The front glass door at Reid's Pharmacy in Martin had been replaced Friday after a Thursday morning break-in left it shattered. "They put it back in a hurry," said pharmacy owner Ronald Reid. "Just like whoever done this took it out in a hurry." The pharmacy was the victim of what police say was at least a two-person burglary during which an undetermined quantity of prescription medication was taken.

Reid said the burglars knocked the glass from the business' front door and gained entry through this breached opening, evidently not discouraged in

The pharmacy, which is located in a shopping plaza just off Route 80 in Martin, should not have been the target of such criminal activity, said Reid, considering its location, but now changes will be in order.

"We've already checked about putting some iron bars on the windows and overhead door systems," said Reid.

Husband held after wife's murder

SALYERSVILLE - A Magoffin County woman was found stabbed to death in her Magoffin Manor Apartment in Salyersville Thursday night, according to reports from the Kentucky State Police on Friday.

KSP was notified of the situation through the Magoffin County 911 Center, which advised them, according to reports, that G & B Ambulance Service had responded to the scene of what they said was an apparent homicide.

The victim, Ruann Salyer, 27, had suffered several stab wounds, reports said, and was pronounced dead at the scene by the Magoffin County Coroner's Office.

Police said a short time later, Salyer's husband, Bobby Salyer, returned to the scene and was placed under arrest.

The Big Sandy Regional Detention Center in Paintsville, where Bobby Salyer was taken after being arrested by KSP troopers Billy Hall and Jason Eversole, confirmed that as of Friday

Salyer was being held on a $500,000 cash bond and had been formally charged with first-degree murder in connection to the discovery of his slain wife.

No further information could be ascertained as to the nature of the decision to charge Bobby Salyer with murder, as investigations continue into the incident, the department said.

Although reports from KSP indicate that Ruann Salyer, who held a job with a Salyersville attorney's office, had been stabbed several times, reports from G & B Ambulance Service in Salyersville, which was among the first to respond to the scene Thursday night, said this didn't give a clear picture of what must have been the fatal wound inflicted in her apparent murder.

According to a spokesperson for the ambulance service. Salyer was found in the bedroom of the apartment, sprawled on the floor beside the bed, with several lacerations on much of her body, but with a more prominent wound along her neck. According to documentation filed by the has become in recent months.

"This kind of thing gets you aggravated, naturally," said Reid Friday. "But this is pretty common in this area. In fact, it's getting too common."

The burglars took various prescription medications, but not a tremendous amount, said Reid, and limited their interests to just those items without disturbing the cash register or attempting to take any other merchandise.

"It could have been a lot worse," said Reid. "I think they just hit it and tried to get to the drugs because they didn't even try the cash register."

Martin police officer Tony Conn responded to the break-in Thursday and, according to Reid, had initially thought it to have happened sometime their attempts by a nearby Speedway gas station, which is open 24 hours a day and provides a well-lit area. Being in close proximity to such a well-lit area is something Reid says has probably proven helpful in keeping potential criminals at bay, until now.

Where we're at here, it's pretty well-lit," Reid said. "The Speedway gas station over here stays open all night and they have lights on all the time, less than 50 yards away. But you hear about these things happening and you just say to yourself, 'It's not going to happen to me,' but it did."

This was the first time the pharmacy has been burglarized, according to Reid, and something he didn't expect, even with the growing trend of break-

Similar security measures have been utilized in pharmacies in Paintsville and, most recently, in Hindman and were installed by the company Reid met with recently, he said.

"You really hate to do something like that," said Reid, "because then it looks like you're living in Harlem or something, but it's going to be something we're probably going to have to do, it seems.

Neither Conn nor the Martin Police Chief Jeff Powell were available for comment. However, Reid did say that police had not made him aware of any leads into the ongoing burglary investigation as of Friday.

Patton lauds past work, makes modest suggestions for future

FRANKFORT - Gov. Paul Patton tion, seat belt use and regulation of telelauded recent advances in education and the economy and made some modest suggestions for initiatives that can be undertaken this year during

State of his the Commonwealth address Thursday.

Despite a nation at war, a struggling economy and the largest budget deficit in Kentucky history, "on the whole and over time, the state of the Commonwealth is good," Patton said to a joint session of the General Assembly. Many of the initiatives Patton endorsed are not new - revisions in black lung benefits, solid waste collecmarketers, miners and drillers. He reiterated support for overhauling the state's tax system and a commitment to spending tobacco settlement money to help farmers.

The only groundbreaking proposal included in Patton's speech was to create a 120-mile Pine Mountain Trail along Kentucky's southeastern border.

"He didn't really talk about anything particularly new," said House Majority Leader Greg Stumbo of Prestonsburg. "What I thought he did was say, 'OK. I'm the governor. I'm a partisan person, but it's time to put partisan differences aside.""

Rep. Jeff Hoover of Jamestown, the Republican House leader, said he agreed with Patton's assessment of Kentucky. "The governor gave us a pep rally and took the opportunity to talk about the good things that have happened in the last few years," Hoover said.

Much of Patton's speech emphasized improvements during the last decade in Kentucky's historically woeful education system. Now, he said, the state is a national leader in technology, student performance and increased funding. In higher education, he said enrollments are up dramatically from adult education to graduate research.

Rep. Harry Moberly, D-Richmond, said the endorsements of history were fine, but a more prospective view is also important. "I think we ought to stress improvements in education, as much as citing our advancements," Moberly said.

On black lung and mandatory seat belt usage, Patton said his own previous positions were wrong.

Patton championed changes in workers' compensation five years ago that for all intents and purposes have eliminated black lung disease in the system. He said the system must be reversed so miners who are sick are appropriately compensated.

"To take the position that a miner has to continue to work until he or she has become totally disabled and their life shortened before they can receive training for another occupation is ridiculous; and it's inhumane," Patton said.

OMAHA, Neb. — A bonnethead shark was recently born at the Henry Doorly Zoo. but something seems to have been missing from the process - a male shark.

The shark was born in a tank that only contained females, leaving zoo officials scratching their heads as to how one of them became pregnant

"If we solve this mystery, it's going to make one of the most interesting scientific papers in a long time," zoo director Dr. Lee Simmons said. The offspring died within five hours of birth.

Veterinarians conducted DNA tests on all the bonnethead sharks Thursday, but results may not be known for weeks

"With DNA fingerprinting, we can use it to trace the paternity of the dead shark." Simmons said. "We'll know for sure who the animal is related to."

experts across the world, but Simmons said they also are baffled.

Some have theorized the mother shark had retained sperm cells from an earlier impregnation, but Simmons doesn't buy it. The 3-and-ahalf-year-old female who gave birth came to the zoo as a baby herself and would have been the lines out the door, down too young to carry sperm cells, he said.

"Unless it's some kind of virgin birth, I don't know," Simmons said. "Without a male, you can't have a birth. But Mother Nature doesn't necessarily abide by the rules."

The bookkeeper at Custom Metal Fab Inc. couldn't understand how the sheet metal company's county tax payment could be delinquent. After all, a bank had cashed the check.

Trouble is, the bank was in Lebanon.

A post office computer glitch apparently sent hundreds of Columbia County tax payments to far-away places. including the Middle East and possibly Colombia. The Daily News of Longview, Wash., reported.

County Finance Director

Ruth Baker noticed an unusually large number of delinquent accounts in November - some 1,400 out of 24,000 tax payments mailed the month before. Several residents and businesses later called the finance office asking why their tax checks had not cleared.

"We sent out delinquent notices asking people to check their statements five months earlier than usual," Baker said. Since then about 225 taxpavers have called, in some cases stopping payment and paying their taxes again without penalty. Baker said.

U.S. Postal Service spokesman Peter Haas blamed the problem in part on a computer glitch in Portland, where St. Helens' mail is sorted and bundled. The glitch has been fixed, and the Postal Service is conducting an investigation, Postal Inspector Larry Dziomba said.

Patton expands power plant moratorium plan

by MARK R. CHELLGREN ASSOCIATED PRESS

FRANKFORT - A moratorium on new power plants will be extended to prohibit construction while the General Assembly figures out a larger strategy for regulations, Gov. Paul Patton said Friday.

The moratorium expands an earlier order from Patton that the state would not accept applications for permits for new power plants, beyond the two dozen cal transmission lines would the state has received in the past also be imposed.

year or so.

"I think we have the right and the power to prohibit the construction. And the responsibility," Patton said.

Patton said the administration will also propose a larger plan to regulate where power plants may be located, including setback provisions from residential areas and compliance with environmental and local zoning rules. New requirements for the location of large electri-

Rep. Jon Draud, R-Crestview Hills, who will sponsor the legislation for the administration. said he was especially concerned about the proliferation of natural gas-fired, so-called merchant plants, whose electricity is largely destined for out-of-state markets.

"As I looked at it, I didn't see anything in it for Kentuckians," Draud said. He expects the legislation to be filed next week.

George Siemens Jr., a vice president of LG&E Energy Corp., which includes Kentucky

Utilities, said the company is comfortable with the proposal. While the utility is building some natural gas plants to generate power at peak demand times, they are located on the grounds of existing generating stations, Siemens said

The new siting board would include the three members of the Public Service Commission and the secretaries of the Natural Resources and Economic Development cabinets. Two rotating members would be appointed from the county where a plant was proposed. The local members would be a citizen and the head of the local planning commission or county judge-executive.

"We expect this board to look at what's in the overall best interests of Kentucky," Patton said.

The board would give priority to plants that burned Kentucky coal. When considering the location of new transmission lines, it would have to take into account the effect on the scenic and environmental aspect of the area.

The moratorium will not affect some of the 24 plants, which are already under construction. A few have begun operation, while others must still obtain operating permits, such as for air and water emissions

Wise to announce tommorrow whether to support regional airport

The Associated Press

CHARLESTON, W.Va. -Gov. Bob Wise plans to announce Monday whether he'll support construction of a proposed regional airport for western West Virginia.

The $350 million airport would be built in Lincoln County, between Huntington and Charleston. It would also serve portions of Kentucky and Ohio.

Shortly after his election, Wise said he wanted to see the new airport built.

"It's the single most important decision we're going to make in this part of the state, if not the entire state, for at least a decade," he said.

Last month, the state Public Port Authority voted unanimously to move forward with the plans.

While support from Wise would be a major boost for the project, it would not be the final word. The airport must first clear an environmental impact study, which is expected to begin in July and take at least two years. Next, a financing plan must be completed.

The Federal Aviation Administration must also approve the project and commit to financing a major share of its development.

Port Authority staff have said it would take at least seven years before the airport would become operational.

Louisville band on road to success

by LORI BURLING ASSOCIATED PRESS

LOUISVILLE - A year full of tours, television spots, photo and video shoots and a special hometown performance, left the four Louisville-based members of rock band Tantric ready for some down time.

"We've got two weeks off in January, but that's slowly being taken away," lead singer Hugo Ferreira, 27, said in a recent telephone interview. "We've just got so much to do."

A year of hard work seems to be paying off for the rockers, whose self-titled first album -produced by Maverick Records had two Top 10 singles which propelled the album to the Billboard 200.

Creed, then jam at a party for the NBA All-Star game in February. In March, the four will hit the studio to begin recording their second album. "This definitely feels good, we didn't think we would have a second opportunity," said Todd Whitener, 23, guitarist for the band, "Not many successful bands come out of Louisville."

Whitener refers to a second chance because he and two other members of Tantric bass guitarist Jesse Vest and drummer Matt Taul - were members of the band Days of the New. > "Days of the New was a successful project, it just didn't work out," Whitener said.

> After the breakup, Whitener, Taul and Vest headed home to Louisville, but continued to play music in their basements and garages. They would soon learn their dream of becoming more successful musicians wasn't shattered ---but simply scattered.

> Ferreira - lived in north Africa to Portugal before moving to the United States began playing music while living in Massachusetts.

> After graduating high school, Ferreira moved to Detroit with his brother and began playing in a series of local bands for nearly seven years. During that time, he was introduced to Whitener, who was touring with Days of the New. The two became quick friends.

> "One day I got a call from Todd and I went and hung out in Louisville for two weeks to jam," Ferreira said, "We had a good connection so I decided to make it permanent.'

> After the jam session, Ferreira made a life-changing decision.

> "When I heard those initial tapes there was really no other choice," he said. "It was such a natural match for the lyrics and emotion that I was putting into my songs, we were coming from the same place musically.

> So, Ferreira packed up his belongings and moved to Louisville. That's when Tantric - meaning a mystical energy derived from a Buddhist principle - formed.

> The new band's original songs and sound — influenced by Kentucky bluegrass, hard rock and techno dance --- soon began to win over fans at local venues and eventually at Maverick Records.

radio stations throughout the country and won support from MTV

The album's 12 songs are at times dark, but full of hope, Whitener's style of playing the guitar is described as unconventional; one song on the album includes a banjo solo.

"I'm still searching," said Ferreira, who writes part of the songs. "There are so many times you feel powerless, but you find your way through them --- the music reflects that struggle,"

In the past year, the band also toured with Kid Rock and 3 Doors Down and performed for specials on MTV, HBO and Showtime. Ferreira and Whitener appeared on Jay Leno on Dec. 28,

With the nearly instant success and everything that comes with it such as traveling all over the country, the four men have worked at balancing their two families: the band, and their parents and girlfriends.

"We live in our bus all over the U.S., but Louisville is our home," Ferreira said.

"Everyone does miss their family and we're trying to balance the family and the fame. but again, we want financial security for our families that aren't even here yet."

A hometown performance New Year's Eve in Louisville allowed the men to combine both families.

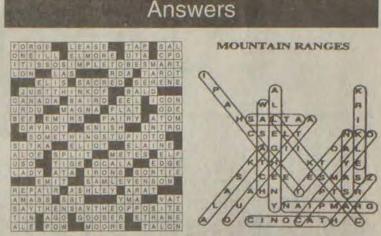

"(It) definitely feels great to be able to go back home and play the New Year's show, definitely cool to see our friends and family and party with them," Whitener said.

Although the men miss their hometown, they agreed that traveling across the country has its perks as well.

"The coolest thing about touring is the things we get to do together, we stopped in Arizona and climbed this mountain, it was cool," Taul, 23, said. "I think if we were at home we'd still be friends."

The band begins its tour in Atlanta on Jan. 16, opening for Creed, whose hits include "Higher," "Arms Wide Open" and "My Sacrifice."

"This is going to be a lot of exposure for us," Ferreira said. "We're all excited that they invited us to come out with them."

Stumbo still wants voters to decide bottle bill

FRANKFORT - House Majority Floor Leader Greg Stumbo still wants voters to decide if the state should require a returnable deposit on bottles and cans.

Stumbo, D-Prestonsburg, proposed a constitutional amendment Friday that would set up a complicated series of votes to determine the fate of a bottle bill.

It would first require a three-fifths majority vote in the House and Senate to approve a constitutional amendment. If that happens, a vote would follow in November for the amendment. If the amendment passes, a referendum on a bottle bill would be held. And if the referendum passed, legislation for a bottle bill would go before the General Assembly.

Stumbo proposed a similar scheme last year, but saw it defeated. The legislation is House Bill 323.

Bill would exempt uranium from sales tax

FRANKFORT - A bill pending in a House committee would exempt the sale of enriched uranium produced at the Paducah Gaseous Diffusion Plant from the state's 6 percent sales tax.

U.S. Enrichment Corp., which operates the plant, is considering whether to speed up its plan to move its shipping operation to Paducah from an enrichment plant in Piketon. Ohio.

At present, uranium enriched in Paducah is shipped to Piketon where it is prepared for final sale and shipment for companies that use it for power plants. The sales are tax-exempt in Ohio.

A Kentucky tax exemption is not the key to making the decision but would be taken into consideration, USEC spokeswoman Elizabeth Stuckle told The Paducah Sun. She did not know how much money it would save, Stuckle said.

A bill for a uranium exemption was filed by Rep. Charles Geveden, D-Wickliffe. It is pending in the House budget committee. The bill is House Bill 294.

FRANKFORT -State Rep. Jim Wayne, D-Louisville, announced Friday he will sponsor legislation in the General Assembly's 2002 session aimed at reducing the influence of special interests in politics.

The legislation would allow candidates running for the Kentucky House or Senate to run a publicly-financed "Clean Election" campaign. The bill is modeled after Clean Elections laws passed in Arizona and Maine - the only two states that have enacted publicly financed state legislative elections.

Cosponsors of the bill are State Rep. Joni Jenkins, D-Shively, State Rep. Mary Lou Marzian, D-Louisville, and State Rep. Kathy Stein, D-Lexington.

Wayne and the other legislators will hold a press conference next week to explain the proposal.

Wayne says having Clean campaigns Election in Kentucky would allow candidates, including incumbents, to spend more time with voters

"Under my bill, candidates would collect a set number of small contributions from voters in their district, agree to voluntary spending limits and agree to take no campaign funds from private donors or their own pockets and they will receive public funding for both their primary and general campaign," Wayne said.

Under the proposal, a Clean Election state legislative candidate must collect "seed money" contributions of $10 or less per individual to qualify as a Clean Election candidate. Senate candidates can collect a maximum of $1,500 in seed money, and House candidates must collect $500 or

So Our Kids Won't Pay the Price

www.khik.org

Once the seed money is collected, the candidate must then collect "qualifying contributions" of $10 from registered voters in his or her district. Senate candidates must collect contributions from at least 275 voters in their district, and House members must collect the contribution from at least 100 voters in their district. Voters who agree to make the $10 contribution would send it to the state clean election fund in support of the candidate.

The Kentucky Registry of Election Finance would be responsible under the bill for transferring set amounts of money from the clean election fund to qualified candidates, with the first transfers made under the bill scheduled for the 2004 state elections, should the bill pass this session.

Candidates in contested primary elections would receive $54,000 from the state fund if running for the Senate and $20,000 if running for the House. Candidates for contested general elections would receive the same amount of funds. Funding could be increased to try to balance contributions made to non-Clean Election candidates who raise or spend more than the Clean Election candidate, according to the bill, although matching funds for Clean Election candidates are limited to two times the amount they originally received from the fund.

Guestview Republicans right, but also to blame

The Kentucky Republican Party is right: Redistricting of the state's congressional and legislative districts should have been completed well before the 2002 elections.

But the GOP waited until too late in the game to file a suit to force redistricting before the elections. The suit filed at the beginning of the month by Kentuckians for Fair Redistricting — a group of Republicans headed by former state GOP chairman Bob Gable — should have been filed months ago.

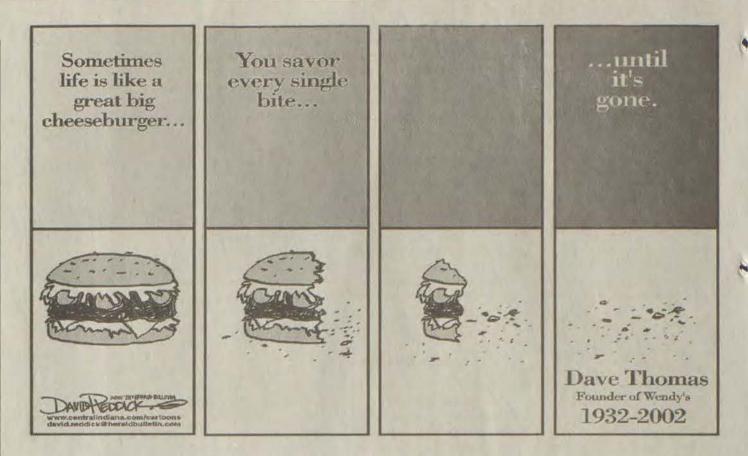

After all, Gov. Paul Patton has said for months that he had no intention of calling a special session of the Kentucky General Assembly on redistricting unless Republican and Democratic legislative leaders could agree on a plan to redraw the boundaries of the state's six congressional districts, 38 state Senate districts and 100 state House districts. But Gable and the five other Republicans named as plaintiffs waited until less than two weeks before the start of the 2002 General Assembly to file their suit.

