm and fuzzy, the fact is it's all flash and no substance - the selection is nowhere as generous as my favorite, Audiogalaxy Satellite (www.audiogalaxy.com/satellite). This lean-and-mean application is very small and uses your own browser as an interface. You can resume downloads easily if you have to hang up in the middle of a transfer. Downloads are quick and reliable. And the selection? Whoo-doggy.

And in the end, you'll want to know the words. You'll want to know who the artist is. You'll want to see the art on the album

In the end, you'll buy the CD. Comments? Questions? Contact InfoLink

In fact, 80 percent of the pumpkin found on store shelves across the country is this special variety of pumpkin grown exclusively on 5,000 acres of fertile farmland right around the Libby's cannery in Morton, Ill. For this 70-year-old product, quality is assured from the ground up.

LALLOWEEN TORS

by JACQUELINE CUTLER TVData Features Syndicate

Real life is so terrifying lately that settling in with ghouls on the tube is comforting. And, this week TVoffers everything from the goofy to the gory, marathons and monsters and fact and fiction fighting for fright rights.

Many Halloween programs are not suitable for children, unless of course they happen to be Wednesday and Pugsley Addams. How-ever, for the rest of the children, there's Halloweentown II: Kalabar's Revenge, starring Debbie Reynolds on The Disney Channel on Sunday, Oct. 28, and on Wednesday, Oct. 31, (aka Halloween).

Reynolds reprises her role as Grandma Aggie, a witch who with her granddaughter Marnie (Kimberly J. Brown) saves Halloweentown.

People are in danger of becoming the costume they're wearing -unless, of course, good can triumph. To satisfy those who sing the eternal question "Scooby Dooby Doo where are you?" the answer is on Cartoon Network from "devil's night," Tuesday, Oct. 30, the end of Wednesday for an all-day marathon of goofy spookiness.

Nothing says Halloween like a nibble from a vampire. On Halloween, American Movie Classics offers 24 hours of vampire movies, beginning with Bela Lugosi's classic Dracula

(1931)

Variations of the immortal blood-sucker can be seen throughout the day in Son of Dracula (1943) and Love at First Bite(1979). Also on Halloween, Turner Classic Movies offers Vampyr (1932) and the creaky but scary Nosferatu (1922).

Fewcould scare an audience better than Boris Karloff, so watch him as the plot unravels Sunday in the original The Mummy (1932) on AMC. The Curse of the Mummy's Tornb (1964) follows. The station airs The Wolf Man (1941) with Lon Chaney Jr., as the hairy fellow, and Curse of the Werewolf (1961) on Monday, Oct. 29.

Sometimes it's a fuzzy line between horror and monster films, but there's no denying the following flicks have some horrifying moments. On Halloween, Sci-Fi Channel airs, among other cheesy-creepy romps, Troll (1986), in which an evil troll turns apartment renters into pod creatures, and Waxwork, in which teens visit the town's new wax museum, with oh, such lifelike figures.

Naturally, this week there's much ado about Lucifer. On Tuesday, AM Coffers a newdocumentary, TheOmeni.egacy. Thethree Omen lilms - The Omen (1976.) Damien: Omen II (1978.) and The Final Conflict (1981) follow. The two-hour documentary is strictly for those who can't get enough of the boy with the three sixes on his scalp. The original remains a bone-chilling tale, and reminder that angel-faced boys are often the opposite of what they seem.

To take a more serious look at the devil, watch A&E Network's Biography, Satan: Prince of Darkness on Halloween.

There's also pienty of the devil in Witchcraft Through the Ageson the Independent Film Channel on Monday. The daring silent film, made in Sweden in 1922, is disturbing because of nudity, cannibal-ism and general creepiness.

Perhaps the creeplest moments of the week, however, belong to Linda Blair, who 28 years later is still milking her role as the girl with the revolving head from The Exorcist. She hosts the much-touted Scanest Places on Earth, "A Night in Dracula's Castle; The Transylvania Dare" Sunday on Fox Family, Granted, Hunedoara

Castle, the T4th-century compound where Vlad the Impaler killed 100,000 people in six years, has a horrifying history. But the scariest, if not saddest part is Blair in a bizarrely affected accent and poured into what looks like Pat Benatar's cast-offs from 1983, Blair delivers her lines and makes the audience pine for when Mercedes McCambridge spoke for her.

For additional scary real places, tune in to the Travel Channel running Haunted Travels Week. Beginning Sunday, spookiness can be found in hotels around the world.

There's plenty of factual Halloween fare this week. Fred Gwynne, best known for his role as Herman Munster in the campy 1964-66 sitcom. The Munsters, was a cultured fellow who was also an illustrator of children's books. Learn more about him and Al Lewis, who played Grandpa and eventually ran for mayor of New York, in back-to-back shows on A&E's Biography on Standay.

On Halloween, the History Channel offers a solid daylong mara-thon of scary in Search of ... episodes, including "Ghost Ship,"

"Abominable Snowman," "Swamp Monster" and "Haunted Castles." Later in the day, the channel airs The Haunted History of Halloween, which explains how the traditions of dressing up and trick-or-treating came about

Though it may be forgotten, the following specials are based on real people. Broadway diva Patti LuPone plays Mrs. Lovett and George Hearn is Todd in Stephen Sondheim's amusingly dark production of Sweeney Todd in Concert. The Demon Barber of Fleet Street on Halloween on PBS (check local listings).

The Halloween-sized bags of candy should get even the most serious monster fans through their TVviewing this week. Bythe time the chocolate hangover and nightmares ebb, it will be time to start thinking about Thanksolving.

Debbie Reynolds stars as GrandmaAggie in Halloweentown II: Kalabar's Revenge Sunday and Wednesday on Disney Channel. Agood witch, wholoses her spell book, Aggie manages to save the day.

ZOOLANDER

The old saw goes, "In comedy, timing is everything." In the case of "Zoolander," and in light of the Sept. 11 World Trade Center attack, this is especially true.

"Zoolander" would have been a drop-dead hilarious movie had it been released in August. Now, some of the scenes in this stillvery-funny film come off as unsettling.

For example: Before the film was released, the producers rushed to digitally erase the World Trade Center from the New York City skyline. Why? So audiences wouldn't be reminded of the tragedy? For me, the digital deletion of the WTC had the opposite effect, I was reminded that the WTC was no longer there. And I knew that they filmed "Zoolander" before the attack, so the towers should have been there. Not seeing them was more disturbing than leaving them in would have been.

There is also the matter of the plot, which revolves around the assassination of a Malaysian prime minister because of his opposition to the international fashion industry's use of child labor in his country. This is the plot to a comedy? The assassination of a Muslim

head of state? Again, timing is everything. Before Sept. 11, I probably wouldn't have even given it a second thought, but today with growing anti-Muslim sentiment in this country, the plot just doesn't help

All that aside, I still would like to recommend "Zoo-lander." Ben Stiller's brain-dead foo-foo-boy character is priceless. Co-star Owen Wilson (Hansel) is also a major crack-up. The villain Mugatu (played by Will Ferrell), like Austin Powers' Dr. Evil, steals every scene he's in.

As a biting satire of the fashion industry and our country's obsession with celebrity, "Zoolander" scores a bull'seve.

I only wish the film's comedic impact hadn't been marred by its post-Sept. 11 release date.

Blanton Forest State Nature Preserve opened to the Public approaching their peak, the Kentucky tate Nature Preserves Commission (KSNPC) announced today that the 2,500-acre Blanton Forest State Nature Preserve is officially open for the public

Earlier this summer, KSNPC acquired a second, key tract of oldgrowth forest at the preserve and quickly began developing a hiking trail for the public to access the forest. The trail begins at Camp Blanton, a private facility located adjacent to the preserve, and leads roughly two miles up the south face of Pine Mountain to a large sandstone rock outcrop known as Knobby Rock. From Knobby Rock, visitors gain a spectacular bird's-eye view of the surrounding forest. The approximately three-hour hike through towering hemlocks, rhododendron thickets and mixed oak-hickory forest to Knobby Rock and back is moderately strenuous. Depending on the time of year, visitors

- With fall colors can expect to see a wide range of wildlife and plant species within the largest old-growth forest in the Commonwealth. In addition, a shorter, half-mile trail leading along Watts Creek offers a scenic, but less strenuous alternative route to enjoy the preserve. Designated parking is available adjacent to Camp Blanton, with signs directing visitors to the trailhead. The preserve is open year round during daylight hours and is limited to foot travel only.