Redistricting is required because of changes in Kentucky's population determined by the 2000 Census. In order to meet the constitutional requirement that all districts be nearly equal in population, the lines of all six congressional districts and about half the legislative districts will have to be redrawn.

That's going to be one of the major tasks of the 2002 General Assembly, but its work on redistricting is unlikely to be concluded before the Jan. 29 deadline for congressional and legislative candidates to file to run in the May 28 primary. That means candidates could be moved into another district after the filing deadline.

The suit filed in both U.S. District Court in Louisville and Franklin County Circuit Court wants to avoid that by having the courts extend the filing deadline and, if necessary, move the primary until after a redistricting plan has been approved.

Legislators have had the numbers they need to approve a redistricting plan since spring, and with no elections in 2001, there was never a better time to approve a redistricting plan. Instead, the Republicans and Democrats played politics, and the governor refused to call the special session. Instead of being able to meet in special session to agree on a redistricting plan, legislators will have to deal with this politically charged issue along with all the other issues that arise during a regular session. If they had not waited so long to file their suit, Gable and his friends could have forced the issue without seeking any changes in the filing deadline.

Whether state employees' bargaining outlasts Patton is question

by CHARLES WOLFE ASSOCIATED PRESS

FRANKFORT - The mutual cultivation of Gov. Paul Patton and organized labor reached a milestone last week

In a meeting room of a downtown hotel. Patton and seven of his top aides took seats across a bargaining table with delegations from three unions that together have organized more than 14,000 state employees. Figuratively speaking, no Kentucky governor had ever before sat in such a seat.

Patton is "the first governor we've had who's had the nerve to do this," Paul Hounshell, an official of the Service Employees International Union, said afterward. "I think this is historic."

To the extent that it was a first, Hounshell was right. Whether it set a precedent that will last beyond Patton's time in office must remain an open question. The event was the first meeting of the Governor's Employee Advisory Council, a group that exists by executive order of the governor, not by act of the General Assembly.

The meeting included an hourlong "collective bargaining" session behind closed doors. The discussions were described as general and procedural, as though each side was feeling out the other. "We're in uncharted waters here," Hounshell said.

Patton's executive order, which he signed last year, divided 30,000-plus state government employees into nine worker categories. Each group could petition for a union election if enough employees in that group wanted it. So far, four of the nine groups have done so, and each is represented on the council.

Hounshell's union, in partnership with the American Federation of State, County and Municipal Employees - AFSCME organized 1,700 health care workers in state hospitals. AFSCME, the nation's largest public employee union, also represents 5,000 social and employment services workers and 3,300 prison employees. The Teamsters represent 4,500 laborers and tradesmen. Patton has invited unions into the house, but each side can go only so far. The General Assembly has declined to enact mandatory collective bargaining for state employees, and Kentucky law forbids them to go on strike.

Moreover, a governor's authority is not unlimited. Patton can set policy on a range of employment matters, such as layoffs. But he cannot make binding promises about state government salaries because he can only propose the funding. The General Assembly has to appropriate it.

The council "is advisory to me," Patton said. "I have agreed to sit down and negotiate with them the processes over which the governor has some control.

A few weeks ago, in an interview looking ahead to the General Assembly session that begins this week, Patton said he did not expect the legislature to attempt to repeal his executive order.

"There's no way they can prevent me from deciding that I will talk to people in a certain way, Patton said. The question is: What will the next governor do? The choice will be up to the next governor."

UNFPA receives millions of dollars each year from the U.S.

This year, Congress passed $34 million for the UNFPA (up from $21.5 million last year). But President Bush has the option of defunding the program completely.

A pro-life organization, the Population Research Institute (PRI) has been investigating the UNFPA. In September 2000, PRI obtained firsthand evidence from victims of forced abortion and forced sterilization in a UNFPA county program in China. In an attempt to secure funding, UNFPA denied that such abuses take place. But videotaped evidence in an UNFPA county program in China has been delivered by PRI to the White House. The tape reveals interviews where women were imprisoned and had their homes destroyed.

Horrific stories still emerge from China regarding their "Population Programs." There are frequent cases of infanticide, late term abortions, sex selection abortions and forced sterilizations. Of course, China claims all their programs are "voluntary." Is this where we want our tax dollars to go? Why does the UN have to be involved?

The United Nations is a misguided organization that does nothing but promote the culture of death throughout the globe. I am tired of paying their bills.

Text of governor's State of the Commonwealth speech of the Commonwealth address by Gov. Paul Patton on Thursday night:

President Williams, Speaker Richards, and members of the General Assembly, Justice Lambert and members of the Judiciary, Governor Henry and other members of the Executive. my fellow Kentuckians.

It's my privilege to once again appear before you and the people of Kentucky to report on the State of the Commonwealth; and 1 do so under different circumstances than in past years. Our country is at war and Kentucky finds itself in the midst of the largest call-up of our National Guard since World War II.

We owe a great deal of thanks to the fine men and women of the Kentucky National Guardpeople like Lexington Police Officer April Brown. Just over a month ago I greeted Captain Brown as she returned from seven months of service in Bosnia and she's now scheduled to supervise security at the Northern Kentucky-Greater Cincinnati airport. Thank you, Captain Brown. Not all of our heroes wear uniforms. We are, in fact, privileged to have with us tonight several family members whose spouses are currently supporting Operation Enduring Freedom: Mrs. Linda Roark of London, whose husband, Staff Sergeant Terry Roark is in the process of deploying to Europe and Mrs. Libby Swak of Frankfort whose husband, Kentucky Air Guard Master Sgt. Rich Swak, is already deployed as part of our nation's fight against terrorism.

General Youngman, I salute you and the 7,500 Kentucky National Guard men and women you command; especially those 1,700 soldiers who have been called to active duty during Operation Enduring Freedom. General Youngman, would you and your guests please stand so we can show our appreciation!

We support you and our president as you bring justice to those aggressors who've attacked innocent victims in our homeland. As you toil in foreign lands to protect our way of life, we'll work here in Frankfort to improve our way of life.

While we remain ever thankful for their sacrifices, my pur-

The prepared text of the State made in concert with me and my predecessors; and look for additional ways that we can improve Kentucky.

> As I review the things that are good about the state of the Commonwealth, I have to begin with education. Twelve years ago, the leaders of all three branches of state government made the most heroic commitment to the future of Kentucky that I ever expect to see in my lifetime; but in the end it was this legislature that made the final decision.

To paraphrase Winston Churchill, it was your finest hour, and I could go on to say, "Never have so many Kentucky children owed so much to so few. On their behalf, I thank you!" Not only did you design the most progressive restructuring of a state system of public education ever enacted in America; before or since; you enacted the changes in our tax code that were necessary to pay for it! You trusted the people of Kentucky to understand the need to invest in the intellectual development of our children, and they trusted your judgement.

I wasn't involved in that decision but I am proud of the fact that when KERA faced its hours of maximum peril, the 1995 Governor's race, and the 1996 session of the General Assembly, I was on KERA's side. I stood with most of you and said, "We will persevere." "We will not retreat." "We will stay the course!"

And we were right! By every measure, our students are now performing above the national average in math, science, and language arts. Let me repeat that statement. Kentucky students, based on several national evaluations, are performing above the national average!

In fact, Kentucky is one of only three states to show significant progress in reading in 1998; and Kentucky was one of only three states to show significant progress in science on the National Assessment of Educational Progress report that was released last year; and just this week Kentucky was one of only three states to receive an A in standards and accountability according to Education Week, the nation's most prestigious education publication! When you're in the top three, time after time after time, you're doing something right!

nation! I applaud the Kentucky legislature and the Kentucky Court of Justice for your service to the Commonwealth!

It was the responsibility of our administration to be not only the guardian of KERA but to also build upon that legacy. After all, in today's knowledge-based economy, secondary education is the foundation upon which an education suitable for a successful career is built. While I was a bystander in the battle to enact KERA, I was a central participant in the battle to enact the Postsecondary Education Improvement Act of 1997. And once again, the nation praises Kentucky's leadership in postsecondary education. The list of our successes in improving postsecondary education is long and impressive. Let me review for you just some of the improvements we can point to as a result of our work.

Our community and technical college system has increased its enrollment by almost 39 percent since 1997. The most successful publicly supported virtual university in the nation, the Kentucky Virtual University, has enrolled 5,500 students after only two years of operation. 31,650 students received over 21 million dollars in KEES scholarships last year and that number'll grow by 48 percent this year to about 47,000 students. Overall enrollment in public postsecondary education has increased over 15 percent since reform. Bucks for Brains has increased endowed chairs and professorships at our two research universities by over 200 percent and by 1,000 percent at our comprehensive universities! My friends, Kentucky's on a roll!

And in the 2000 session we continued our commitment to life-long learning with improvements to our adult education program and our efforts in early childhood development. As a result of our commitment to our adult learners, enrollment in adult education increased 23 percent last year and since 1997 GEDs earned have increased by 41 percent!

Our commitment to programs for our youngest citizens is driven by the fact that we now know that learning begins at birth and depends to a great extent on health. Because of our actions in the 2000 session, we can take pride in the fact that our youngest kids are getting their best start ever.

exports. We're now third in the production of light motor vehicles, third in the decline in poverty rates and we have 10 communities ranked in the 100 best small towns for corporate expansions. Our New Economy Initiative has attracted attention nationwide and our tourism development efforts have been uniquely successful. We have made progress and we're going to do more!

And we have faithfully executed any government's first responsibility, protecting the lives and the property of its citizens.

We've made Kentucky safer, creating one of the nation's best Unified Criminal Justice Information Systems, improving the training and pay of our sheriffs and police officers and eliminating parole for violent offenders; we've established family courts, and new judgeships and and we've built more new court-pose here tonight is to report to you the state of the Commonwealth. And my report to you is that, while our nation responds to this despicable act of aggression, while our national and state economies are in recession, and while our state budget faces the largest shortfall of revenue in our history, on the whole and over time, the state of the Commonwealth is good.

While a century or more of neglect after the Civil War changed Kentucky from one of the most progressive states in the Union to one of the most underachieving, the courageous acts of our governors, the Court of Justice, and this legislature over the past several years has reversed that trend; have made Kentucky a state to be admired and emulated; have made Kentucky once more a leader.

It's a distinct honor for me to be the governor of a state which is referred to time after time in national forums as the state that's doing it right; in education, early childhood development, economic development, supporting our farmers, state use of technology, efficiency of highway construction and a dozen other areas; the Commonwealth has been singled out for doing a good job. In this session we have another opportunity to add to that legacy.

In a few days I'll be recommending to you a budget for the next two years. This budget will be in stark contrast to my last two proposals which, in my opinion, were among the most progressive budgets adopted by the Commonwealth of Kentucky in my lifetime. This new recommendation will attempt to maintain our current commitments to progress with fewer resources. My budget proposal will strike a balance between keeping our current commitments and maintaining the fiscal responsibility that I've advocated since the first day I assumed this office.

But for tonight, let's step back and focus on how far we've come; let's discuss the results of the courageous decisions you've

One of the "right" things we've done is dramatically increase funding for K-12 education 88.4 percent since KERA was passed; and because of your financial commitment in the '98 session, Kentucky now has the most technologically advanced classrooms in the nation!

These high-tech classrooms have enabled us to have the nation's first, largest and best virtual high school. And all our students now have access to Kentucky's best in the nation virtual library. Think about it! Our children have more opportunities to learn to use the tool of the future, the computer, than the children of any other state!It makes chills run up my spine to realize that in the area that very well may determine the destiny of our nation, Kentucky is the leader!

Last November 5th, I accepted on your behalf the National Alliance of Business "State of the Year" award, an honor given by the nation's businesses to recognize extraordinary commitment to education. It was just announced that recently Kentucky is one of fifteen states to receive a grant from the Wallace Reader's Digest Foundation to focus on leadership for learning. And in the past 9 years Kentucky has had 35 teachers receive the coveted Milken Family Foundation National Educator Award! Who would have ever thought that we could have come this far, this fast.

The extraordinary vision, wisdom and courage of the 1990 Kentucky General Assembly was remarkable! In the first week of his administration, I was invited to meet with President Bush to discuss his Leave No. Child Behind education program which was signed into law by the president just two days ago. According to Kentucky Education Commissioner Gene Wilhoit, 90 percent of the President's plan looks very much like KERA. Kentucky has pioneered the way for the rest of the Over 40,000 women have participated in our folic acid program; 24,000 newborns have had hearing screening; over 50,000 under-insured children have had vaccinations: 3,800 families have improved their parenting skills, Kentucky's infant mortality rate is at an alltime low and we're now serving virtually 100 percent of eligible pre-school children with educational services.

And, quoting the Lexington Herald-Leader, "The Education Week report puts Kentucky at the forefront of early childhood education, both for its preschool program and for more recent initiatives to improve health programs and day care for young children!"

These are the things that government is supposed to do! And we're doing them! And we're doing 'em right! Kentucky's moving forward at every level of education and it's our joint efforts are making that possible. Let us recommit ourselves to education here tonight and let us vow to stay the course!

And of course, one of the objectives of a good educational system is to prepare our people to be successful in the worldclass economy we're building right here in Kentucky. We're building those world-class companies by creating a business climate where Kentucky companies can provide our people with high quality jobs while making a profit in an increasingly competitive world economy.

And here again, Kentucky has been among the most successful states in the nation in growing our economy over the past decade. Site Selection Magazine ranked Kentucky second in new jobs created, fifth in new and expanded manufacturing facilities and tenth in capital investment.

We're 12th in value added per worker, ninth in manufacturing growth, 15th in per capita income growth, 8th in growth of

Christian Coalition settles a racial discrimination lawsuit

WASHINGTON Christian Coalition has settled a racial discrimination lawsuit filed by 10 black female clerical workers. Terms were not disclosed.

"The matter has been resolved amicably," said George Doumar, the workers' lawyer, who added that he was not allowed to make further comment.

The women filed suit last February. They claimed they were denied health benefits and overtime pay, excluded from staff events, forced to use a segregated break room and told to use a back entrance because Executive Director Roberta Combs didn't want "important people" seeing them.

Combs denied the allegations and characterized the lawsuit as an attempt to embarrass the coalition and extort money.

The plaintiffs later charged that the coalition retaliated against them for bringing the suit. Five more employees joined the amended suit, including a white man who said he was fired for refusing to spy on black coworkers.

Disciples of Christ kill one of the nation's oldest religious periodicals

ST. LOUIS - The Disciple magazine, one of America's oldest religious periodicals, is going out of business, by action of the Christian Church (Disciples of Christ) publishing board. A special concluding issue in March will be the last.

Circulation is only 19,000 in a denomination with 831,000 members, though most clergy N subscribe. That compares with 51,000 subscribers in 1987 and 85,000 in 1977.

The magazine is the heir of several Disciples of Christ periodicals issued from St. Louis since 1874.

Last month another Protestant denomination, the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.), halted publication of a 65-year-old periodical for clergy, but it continues a lay magazine and a new quarterly for church leaders.

SALT LAKE CITY - When people talk about "The Church" in Utah, they're not talking about the Roman Catholic Church.

Catholicism is America's largest denomination, but its No. 2 in Utah and represents only about 9 percent of the state's residents, or roughly 200,000 people. The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints claims 70 percent of Utah's residents -around 1.5 million people.

> The Mormon influence in Utah, where the Winter Olympics will be held next month, runs deep. The state was founded by the faith's pioneers in 1847, who had fled from persecution in the East. Today, it is the home of the Mormon church's world headquarters.

Salt Lake City is a place where a resident can come home, switch on the Mormon churchowned NBC affiliate and see commercials for the Mormon church-owned Deseret Books, which has a branch conveniently located downtown in the Mormon church-owned ZCMI mall across the street from the Mormon church-owned newspaper, the Deseret News.

This also is a place where drinking a cup of coffee in the morning or having a beer after work makes a clear statement about religious affiliation. The Mormon church prohibits members in good standing from smoking or drinking alcohol and hot caffeinated beverages.

A poll conducted last fall for The Salt Lake Tribune, the state's largest newspaper, found that more than two-thirds of Utah's residents perceive a social, cultural or political divide between those who are Mormon and those Bills. It's a message that Hinckley himself has reiterated many times.

"We are greatly misunderstood, and I fear that much of it is of our own making. We can be more tolerant, more neighborly, more friendly, more of an example than we have been in the past," Hinckley said during the faith's semiannual General Conference in April 2000.

Leticia Medina, a Catholic and director of the State Office of Hispanic Affairs, has navigated the state's religious divide in her 20 years as a Utah resident.

When she first moved here from Los Angeles "it was very difficult to even say I was Catholic because I was looked down upon," she said,

The mother of four daughters, Medina said she struggled with raising her girls in Utah. One dropped out of school at age 16, saying, "T'm not the right color. I'm not the right religion.' It was too much pressure for her to deal with," Medina said.

Greg Schirf, a Catholic and owner of Wasatch Brewery, moved to Park City from Milwaukee in 1974. Utah's culture took some getting used to.

"I think what allowed me to survive is living in Park City," he said, describing the upscale ski town as a Catholic enclave.

To live in any other part of Utah "would have been too overwhelming. The reason I did stay is the recreational and businesses opportunities. But there were some lonely times."

And Mormon leaders continue are in the majority. to implore the faithful to be more accepting of others.

cigarette packages

by MELISSA B. ROBINSON ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON - Considering smoking? Maybe a nasty photo of a blackened lung will change your mind.

That's the hope of Reps. Martin Meehan, D-Mass., and James Hansen, R-Utah, who have drafted legislation to require pictorial warnings of smoking's dangers on cigarette packages, as is the practice in Canada.

The lawmakers, who plan to introduce the bill after Congress returns from recess later this month, argue that current warnings are too easy to ignore.

They point to a Canadian Cancer Society study, released Wednesday, that found 44 percent of smokers said pictorial warnings, in use in that country for about a year, increased their motivation to quit smoking.

"Large and aggressive warning labels deter smoking," said Meehan, a longtime critic of the tobacco industry.

The bill, as drafted, would require a rotating series of warning labels occupying half the available space on a cigarette package, carton or advertisement.

It would require text to be in large-style type, and accompa-

In short: The rift can be obvious and divisive, even as leaders of different faiths push for tolerance.

"There's a tremendous challenge to being in the majority or the minority graciously," Niederauer said. "We have to be careful about Mormon bashing. It can become a blood sport."

Mormon church President Gordon B. Hinckley has made it a priority to build better relations, between Mormons and non-Mormons, said spokesman Dale

There have been efforts made to bridge the religious divide.

Medina said her parish has made a point of working on social causes with churches of other faiths. The bishop sits on the newly created Alliance for Unity to promote more tolerance in the state, along with Mormon church leader Elder M. Russell Ballard of the Quorum of the Twelve Apostles.

nying photos to enhance the message, such as shots of a diseased lung, heart or mouth, an individual suffering from addiction, children watching adults smoke cigarettes, or an individual hurt by secondhand smoke, the draft said.

The bill has little chance of passing the Republican-controlled House. But Meehan hopes it will help build public support for greater government restrictions on tobacco sales and marketing.

Mike Pfeil, a spokesman for Philip Morris, said the company opposes the use of shock imagery on cigarette warning labels

"There needs to be a reasonable balance between the government's desire to clearly communicate regarding the health risks of smoking, but not to humiliate or stigmatize the adults for the legal choices that they're making," Pfeil said.

Religion and violence: Connection between the two grows in post-Cold War

by PAUL SHEPARD ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON - From bloodshed in the Bible and the combat of the Crusades to today's terrorist attacks in the United States and suicide bombings in the Mideast, violence in the name of religion has a long history.