"Blanton Forest State Nature Preserve is truly one of Kentucky's best and most ecologically significant natural treasures," remarked KSNPC Executive Director Donald S. Dott Jr. "We are pleased to have the first public trail into the preserve completed. Our hope is that the many visitors to Blanton Forest will respect, appreciate and be inspired by this rare - and sometimes fragile - ecosystem."

The Kentucky State Nature Preserves Commission, which celebrates its 25th anniversary this year, is charged with protecting Kentucky's natural heritage. The commission surveys Kentucky for significant natural areas and protects the best examples of those in a nature preserves system encompassing 16,804 acres statewide. The commission is continuing to work toward acquiring an additional 4,000 acres at Blanton Forest to ensure its long-term protection and expanded access.

For more information about Blanton Forest, the work of the Kentucky State Nature Preserves Commission or to make a donation to further these worthwhile efforts, please visit these Web sites: www.kynaturepreserves.org and www.blantonforest.org. Downloadable images of Blanton Forest State Nature Preserve are available on line at HYPERLINK "http://www.blantonforest.org/publicity/presskit.htm" http://www.blantonforest.org/publicity/presskit.htm.

Jubilee on KET features acclaimed bluegrass of Dale Ann Bradley and Coon Creek

Dale Ann Bradley earned national critical acclaim and top-10 slots on both the bluegrass and country charts with her breakout 1997 solo debut, East Kentucky Morning. With the album's release, favorable comparisons to Dolly Parton and Allison Krauss and impressive reviews showered the Kentucky native and longtime member of the Renfro Barn Dance, Valley Billboard lauded Bradley's "angelic voice," while Music Row called her "a gentle mountain songbird with a shimmering delivery. marvelous purity of tone. soprano trills and lonesome bent notes."

With her band, Coon Creek, Dale Ann Bradley brings her critically acclaimed mountain bluegrass to Jubilee, Wednesday, Oct. 31 at 8 p.m. on KET.

Bradley learned her powerful singing style in the Primitive Baptist Church, where her father was a minister, and began performing at the age of 14. In 1989 she became a member of the Renfro Valley Barn Dance and was a regular on the famed Sunday Morning Gatherin' radio show for eight years.

In 1992 she joined the New Coon Creek Girls formed in 1979 as one of only a handful of all-female groups in the history of bluegrass/acoustic music—as guitarist and lead singer. Following the tremendous success of Bradley's East Kentucky Morning release, the group shifted focus and acquired male members. Dale Ann Bradley and Coon Creek debuted in 1997.

With Bradley's voice as its centerpiece, flanked by a multi-talented support team, the group excels on everything from hard-edged bluegrass and soul-stirring gospel numbers to tear-jerking country love songs and wistful folk ballads. The group's knockout Jubilee performance was taped at Jubilee, a Jubilee, a tion in its si produced and Russell Farme closed-caption and hard-of-wers can find programming visiting the K /www.ket.org.

HOLLYWOOD ... We continue to try, out this way, to "proceed as usual," but it's difficult what with all the ultra-tight security at studios, networks, big buildings and everywhere else ... There's a definite feeling of unease, and nothing will ever really be the same again ... Hollywood continues to give big money where it's needed, and time to those who want it. "Hearts in Atlantis" is an OK movie. Although Anthony Hopkins' name leads all the rest, the picture really belongs to 11year-old Anton Yelchin, who plays the young boy that Hopkins' character mentors. It is certainly no stretch for the talent of Sir Anthony ... And while we're on the subject of movies, here it is October and still nothing that would make one scream "Oscar nomination" - nor any performance to merit that phrase. Hopefully the next couple

"Boston Public"

Fox Network • Mondays

Jeri Ryan ("Star Trek: Voyager," "Dark Skies," "Melrose Place," "The Last Man," etc.) has joined the cast of the Fox Network series "Boston Public" as Ronnie Cooke, a corporate lawyer who decides to become a high-school teacher. During her four years on "Voyager," Ryan became a Trekker favorite with her portrayal of Seven of Nine, a Borg (a living machine) who was restored to human status by the Voyager crew. "Boston Public's" season debut is Oct. 29. However, Jeri Ryan's first episode will air Oct. 22.

STONE: Were there any other post-"Voyager" shows you might have chosen, and if so, why did you decide to do "Boston

RYAN: I had some very interesting offers. But I liked the idea of playing a teacher.

STONE: Why so?