Sept. 11 has focused new attention on the phenomenon, however, with experts citing a greater need for understanding the forces behind it.

"Religion is the ideology of Mark protest," said Juergensmeyer, a professor at the University of California, Santa Barbara, and author of "Terror in the Mind of God.'

In the book, Juergensmeyer found that the fall of the Soviet Union and the end of the Cold War helped create new grounds for conflicts around the world. And fighting in the name of religion has replaced battles pitting the capitalist West versus the communist bloc.

People are sanctioned to kill in defense of country and defense of religion," Jurgensmeyer said. "For some entities, the fight is no longer my form of government against yours. It is my religion and my beliefs against yours."

Just 20 years ago, he noted, the U.S. State Department listing of international terrorist groups included only a handful of religious groups. By 1998, he said, more than half of terror organizations listed by then-Secretary of State Madeleine Albright were religious in nature.

While some of these groups commit terror in the name of Islamic fundamentalism, that is just one type of religious-based violence - alongside Protestant-Roman Catholic conflict in Northern Ireland, cult attacks on Tokyo's subway system in 1995 and the targeting of abortion clinics and their doctors in the United States.

"Every religion in the world has violence committed in its name," Jurgensmeyer said.

Researchers who have studied those who carry out such attacks say the victimizers often see themselves as victims.

"People who get into this usually feel deprived in some way politically, financially or psychologically. They have the feeling something is missing from their lives and others have it," said Jessica Stern, a Harvard researcher who has profiled dozens of terrorists in prison.

"Extremists have certain things in common across religious lines but it seems that Islamic extremists are more successful in mobilizing their young men to their cause than other faiths," Stern said. 'I think part of that is because they seem to be as much or more focused on the next life as they are on the present life.'

Asma Afsaruddin, a professor of Arabic and Islamic Studies at the University of Notre Dame, said enormous anger is a driving force behind religious violence. "Add to that a sense of moral righteousness and a sense of having a monopoly on truth. What I'm basically describing is a fanatic."

People who use violence for religious ends often carry a sense of righteous indignation, even if they do not voice those strong opinions to others, said Rona Fields, a Washington-based psychologist who has studied terrorists and their organizations since

"They see their role in life as an avenging angel." Fields said.

Political goals are also a crucial catalyst when violence and religion mix. Said Afsaruddin: "It's the perceived political injustices that fuel the spiral of violence."

Small groups of extremists who use violence in the name of religion are usually led by people with strong personalities and excellent communication skills. said Jay Demerath, a sociology professor at the University of Massachusetts.

"It's a tight circle of social support where they get someone to be so dedicated to a cause it becomes all-consuming," said Demerath, author of the book "Crossing the Gods - World Religions and Worldly Politics."

Fitting these patterns, he said, are Osama bin Laden and leaders of the hijackers blamed for the Sept. 11 attacks, and members of Hamas, the terrorist group that has claimed responsibility for some recent deadly suicide bombings in Israel.

Demerath agreed that a political goal - a desire "to change the state structure" - is often a factor for those committing violence in the name of religion. But there's more, he said.

"In most of the cases, the bombers are recruited and they find that gratifying. For the first time, they are very important people. They are given responsibility and are a hero in the name of a cause

"Suicide bombers are told of all the gifts that await them in the afterlife but they are also venerated before they go. They see themselves receiving otherworldly rewards but they are also getting important psychological benefits as well."

Greenspan says economy still faces significant risks

The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The economy, hit last year by recession and the worst terrorist attacks in U.S. history, appears to be stabilizing, but it is too early to declare recovery is at hand, Federal Reserve Chairman Alan Greenspan said Friday.

Measure would expand Medicaid coverage, protect newborns

by BRUCE SCHREINER

FRANKFORT — Two bills meant to prolong the lives of Kentuckians in need of medical care completed quick journeys through the Senate on Friday.

One bill passed by the Senate would let parents turn over unwanted newborns to emergency or medical workers without fear of prosecution. Such immunity could one day spare an infant from being left to die in a dumpster or landfill, said Sen. Tom Buford, the bill's chief sponsor.

A second bill would expand Medicaid coverage to hundreds more Kentucky women undergoing treatment of breast and cervical cancer.

Both bills passed 34-0 and now go to the House. They were the first passed this session in the Senate.

Despite bipartisan votes, a political feud over who should get credit for the breast-cancer bill roiled on the Senate floor.

Sen. Ernesto Scorsone, D-Lexington, noted that he introduced an identical Medicaid bill, and did it first, but his bill was shunned by Senate Republican leaders.

The bill that advanced was sponsored by Sen. Alice Forgy Kerr, a Lexington Republican. Scorsone said it was a sign of politics.

"I've learned that plagiarism is the highest form of flattery," Scorsone said.

In another jab, Scorsone said Republicans have little experience in helping the poor, so Democrats should perhaps consider taking GOP colleagues "under your wings" to help them through the process. Many Democrats, including Scorsone, signed on as co-sponsors of Kerr's bill before it came up for debate in the full Senate. Sen. Julie Denton, R-Louisville, said she was offended that Scorsone would use such an important public health bill for a "political ploy."

Buford, R-Nicholasville, said sponsorship was irrelevant.

"The issue is not who owns this bill, but who is helped by this bill," he said.

The Medicaid bill would raise the income eligibility limit to 2 1/2 times the federal poverty line. The threshold is now 185 percent of poverty. With the change, a woman could qualify for Medicaid coverage with a family income as high as $35,000.

Kerr said the change would help hundreds of women. The state has other mandates for insurance coverage of mammograms. The main argument for Kerr's bill is that detection is pointless if the woman cannot afford treatment.

"By passing this bill, we can take some of the burden away from these women in a time of great trauma," said Kerr, R-Lexington.

Kerr was joined on the Senate floor by Debby Gruelle, a friend from Fort Thomas who has breast cancer. At one point, Kerr became choked with emotion while introducing her friend to the Senate.

The expanded Medicaid coverage would cost the state an estimated $600,000 a year and would draw a federal match.

The state would pay 20 percent of the coverage, Kerr said. The federal government would cover the rest, a higher-thanusual match for the federal health insurance program for the poor and disabled.

Meanwhile, the other bill would allow a parent to anonymously surrender the infant to hospital workers, police, firefighters or emergency medics within 72 hours of birth without fear of prosecution.

Buford said some people might disapprove of letting a parent off the hook, but he said his priority was to protect the child.

"What we have here is a chance to save these children, to give them a first chance at life," he said.

Under current law, a parent who abandons a baby faces felony prosecution that could result in a prison sentence of one to five years.

Immunity from prosecution under Buford's bill would not apply if the newborn had been physically abused or neglected.

Under the bill, the Cabinet for Families and Children would seek an immediate order for emergency custody of an infant turned over by the parent. Babies would be placed in foster homes. After 30 days, the cabinet could start the process of terminating parental rights. Before adoption, officials would make sure the infant wasn't reported missing.

Sen. David Boswell, D-Owensboro, sponsored an identical bill, but Democrats did not object to Buford's bill being chosen to advance the issue. A similar bill is winding through the House.

"This bill transcends politics," said Sen. Marshall Long, D-Shelbyville.

(The baby-abandonment bill is Senate Bill 55; the Medicaid bill is SB56) but also warning of "significant risks."

Financial markets, which had been looking for a more upbeat assessment from Greenspan about chances for a recovery, lost ground after the speech. The Dow Jones industrial average lost 80.33 points for the day to finish at 9.987,53.

In light of Greenspan's continued concerns, private economists said it is now more likely that the Fed, which cut interest rates 11 times last year, will cut interest rates again when the central bank next meets on Jan. 29-30.

"It is pretty much a fait accompli that we are going to get another cut in rates," said Sun Won Sohn, chief economist at Wells Fargo in Minneapolis.

In his address, delivered to a business audience in San Francisco, Greenspan noted a number of hopeful signs, including a sharp reduction by businesses in their inventories of unsold goods.

But he said there were also powerful forces that could derail any recovery, especially given that the economic weakness that began in the United States has now spread to the rest of the world.

"Despite a number of encouraging signs of stabilization, it is still premature to conclude that the forces restraining economic activity here and abroad have abated enough to allow a steady recovery to take hold," Greenspan said.

"I would emphasize that we continue to face significant risks in the near term," he said, citing such threats as weak corporate profits, the steep plunge in business investment and possible cutbacks in consumer spending due to rising unemployment.

"This is cautious optimism," said David Wyss, chief economist at Standard & Poor's Co. in New York. "He believes the signs have turned from unrelentingly negative to more mixed. But he feels there are still a lot of risks out there."

The Fed's string of rate cuts last year drove the federal funds rate, the interest that banks charge each other, down to a 40-year low of 1.75 percent.

However, the last rate cut on Dec. 11 was by only a quarterpoint, not the bolder half-point moves the Fed had employed following the Sept. 11 attacks. Analysts said that Greenspan's worries about lingering threats to a recovery probably mean that the central bank will not rush to start raising rates later this year out of worries that the rebound will trigger inflation pressures.

"Greenspan wants to see real hard evidence that a recovery has begun before he switches out of his cautious interest-rate cutting mode," said Ken Mayland, chief economist at ClearView Economics in Cleveland.

The current recession, which ended a record 10-year period of U.S. prosperity, has officially been dated as starting last March. But Greenspan noted that the economy has been struggling with weak growth ever since the summer of 2000.

Before the Sept. 11 terrorist attacks, there were signs that the economy had begun to stabilize, but Greenspan said those gains were wiped out with the severe jolt dealt to consumer and business

Patton

Patton also opposed making seat belt use a primary offense for which law enforcement officers may stop and cite motorists. He said he was wrong about that, too.

"Name me one other thing we can do this session that will save 75 lives a year and not cost the state treasury one dime in increased expense," Patton said.

Other unfinished business is to tackle solid waste. Patton endorsed a proposal by Stumbo that includes a tax of one-half cent on bottles and cans and fast food containers, plus an additional fee on trash taken to landfills. He said the cost for each person would be minimal.

"Seven dollars a year is a reasonable price to pay to clean up Kentucky. It'll be, in my opinion, one of the greatest bargains we'll ever get," Patton said.

Tax reform is another topic that Patton has previously proposed, only to see the legislature balk. While lawmakers have studied the topic since the 2001 session, little appears likely to happen. "We stand ready to address, on a bipartisan basis, comprehensive and revenue neutral tax reform. This is a subject confidence by the attacks.

He cautioned that economic forecasting is now even more fraught with the "major uncertainty that we all must deal with these days — the specter of further terrorist incidents on American soil. It simply is not possible to predict whether there will be any such incidents or to forecast their possible consequences for the economy."

Greenspan said that the unemployment rate, which hit a six-year high of 5.8 percent in December, is likely to continue rising even after the recovery begins. Private economists are forecasting unemployment will hit a high of 7 percent by next summer. By comparison, the jobless rate in the last recession in 1990-91 topped out at 7.8 percent.

"If the tentative indications that the contraction phase of this business cycle is drawing to a close are ultimately confirmed, we will have experienced a relatively mild downturn," Greenspan said that leaders ought to be able to agree on and do what's right for the long-term future of Kentucky," Patton said.

The Pine Mountain Trail would be 1,000 feet wide and stretch from Elkhorn City to Pineville. Patton proposed using money from existing places to buy whatever tracts that would not be donated.

"It's truly majestic, with some of Kentucky's most breathtaking scenery; and the summit of Pine Mountain is home to some of our most unique and endangered flora," Patton said.

Patton especially urged lawmakers to regulate telemarketers, a topic which paralyzed the 2001 session, and rein in large pharmaceutical companies, which he said are draining the state's Medicaid program.

Noticeably absent from Patton's speech was any reference to redistricting, which has already dominated all the work of the General Assembly.

Patton's speech, which lasted about 40 minutes, included 41 interruptions by applause, many of them when he cited the patriotic efforts of Kentuckians in the fight against terrorism.

prison for killing puppy

Man gets 21/2 years in

The Associated Press

NORTH CHARLESTON, S.C. — A man was sentenced to 21/2 years in prison for killing his puppy by bashing its head against the ground.

Jody J. Rymer, 21, was also fined $2,000 on Thursday by Circuit Judge Deadra Jefferson.

Rymer had said the animal deserved to die because it chewed through his stereo speaker wires. But before sentencing, Rymer said he had no explanation for why he killed the German shepherd-mix puppy in 2000.

houses in the past six years than in the previous sixty years! And in particular, we've made Kentucky's women and children safer, thanks in large measure to my wife, Kentucky's First Lady, Judi Patton; stand up, sweetheart.

She's been the inspiration for our administration to work with you to establish the unique VINE victims notification system which is being emulated nationwide, to enhance protective services, to expand spouse abuse centers and rape crisis centers and put victim advocates in prosecutors' offices; and create the nation's most extensive network of children's advocacy centers!

And Judi's been an advocate for women's health, helping us establish an office especially for improving women's health and she's brought the subject of breast cancer to the forefront as an important public issue that needs attention! Thank you, Judi Patton!

Our children are only twenty percent of our population but they are one hundred percent of our future. And as we discuss our children. I can report to you that we've now corrected all the deficiencies in our juvenile justice program which brought us under the control of the federal Department of Justice. We've transformed our worst in the nation juvenile justice system into the best in the nation; something you should all be proud of because together we've increased our expenditure to help our most troubled children by 162 percent!

We've successfully implemented our 2020 water quality initiative and through our children's health insurance program, over 50,000 children, previously uninsured, now have healthcare and our Kentucky Access Health Insurance program, enacted by the 2000 General Assembly, has returned competition to the healthcare insurance market!

We've improved our efforts to create a qualified professional state workforce by increasing average compensation by 28 percent, and raising the classification of nearly 8,000 employees who were working in jobs classified as much as five grades lower than they should have been. Even though we have more to do, these actions have brought our employment policy more inline with the private sector.

And at last, many of our employees have an effective method, chosen by them, to communicate their desires about their terms and conditions of employment to their employer!

Our Cabinet for Families and Children has reduced welfare dependency by more than 50 percent and has also more than doubled its efforts in employment services, job retention programs and child care assistance. We're improving our farm economy, preserving our environment and restoring our inner cities. We're moving Kentucky forward and our people are prospering!

As difficult as our current fiscal challenges are, there are still many substantial issues that we can and should address in the next three months.

The first is unfinished business and at the top of that list is fairness for our coal miners who've contracted black lung.I've appeared before you before and admitted that the 1996 reform of our workers' compensation system went too far

It was my expressed desire in '96 to reduce a $100 million black lung program to about $8 million, a reduction of over 90 percent. The fact is that we, for all practical purposes, eliminated black lung as a compensable disease even though it has not been eliminated from Kentucky coal mines.

Today as I speak to you, we have in the bank here in Frankfort almost $17 million which has been paid in by Kentucky coal companies for coal miners black lung benefits and less than 400,000 dollars has been paid out! Obviously the program hasn't functioned the way we intended it to.

My proposal is not a return to the open-ended black lung program that operated before 1996. It's to train diseased coal miners for another occupation after they've contracted the disease but before they've become totally disabled. To take the position that a miner has to continue to work until he or she has become disabled and their life shortened before they can receive training for another occupation is ridiculous; and it's inhumane. My proposal does not affect any other employer and is easily affordable by the Kentucky coal industry.

And above all it is the right thing to do! And now is the time to do it! I call on this legislature to act and to act now!

Another issue that demands action is the repeal of the laws that protect the large pharmaceutical companies at the expense of our most vulnerable citizens. Our Medicaid pharmacy program has grown 63 percent in two years! That's an increase of 220 million dollars! A big part of the reason is ours laws and regulations which keep us from finding ways to bring spending under control. I've fixed the regulations, and established a clinical committee to advise us on prior authorization of drugs. Now I need your help fixing the laws.

Even though we've increased funding for Medicaid by almost 47 percent since I've been in office, it's still inadequate to provide our needy neighbors with the basic healthcare we want for ourselves. Again, the time to stand up to the big drug companies and act on behalf of Kentucky's medically fragile is now! And I call on you to act! Now

And surely we can successfully address the issue of telemarketing! Our telephone is one of our most valuable assets.It should be a resource not a nuisance. We should be the master of who uses it, not the slave to selfish interests! We can reduce these unwanted calls !Let us put aside partisan differences and let's get the job done, this session! And above all, we must maintain faith with our family farms.

We should be the master of who uses it, not the slave to selfish interests! We can reduce these unwanted calls! Let us put aside partisan differences and let's get the job done, this session! And above all, we must maintain faith with our family farms.

Two years ago, you made a commitment to Kentucky farmers to help them preserve their unique culture; a commitment unparalleled in the history of the United States. We've been diligent as we've administered House Bill 611; plowing unchartered terrain, learning as we went, listening to the input of thousands of farmers. We're investing 50 percent of the tobacco settlement funds in our family farms to improve the efficiency of current farm activities, to precipitate new agriculture activity that will increase farm income and to improve the quality of life in rural Kentucky.

We urge you, no matter what the temptation, no matter how great the need in other areas, no matter how great the pressure from other deserving constituents, to stay the course, to maintain the commitment, to keep faith with our farmers. And if we do, we'll be able to look back ten years from now and say that we've helped preserve that unique rural culture of Kentucky which has been the mainstay of our values, the source of our work ethic, the strength of our people that has made Kentucky, Kentucky!

But our task is not to just act on unfinished business. It's to look for more ways that we can improve the quality of life and standard of living of our people. Even though our fiscal position makes it impossible to commit financial resources to new or cient and more effective.

As we renew our commitment to our traditional industries, we must maintain our commitment to the new economy. Under the leadership of Dr. Bill Brundage, we're prepared to build on the foundation laid with House Bill 572 enacted in the 2000 session. We need your support of this effort.

And as we speak of improving the business climate in Kentucky and building a more just society, we cannot ignore the subject of tax reform. We stand ready to address, on a bi-partisan basis, comprehensive and revenue neutral tax reform. This is a subject that leaders ought to be able to agree on and do what's right for the long-term future of Kentucky!

But perhaps our greatest opportunity for this session is to improve our already good environment. Kentucky's still a beautiful, healthy, and esthetically pleasing place to live, work and raise a family. And that can become one of our biggest assets. Our challenge is to keep it that way, because today we're losing our rural landscape at an alarming rate, second fastest in the nation.

That's why it's important that we make the commitment to growing correctly in this session. Many of the recommendations of the Smart Growth Task Force are based on incentives to encourage quality growth instead of government mandates. Our dire fiscal position prevents us from providing the resources we need to do all we could do to preserve the Kentucky we know. But our fiscal situation won't be a permanent condition.

When you return here in two years. I'm confident our economy will be strong and new revenue will be available and we can devote more resources to education, social services, and preserving our unique environment. We need to lay the foundation for quality growth now! However, there are quality growth issues that aren't impacted by our General Fund crisis that we can address in this session. Among these is the regulation of the siting of new power plants and transmission lines, a subject we'll have a recommendation on during this session.

Likewise, we'll propose the regulation of non-coal mining and oil and gas well drilling particularly in the vicinity of some of our most ecologically sensitive areas like Pine Mountain. Our administration has saved Black Mountain. We've made major progress in preserving Blanton Forest and we've preserved the unique environment of Pine Mountain Settlement School. The time has now come to address the entire Pine Mountain Range, Kentucky's most unique geological feature. For those of you who aren't familiar with Pine Mountain, it's that massive upheaval in eastern Kentucky that runs almost parallel with the Virginia border and stretches from the Breaks Interstate Park in my native Pike County to Pine Mountain State Park in Bell County. This mountain range extends about 120 miles along our southeastern border. It's truly majestic, with some of Kentucky's most breathtaking scenery; and the summit of Pine Mountain is home to some of our most unique and endangered flora. The Pine Mountain Trail is that path along or near the summit of the mountain that was first established by our native Americans of pre-history and the animals they stalked, and used by our first settlers as they sought the easiest way to traverse this rough land on foot and horseback. Today, a part of the trail is being restored and marked by citizen volunteers and is used by hikers and nature lovers from across the country. Some of those volunteers are here with us tonight with Secretary Bickford and I'd like to recognize them: Duane Mix and his wife, Pat; Dennis Crowley: Dee Roberts; and Kenneth Mullins. Their hard work and dedicated service has brought this asset to our attention and I look forward to working with them and others to make their dream come true. I applaud their efforts! The time has now come for the state to become directly involved. I propose to establish a linear state park which encompasses the Pine Mountain Trail, a state park 120 miles long and 1,000 feet wide, traversing the summit of Pine Mountain from Elkhorn City to Pineville and connecting our already existing publicly owned areas, to preserve forever one of Kentucky's truly unique assets!