RYAN: Oh, several reasons. I was raised to respect the importance of education. Also, as a mother, I'm very much aware of the value of education in a child's life. I also liked the idea of being in a series that recognizes that teachers help shape the future.

STONE: I did some research on you while preparing for our interview.

RYAN: (Feigning concern) Oh, oh! What did you learn?

STONE: That besides winning a talent contest for your singing, you were also a National Merit scholar. Did you ever consider a career in education?

RYAN: I thought about it. But I loved acting and realized that this was the direction I should take.

STONE: Why did Ronnie Cooke change the direction of her life, to go from being a big-time lawyer to a teacher?

> RYAN: I would say that she had come to a place in her life where she felt that all she was doing was taking, and that it was time to give back.

STONE: Each character on "Boston Public" has a history and, every now and then, we get to see some of it. Will we see anything about Cooke's past that will help explain why she had this career epiphany?

RYAN: I'm sure that will happen. I haven't been told very much about (her past) yet, so I'm as eager as any of the viewers to learn more about her.

STONE: Do you miss doing "Voyager"?

RYAN: I do. I especially miss all my friends on the show. But two things I do not miss: The suit I wore as a Borg, and the cat suit I wore as Seven of Nine. The Borg suit was so tight, I almost passed out a few times, and they'd have to give me oxygen between takes until they made some adjustments on it. Seven's outfit was more comfortable, but I never took a deep breath without worrying about popping a seam.

STONE: What is the thing you love most about your life?

RYAN: Being Alex's mother.

News of the Weird

by CHUCK SHEPHERD LEAD STORIES

According to an October interview with one of his physicians in London's Sunday Telegraph, the Afghanistan Taliban leader Mullah Omar, 43, suffers periodic brain seizures that incapacitate him for days at a time and bring on a deep depression, during which he often engages in childlike behavior. One typical behavior, said the physician: sitting in the driver's seat of one of his SUVs, with the engine off, turning the wheel and making his own engine sounds. (Shortly after the story ran, the Pentagon announced it had bombed a Chevrolet Suburban belonging to Omar, although he was probably not among the people inside at the time.)

Both the U.S. and Afghanistan might seem to be heeding President Bush's call to act normal during these times of strife: Just a few miles up the road from the anthraxshuttered National Enquirer offices in West Palm Beach, Fla., officials of the brand-new National Croquet Center staged a two-week series of matches in October, preparing for its grand opening in January. And Afghanistan's application to play in a prestigious cricket tournament in Pakistan, beginning about the same time as the U.S. bombing, was accepted (but the Afghan team eventually lost). Said one Afghan player, "Sport and war are two different things.'

Susan Heitker and Matt Glass staged a week-long anti-logging protest in Vinton County, Ohio, in August, sitting on a platform they had constructed in two stately trees near a patch of forest to be cut, but the state Department of Natural Resources got in the last lick. The two were arrested for trespassing; the two trees (not part of the forest to be cut) were chopped down, also, on the grounds that they contained the protesters' fingerprints and thus would be needed for trial evidence; and the state billed the two protesters $152 for the cost of chopping down the two trees.

Insurance of the Weird

London's Goodfellows company made the news again in September by selling two more whimsical insurance policies: model Claire Roe's coverage (for about $350 a year) against loss of beauty ($170,000 payout), and the male strippers troupe Dreamboys' coverage (premium, about $15,000 a year) to pay off if their genitals are injured by fans ($1.2 million coverage). Among the firm's most popular policies: the Alien All Risks package (about $400 a year for $1.7 million coverage) for being abducted or impregnated by an alien, which Goodfellows has sold to 40,000 people. (Fifteen thousand women bought Y2K immaculate-conception insurance in 1999. fearful they would be called upon to give birth to the messiah.)

Government in Action

With great fanfare on Aug. 27, the U.S. Department of the Interior declared the Fresno (Calif.) municipal landfill an historical landmark on the National Register because of its pioneering methods of disposal. Later in the day, the department came to realize, thanks to its environmentalist critics, that the landfill also has a long-standing spot on the Superfund list of the worst-polluted land in America, and on Aug. 28, the department rescinded its order.

More Government Procreation Policies: In September, a pro-population town council member in Inari, Lapland (Finland), vowed to give up his political career if only the town's women produced at least 80 babies next year and 85 the vear after. At the other end of the spectrum, India's Health Minister C.P. Thakur told the national legislature in August that the key to halting procreation was finding recreational alternatives and agreed to look into the cost of government-subsidized television sets.