Tennessee has established a similar linear state park in the Smokies, the Cumberland Trail State Park, running 280 miles from Chattanooga to the Cumberland Gap. These two linear state parks, along with the Appalachian Trail, stretching from Georgia to New York, can form the nucleus of an ecotourism industry of which we can all be proud.

I understand that many of the property owners will donate the property or at least an easement for this proposed park; and where the land won't be donated, I propose to purchase the land using existing resources like the Land and Water Conservation Fund, the TEA-21 Fund, the Kentucky Heritage Land Conservation Fund and in future budgets, state appropriations.

In the meantime, I propose to regulate gas and oil drilling, coal and non-coal mining, and timbering activities within this area so as to preserve this treasure that belongs to all Kentuckians!

And if we're going to be serious about our environment, we have to address the solid waste issue.1 think Representative Stumbo has made a reasonable proposal to address this issue. Over the past year we've learned a lot more about the problem. We now estimate, based on a more detailed study of the state, that there are more than 10,500 illegal, unsightly, unhealthy open dumps in Kentucky. We know there are about 550 old municipal dumps which haven't been properly closed and which are polluting our streams and our ground water. We see everyday the litter that despoils our scenic highways and we know we need to encourage curbside pickup and recycling.

Representative Stumbo straightforwardly recognizes that it'll cost money; and we the people of Kentucky will have to bear that cost. Seven dollars a year is a reasonable price to pay to clean up Kentucky. It'll be, in my opinion, one of the greatest bargains we'll ever get!

Yes, we have a serious fiscal challenge before us. But, as you can see, there's still much we can do during this session to move Kentucky forward. Working together we can continue our commitment to excellence in education. We can improve the safety of our highways. We can improve a business climate that will bring us even more new jobs. We can remain committed to our family farms.We can preserve and maintain the natural beauty of our state. We can help grow quality communities; and we can make Kentucky cleaner! Working together we can continue to build on the foundation that we and our predecessors have established as we pursue the goal of a standard of living and quality of life above the national average. We're on a 20-year journey. We have to think long-term; because you don't stop 100 years of decline in just one year, or six years, or 12 years. The real issue before us tonight is, will Kentucky, not just Paul Patton but Kentucky, live up to the commitments we've made, and make the sacrifices that have to be made, to do what has to be done. That is the question. We've been working together for six years and this session may very well be the most difficult challenge we've had in our common effort to move Kentucky forward. Let us not be found wanting. I began this message by recognizing the Kentuckians who've been called to serve in our military forces. These courageous individuals are being asked to take up the mantel of leadership and fight to protect our way of life. We must follow their example. We must also have courage and assume the mantel of leadership and protect the legacy that's been passed on to us. We must put aside our differences and do what's right for all of Kentucky. The challenges before us are immense. The opportunity to move Kentucky forward is in our hands. And we will be judged by what we make of this opportunity.

still things we can do to move Kentucky forward.

And one of those is to make sure our law enforcement officers can enforce the laws we enact. It's already the law in Kentucky that every passenger in a motor vehicle on Kentucky highways' must wear a seatbelt. The only problem is that, except in certain circumstances, we won't let our police enforce the law. And that's wrong!

This handcuffing of our police officers breeds contempt for our laws and those who enforce them. To allow people to violate the law in front of a police officer and then prohibit that officer from enforcing the law is unconscionable. Besides that, not being able to enforce the law costs the lives of 75 motorists on Kentucky's highways every year! Name me one other thing we can do this session that will save 75 lives a year and not cost the state treasury one dime in increased expense!

Just this past new year's holiday weekend 12 people died on our highways. Ten of them weren't wearing seatbelts. This is another area where I have to admit that I was wrong in 1992 when I missed the opportunity to put our present law into effect two years earlier.

The time has now come to take the next step. I don't intend to be wrong this time and I hope you, too, will support this measure which may, in the years ahead, save the life of a neighbor or perhaps a family member-or maybe even yourself. Again, it's simply the right thing to do!

Another positive step we can take is the refinement of our business recruitment tools that have made Kentucky such an outstanding place to grow a business. These programs, from the enterprise zone law enacted in 1982 to the tax increment financing program enacted in the 2001 session, have worked well, but they've been enacted one at a time, not in a coordinated fashion. The revisions we'll propose won't break any new ground as it relates to philosophy, but it will make our programs more effi-

I look forward to these next three months as we work together to make Kentucky better.

'Newsome state's top scorer

by STEVE LeMASTER SPORTS EDITOR

EASTERN - Through 13 games, Allen Central's Shawn Newsome was the top scorer in all of Kentucky high school boys' basketball. Through 13 games, the senior Runnin' Rebel leads the state with an average of 30.5 points per game. Through the 13 games, Newsome had 397 points. The Runnin' Rebels were back in action Friday night on the road against conference rival Betsy Layne. The first list of KHSAA stats for boys' and girls' basketball were released Thursday afternoon.

Newsome, who helped lead Allen Central to the 15th Region All "A" title last season, would like to help lead his team back that way this season.

"Our team started out kinda bad, but we're playing real well now," said Newsome Friday morning prior to his team's game with Betsy Layne that night. "Mike Slone, Neil Allen and a couple of other guys on our team have really stepped up their play."

In a district and region with such parody as the 58th and 15th, Newsome, like many others, sees a wide-open race in both.

Grayson County scorer Chris Gaither runs a very close second behind Newsome. Gaither is second with 360 points through 12 games, and average of 30 points per contest. Matt Endy of Kentucky Country Day, with Bentley's Comments Could we use Saul now?

by RICK BENTLEY TIMES COLUMNIST

For most of the last two basketball seasons, I've listened to fans of Kentucky basketball browbeat, harass, boo and otherwise chastise Saul Smith, then the point guard of their beloved Wildcats.

To those folks, I simply say, congratulations. You got what you wished for.

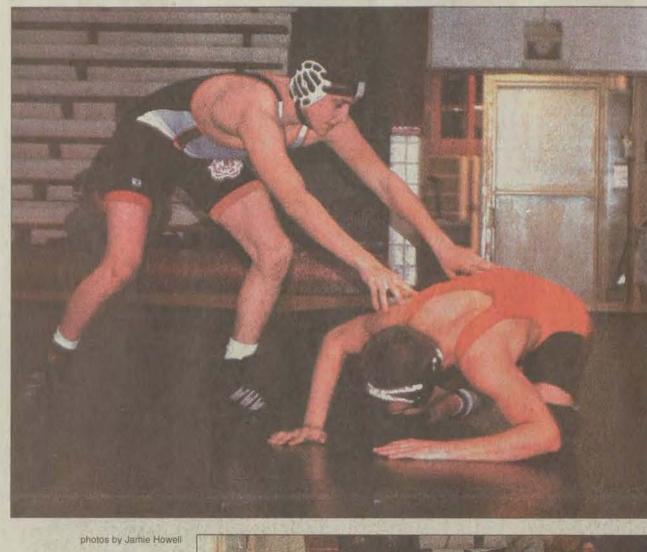

Now how happy are you? You've gotten yourself four losses through one week of play in the Southeastern Conference, and both games against league foes have gone south

And while I wouldn't in any way say all the blame goes on Saul's replacement, I will tell you this -Cliff Hawkins gets a good part of it.

The sophomore forgets the key role of a point guard when it comes to clutch time. For some reason, he refuses to pass the basketball.

Knott Central girls play tough defense, beat Belfry

by STEVE LeMASTER SPORTS EDITOR

BELFRY - The Knott County Central Lady Patriots have enjoyed some very successful girls' basketball seasons. And this season, as in previous campaigns, is no different for the Lady Pats.

Defense proved to be a deciding factor when the KCC girls' basketball team met up with the Belfry Lady Pirates Thursday night in Belfry. Visiting Knott Central hit four three-pointers in the third quarter and held Belfry to a miniscule two points. The Lady Patriots went on to post a 72-64 win.

Junior guard Tonya Amburgey scored 20 points to lead Knott Central. The Lady Patriots trailed Belfry 30-29 at the half. KCC led 17-16 after one quarter of play. The Lady Pats shot 53-percent for the game. The win improved KCC's sea-

P'burg falters vs. JCHS, Paintsville stumbles against S. Clark

My friend Bob Watkins wrote of it in his space this week, and today, I'll come somewhere between emphasizing his point and beating the dead horse. It's time for Tubby Smith to set his point guard down and introduce him to thehierarchy of his ball club.

And says here if he doesn't do it soon, this team that had so much promiseonly a week ago could wind up going straight down the crapper.

Another reason for Smith to step in now is because if he doesn't, it sure looks like his real All-American is about ready to. Some things are better left to teammates to handle. That is often the case; a player listens when his teammate match on Thursday. PHS featured both high school and middle school competitors. The Blackcats, coached by assistant principal Jerry Butcher, are headed for next weekend's WSAZ-TV Tournament. An annual event, the WSAZ tourney features some of the very best wrestling talent from West Virginia and Kentucky. Teams from throughout the country have taken part in the tournament. Junior Nick Chaffin, ranked second in the state in the 119-pound division, is expected to fare well in in the event. The tournament is a two-day event.

PAINTSVILLE - Host Johnson Central wasted little time in building a lead over visiting Prestonsburg on Thursday night. Johnson Central, defending 15th Region Champion, led 17-10 after the quarter and kept a lead throughout the contest on its way to a 58-45 win.

* NAIA recognizes Champions of Character Institutions

SPECIAL TO THE TIMES

OLATHE, Kan. - Reinforcing its mission to promote the education and development of students through athletic participation, the National Association of Intercollegiate Athletics completed its first year of the Champions of Character initiative and has named 111 institutions as NAIA Champions of Character Institutions.

The focus of the program is on emphasizing the character-building aspects of sport to NAIA student-athletes and to youth level participants. Five core character values, respect, integrity, responsibility, servant leadership and sportsmanship, are emphasized in a number of ways.

In conjunction with the start of the program, the NAIA initiated a Champions of Character Institution Recognition Program. In order to be recognized, an steps in all five core character value areas and needed to have self-reported its accomplished goals.

"The first year of the Champions of increased awareness to character issues in sport on our member campuses. Though the perfect environment many never happen, we believe the NAIA as a whole and especially these 111 institutions have taken institution needed to have taken action a stand to create that positive environment where competition and character go hand in hand," said NAIA Director of Development Rob Miller.

Through Champions of Character, the Character Initiative has brought an NAIA seeks to create an environment in which every NAIA student-athlete, coach, official and spectator is committed to the true spirit of competition through five tenets: respect, integrity, responsibility, servant leadership and sportsmanship.

While the NAIA and its 332 member institutions have utilized sport as a character development tool on an informal basis, this program will educate and create awareness of the positive character-building traits afforded by sports and return integrity to competition.

KHSAA votes to expand baseball finals

TIMES STAFF REPORT

FRANKFORT - Sometimes bigger is better.

Kentucky's high school baseball championship tournament will double in size in 2003.

The Kentucky High School Association's Board of Control voted Thursday to expand the number of teams advancing to the baseball finals from four to eight.

Under the current playoff system, regional tournament winners advance to four semistate tournaments, and the winners there advance to the finals. Staring in 2003, 16 teams will advance to eight semistate tournaments for two-day best-of-three playoffs.

One game will be played on

Forsberg will be out for at least four months after the sheath around the tendons ruptured. SUNRISE, Fla. - Florida Panthers star Pavel Bure will miss at least several weeks because of a broken left hand, putting his chances of playing in the Winter Olympics in leop-Brdy

BUFFALO, N.Y. - Pittsburgh Penguins center Wayne Primeau will miss the rest of the season lifter having reconstructive surgery on his left knee. He was hurt in a game last Sunday.

FIGURE SKATING

LOS ANGELES - Todd Eldredge won his sixth U.S. Figure Skating Championships title. After skipping two seasons of competition, Eldredge edged defending champion Tim Goebei. who is all of 21, and Michael Weiss, 25. All three now head to the Salt Lake City Olympics.

LOS ANGELES - Michelle Kwan won the short program in the U.S. Figure Skating Championships. Bul Sasha Cohen was the one who electrified the arena, displaying the magic that once belonged to Kwan.

Kwan won seven judges, while Cohen and Angela Nikodinov each got one. Sarah Hughes was a close third, and Nikodinov was fourth in the incredibly strong event. The free skate, worth two-thirds of the final score, is Saturday.

LOS ANGELES - Naomi Lang and Peter Tchemyshev, three-time U.S. champions, earned a 6.0 for presentation for their sultry, seductive rendition of "Carmen" in original dance. at the U.S. Figure Skating Championships.

It's the third year in a row they've earned a perfect mark. They are the first skaters to do that at nationals, dating back to 1968.

FOOTBALL

NEW YORK - Running back Garrison Hearst of the San Francisco 49ers won The Associated Press NFL Comeback Player of the Year award.

EDEN PRAIRIE, Minn. - Mike Tice took over as head coach of the Minnesota Vikings. Tice, who was the offensive line coach until Dennis Green was forced out last week.

BASEBALL

NEW YORK - Donald Walkins met with baseball officials and was given the go-ahead to contact the Minnesota Twins about making an offer to buy the team

Twins owner Carl Pohlad is willing to have his franchise folded as part of commissioner Bud Selig's contraction plan.

Walkins would like to save the Twins by purchasing the team. He would be the first black controlling owner in major league history.

NEW YORK - The House Judiciary Committee's ranking Democrat, Rep. John Convers Jr. of Michigan, said he would back off his call for Bud Selig's resignation if the commissioner dropped his threat to eliminate teams this season.

NEW YORK - Back at Yankee Stadium where he once was popular, productive and even perfect, David Wells was on hand as the New York Yankees formally announced his signing to a $7 million, two-year contract.

OLYMPICS

SALT LAKE CITY - Speedskater Tommy O'Hare has asked for arbitration to resolve his claim that other competitors, including Olympic medal favorite Apolo Ohno, conspired to deny him a spot on the U.S. team.

O'Hare's attorney claims that Ohno and training partner Rusty Smith fixed the Olympic 1,000-meter short-track trial race to boost their friend, Shani Davis, onto the Olympic team. The outcome dropped O'Hare, who raced at the 1998 Nagano Games, from the Olympic squad.

BOXING

CANASTOTA, N.Y. - Alleen Eaton might have been beaten to the punch as the first female promoter in boxing, but Eaton earned the distinction of being the first woman to be honored in the International Boxing Hall of Fame.

Joining Eaton in the 2002 class of inductees were four world champions from outside the United States - heavyweight Ingemar Johansson of Sweden, Mexican welterweight Pipino Cuevas, light heavyweight Victor Galindez of Argentina, and Jeff Fenech of Australia, who won three world titles in three different weight divisions.

Thirteen other non-participants and boxers who lought before 1942, will be inducted June 9

The key to successful umpire clinics

To hold a successful umpiring clinic, it is important to prepare a detailed plan. The following is not intended to be a complete course on umpiring, but offers a good overview of the basics.

Since most umpiring clinics are held at a time when it is inadvisable to hold the workshop outdoors, this outline is devised for the classroom. The clinic instructor should choose the topics he feels are most appropriate for his demonstration of umpiring techniques from the following suggested list. The amount of time to be spent on each item should be regulated by the length of time of the clinic itself. At least three hours of solid information and instruction should be scheduled for a successful clinic. To stay within your time frame, you may want to have all questions held until the end of the instruction on the topic, or until the end of the clinic. Fifteen to twenty minutes should be allotted at the end of the clinic for a question and answer session.

There are umpires who have learned the rules but never properly understoond what constitutes interference, obstruction, the balk, legal catch, infield fly, running out of base line, etc. Clear demonstrations and illustrations should be used to effectively teach each of those concepts.

The clinic should be held a room large enough to comfortably seat the expected attendance and allow the instructor(s) room to demonstrate. It should have a chalkboard or dry marker board and markers, and an eraser available. You will also need to have umpire's equipment in the classroom.

UK reverses field, releases Stone to play at Louisville

by STEVE BAILEY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

LEXINGTON - Kentucky unexpectedly granted a release to former basketball player Marvin radio call-in shows. Friday's play for former Kentucky coach Rick Pitino at archrival Louisville. "Coach (Tubby) Smith and I met this morning, and Coach Smith has had a change of heart," Kentucky Athletics Director Larry Ivy said during a hastily called news conference. "He has agreed, and I also concurred, that we will release him to the University of Louisville."

Stone, a 6-foot-10 junior and former McDonald's All-American at Grissom High School in Huntsville, Ala., now can be offered a scholarship to play at Louisville after sitting out a season under NCAA transfer rules. He would have one full season of eligibility remaining.

Pitino, who coached at Kentucky from 1989-97, has said he would be interested in talking with Stone about joining the program and scheduled at 6 p.m. news conference to discuss the situation.

university for violating Stone's constitutional right to equal protection and due process.

The bitter two-week battle was played out in newspapers and on Stone on Friday, allowing him to announcement came a day after decision.

Smith implied on the SEC's weekly teleconference that the decision not to release Stone to Louisville was not entirely his own but the decision of the athletics director and the school's compliance officer.

Ivy, however, reiterated that if Smith had initially agreed to Stone's release to Louisville, he would have supported that decision as well.

"The first step in any transfer procedure is, 'What is the desire of the head coach?" Ivy said. "The initial thought by Coach Smith was, from a competitive standpoint, we didn't want to have to play against Marvin at another institution."

Ivy opened the news conference saying he wanted to clarify the school's position on its transfer guidelines, which have been in effect for about 12 years.

"We probably misinformed you," he said. "This is a procedure that we have been following as we do in football, basketball and every sport.

"When we said policy, most people were probably thinking, Show me something. Where is it written? Where do you say that he can't transfer to Louisville or Indiana? I think policy implies that it should be written. I think procedure is just steps that we follow in reaching a decision."

A thought for 2002 - When preparing for 2002, keep in mind one of the values baseball attempts to promote is fairness. Even the smallest of youth athletes can rise to stardom at the Major League level when he is taught and treated fairly while he is developing his skills. Umpires must guard this fairness by enforcing the rules with common sense so everyone involved receives a fair chance when competing. The actions and behaviors of umpires - at any level - who enforce this fairness, effect the outcomes and memories that the participants and spectators have of the game itself. For many, the time and effort invested by umpires to acquire and excel in their knowledge of the rules, and to apply them fairly, goes unnoticed. However, without this effort, competition would become unfair, causing a deterioration in the fabric of the game.

Now is when you should be preparing for the 2002 season. Only through your own efforts can you rise to be a top-notch umpire.

New NBA deals worth about $700 million per year

by HOWARD FENDRICH THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

NEW YORK - The NBA's new TV packages with ABC, ESPN and AOL Time Warner will be worth a total of about $700 million per year, two industry sources told The Associated Press on Thursday.

That tops the $660 million the league pulled in annually for its TV rights under the fouryear, $2.64 billion deals with NBC and Turner Sports that expire after this season.

The new deals are close to being completed, according to

Friday's announcement came

Neither Stone nor his attorney. Behrouz Rahmati of Huntsville, Ala., could immediately be reached for comment. Stone enrolled as a student at Louisville earlier this week.