■ In July, the Bloomington, Ind., City Council voted to renew Brown's Wrecker Service's towing contract, even though it had proposed to raise the per-car charge to the city from $8 to $20, and even though Joe's Towing (the city's heavy-truck contractor) proposed to tow cars at zero cost to the city. Also in July, it took a court injunction from a judge in Sacramento to stop California prison procurement authorities from awarding a sweetheart contract for peanut butter and jelly to a supplier who charges $175,000 a year more than its competitor; the prison skirted low-bid rules by claiming an "emergency" in that the higher-priced company's PB&J was necessary to prevent inmate riots.

People With Issues

■ Julie Gable, 43, filed a $100,000 lawsuit recently against the police department of St. Pete Beach, Fla., because it continues to employ community service officer Michael Mehill, 54, who Gable says has been stalking her for 10 years, the last few with the full knowledge of the chief. The chief even allegedly found one of Mehill's notebooks, in which was written very detailed descriptions of his stalkings (e.g., "(August 5, 1998) At 1343 (hours), (Gable) was on a lawn chair, red halter top, white shorts. Waiting for someone?"). Gable said Mehill has an uncanny ability to arrive on the beach, with video camera, minutes after Gable does.

Update

■ In August 2001, News of the Weird reported that amateur British rocket scientist Steve Bennett was continuing to develop the spaceship (capsule made from a cement mixer) and booster that would launch him 10,000 feet up in a test flight for a much more ambitious expedition (an exercise in instant death, according to several engineers who learned his plans). On the other hand, amateur Brian Walker of Bend, Ore. (who has gotten rich as a designer of aeronautical toys), told London's The Independent in October that he was about a year away from launching himself 35 miles up in his homemade ship and booster. Unlike Bennett's work, Walker's has the support of several aerospace engineers and Mercury 7 astronaut Gordon Cooper.

Also, in the Last Month ...

■ The South African government provided its 100,000 census takers with generous supplies of condoms, fearing that urges would be harder to control as counters went inside people's homes. Barry's Under-ground tavern near Omaha went up for sale; it had been built in 1961 by dairyman J. Gordon Roberts as a bomb shelter for 250 head of his cattle. Jorge Briceno, head of the Colombian FARC rebels (who by government compromise control a swath of land the government cannot encroach on), has decided that all 15,000 of the residents of the village of Vista Hermosa must be HIV-tested because he read graffiti on a local wall about one resident's having AIDS. Doctors at University Hospital (Cardiff, Wales) removed a regular-size toothbrush from Vania Lucchesi's stomach after she tripped while brushing and swallowed it.

Preparing for Winter

What last-minute fixes should I be doing, inside and outside my home, to get ready for winter? - Joyce B., Gadsden, Ala.

Winter is closing in quickly, so your big repair and maintenance jobs -Lexterior and interior painting, and roof cleaning or repairs - should be complete by now. However, there are a few tasks that you must check off your to-do list before the last leaves fall.

Clean gutters and downspouts. Replace any part of the gutter that is torn; patch small leaks.

Install storm windows and doors.

Many ladies will not wear fur coats, either because they will not wear an animal pelt or because they are afraid of being pelted for wearing one. Not so Catherine Zeta-Jones Douglas. When she and Michael were in Italy before the Sept. 11 disaster, he bought her a $35,000 knitted Russian sable wrap. I'm told it takes about 150 hours to make one of these.

Nicole Kidman is learning to speak Russian for her next pic, "Birthday Girl," wherein she plays a Russian mail-order bride I don't envy her. It's a tough language. Years ago I played a Russian chambermaid in a play called "Clear All Wires." I only had a few lines in Russian, so I learned them by rote, as one does Shakespeare, and never did know what I was saying. P.S. I still remember them.

You know, Kenny,

it's perfect!

The final episode, "All My Children of the Sun," airing Monday, Nov. 19, demonstrates how the music of diverse ethnic groups previously excluded from the definition of American "folk" music are folded into "American roots music." The program looks at Cajun culture, the popularization of Tejano music and the evolution of Native-American music forms.