"This came after a really gutwrenching few days for Coach Smith," Ivy said. "Marvin's leaving the team after the Christmas break was very, very bad timing. Normally these things don't happen during the middle of a season.

"After the somewhat possibly confusing nature of our statements relative to our procedures and all the distractions that has caused around the program, Coach Smith felt like it was best for the program and best for Marvin that we put this to bed and release him so he can get on with his life and we can get on with ours at the University of Kentucky."

Stone never lived up to his precollege billing, averaging 5.3 points and four rebounds in about 14 minutes in nine games this season. He totaled 397 points and 314 rebounds in his career after playing in 75 games with 11 starts.

Stone became the first player dismissed in Coach Tubby Smith's five years at Kentucky on Dec. 27 - only two days before the school's nationally televised showdown with Pitino and Louisville - when he failed to return from the holiday break.

"Coach Smith informed me that he would like Marvin to be released to any institution other. than a Southeastern Conference school or a school that we had a continuing, ongoing contractual relationship with."

When Stone announced his intention to transfer to Louisville or Colorado State, Ivy originally stated that an unwritten school policy dictated he could not be released to another SEC school or a program Kentucky plays on a regular basis, such as Louisville, Indiana or Notre Dame.

Pitino and C.M. Newton, who retired as Kentucky's athletics director in 2000, however, publicly stated that they knew of no policy that prohibited Stone's transfer to Louisville.

Stone retained Rahmati to study is options. Rahmati later threatned to file a lawsuit against the

Dolan makes $700 million bid for Red Sox

by LESLIE MILLER THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

BOSTON - The group that submitted the winning bid for the Boston Red Sox is showing little sign it is worried about a late offer for the team by rival bidder Charles Dolan.

Former Orioles and Padres president Larry Lucchino, a member of John W. Henry's bidding group, said Thursday he had heard about Dolan's new bid.

"The bidding process closed three weeks ago, so we don't really have any comment," he said.

Asked if he thought the Dolan bid was too late, Henry replied: "Yeah, I do."

The comments came after Dolan, chairman of Cablevision Systems Corp., made a new bid for the team, a $700 million offer that was $40 million higher than the winning offer the team accepted three weeks ago.

The Red Sox acknowledged the offer from Dolan, but didn't say if it would affect the $660 million offer it accepted in mid-December from a group led by Henry, the current owner of the Florida Marlins.

'We received a new bid this afternoon from Mr. Dolan of $440 million for the Yawkey (Trust) interests in the Boston Red Sox and $260 million for the remaining limited partner interests," the team said in a statement Thursday.

The statement said the office of Massachusetts Attorney General Thomas Reilly office had been informed, and that, "we are in the process of letting the Red Sox limited partners know of this development and will comment further when appropriate. Dolan told the Boston Herald on Thursday: "Our plan is to bid aggressively. We are in this to win." In an interview with The Boston Globe, Dolan said he made his last-ditch offer because "the Red Sox are a wonderful franchise in a great market."

New York attorney Miles Prentice has said he bid $750 million for the team _ $50 million more than Dolan's latest bid _ but the Red Sox have insisted his financing arrangements were incomplete, which Prentice denies.

Reilly, emerging from a meeting Friday with major league baseball counsel Bob DuPuy, said he planned to talk by telephone with commissioner Bud Selig.

"It's very clear from this process there were not rules, the rules were changed hour by hour, bidder by bidder," Reilly said.

DuPuy described the discussion as "cordial" and said there was "nothing troubling" about the sale. He referred questions about Dolan's offer to the Red Sox.

Reilly has accused baseball officials of manipulating the Red Sox into accepting a bid from the Henry group for $660 million, less than Prentice's $750 million bid for the team, which owns Fenway Park and 80 percent of the New England Sports Network

DuPuy denied the accusation. He said baseball owners have scheduled "discussion and possible action" on the sale when they meet next week in Phoenix.

Reilly also met this week with Prentice and with limited partner Samuel Tamposi Jr., a New Hampshire businessman.

Reilly said he has an obligation to make sure the charities that stand to benefit from the sale receive the maximum amount because his office oversees charities and charitable trusts.

Tamposi said he tried to persuade Reilly that charities benefiting from the Red Sox sale will get more, not less, from the saleof the team to the Henry group.

McKendree's Statham wins career game No. 800

SPECIAL TO THE TIMES

LEBANON, III. ---McKendree College (III.) men's basketball coach Harry Statham joined elite company Thursday following the Bearcats' 107-72 victory at home against Harris-Stowe State College (Mo.).

The Bearcats'

longtime coach became just the fifth head coach in basketball history to win 800 games at a four-year institution. Statham, who is in his 36th season at McKendree, boosted his overall record to 800-318.

"My approach to the game is very team-oriented," said Statham. "The best thing about reaching this milestone is the number of terrific people that helped make it possible. That especially includes the players, both past and present. I take a lot of pride in the type of players we have been able to recruit. Every player that has worn the McKendree uniform over the past 36 years is a part of the success we are enjoying tonight."

Statham joins retired coaching legends Dean Smith, Adolph Rupp and Clarence "Big House" Gaines, along with current Mount St. Mary's (Md.) College head coach Jim Phelan has the only coaches to reach the 800-win mark. All five > coaches on the list coached at one school their entire careers.

The school held a post-game celebration following the win, which included game ball presentations by both the current Bearcat team and McKendree president Dr. James M. Dennis. Fans in attendance received a commemorative miniature basketball with Statham's win total on it.

The victory was McKendree's sixth straight triumph. The Bearcats have won 13 of their last 14 games. McKendree, the No. 15 team in this week's NAIA Division I men's poll, is now 17-3 overall. McKendree is ranked just behind Pikeville College.

Paintsville's J.R. VanHoose is averaging a double-double for Marshall. Going into this weekend, VanHoose, a senior, was averaging 16.7 points and 11.1 rebounds for game for former Pikeville College coach and current Herd head coach Greg White.

Tice takes helm of Minnesota team

by DAVE CAMPBELL THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

EDEN PRAIRIE, Minn. -Mike Tice took firm control of the Minnesota Vikings on Thursday, shaking up his staff amid a report that he would hire disgraced coach George O'Leary as an assistant.

In his first day as head coach. Tice dismissed a fifth assistant, challenged his starting quarterback to get better, and promised that none of his players would loaf.

And the St. Paul Pioneer Press reported on its Web site that Tice plans to make O'Leary his defensive line coach.

O'Leary, who quit five days after being hired as Notre Dame coach when he was found to have lied on his resume, declined Thursday to confirm the report in an interview with The Associated Press.

Pressed on whether he was discussing a job with Tice, O'Leary said: "I've spoken to Michael, but I have not done anything at all with Minnesota." Tice again.

"I'm going to listen to some people," O'Leary said. "Mike's one of the ones I want to talk 10."

Tice didn't mention O'Leary at a news conference to introduce him as the replacement for Dennis Green, and he wasn't available to reporters later in the day.

Tice pledged a quick return to success for the Vikings after a 5-11 season. He spoke sternly, confidently and candidly about his vision for the team in a manner rarely shown by his predecessor.

"This season was no fun for me," Tice said. "I want to have fun.'

Green was ousted last week, agreeing with owner Red McCombs on a buyout of the two years left on his contract. McCombs alluded to the perception that Green had lost control of the team as one of the reasons for the change.

He said he expected to talk to Moss was a large part of that issue. He had his least productive season, was fined several times by the league and the team, and said twice that he only plays hard when he wants to.

> Tice, whose tough but fair demeanor has drawn the respect of the Vikings in his five seasons as offensive line coach, made it clear that no one will be loafing. "I love to work hard," Tice > said. "I don't think there are many people who are going to outwork me, and I'm going to demand the same of my staff and players."

The staff will have a decidedly different look in 2002. Four assistants, including offensive coordinator Sherm Lewis and defensive coordinator Emmitt Thomas, learned Tuesday they won't be returning, and outside linebackers coach Trent Walters left for a job at Notre Dame.

Special teams coach Gary Zauner was let go Thursday. Tice offered the defensive coordinator position to defensive Star wide receiver Randy backs coach Willie Shaw, who in the entire league. What he has hasn't decided yet whether to to become is a better quarteraccept it.

> Tice couldn't discuss his choices for an offensive coordinator, because most of them are with teams in the playoffs. Whoever it is will have to get Moss more involved in the offense. He had 10 touchdowns and 1,233 yards this year _ both career lows.

"We have to increase the ratio of touches that Randy Moss has," Tice said. "That ratio has to improve. It is not good enough.'

Tice also said he'll move fullback Jim Kleinsasser to his natural tight end position and challenged quarterback Daunte Culpepper to become a better student

"The No. 1 film watcher on your team should be the quarterback," Tice said. "Daunte needs to do a better job of preparing himself so that he knows the game plan as well as the coach does. Daunte Culpepper might be the best athlete at quarterback back.

The Vikings were reeling even before the season began when Pro Bowl tackle Korey Stringer died of heatstroke in training camp. They never recovered, stumbling to their worst record since *1984 and missing the playoffs for the first time since 1995.

Cameras caught several sideline arguments involving players this season and Green was criticized for appearing to tolerate a poor attitude by Moss. Green's relationship with star receiver Cris Carter also cooled, partly because of the way Green handled Moss. Carter has strongly hinted that he will not play for Minnesota next season.

With Moss and Culpepper, Tice was confident the Vikings still had enough talent to return to the playoffs.

"You're only one or two players away, as Chicago has the sources, who spoke on condition of anonymity.

The ABC-ESPN portion of the package would be for about $400 million per season, probably for six years.

Turner's deal, which includes putting the NBA All-Star game on cable for the first time, was said to be worth nearly $300 million annually for six years.

While Turner stays on as an NBA partner - and its parent company, AOL Time Warner, will own a new cable channel jointly with the NBA as part of its package - NBC drops pro basketball after 12 years.

More games will be available on cable via ESPN, TNT and the new channel (which is expected to replace the shuttering CNN-SI), while ABC is expected to carry fewer than half the number of games NBC has been airing.

NBC offered about $1.3 billion for four years, a $450 million decrease from its expiring deal, last month, prompting the league to turn to ABC and ESPN

Former CBS Sports president Neal Pilson, a TV consultant, thinks the packages make sense for the league and the broadcasters, especially given the current economic climate.

"There's a good deal of uncertainty in the marketplace right now. This would give the broadcasters permanence with the property, while the league doesn't see a drop in its rights fee," Pilson said. "Probably, the broadcasters wanted the deals for longer term in return for keeping the annual rights fee amounts the same."

The NBA also probably figured ESPN and its highlight shows could provide plenty of extra exposure and buzz.

That's vital for a league whose regular-season ratings dropped 35 percent from 1997-98 to 2000-01. NBC says it lost more than $100 million a season in its outgoing NBA deal.

NBC split with the NFL in 1998, and with major league baseball in 2000. After its failed XFL venture, NBC's most significant remaining sports deals are with the Olympics _ for which it owns the U.S. television rights through 2008 -NASCAR, golf, tennis and horse racing's Triple Crown series gets in his face.

This, however, isn't one of them. This is the coach's responsibility. It's time for Orlando to call a one-on-one with Hawkins before comes home one night to find his teammates have packed his things and have them waiting on him at the door of Wildcat Lodge.

The sad part of this is Cliff Hawkins is a good basketball player. For 36 minutes, he doesn't look or play like a sophomore who a year ago thought the hardwood was what his seat was made of. There is vast potential there.

But that potential has his team in the cellar of the SEC East two games into the race. That potential saw him shoot unsuccessfully - on consecutive big possessions in the final minute of play Wednesday night.

It had Tayshaun Prince so flustered that he took the point guard duties upon himself with his team trailing by three, just to ensure he would actually touch the ball on the offensive end. Prince should have been down court working to get himself open. Instead, he'd seen enough of Hawkins, solo show, and took matters into his own hands.

One thing was certain - after Hawkins failed to try to get the ball to his teammates for the second straight trip on Wednesday night, you didn't have to be Miss Cleo to figure out what Prince was feeling. After Kentucky fouled to stop the clock, he flailed his arms in the air as he looked to the bench, clearly thinking, "I can't believe he's doing this again."

Too, Prince was so singleninded during his turn at the point that he missed Rashaad Carruth standing wide open in front of the bench, begging for the ball. Yes, I want the ball in Prince's hands when the money's on the table, but Carruth is as good a shooter as college basketball has to offer at this point. Dump it off and let him tie it. Still, Prince was understandably in a lather by this point. And he's not getting any help from the Robin to his Batman. Keith Bogans. If Barry Booker said one thing right Wednesday night, it was that Bogans, failure to impress scouts last spring when he declared for the draft has his all flummoxed. He, s a vital clog on this club, but right now he's just clogging it up.

still think this is a good basketball team, and all the blame can't go on Hawkins. Bogans is playing poorly, and on Wednesday at least, the team couldn't have stopped a decent little league team from scoring.

But think about this: In the loss to Duke, he got hot early in overtime and then wouldn't stop shooting. He was 1-of-5 in overtime against Mississippi State on Saturday.

And on Wednesday, he missed on consecutive trips when teammates were busy either still running the play or begging for the ball, while he was doing his Michael Jordan impersonation.

Now, Kentucky has a deep hole to dig out of. The SEC schedule is still young, but there's little room for toe-stabbing now. Whereas Florida has breathing room and could afford a setback at Alabama or Arkansas, Kentucky cannot.

Too, these losses will come back to haunt the Cats on Selection Sunday. Yes, it's a little while until March, but don't think this week won't be mentioned when the time comes. It remains to be seen if Smith will have a sit-down with Hawkins or he'll leave it to Prince to handle. But rest assured, Kentucky will not win the close ones if its All-American is left to rebound and defend when the game is on the line. Now, all of a sudden, maybe folks around the Bluegrass are starting to realize Saul Smith was more than daddy's boy. He may not have been the best point guard to wear the blue and white, but he knew whose hands the ball needed to be in when it was time to go to the pay window.

Sophomore guard Anna Bevins led Belfry (9-6) with a game-high 21 points. The Lady Pirates shot a low 39-percent from the field for the game. Belfry did manage to outscore Knott County Central 27-24 in the final period.

Sophomore Vicki Hall finished with 13 points for Belfry while teammate Jessica Lovell, a senior, added 12. Belfry Coach Mark Gannon had seven players score against a capable Knott Central defense.

The Lady Patriots continue to play like one of the top teams in the 14th Region among such programs as Perry County Central, Leshe County, June Buchanan, Breathitt County and Hazard. Knott Central has downed 15th Region foe Prestonsburg twice this season.

points in a third quarter which saw Prestonsburg outplayed by a final margin of 10-5. The Ladycats, playing without freshman standout Molly Burchett, who is sidelined with a foot injury, fought back to win the fourth quarter 20-11. The game was the first for both Prestonsburg and Johnson Central since the first significant snowfall of the new year.

Paintsville also got behind early in a game Thursday night, falling behind to Sheldon Clark 17-8 in the first quarter and trailing 29-20 at the half. Sheldon Clark, behind a 17-point performance from center Kelli Moore, went on to post a 56-45 win. Moore, a junior, has scored in double figures nearly every game the past two seasons. She often records a double-double.

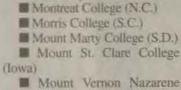

Jennifer Wellman and Nikki Copeland fired in 14 points apiece and Heather Horn chipped in 11 as the Lady Cards also needed just four scorers to gain the win.

Heather Staniford scored 15 points to lead Paintsville. Stephanie Hall had eight points for the Lady Tigers.

Hearst rises to earn another comeback award

by GREG BEACHAM THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

SANTA CLARA, Calif. Through two torturous years of surgeries and rehabilitation. Garrison Hearst never doubted his resiliency - even though not many people shared that faith.

"I could probably count them on one hand, but it didn't matter what anybody believed," Hearst said. "It was what I believed that mattered."

Hearst, the San Francisco 49ers' running back who keeps coming back, was a runaway winner of The Associated Press NFL Comeback Player of the Year award Thursday in balloting by writers and broadcasters who cover the NFL.

The sight of Hearst ducking tacklers and dodging linebackers this fall was improbably thrilling to those who followed the two-year odyssey of Hearst's return to football after he broke his left leg on his first carry of a playoff game at Atlanta in 1999.

Hearst, who received a similar award in 1995 after recovering from a serious knee injury, received 47 of the 50 votes.

His second return has been love the ebullient running back who simply wouldn't quit.

"During the game, they really don't say much - not positive, anyway," Hearst said with a grin. "But after the games, I've had a lot of people come up to me and say, "It's good to see you back," "

Hearst went down in the prime of his career - fresh off a 1,570-yard season and his first Pro Bowl selection - in front of family and friends in his hometown. After an operation to help the injury heal, Hearst developed a circulatory problem that threatened his ability to walk.

Avascular necrosis prevented proper blood flow from reaching Hearst's ankle, and it killed part of the bones in his foot. That led to risky bone-plug surgery in July 1999 and again in March 2000 to stimulate circulation.

He had arthroscopic surgery early in 2001, then continued the thousands of hours of rehabilitation - many while holding a football as a reminder of the game he loved.

Physical rehab was nothing new for Hearst, who won the Victor Award _ the predecessor the NFL's feel-good story of the to the Comeback Player of the years ago.

Hearst returned to full practices last summer at training camp. When he looked good in workouts, the 49ers cautiously eased him back into preseason games, where he showed almost all of the magic he had before the injury.

Coach Steve Mariucci admitted he was shocked.

"It's the best story of the year, and the best story around here for a while," he said.

The 49ers desperately needed a running back this season after Charlie Garner left as a free agent, but Hearst's comeback even caught them by surprise.

Near the start of the regular season, San Francisco asked Hearst to restructure his contract to fit it under the salary cap. The Niners even considered cutting him before Mariucci affirmed his commitment to Hearst.

"I don't need to tell you how important he is to this football team, and not just because he rushes for a lot of yards and scores a lot of touchdowns," Mariucci said.

Hearst rushed for 1,206 yards this season, 10th in the NFL, with four 100-yard games and year. Even the 49ers' opponents Year award - with Arizona six four touchdowns as part of a formidable rushing tandem with rookie Kevan Barlow. Hearst also caught 41 passes, filling the multiple roles demanded of a running back in the West Coast offense.

With his strength and confidence seemingly growing as the season progressed, Hearst capped the season with a Pro Bowl berth and a return to the playoffs. San Francisco will face Green Bay on Sunday.

HONORS

"When I got hurt in the playoffs, my goal was always to come back and play again in the postseason," Hearst said. "Now that I've reached it, I just want to help this team get as far as it can go.

"The last time I played for this team, it was a playoff team. Now, we're a playoff team still. I came back because I wanted to be a part of the success of the San Francisco 49ers. This season, I've been able to do it again.

"There was never a doubt in my mind that I'd come back."

Hearst was the second 49ers player to win in the four-year history of the award. Bryant Young took the honors in 1999. Three other players received one vote each: Jacksonville wide receiver Jimmy Smith, Pittsburgh quarterback Kordell Stewart and Tennessee wide receiver Kevin Dyson.

Three Union football players earn All-American honors from magazine

TIMES STAFF REPORT

BARBOURVILLE - Three members of the Union College football squad have recently been named to the NAIA All-American Team as honorable mentions by Don Hansen's Weekly Football National Gazette.

"I think this is great and welldeserved," said Union football coach Tommy Reid. "All three worked hard and deserve the accomplishment

"We look for bigger and better things out of all three of them."

Samuel, who hails from Miami, Fla., set a school record for most receptions in a season with 58, besting the previous mark by three. He broke the mark despite playing in just nine games. Samuel amassed 745 yards receiving and caught six touchdown passes.

In addition, Samuel proved valuable on special teams as he returned 21 punts for 454 yards, an average of 21.6 yards per return. Also, he returned four punts for 103 yards and a touchdown. On October 14, he earned downs. Elam also ran for 57 and Mid-South NAIA Conference Special Teams Player of the Week honors after returning a punt 80 yards for a score and three kickoffs for 69 yards.

Samuel was also tabbed as an All-Conference First Team selection.

"Ernie is one of our hardest workers. He wasn't able to play his first year here, but he took it all in stride, worked hard and had a great season for us this year," Reid said.

Elam didn't begin the season as the Bulldogs' starting quarterback. However, when Ahmad Young went down with a season-ending injury in the second game of the season, the Barbourville native stepped up and led the charge. An All-Conference honorable mention, he was twice named the NAIA Offensive Player of the Week by the Football Gazette and was the Mid-South Conference Offensive Player of the Week once.

Elam set the school records for most completions and pass attempts in a game when he completed 34 of 63 passes for a career-high 343 yards in a 31-19 loss to Belhaven (Miss.) College. On the year, he connected on 136 of 323 passes for 1,562 yards and eight touchyards and four more scores.

"We came in off the bench and took control of the team like it was his team." Reid commented. "We're proud of him for everything he's done. Bart is a true leader for us."

Adams led the team defensively. After playing cornerback his first season with Union, he moved over to safety in 2001 and excelled. The Auburndale, Fla., native was the team's leading tackler with 51 (33 solos, 18 assists) and had seven tackles for a loss for 37 yards. In addition, he intercepted three passes, returning them for 110 yards, and broke up five passes as well as forcing two fumbles.

An All-Conference Second Team pick, Adams is making his second consecutive appearance as a member of the Football Gazette's All-American Team.

"Tally made a good transition, moving from corner to safety this year. He adjusted real well with that," Reid said. "He made some big plays for us at crucial times."

The Bulldogs ended the 2001 season with a 2-7 overall record and a 2-4 Mid-South Conference mark. Union will open the 2002 campaign on Sept. 7 when it will play host to NCAA Division II Concord (W.Va.) College.

Earnhardt law limiting photo access is challenged

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

AUTO RACING

FORT LAUDERDALE, Fla. - A state law restricting access to autopsy photos is hurting medical examiners and could hinder criminal investigations, according to affidavits filed in a challenge to the law.

The law was passed last year at the urging of the widow of Dale Earnhardt, who died in a crash on the final lap of February's Daytona 500. It makes it a felony punishable by five years in prison and a $5,000 fine to view or copy autopsy photos without a court order.

The law is being challenged in Broward County by the Orlando Sentinel; its sister paper in Fort Lauderdale, the South Florida Sun-Sentinel; four Florida newspapers owned by The New York Times Co. - The Gainesville Sun, The Ledger in Lakeland, The Sarasota Herald-Tribune, The Star-Banner in Ocala - and The Tampa Tribune and its affiliate, WFLA-TV.

The case has been set for arguments Feb. 5 before Broward Circuit Judge Leroy Moe.

U of L's Sharp earns spot on Olympic bobsled team

TIMES STAFF REPORT

LOUISVILLE - University of Louisville assistant men's track coach Doug Sharp can now be called an Olympian. The sixth-year coach recently qualified as a member of the U.S. four-man bobsled team that will compete at the 2002 Winter Olympic Games in Salt Lake City, Utah.

This is a fulfillment of a lifelong dream," says Sharp, who will serve as a pusher for the USA II sled. "I've worked my entire life toward making this happen. Bobsledding has been a very good fit for me, and I couldn't be happier with how this has all worked out."

Sharp will be joined by another athlete with Kentucky ties, former Morehead State football player Brian Shimer (driver) who will be competing in his fifth Olympics.

In his fourth year as a member of the U.S. National Bobsled team, Sharp's four-man crew won the 1999 U.S. National Championships. He also gained a third-place finish in the 2000 Brakeman Push Championships.

A graduate of Purdue University and a doctor of chiropractic, Sharp is a former Big-Ten Champion and NCAA qualifier in the pole vault. Holding a personal-best of 18-0.5, Sharp was ranked among the top-35 in the World in 1996 and came just short of qualifying for the U.S. Olympic Trials when a hamstring injury curtailed his training in that same year. Ironically that injury is what introduced him to bobsledding, as a member of the U.S. Bobsled team led his rehab program.

"I have a lot of people to thank for helping me realize this dream," said Sharp. "I'm excited and anxious about what could happen at the Olympics, especially with it being right here in our country.*

The bobsled competition will take place February 22-23 at Utah Olympic Park.

fering with criminal and civil cases and medical education.

Stephen J. Nelson, chief medical examiner in Polk, Hardee and Highlands counties and chairman of the Florida Medical Examiners Commission, said the law has had "an extremely detrimental effect" on state medical examiners, effectively prohibiting them from giving medical education lectures at national meetings.

"The result is not only to limit the ability of Florida medical examiners to advance professionally, but to limit the development of medical science as a whole," Nelson said.

Sentinel lawyers also cited a report saying that autopsy photos were invaluable in disproving claims that death row inmate Frank Valdes' fatal injuries were caused by him throwing himself off a bunk bed. With photos showing boot prints embedded on Valdes' body, several prison guards came forward to say guards had beaten him. Four of them are on trial.

State Solicitor General Tom Warner said the law protects the right of family members to privacy, and he called the medical examiners' complaints "a bunch of baloney."

"It is not relevant whether this law is burdensome on medical examiners," Warner said. "They are employees of the counties, and if the Legislature deems it reasonable to protect the privacy of Florida families, it is not up to them to challenge or complain about it."

The Legislature passed the law less than a month after Earnhardt was killed after his car struck the wall. The force of the collision threw his head forward while his body was restrained by seat belts, snapping the base of his skull.

The Sentinel had sought a review of his autopsy photos by a safety expert to determine whether better equipment could have prevented the death. NASCAR has since mandated that its drivers use head-andneck restraints that other motor sports have long required.

Ford to close five plants in restructuring

JUSINESS

by ED GARSTEN ASSOCIATED PRESS

DEARBORN, Mich. - Ford Motor Co. said Friday it would shed 35,000 jobs, close five plants and eliminate four vehicles in a restructuring that the CEO called "painful but necessary."

"We strayed from what got us to the top of the mountain, and it cost us greatJr. said Friday from headquarters of the world's second largest automaker.

The job cuts, including 22,000 in North America, amount to about 10 percent of Ford's overall work force.

The plants to be closed are in Edison, N.J. and Oakville, Ontario by 2004; Brook Park, Ohio, near Cleveland in either 2003 or 2004;

ly," chief executive William Clay Ford Hazelwood, Mo., near St. Louis by an undetermined date; and Vulcan Forge in Dearborn, Mich., as soon as possible.

"We were really surprised," Hazelwood Mayor T.R. Carr said, "We were not anticipating this kind of move by Ford." He estimated the economic impact on the St. Louis area will be up to $400 million per year.

Vehicles to be dropped are the Ford

Escort, Mercury Cougar, Mercury Villager and Lincoln Continental.

Ford said it was taking a $4.1 billion one-time charge against earnings to pay for its plan.

The move also includes suspending bonuses for company managers and eliminating 401(k) matching contributions for employees.

Anne Booker, the southeast regional public affairs manager, said the effect of the restructuring for the Louisville Assembly Plant would not be as severe as at other plants, but that changes will be made at Louisville.

Booker said plant officials and union representatives are discussing schedule changes or reducing the line speed.

What is a Medicare deductible?

A deductible is the amount you must pay Leach year before Medicare begins paying its portion of your medical bill. There are deductibles for both the Part A (Hospital Insurance) and Part B (doctor and other outpatient services) portions of Medicare. The Medicare Part A deductible for 2002 is $812 per benefit period. The Medicare Part B deductible for 2002 is $100.

I have been on Medicare for quite some time and do not recall paying an annual deductible. Is the Medicare Part B deductible something new?

Airline industry offers clues into fate of economy

> by BRAD FOSS ASSOCIATED PRESS

NEW YORK -Travel spending is often first to be cut from a family or corporate budget when the economy is hobbled, and the last to be restored when business is on the mend.

As a result, economists have watched for rebounds in the airline industry as one way to detect when a fledgling economic turnaround firmly takes root. That is still the case today. although the signs have become murkier in the wake of the Sept. 11 terrorist attacks, which damaged travel more than any other industry and left a legacy of fear that has kept many people out of the skies and close to home.

Most major carriers have a long way to go before they return to profitability. But the fact that passenger demand appears to be steadily improving since the dramatic dropoff immediately after the attacks is an indication that Americans might be feeling comfortable again

No. The Medicare Part B program has had an annual deductible since 1966. The current amount ($100) has not changed since 1991. It is possible that your supplement insurance or a state assistance program like Qualified Medicare Beneficiary pays all or part of your Medicare deductibles.

How is the Medicare Part B deductible applied and how will I know my deductible has been met?

The Part B deductible is applied as your claims Lare processed by Medicare, not the actual date you receive the service. As the first claims of the year come into Medicare (whether it be January, July, or December), the amounts that Medicare approves are applied to your $100 deductible. Once you have $100 in approved services, Medicare Part B will begin to make payment. There are certain services that are not applied toward your deductible. The Medicare Summary Notice that is sent to you after Medicare processes your claim will show any amounts applied to your deductible.

Can my doctor or other providers ask me to pay a portion of my deductible at the time I receive the service?

Yes. However, a provider cannot ask you to pay more than the amount Medicare approves for the service.

Uninsured Kentucky women are currently eligible for free screenings to detect breast and cervical cancer. But they are not guaranteed the coverage they need to fight the illness.

Market shows investors eager, but cautious

by LISA SINGHANIA ASSOCIATED PRESS

NEW YORK - The stock market's performance so far this year might seem a little confusing - a big rally that quickly ran out of gas even as the economic signals looked better.

The stop-and-start trading actually might be a sign of health on Wall Street --- investors, while they're anxious to buy, are being careful not to send the market ahead of itself, especially with fourth-quarter earnings reports expected during the next few weeks.

Stocks have rallied over the past month to levels not seen since August, and investors want to be sure the advance accurately reflects the direction of business and the economy, and that the gains are not premature.

"People want to be sprinting and the markets want to be moving ahead at a rapid clip, but we're still waiting for earnings," said Tim Leach, chief investment officer for Wells Fargo's Private Client Services. "There have to be some tangible signs of a turnaround in order for the outlook the market's expecting to be brought to fruition, which is a recovery around midvear."

That said, fourth-quarter earnings are expected to be very weak. Although the number of companies revising their earnings estimates upward is increasing, Thomson Financial/First Call still predicts a 22 percent drop in fourth-quarter earnings compared with year-ago levels.

In fact, earnings aren't expected to show improvement from 2001 until the third quarter of this year, when a modest 8 percent increase is projected.

Still, the tone of the earnings reports should provide the market with important clues about whether a recovery will indeed occur by the second half - and how robust it will Investors "don't want to see earnings get worse or hear about traveling for work and play.

Combined with the expectation that corporate losses will stabilize and consumer confidence will continue to hold up, market gurus consider this to be important evidence of a recovering, if anemic, economy.

"Things have definitely begun to improve," said Sherry Cooper, global economic strategist for Harris Bank of Chicago. "What we see is that the big decline in air travel has leveled off.'

Airline executives said planes were 90 percent full during peak hours of the latest holiday travel period and preliminary results show December might be the third month in a row for which traffic improved on a month-tomonth basis.

Industrywide carrying capacity remains down about 16 percent and multimillion dollar losses are accruing daily, but the passenger demand trend is moving in the right direction, Cooper added.

"In a sense, it can be seen as a leading economic indicator because it is discretionary spending," she said.

In fact, airlines had been reporting quarterly losses long before Sept. 11 _ and several months before March of last year, when the recession officially started _ because of curtailed spending by business travelers. Economists say now this was a strong sign that the economy was grinding to a halt.

Transportation accounts for about 1 percent of gross domestic product yet the movement of people and products across the nation has a vigorous "multiplier effect" on the economy:

Fledgling furniture factory closes in Pike County

The Associated Press

PIKEVILLE — The machinery that whirred in L.J. Miller furniture factory now sits silent behind shackled doors, and about 60 eastern Kentuckians are out of work.

Jim Cover, president of the company that specialized in making office furnishings, said the shut down was caused in part by an unskilled work force that couldn't meet production demands.

The plant closed on Monday, after less than a year in operation.

"It is my hope that all parties involved in this project will understand and appreciate that Stacee, my wife and business partner, and I have done everything financially, physically and personally possible to make this project succeed," Cover said in a statement to The Appalachian News-Express in Pikeville. "Undoubtedly, the fallout and financial ramifications to our closing will be devastating."

Cover also said a lack of people skilled in woodworking and managing a woodworking operation took its toll on the company's finances and timetables, especially when Mayo Technical College didn't follow through on a commitment to provide training for employees before the factory opened.

"During the eight months of production, virtually all of our working capital was spent in training a complete workforce." he said. "Although we produced several thousand desks during that time, the company as a whole could not meet its daily production quotas."

George Edwards, president of Prestonsburg Community College, said the training program didn't materialize because it was unclear whether Cover was going to relocate his factory from Montana. He eventually opened the factory at the Mossy Bottom Industrial Park outside Pikeville.

Edwards said Cover, at the time, "couldn't make his mind up on whether they were coming here or not," and the school had to move forward with plans of its own for the new technical school building in the Pikeville Riverfill, Edwards said.

Employees didn't see the shut down coming, said Dave Wolford, a department supervisor at the plant for the past year. Wolford said employees were making about 50 desks a day.

We were meeting all production goals, but they said it was where we didn't meet them before," he said. "We didn't really have a chance to get going."

The newspaper said Cover had not discussed the factory's troubles with Pike County Judge-Executive Karen Gibson or Leon Huffman, chairman of the county's industrial development authority, both of which played roles in luring the factory to Pikeville.

Huffman said he spent much of this week trying to find out the facts about

The information could help investors decide how much they're willing to pay for stocks. The technology sector has become especially expensive in recent weeks on the expectation it will be among the first and biggest beneficiaries of a recovery.

Sun Microsystems, for example, is trading at a price that is 169 times its actual earnings. A more typical multiple would be 15 to 25 times earnings.

"The valuations we have now seem to be calling for a relatively rapid recovery and if that gets called into question, it might cause people to take profits," said Richard A. Dickson, technical analysts at Hilliard Lyons.

He said some of the pullback by stocks this past week was likely attributable to concerns that the market has gone too high, too fast. Investors took profits on their gains of the last month rather than risk losing them should the market lose momentum.

the market tries to look ahead by about six months, the relatively high stock prices will be justified once the turnaround begins. Others are more cautious, and worry that Wall Street is too optimistic. They note that many investors bought heavily in early 2001 on the expectation that a recovery was under way, only to watch the rally fizzle.

Also, although there is growing confidence that a turnaround will occur this year, no one knows how vigorous it will be. Any growth is likely to be subdued when compared with the bull market of 1999 and early 2000.

It was a difficult week across the market.

The Dow Jones industrial average fell 272.21, or 2.7 percent, to 9,987.53, after losing 80.33 on Friday. The loss meant the index gave up the gains from its 238point rally the first three sessions of 2002.

The Nasdaq composite index dropped 24.78 Friday to 2.022.46, for a weekly loss of 36.92, or 1.8 percent. The loss, while significant, left intact most of the index's new year rally of 108.98.

The Standard & Poor's 500 index also fell for the week, tumbling 26.91, or 2.3 percent, to 1,145.60. The index dropped 10.95 Friday, and gave back its new year gains of 24.43.

The Russell 2000 index slid 9.36 or 1.9 percent to 489,94, after losing 5.37 Friday.

Consumers increase borrowing by record amount in November

by JEANNINE AVERSA ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON Americans increased their borrowing in November by the largest amount on record. A big rise in auto loans spurred by zero-interest rate financing offers led the way.

Consumer credit soared by a seasonally adjusted $19.8 billion in November, or a 14.6 percent annual rate, the Federal Reserve reported Tuesday.

The dollar increase was the biggest since the Fed began record-keeping in January 1943 and the percentage increase was the largest since November 1995.

Economists were expecting consumer borrowing to rise, but by a lot less - around $3 billion to $4 billion during the month.

"It's apparent consumers haven't been too concerned with softer economic conditions and a weak labor market," economist Richard said Yamarone of Argus Research Corp. "Without the burden of high energy prices and lofty mortgage rates, consumers felt comfortable to borrow briskly."

Demand for nonrevolving credit, including new cars and vacations, soared by $14.4 billion, or at an annual rate of 18.3 percent in November. That came on top of a $14,7 billion advance or a 19 percent rate of increase the month before.

Americans used their credit cards much more freely in November than during the previous month.

Demand for revolving credit, such as that used for credit cards, rose by $5.4 billion, or at an annual rate of 9.4 percent in November. That compared with a drop of $3.5 billion and a rate of decline of 6.1 percent in October.

BBB unveils new website

LEXINGTON - Consumers and businesses alike will find it even easier to check out companies and charities, file complaints, and more through the Better Business Bureau of Central & Eastern Kentucky's new and improved website.

The home page has a new look, including a map of Kentucky with the counties in the local chapter's 64-county service area shaded in, letting consumers know if their hometown is served.

The site also sports some new features, including:

Internet links/phone numbers to state agencies and credit reporting bureaus (the "Consumer/Customer Help" page).

The BBB's monthly member newsletter, scam alerts and news releases.

Companies (members and non-members) may now register/update their information with the BBB online, or request information on becoming a BBB member.

"Compliment A Business" — for those who wish to give "kudos" to a company with whom they had an excellent experience.

Companies may now respond to customer disputes through the website, instead of mailing or faxing it to the BBB, speeding up the process.

The job cuts include 12,000 manufacturing jobs and 3,500 previously announced early retirements for white collar workers.

Ford employs about 345,000 people worldwide. It has 170,000 employees in North America and operates 47 plants there.

The Pike County Fiscal Court, former Pike Judge-Executive Donna Damron and Gov. Paul Patton offered a mix of state funding and tax credit incentives to bring the factory to eastern Kentucky.

The funding included $2.7 million in Local Government Economic Development money from coal severance tax revenues for construction of a sprawling building at Mossy Bottom to house the plant. Additional funding also was secured through Community Development Block Grant Funds to purchase equipment and supplies.

Pike County maintained ownership of the building, with the company agreeing to pay separate monthly lease payments for the building and the equipment.

Ford said he would accept no salary.

The automaker was hit hard by a self-inflicted financial wound in 2001 when it launched a $3 billion program to replace 13 million Firestone tires that were not recalled in the original recall that began in August 2000. The move resulted in the severing of Firestone's almost century-old relationship with Ford.

In July, much of Ford's top management was shaken up, and Nick Scheele, the man known for turning around Ford's European operations, took over North American operations.

The next month Ford announced it hoped to cut 4,000 to 5,000 salaried positions by offering early retirement and buyout packages.

By October, president and CEO Jacques Nasser was forced to resign and Ford replaced him as CEO. Scheele was elevated to chief operating officer.

Both Scheele and Ford have said the future for Ford is based on "getting back to basics," in product development and improvements in quality and productivity.

Audit of IRS shows over 2,300 missing agency computers over past 3 years .

by CURT ANDERSON ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON - The Internal Revenue Service, which holds taxpayers strictly liable for accurate tax returns, is working to account for more than 2,300 computers that have gone missing over the past three years.

A recent Treasury Department audit was unable to determine whether the laptops and other small computers were lost, stolen or simply not properly documented. The IRS is reasonably sure that none contained sensitive taxpayer data or could provide a way for hackers to break into the tax agency's secure main computers.

IRS officials said Tuesday they are locating the computers, most of which are older than three years and would normally be replaced anyway. Toni Zimmerman, IRS chief of information technology services, said some were probably stolen or lost but that most were misplaced through bookkeeping errors.