- Check weather stripping around windows and doors; replace damaged strips. Prevent drafts around outlets and switches by applying foam sealant between the switch and the wall.
- Change the furnace's air filter and activate the unit to make sure it is working properly. Stock up on filters; you'll need to change them every month.
- Shut down the air-conditioning unit once cool weather has set in. Clear debris from the outside unit and cover with plastic or canvas to protect it from the elements.
- Store outdoor furniture and garden tools; place snow removal equipment where it can be easily reached. Store garden hoses and shut off outdoor faucets if possible.
- If you can't shut off the outdoor faucets, wrap the pipes leading to them in insulation (home centers sell a variety of insulating materials; ask specifically for pipe insulation).
- Drain and clean outdoor pools, fountains and ponds.
- Finish raking all the leaves in your yard before the first hard frost.
- Plant bulbs, like tulips and daffodils, before the ground freezes. They'll bloom in the spring.
- Re-seed thin or bare spots in the grass. Some will sprout now, but most seeds will lie dormant until spring
- Place mulch or leaves around outdoor shrubs, plants and trees to protect them.

Sounds like a lot of work, doesn't it? But don't worry. Space these chores over two or three weekends, before Thanks-giving. Give yourself a full day to clean out the gutters, and a full weekend to clean up and prepare the yard for cold weather.

Q: I see a lot of reruns of the Scott Bakula series "Quantum Leap," and I was wondering if he gets paid for these shows, or does his pay end with the last original episode? - Meredith K.

A: AFTRA (the American Federation of Television and Radio Artists) has iron-clad regulations covering rerun payments for its membership. So you can be sure that Bakula, who now stars in the syndicated series, "Enterprise," is, indeed, paid for each aired episode in which he appears.

Q: I was wondering what happened to Chelsea Clinton's plans to go to school in England since the (Sept. 11) terrorist attack on New York and Washington. Thank you for any information. - Denyse W.

A: Chelsea's plans to go to Oxford as her father, former President Bill Clinton, did, have not been canceled. In fact, as I write this, she's arrived on campus and is set to begin a two-year graduate degree program in international relations.

The same scholarly steadfastness, so to speak, did not apply to members of Osama Bin Laden's large, extended family who were studying in the United States. According to news reports, they all left for their hones (mostly in Saudi Arabia) almost immediately after the attack. No explanations were made public as of this writing.

The Hikers

One day, Joe, Bob and Dave were hiking in a wilderness area when they came upon a large, raging, violent river. They needed to get to the other side, but had no idea of how to do so.

Joe prayed to God, saying, "Please God, give me the strength to cross this river." Poof! God gave him big arms and strong legs, and he was able to swim across the river in about two hours, although he almost drowned a couple of times.

Seeing this, Dave prayed to God, saying, "Please God, give me the strength and the tools to cross this river." Poof! God gave him a rowboat and he was able to row across the river in about an hour, after almost capsizing the boat a couple of times.

Bob had seen how this worked out for the other two, so he also prayed to God saying, "Please God, give me the strength and the tools, and the intelligence, to cross this river.

Poof! God turned him into a woman. She looked at the map, hiked upstream a couple of hundred yards, then walked across the bridge.

Five Year Anniversary of the Cumberland Gap Tunnel

FRANKFORT - Today marks the five-year anniversary of the opening of the Cumberland Gap Tunnel. This 17-year project completed October 18, 1996, cost $285 million to build both 4600-foot long tunnels.

The tunnels were constructed with two goals in mind: to improve safety and to restore the historic gap.

To accomplish these goals, $2.5 million is spent each year to operate and maintain the tunnel. These costs are split between Tennessee and Kentucky. Forty employees work to insure that the tunnel is adequately staffed and monitored 24 hours a day,7 days a week.

The tunnel has some of the most modern control and monitoring systems in the world, it also has its own wrecker service, ambulance/EMS, and fire fighting equipment ready for any type of emergency. In addition, all personnel have been trained per year on 25E and carried 18,000 vehicles prior to the Cumberland Gap Tunnel. Since the tunnel opened there have been no fatal car crashes and between 25,000 and 30,000 vehicles travel US 25E each day.

Today, that deadly roadway is being returned to its original form as the path that led to the western expansion of a then young country. Popular historical figures such as Dr. Thomas Walker and Daniel Boone were two of the first pioneers to make their way through the gap to explore Kentucky and establish the area for settlers to follow. Today, crossing the mountains only takes a few minutes, but for early settlers it would have typically taken a day to accomplish this task. The restoration of the Cumberland Gap will allow travelers to gain perspective of this history.

BEST BETS

SUNDAY OCTOBER 28, 2001

7:30 p.m. FOX

World Series

This Major League Baseball season has seen an emotionally charged year, from Barry Bonds' seemingly uphill battle toward Mark McGwire's single-season home-run record to pennant races corning down to the final weekend to career curtain calls for retiring legands Tony Gwynn and Cal Ripken Jr. Baseball's end-of-the-year nostalgic pageantry continues with Game 2 of the World Series from the National League Champion's home ballpark.

8 p.m. check local listings PBS

Africa

The eight-part miniseries concludes with "Southern Treasures," a profile of a young woman who has gone against tradition by working in the gold mines of Johannesburg. The people in that line of work are usually male — in fact, all of them are except for her — and her presence among them draws considerable attention. She intends to use that as a basis for making more inroads, for herself and society.

8 p.m. USA

Movie: Vampires

The director of Halloween returned to the horror genre with this 1998 tale, which incorporates a lot of sardonic humor. That emerges largely through James Woods' sly performance as a hunter of bloodsuckers. Daniel Baldwin plays his partner in trying to prevent a 600-year-old vampire (Thomas lan Griffith) from giving rise to many of the undead. Sheryl Lee also appears

9 p.m. ABC

Alias

Known for his computer-hacking skills, Kevin Mitnick makes a guest appearance in "Doppelganger," which has a Halloween theme. Sloane (Ron Rifkin) suspects Sydney's (Jennifer Garner) status as a double agent, just as she is told her father (Victor Garber) may also be working for several concerns. Shocking news about the slain Danny's past surfaces.

9 p.m. CBS

Movie: The Wedding Dress

One of the top names in fashion, Vera Wang, is a contributor to this anthological new drama, which follows one wedding dress as it is passed down to various brides over the course of more than half a century. Tyne Daly moonlights from her current series role on Judging Arryto work with her real-life daughter, Kathryne Dora Brown, in one of the tales. Margaret Colin (Now and Again) and Neil Patrick Harris, the former Doogle Howser, M.D., are among the other cast members.

9 p.m. HBO

Band of Brothers

The World War II saga nears its end with this next-to-last episode, "Why We Fight." The members of Easy Company make a surprisingly uncomplicated entry into Germany. However, it isn't unemotional, as a concentration camp is found with tragically undernourished prisoners still within its walls. The news of Hitler's death yields surprising reactions. Eion Bailey, Scott Grimes, Damian Lewis, Ron Livingston, Nicholas Aaron, Goerge Calil and Doug Cockle star.

10 p.m. NBC

UC: Undercover

The theft of the legendary Hope Diamond sends the detectives into action in "Honor Among Thieves." Along with other gems, it's in the hands of a low-level criminal (Frank John Hughes), who is angling for a bigger payoff than he was promised. That complicates Alex's (Vera Farmiga) efforts to recover the jewels. Quito Real's (Ving Rhames) trial nears its start.

And she stuns more than a few membersof thestaff with her approach to her new job. Billy Zane (Titanic) starts a guest run as her beau, and Michael Rapaport and Leslie Jordan also sign on as cast regulars.

9 p.m. ABC

NFL Football

What's more surprising: the Tennessee Titans starting the season by dropping their first three games or the Pittsburgh Steelers looking pretty solid in the early going this season? The Steelers, led by running back Jerome Bettis, get to show off their new home, Heinz Field, in a prime-time contest against quarter-back Steve McNair and the Titans.

9 p.m. FOX

Ally McBeal

Returnees Lucy Liu and Peter MacNicol will have only a limited presence this season.

The murder of a U.S. senator's daughter convinces Jordan (Jill Hennessy) there's more to the crime than there initially seemed in "Believers." Though the victim's boyfriend seems to be the culprit, Jordan's hunch about a different reason is shared by a journalist (Shawn Christian) of questionable ethics. Garret (Miguel Ferrer) gets an unusual burial request.

Few series do Halloween episodes like this one, and "All the Way" proves that again. While he loved his six TV kids, Reed sparred constantly with creator Sherwood Schwartz about the often-silly plotlines of The Brady Bunch during its five-year run. And although he tried to break out of the Mike Brady mold after the sitcom ended, he gamely returned for the reunion movies. Sadder than Reed's stormy relationship with his TV alter ego was a personal struggle to hide his homosexuality, which was revealed to the world when he died of AIDS-related colon cancer.