"Over the course of events, they were coded wrong in the system," Zimmerman said.

Still, a senior senator suggested that Congress require concrete improvements before approving more money for a long-term IRS computer systems upgrade.

"An agency that requires taxpayers to show every receipt can't find 2,300 computers," said Sen. Charles Grassley of Iowa, ranking Republican on the Senate Finance Committee. "The IRS wouldn't accept from a taxpayer the nonanswer it has given."

In a letter dated Monday, Grassley asked Mitch

Daniels, head of the White House Office of Management and Budget, to consider placing a hold on the IRS budget until the situation gets better. The IRS budget for fiscal 2002 is $9.5 billion, and Congress has approved over $391 million through 2004 for the computer modernization project.

The IRS got a positive opinion on its inventory controls last year from the congressional General Accounting Office and is determined to get better yet, Zimmerman said.

"We want to show that we are fiscally responsible and taxpayers should feel confident with our processes," she said.

The missing computers were uncovered by a Treasury inspector general during an audit late last year that also found six unaccounted-for IRS firearms and hundreds of lost investigative items such as badges and communications gear.

All told, auditors could not account for 2,332 laptops, microcomputers and microservers covering the period between October 1998 and Sept. 30, 2001. The IRS had 163,000 computers total as of September.

IRS officials said they are working on a new system allowing the agency to discern between computers that are lost, stolen or damaged and improve its ability to investigate incidents of missing property.

Of the six missing guns, one was lost in an ocean boating accident and five were stolen from vehicles. Fifty communications devices, 40 identification badges and 15 pieces of electronic surveillance gear were also reported missing, which auditors said 'could compromise the public's safety or ongoing investigations.'

Young wins science competition

MOREHEAD - Christopher E. Young of Sidney, a Morehead State University junior from Pike County, has earned a first place award in research competition held by the Kentucky Academy of Science.

In the undergraduate research competition, Young won top honors in the physics and astronomy section for work he completed under the guidance of Dr. Benjamin K. Malphrus, MSU professor of space science. The competition was held at Middle Tennessee State University during the joint meeting of the Kentucky Academy of Science and the Tennessee Academy of Science in November.

In a presentation, titled "The Morehead Radio Telescope: Operator Program Version 7.0," he discussed the computer software used to control the radio telescope and collect data, along with the development of software.

MSU is a research instrument designed for investigations in observational astrophysics and an active laboratory for physics, engineering and computer science undergraduate students and faculty members.

A computer information systems major, Young is completing his second year as a programmer in MSU's Astrophysical Laboratory. His work includes developing software radio telescope and systems administration. He is currently working on a software based velocity spectrometer, now in the testing stage, and automating the telescope control by a computer. This will allow greater research capabilities with the Morehead Radio Telescope.

During last year's conference, he also made a presentation at the Kentucky Academy of Science meeting about an experiment with the radio telescope. Young is the son of MSU alumni Gary Young, who is a member of the University's College of Business Advisory Board, and Vickie Young. He is a 1999 graduate of Belfry High School.

UK lands federal funding to improve state's health education

by STEVE BAILEY ASSOCIATED PRESS

FRANKFORT - An $800,000 grant from the U.S. Department of Agriculture will help fund a University of Kentucky program to increase the scope and impact of public health education in Kentucky.

The program, called Health Education through Extension Leadership (HEEL), will be a collaboration between the College of Medicine's Kentucky School of Public Health and the College of Agriculture's Cooperative Extension Service, which provides staff in all 120 Kentucky

Most extension offices throughout

Kentucky already offer education and information on many subjects in the areas of agriculture and health services.

The new program should enhance extension agents' abilities to deliver new health and wellness information statewide, University of Kentucky President Lee Todd said.

"We want to provide a link that's been missing between the research and academics of the university and the health issues of the people of the commonwealth," Todd said at a news conference Friday.

"It does no good to do research in the field of health and wellness just for publication sake. That information has to get to the people, and the extension agents we already have in place are some of the best ambassadors this university has to make that information available."

Statistics have long shown Kentucky has abnormally high incidences of death related to cancers, heart disease, diabetes and respiratory disease.

The aim of the new program will be to spread information about new advances in the prevention and treatment of these illnesses in order for the state's mortality numbers, which are much higher than the national averages, to go down.

We're all about the promotion of healthy lifestyles," said Betty Overly, family consumer science agent for the Bourbon County Extension Office.

"This new facility reflects the university's commitment to promote human and economic development through the extension and application of knowledge and to continue to develdistinguished researchers," OD President Lee Todd said. "Research in this facility will greatly contribute to important scientific advances as well as to regional economic development."

The building will be located on South Limestone Street across from the Kentucky Clinic, a location opposed by many who may end up working at the site.

Some faculty members have complained that the location will not make it easy for researchers to collaborate effectively with those in other departments.

"You don't need to pack a lunch to get there, but you're not going to go there unless you have to," said Lou Hersh, chairman of the school's biochemistry department.

I love to read a good book. I sit down, open its doorshaped cover and let my mind step into the new world that I've chosen to explore. It's a good habit to make time to step through those doors as often as we can, especially with our kids. Here is a fun, active way to enhance your child's enjoyment of reading and storytelling.

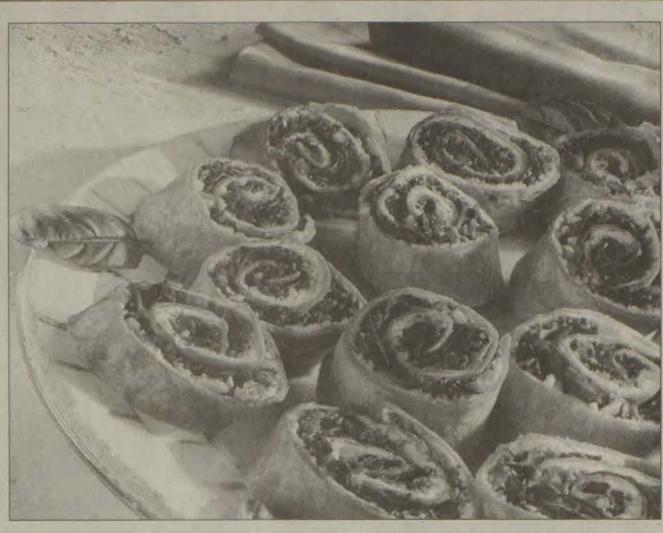

After reading a favorite story, create the characters from the book by drawing animal or people shapes the size of paper dolls on cardboard. Next, cut them out. Then dress the characters using a crayons or markers, or glue on pictures you've cut out of magazines and catalogs. Finally, poke the base of each character into a small ball of elay so that they stand upright.

After that, make a stage for storytelling by turning a decorated shoebox upside down. Create changeable scenery for the stage by cutting a large circle from cardboard with a diameter equal to the length of your box. Divide the circle in half with a line and have your child draw different background settings from the story on each section. For example, IF YOUR STORY IS COOLDIOCKS and the Three Bears," draw a woodland scene on one section. Poke a hole in the center of the scenery circle with a brad fastener, then poke it into the middle of the long side of the box where the bottom of the box meets the side. Fasten it in place. When it's time to tell a stoy ry, place the box at the end of a table with the circle hanging over the edge. Set the story characters near the box, spin the scenery circle, and where it lands is where your story begins! Create the tale with new adventures. When your characters are ready to move on, spin again, and you'll discover that the number of possible stories to tell are endless. 00000

Make-ahead munchies for football fans

Are you stuck with feeding football fanatics during the Combine reserve marinade and onion in skillet over NFL playoffs? If you're a fan yourself, you don't want to be in the kitchen at the crucial moments. So, plan on supplying munchies that can be made a day ahead, like ones below

The Caprunata Swirls have an unusual ingredient - dried plums (aka prunes). Their pleasant, tangy-sweet, unique flavor and texture blend beautifully with a salty cheese such as feta or Gorgonzola. Cream cheese adds a smooth mouth-feel.

And, you'll want to bake several batches of the French Onion Bread Stix because they'll disappear fast. They're

Dear Diane...

PUFF GRAND-DADDY

DEAR DIANE:

I smoke three packs of non-filtered cigarettes a day. I'm 57 years old, and I've been smoking since I was a teen.

This year, I've made a resolution to quit. Why? Because my beautiful daughter is expecting my first grandchild, and I want to be around long enough to see him (or her!) grow

The problem is, I've been smoking for so long I don't know if I'll be able to quit - and stay smokeless.

For the sake of my soon-to-be-born grandchild, I desperately want to kick the habit. I can't afford to fail.

What can I do?

- PUFF GRAND-DADDY

DEAR PUFF:

The first thing you need to do is see your doctor. After smoking so much for so long, you definitely need to get the advice of a physician.

Let your doctor put you on a program that will ensure your long-term success - and health.

You may also want to join a support group for people like yourself who are trying to quit smoking. You might feel alone now, but I guarantee that you will get nothing but support and encouragement from a group - not to mention from your daughter.

Congratulations on your decision. You are giving your grandchild the greatest gift possible - your presence in his or her life.

Restless legs drive sleep away

DEAR DR. DONOHUE:

Could you please describe restless legs syndrome? I get it at night. What causes it, and what is the cure? What are the symptoms? - D.A.

ANSWER:

People cursed with restless legs syndrome describe a tingling or crawling sensation in their legs, most often when they lie down to sleep. For some, the disruptive feeling arises during the day when they sit. Along with the unpleasant sensation is an irresistible urge to get up and walk to quell the sleep-robbing feeling. Many people suffer, in addition, so-called periodic limb movements of sleep. Their legs twitch or jerk often with such force that they waken the affected person. To Your For a few, thyroid problems, Good kidney disease, Health iron deficiency or nerve malfunction brings on restless legs syndrome. For most, by Paul G. Donohue, M.D. however, no underlying illness can be found. The syndrome just happens.

During the course of the day, I assume many different roles: Laurie Laundress, Clara Cook, Ella Entertainer, Betty Book-Reader, even Nellie Nag. On one particularly trying morning, I seemed to be Polly Put-It-Away more than usual. After depositing my son's pajamas in his drawer one too many days in a row, I turned to him and said, "You need to put your own pajamas away. I'm not your slave!

"What's a slave?" he asked. "A slave," I explained, "is someone who has to work but doesn't get paid for it." This simplistic answer seemed to satisfy his curiosity while summing up my own feelings.

The rest of the morning I worked like a slave -- or at least I felt like one. I cleared off the breakfast table and grumbled. I loaded the dishwasher, wiped the counters and swept the floor. Even while dressing my daughter and changing her diaper I remained mopey. I think the only thing I took pleasure in that morning was my shower. And that was interrupted halfway through by both kids pounding on the bathroom door. They were thirsty.

After putting my daughter down for her afternoon nap and quietly slipping out of her room, I turned around. There in the hall was my son, holding a handful of coins, pennies mostly, that he'd collected from his grandparents. "Here," he said, giving them to me. "Now you're not a slave.

I thought about it for a minute and decided he was right. For a total of 13 cents, he bought my freedom.

Reviewing the morning's activities, I realized that my feelings of self-pity had affected more than just my attitude. By considering myself a slave, I had unwittingly cast my children as the loathsome taskmakers. How much of my resentment for my workload had been carried over to them? Not much, I hope.

So now that I'm emancipated, how do I go about my day? The reality is that I still have all of the same jobs to do. How do I keep from feeling like a slave?

For starters, I've begun to think of myself as a volunteer. Together with my husband, I made a conscious decision to have a family. You could say that I volunteered to be a mother. On days when motherhood is a bit more than I bargained for, I find it helpful to remind myself that I chose this lifestyle.

Another way to feel liberated hinges upon service. Who has the time to ladle soup at the local soup kitchen? We all do. Only we have to stop thinking of the soup kitchen in strictly traditional terms. Why not think of it as our own homes? The very things that can make us feel like a slave - doing laundry, cleaning toilets, picking up toys - when viewed from another perspective, can be acts of service.

Of course now that I'm beginning to get the hang of home-based volunteerism, my son has other ideas for me. Just the other night as I was sorting the last pair of socks, he approached, more coins in hand. "Take these," he urged. Once I was holding them he said, "Now come with me. I need help picking up my room."

The Best Freezer Cookbook & The Clueless Baker

The holidays are over, the guests have gone home, and you're alone with ... leftovers. Can't stand another meal of ham sandwiches and stale Christmas cookies? Two new cookbooks are here to help.

Resurrect that pork roast in a spicy "Pork and Chickpea Casserole" - and make extra to save for those days when you need a break from the kitchen. "The Best Freezer Cookbook," edited by Jan Main, includes tips on the best ways to freeze, store and reheat each dish, as well as hints and timelines for storing fresh vegetables, meats and doughs to resurrect when you do feel like cooking again.

It even lets you know what doesn't freeze so well - so you'd better enjoy Grandma's custard pie while you can. And in addition to weekday favorites, there are plenty of ideas in here for make-ahead party menus.

Stuck with half a cheese trav from that potluck at the office? Shred 'em up (watch those knuckles) and try "Ridiculously Easy Cheese Bread" from Evelyn Raab's "The Clueless Baker." A gently witty primer for those who don't know sweet rolls from sweetbreads, each recipe includes easy-to-understand instructions, explanation of the more curious ingredients and handy troubleshooting guides.

Raab's detailed sidebars help demystify more advanced techniques like kneading dough, melting chocolate and that old boogeyman, the homemade pie crust. And with recipes ranging the world over, you'll have mastered even baklava and focaccia in no time

See, that was easy. Now, what's for dessert? How about some of "The Clueless Baker's" Chocolate Damnation Cookies? So what if they're not made from

Sleepless in Sacramento

DEAR SAM & DAVE:

My hours at work have been cut recently, so I've had to take a roommate to make ends meet. A friend of mine suggested "Shelly." Shelly is a wonderful person and we get along great. However, she has a bird - a parrot named "Mr. Jinx." Mr. Jinx drives me crazy. He caws constantly. And if Shelly lets him out of his cage, he gets into EVERYTHING! Also, at night I'll hear Mr. Jinx smack something in his cage, but I think it's a burglar and it freaks me out. What can do about this? I really need Shelly's income right now, and good roommates are hard to find.

- SLEEPLESS IN SACRAMENTO

DAVE SAYS:

actually. But you're right when ing kicking Shelly out and lookyou say they get into everything. They are much like precocious 4-year-old children. Instead of freaking out, understand that you'll need to parrot-proof your apartment (putting things you don't want pecked in another room, or placing them in cupboards, closets, etc.).

After you've parrot-proofed your apartment, get with Shelly and arrange for you to have some bonding time with Mr. Jinx. The more time you spend with Mr. Jinx, the better your relationship with him will be, because he will begin to think of you as a member of his flock. Also, with time, you'll get used to the nocturnal sounds coming from his cage.

Living with an animal takes patience and time. I think it is Parrots are really cool pets, too early for you to be consider- ly, put his cage in Shelly's room

SAM SAYS:

You're right; good roommates are very hard to find. Don't let Shelly's annoying pet drive you to kick her out -there's no telling what kind of luck you'll have if you try to find another roomie.

What you need to do is let Shelly know exactly what's bothering you about Mr. Jinx, and then the two of you can come up with ways to deal with the problem. I think it would be a good idea to let the parrot out of his cage only in Shelly's room - there's no need for you to have to parrot-proof your apartment (which may not be entirely possible, anyway). Bizarre constructions on a monumental scale

Have you ever wanted to get out and create something monumental? If so, you aren't alone - far from it, in fact. Across the country, in order to realize their grandiose dreams, people have taken up hammer, chisel and ... coral. These brave souls, saying to heck with public opinion, have built their castles not on air, but on solid ground.

rocks and ornamental ironwork, and still under construction, eventually the castle will have three 100-foot towers, an underground torture chamber and a all.

Another visionary of bizarre construction is Howard Soloman, who built Soloman's In Beulah, Colo., Jim Bishop Castle in Ona, Fla. After discovering at a young age that he loved to build things on a grand scale, he eventually went on to create a three-story, 8,000square-foot tourist attraction. This castle even has a moat, and visitors who wish to stay overnight can sleep in the Honeymoon Suite, which has a beautiful view of the moat. Not behold. Made of cemented one to rest on his laurels, Soloman is currently working on the Boat in the Moat, a replica galleon that will become the Castle's restaurant.

For 20 years in Homestead, 40-foot-high wall surrounding it Fla., Edward Leedskalnin labored in secret to build the Coral Castle. This striking creation is a memorial to Agnes Scuffs, Leedskalnin's 16-yearold fiance who broke off the engagement the night before they were to be married. It's still a mystery how this 100-pound man quarried, moved and sculpted more than 1,100 tons of coral rock for the castle, using mostly tools he fashioned from junked auto parts. Edward Leedskalnin died in 1951, and the Coral Castle remains almost unchanged since that day, And, incidentally, Agnes, the object of the creator's unrequited love,

The 'no excuse' exercise plan

After seven years of personal training, I have heard just about every excuse in the book on why people cannot work out. Some of the most popular ones are lack of time, money or energy. I believe most people really want to feel better about themselves, have more energy and be more productive, yet feel that exercise requires a block of time that just does not exist.

Yet, if our mind-set about exercise would change, maybe it would be easier to get started. Here are some suggestions:

Time is very precious to most people; the more we can fit into one day, the better. If you work a full-time job and feel you don't have enough time to exercise, why not use half of your lunch break to exercise and the other half to eat? You don't have to work up a sweat. Keeping a set of dumbbells at work and doing some weight training on your break can still make a difference.

Many people find themselves awash in family duties. If you spend a lot of time playing taxi to and from the soccer field, try getting there early and walking a couple laps around the field. I'll bet that if you start a routine like this, other parents will soon join in.

Being productive with your time means scheduling exercise into your day. Blocking out a time will guarantee a workout. The next time you're sitting around watching a daytime talk show or soap opera, ask yourself if there really is no time for exercise!

From the examples I've already given, you can see that exercise doesn't have to cost you a penny. You don't have to join a health club or hire a trainer to reach your fitness goals.

Foods

vored cooking spray. In a large bowl, combine meat, breadcrumbs, onion, green pepper and 1/3 cup tomato soup. Mix well to combine. Pat mixture into prepared loaf pan. Bake for 45 minutes. Stir mustard, parsley flakes and black pepper into remaining tomato soup. Spread soup mixture evenly over partially baked meatloaf. Evenly arrange cheese slices over top. Bake for an additional 15 minutes or until meatloaf is cooked through and

Start simple, especially if you're embarking for the first time on a program of exercise. Try walking for 10 minutes three times a week, and then add one minute to your walk each week You'll start to feel better, and once you do, you'll want to continue

Afraid that exercise will rob you of important energy you need for the rest of your day?

This can only be true if you are exercising too hard or too much. Most people do not have this problem. Try exercising your attitude: If you believe that exercise will give you more energy, then it will.

Most of the "explanations" I hear from people who aren't working out are really just excuses. Give yourself five reasons why you should commit to an exercise program, get started and stick with it. Leave the whiners behind and join the winners.

sports. The doctor does not seem concerned. Could you suggest a diet or exercise program?

ANSWER: Your grandson does not need a diet or an exercise program. He needs to see a neurologist immediately, Neurologists are the doctors who specialize in the care of seizures and epilepsy.

Once the boy starts taking medicine, there are few restrictions on the kinds of activities in which he can participate. Many professional athletes suffer from seizures but have not had to curtail their sports careers. Medicines keep them free of seizures.

Dr. Donohue regrets that he is unable to answer individual letters, but he will incorporate them in his column whenever possible. Readers may write him or request an order form of available health newsletters at P.O. Box 536475, Orlando, Fla. 32853-6475.

Mac OS is about to turn the corner

Since its inception, Apple Computer has always been expected to turn out products that are, well, unexpected. Their latest operating system, OS X (the "X" stands for "ten"), is no exception.