Critter Corner...

by DR. CAROL COMBS-MORRIS, DVM

Thanks, Dr. Reeves

After a week that has included a kennel club meeting, a dog obedience class, the grocery store, and a couple of workdays that have dragged on into the wee hours of the morning, I have finally plopped down in front of the computer to write something. It is now 10:30pm on Sunday, the papers' deadlines are Monday afternoon, and I have to drive to Lexington tomorrow after work. (Not only am I not packed, the clothes I need are still in the laundry hamper.)

Trish and I are attending an OSHA seminar on Tuesday, which sounds beyond boring, but I suppose will be helpful. Since I am three credit hours short for this year's continuing education, I have to go sit through it. We're going to make the best of it, though – we figure we have a shot at least at one meal that can be eaten while it is still hot, without a ringing telephone and a couple of dogs begging under the table.

I don't get back to Lexington very often, but whenever I do, I make it a point to see Dr. Maury Reeves, the veterinarian that I worked for while I was still at UK back in the 1970's. Dr. Reeves was my mentor, long before I knew what the word really meant. She was a pioneer of sorts; in a profession that was overwhelmingly male at the time, she was one of two (I think) women in her graduating class from Auburn University School of Veterinary Medicine in the early 60's. She taught me far more about the veterinary profession than just medicine, much of which I didn't appreciate until years later.

Dr. Reeves' practice was located in a renovated house in Chevy Chase just about half a block from my apartment. Back then, Chevy Chase was sort of a run-down neighborhood mostly inhabited by older people and college students, instead of the upscale area it is now. There were always pre-vet students hanging around to observe and/or volunteer at the clinic, and she never seemed to mind.

I never understood how she put up with me! I was a backward eighteen-year-old, away from home for the first time, bewildered by the city and self-conscious about my eastern Kentucky accent. I had wanted to be a veterinarian since I was five years old, but I had no clue what veterinary medicine was all about. I kept coming back though, every day after class, and pretty soon I was one of the regulars. I was thrilled to get to do anything, and since there is always plenty to do around a vet clinic, I was kept busy.

My first job assignments often didn't have anything to do with medicine. I cleaned cages, scrubbed floors, and mowed grass; I even babysat Dr. Reeves' son occasionally. One of the volunteers jobs was to keep all the letters glued on the sign in the parking lot; they were individual metal letters, and they kept falling off the brick wall. This doesn't sound so bad, except that the clinic name was Chevy Chase Small Animal Clinic, and Dr. Reeves' full name is Celeste Maury Offutt Reeves, DVM - the sign could be a real chore! The more that the clinic staff learned that I didn't care to work and didn't mind getting dirty, the more responsibility they gave me. Eventually I was cleaning surgical instruments, restocking exam rooms and helping Madelyn, the receptionist, file records.

Later on, Chuck, the technician, taught me to read lab tests, to assist surgery and to restrain animals. He even brought his own dog to work and taught me to draw blood. At that time there was very little formal training available for veterinary assistants. and you could get your license if you were able to pass a written test. Dr. Reeves and Chuck convinced me to take the exam, although I didn't see how I could compete when many of the other applicants had two years formal training. But I passed, and received my Veterinary Technician's License. I was surprised when I entered Veterinary school, that not all of my classmates had gained the technical experience that I had. Those skills served me well all through school and in practice.

In the summer, many of the students went home from school, and the volunteer help dwindled. Dr. Reeves gave me my first huge ego boost when she actually hired me as a technician my second year at UK. I actually had a real job - and a salary - in the field that I loved! When I was accepted to Veterinary School the next year (I still suspect that she must have put in a good word for me in her letter of recommendation), I trained someone else to take my place. Four years later, I was back at

Chevy Chase to do my preceptorship, and it felt like coming home.

Even though Dr. Reeves is now retired, and has sold the clinic, I drop in over there whenever I'm in town, to visit Madelyn, who stayed on as the receptionist for the new vet. It still feels like home. Occasionally, when I am very tired, or very distracted, I forget myself and still answer the phone with "Chevy Chase Small Animal Clinic"!

We are supposed to meet Dr. Reeves (after all these years, I still can't bring myself to call her "Maury"!) for dinner tomorrow night. Maybe this time I can find the words to thank her.