Apple's operating system has been due for a complete rewrite for years now, and riding the success of its iMac desktop computer, Apple found it had the resources to do so. The initial problems with OS X when it was released were mainly those of backward-compatibility: An application had to be written specifically for OS X in order for it to work.

To get around this, Apple shipped its new G4 desktop computers with OS X and OS 9, giving users the option to use OS X. Also, if users did opt to use it, but found that their favorite application was not written for OS X, they could still open up OS 9 Classic from within OS X. akin to the way Virtual PC from Connectix operates for the Mac.

Initial problems with OS X have been dealt with. Glitches associated with interoperability between OS X and OS 9 have been fixed. Support for DVD drives now exists.

But the most persistent problem, the one that Apple expected, was the speed at which developers could re-write their own software for this new operating system. Of the 15,000 software titles available for the Mac OS, only about 10 percent are written for OS X. Even though the big names like Microsoft and Adobe have applications written for OS X, the pace of converting these programs is slow.

But the pace is speeding up as more people start using OS X and become more familiar with OS X's revolutionary and easy-to-use Aqua interface. Also, software developers are realizing how easy it is to create applications for OS X.

Apple did all this because they saw the need to improve the stability and operability of their OS. Achieving that goal required a complete rewrite.

Apple has built it. Now the developers and the customers are coming.

Fun, Easy Recipes for Little Hands and Big Appetites

ake your kitchen an after-school activity headquarters by cooking up fun dishes with your children. To keep children interested, work together to create dishes that are not only quick and easy, but also colorful and tempting to their taste buds.

"Kids like to dig in and experiment with food," says Martha Reynolds, Senior Home Economist, The Ragú Kitchens. "Parents can foster this interest by choosing recipes with few ingredients, quick prep and cook time and eyecatching presentation. For example, tacos become a special meal when children can layer on their own toppings in a rainbow of colors!"

There are many simple recipes that parents and kids can make together. Plus, getting children to eat fruits and vegetables can be easier than most parents think! According to the USDA Food Guide Pyramid for Young Children, a half-cup of one of kids' favorites—tomatobased pasta sauce—equals a full serving of vegetables. For a complete, well-balanced meal, serve the following recipes with a tossed salad and fresh fruit. More recipes and tips can be found at www.eat.com.

Carson Daly makes Last Call

Last Call With Carson Daly, airing Mondays through Thursdays on NBC, is the latest addition to its host's busy schedule, which also includes two syndicated radio shows and MTV's Total Request Live.

as NBC's newest late-night host

by JAY BOBBIN TRIBUNE MEDIA SERVICES

Ask Carson Daly what he finds most different about his new job and he won't hesitate to tell you: a chair.

The popular MTV staple normally works on his feet, especially while presiding over the cable music channel's weekday show Total Request Live(or TRL, as it's more commonly known), but he's now sitting with guests as NBC's newest after-hours host. The New York-based Last Call With Carson Daly is airing after the Monday through Thursday installments of The Tonight Show With Jay Leno and Late Night With Conan O'Brien, putting fresh programming back into a slot that had been occupied lately by SCTV repeats.

Daly has interviewed a cross section of celebrities on TRL, so his NBC role puts him on territory both familiar and new. Politicians and athletes are being added to a mix of guests that puts him back in the company of personalities he already knows from the worlds of movies, music and television, and he's able to devote more time to the sorts of conversations that often on Wednesdays. (He has Fridays of get only a couple of minutes in the MTV universe.

"It's exciting," Daly says of his current whirlwind of activity, "but at the same time, it's the ultimate case of 'Be careful what you wish for, for you will surely get it.' I'm just waiting to did in this business, and I have a reget some sense of a regular schedule. to really be able to assess the situation and make sure that everything is copacetic. I'm doing radio in the morning (with two syndicated programs, Carson Daly's Most Requested and Out of the Box) and MTV in the teens, Daly found himself in a speci afternoon, and now I'm adding the NBC show at night."

The latter venture is distinguishing itself for Daly just by his literal position. "I've rarely, physically sat down when I've interviewed anybody," he notes. "Even when I'm doing radio, I stand, because that's the wayI did it at KROQ (the Los Angeles FM station

THE MAJESTIC

I think I've seen "It's a Wonderful Life" more than 50 times, and Frank Capra's sentimental holiday classic can still leave a lump in my throat.

Frank Darabont, however, is no Frank Capra (though he sure tries hard), and his latest film, "The Majestic," will leave you with a lump, but I don't think it'll be in your throat. Darabont has directed two other sentimental movies: "The Shawshank Redemption," which is a great film, and "The Green Mile," a not-so-great film. "The Majestic" falls somewhere in between.

The movie stars Jim Carrey as Peter Appleton, a young screenwriter in the early 1950s who has just celebrated the opening of his first produced script. It's a big-time, old-fashioned Grauman's Chinese Theater premiere, and Peter is on top of the world. Until he gets word that he is to testify before the House Un-American Activities Committee (HUAC) about some allegedly pinko leanings he may have had during his college days. In a flash, the studio shows him the door. His hot, Hollywood tomato of a galpal gives him the air, and ol' Pete spends the night before his court appearance nursing his hurt with a bottle of red-eye. Pete then drunkenly drives his car off a bridge during a raging storm. His soggy body is found washed up on shore by a crusty oldtimer named Stan (James Whitmore). Pete, suffering from amnesia, is taken by Stan to see the doc (David Ogden Stiers) in the town of Lawson.

Lawson is one of those quaint small towns that you only see in old movies, or to be more to the point, movies that try to look like old movies. Lawson has lost 62 of its sons during World War II, and it seems that Pete resembles one of them: a fella named Luke Trimble, the son of Harry (Martin Landau), owner of the now run-down Majestic movie theater.

Harry embraces Pete as the long-lost Luke, and so does the whole town, except for a veteran and Luke's old girlfriend Adele (Laurie Holden). I think you see where the movie's headed: A romance develops between Pete/Luke and Adele, the town pitches in to help him rebuild the theater and everything is peachy, until Pete's past catches up with him. The last act, which involves Pete's struggle with HUAC, is a heavy-handed exercise in pro-America jingoism that would make even John Ashcroft blush.

The performance by Jim

Carrey is darn good. He's no Jimmy Stewart, but he handles his role as Pete with as much sincerity as he can muster. It ranks right up there with his performance in "The Truman Show," and I think he's finally proven to Hollywood that he's more than Ace Ventura.

As a holiday movie, "The Majestic" might appeal to much older audiences, though at almost three hours, it may seem overlong for some. And while it's no "It's a Wonderful Life," there are just enough good moments in this movie for me to recommend it.

Q Did Muhammad Ali's family try to stop Will Smith from making the movie "Ali" because they wanted a Muslim to play the role? — S.B.

A No way. It was Smith who resisted offers to do the film for eight years because he was afraid, as he says, that the pressure of doing it might cause him to "mess up."

It was Ali's family who persuaded him to make the movie.

We were discussing second-generation actors in Hollywood (e.g. Beau Bridges being Lloyd Bridges' son), and we wondered if Gene Wilder is (director) Billy Wilder's son. Also, did Gene ever remarry after Gilda Radner died, and did they have children? And is it true he's cured of his cancer? —

Marge and Tom S.

A Gene Wilder was born Jerry Silberman in Milwaukee, Wisc., in 1933 (or 1935 depending on which biography you read). He took his stage name — Wilder — in honor of his favorite director, Billy Wilder.

Gilda Radner, Wilder's third wife, died of ovarian cancer in 1989. They had no children. He does have a daughter, Katharine, with his second wife, Mary Joan Schutz. (His first wife was playwright Mary Mercier.) In 1991, he married hearing specialist Karen Webb. In 1999, he learned he had non-Hodgkin's lymphoma. After an intense course of therapy, he says he's recovered and has resumed working on his many projects.

Q I understand a rare recording by (the late Beatle) George Harrison will be released in England, but not here. Do you have any information on this? — Bradley D.

A I do, indeed. On Jan. 14, George Harrison's 1971 single of "My Sweet Lord" will be rereleased in the UK to benefit charity. As I write this, a release date in the United States and elsewhere has not yet been announced. But I would be surprised if it didn't follow soon after.

On Jan. 8, NBC will premiere "Imagine That," starring Hank Azaria ("The Birdcage," "Uprising") as a TV writer whose daydreaming fantasies come to life. Others in the show include Katey Sagal ("Married... With Children"), Jayne Brook ("Chicago Hope"), Joshua Malina ("Sports Night") and Suzy Nakamura ("West Wing").

On Monday, Jan. 7. Maria Carey drops in on the Fox Network's "Ally McBeal" for her guest stint, which will include singing a song from her album "Glitter." Meanwhile, the series has announced that they've invited Dame Edna Everage to make several appearances on the show. The Dazzling, if somewhat Daffy, Dame did wonders for the show's ratings the last time she was on, and it's hoped she can continue to fire up those vital statistics.

Cher joins Lenny Kravitz, Toby Keith and other music stars on the "29th Annual American Music Awards Special" airing live Jan. 9 on ABC.

On Jan. 13, CBS welcomes Carol Burnett, Tony Danza, Reba McEntire and "JAG" star David James Elliott to be among the presenters on "The 28th Annual People's Choice Awards." This show will also be airing live.

Also on Jan. 13, A&E airs "The Magnificent Ambersons," starring Madeleine Stowe, Jennifer Tilly, Bruce Greenwood, Dina Merrill and James Cromwell in the first new adaptation of the classic Orson Welles film that was released 60 years igo.

Casting News: Candice Bergen ("Murphy Brown") has signed to do a guest appearance on HBO's "Sex and the City." There's talk the role may become recurring.

The Sci Fi Network plans to start production on "Children of Dune" in early spring. This miniseries is based on "Dune Messiah" and "Children of Dune," the second and third novels of Frank Herbert's "Dune" trilogy.

Fans of the USA Network's "La Femme Nikita" still hope the network will put the series back on the air with Peta Wilson reprising her role as the intrepid secret agent. But that's not likely. However, come next September, "Nikita-niks" can begin to experience it all again courtesy of a DVD of the now late and still lamented series to be released by Columbia House.

by DR. CAROL COMBS-MORRIS, DVM

You may have been reading lately about the controversy that surrounds how often animals should be given their vaccinations. So what's all the fuss about?

This is one of the hottest topics of debate in Veterinary Medicine, and it has no clear-cut answers. Vaccines and vaccination schedules are getting complicat-The old D-H-L (Distemper, ed. Hepatitis, Leptospirosis) vaccine for dogs has turned into a DA2PLPC (Distemper, Adenovirus2/Hepatitis, Parainfluenza, Leptospirosis, Parvovirus, Coronavirus) or something similar. Cats routinely receive vaccines against Rhinotracheitis, Calicivirus, Panleukopenia, Pneumonitis and Feline Leukemia. As we develop more vaccines to more diseases, we are reaching a point where we have to ask whether we are doing more harm than good.

A vaccine is, after all, a foreign substance, injected into the body in order to stimulate an immune response to a particular disease. They are generally safe and effective, but when you confront the body with too many foreign substances too often, it can start to have adverse effects. The ideal situation would be to only vaccinate against those diseases that the dog or cat is at reasonable risk of contracting, and only when the animalis immunity to each disease drops below protective levels.

We accomplish the first goal by taking each animalís lifestyle into consideration, and only vaccinating against those diseases to which he/she is likely to be exposed. For example, an indoor-only dog in eastern Kentucky probably doesnít need to be vaccinated against Lyme Disease. It doesn't mean he is at zero risk, just that the odds are against him being exposed to it. The diseases that are very common (such as Parvo) or very dangerous (i.e. Rabies) form a core or group against which most animals are vaccinated.

Determining each animal/s level of immunity to a particular disease at any given time is possible; it just isn't very practical. Blood levels of antibodies to a particular disease can be measured in a laboratory. These levels are called titers. A protective titer is one that is believed to be high enough to protect the animal from a particular disease. This doesn't always correlate exactly with how that animal's body will respond to the disease in the real world. They are also relatively expensive to perform, and a separate titer must be determined for each disease.

It is my understanding that manufacturers of human vaccines have to determine just how long the immunity to their products lasts (duration-of-immunity studies). Veterinary product manufacturers are only required to determine the minimum duration of immunity. In other words, if a vaccine label says that Vaccine A should be boosted annually, they know for sure that immunity lasts for a year. They have not necessarily gone to the expense of conducting studies to show that it might be effective even longer.

Although most experts feel that some, if not most, vaccines protect dogs and $45 billion in U.S. taxes in 2000 by buying and selling with their own foreign subsidiaries at sometimes ridiculous prices, according to professors at Florida International University, in a study released in November by U.S. Sen. Byron Dorgan of North Dakota. For example, U.S. subsidiaries would buy (with tax paid to the other country) a toothbrush for $5,655 or a flashlight for $5,000, while U.S. subsidiaries would sell (tax paid to the U.S.) a bulldozer for $528 or a prefabricated metal building for 82 cents.

Isaac Levy, 57, and Zebolan Simonto, 41, told The Washington Post in November that, though they are the only remaining Jewish residents of Kabul, Afghanistan, each had been treated much better by the Taliban than by each other. Their relentless, petty feud began three years ago when both claimed ownership of a handwritten edition of the Torah. Simonto had Levy imprisoned by accusing him of being an Israeli spy, and Levy had Simonto imprisoned by asserting that Simonto had tried to convert Muslims to Christianity and that he had maintains his own dilapidated, visitorless synagogue.

Could Be Trouble Up Ahead

Willie Prince Cook, 21, on his arrest for peeping into a ladies' room stall at a county courthouse, said he was in the building on business, specifically, to pick up his new marriage license (Rockville, Md., August). And London's The Guardian reported that the U.S. firm OSI Pharmaceuticals is nearing the end of clinical trials for a cream that will make light-skinned people dark and darkskinned people light. And identical twins Ruth and Rebecca Brown (students at Messiah College, Grantham, Pa.) were written up in their local newspaper for having created 4,386 tiny but highly detailed clay cats wearing Union and Confederate clothing, as part, they said, of their fascination with Civil War battlefields (October).

The king of Tonga (Tonga is the island Multinational corporations avoided brought prostitutes into his home. Each between Fiji and American Samoa) has an actual court jester (until recently, Jesse Bogdonoff), whom he appointed out of gratitude when Bogdonoff discovered that the king's lucrative passport-selling income was being deposited in an interest-free Bank of America account instead of earning interest. It subsequently appeared that Bogdonoff and some colleagues may have absconded with much of the money themselves, instead of reinvesting it. Tonga might have made $40 million selling special passports (at $5,000 to $8,000) to prominent people in trouble, such as Imelda Marcos and many lower-level international miscreants.

In a November Associated Press report on arson in Tennessee and Kentucky, one state investigator said the two leading causes locally were boredom and the fact that arsonists appear to be following in their fathers' footsteps ("My daddy did it, so I'm doing it," the investigator quoted some as saying; "It passes from one generation to the next (like) child abuse."). A retired arson and bomb analyst for the FBI endorsed the fatherson connection and said it was unique to the Tennessee-Kentucky region.

Latest Religious Messages

There has been an even bigger worldwide jump in exorcisms recently than in 1973 when the movie "The Exorcist" was released, according to several press reports in September. Official Roman Catholic exorcisms have jumped from one in 1995 to at least 15 in 2001 (and the church has 10 official exorcists on duty in the United States), and a Fordham University researcher said there may be 500 protestant evangelical exorcism ministries in the U.S. alone. The researcher, Michael Cuneo, said he had attended about 50 and seen "lots of fireworks, lots of dramatic activity" but nothing supernatural. Cuneo suggested that exorcisms will increase as people's feelings of helplessness increase.

The Archdiocese of Philadelphia recently approved a rare petition from a man to be an official hermit under the Catholic Church's canons. Richard Withers, 46, has vowed to do all the things a priest does except that he spends almost all of his time away from people, in contemplation (based on "an almost unremitting desire to be alone with God"). Brother Withers has a paying job (which he works at in silence) one day a week and exchanges e-mail with other hermits.

■ The Answers in Genesis ministry in Florence, Ky., is building a $14 million creationism museum to compete with classic-science museums, with exhibits that it says will demonstrate that the world was created in six days just as the Bible says. According to a December Los Angeles Times report, a large doublehelix of DNA will be on display to suggest that humans are so complex that they could not possibly have evolved, and a life-sized dinosaur will be shown, along with the helpful information "Created on: Day 6." Ministry director Ken Ham said he is targeting Christians who do not take the Bible literally. "This is a cultural war," he said. "They need to know: We're coming." de

People With Issues

Mohammad Afroz Abdul Razak, 25, told reporters in Melbourne, Australia, that he belonged to a cell of 20 al-Qaida terrorists whose missions included flying an airplane into that city's 55-story Rialto Towers, but an investigation revealed, at the least, that he was not even close to passing his flying lessons, having taken 17 months to accumulate 20 hours' flying time and hiding in his bed on the days of particularly difficult lessons. According to a December Sydney Morning Herald profile, Razak also did the decidedly unfundamentalist-Islamic thing of crying frequently about his problems in front of his Jewish landlady, and besides, the Australian government has denied the existence of any such al-Qaida cell.

cats for longer than a year, we do'ft know which vaccines, or how long the protection lasts. In addition, if a veterinarian recommends a vaccine be used less often that the product manufacturer recommends, it becomes an off-label use. In that case, if the animal developed the disease, the manufacturer would assume no responsibility—even if it could be proved that something was wrong with the vaccine—because it was not used according to label directions. (Don't take that as gospel, I'm not a lawyer, but that is my take on the situation.)

Have I ever used vaccine off-label? You betcha! That seven-year old Yorkie that never goes outside except to be carried to the car and back for a trip to McDonaldis, but whose head swelled to the size of a tennis ball the last time he got a Leptospirosis vaccine? I'm going to talk it over with the owner, but I'm not going to be insistent on yearly revaccination, given his low level of risk.

To sum this up, discuss your dog's vaccination schedule with your vet. If you have good reason to think that the makeup or schedule might need to be altered, he or she may agree. Don't be surprised or offended if you are asked to sign something saying you have been informed of potential risks from going against standard protocol. Vets and pet owners are both in a gray area here that requires working together to determine the best health care for the animal.

8 p.m. A&E

Movie: The Magnificent Ambersons

Orson Welles' 1942 film based on Booth Tarkington's Pulitzer Prize-winning family saga wasn't so magnificent when the studio got through with it, cutting more than 40 essential minutes after a lukewarm reception from teenage viewers. Sixty years later, A&E Network tries to right that old wrong by bringing Welles' original vision to the screen in this new adaptation. Madeleine Stowe, Bruce Greenwood, Jonathan Rhys-Meyers and Gretchen Mol star in the tale of two families at the turn of the 20th century: one on the ground floor of a new industry, automobiles; the other clinging to the horse and buggy. But romance intervenes in amultigenerational pair of Romeo and Juliet stories. James Cromwell also stars.

8 p.m. WB

The Jamie Kennedy Experiment

The co-star of such movies as Scream and Three Kingstackles series television with this compliation of comedy sketches and Candid Camera-like segments in this series premiere. Backed by an ensemble troupe and celebrity quests, Kennedy plays a variety of roles, someof them in scripted skits and others in the improvis-ational process of fooling unsuspecting targets.

9 p.m. CBS

The 28th Annual People's Choice Awards

Kevin James (The King of Queens) had some jitters about hosting this awards show last year, but apparently he did well enough to be asked back. James presides over an eclectic array of presentations covering television, movies and music. Winners are selected through an ambi-tious public poll executed by the Gallup Organi-zation. Respondents don't pick their favorites from a list of nominees; they can name anyone they want. Among those getting lots of votes this year are Drew Carey, Calista Flockhart, Scott Bakula, Ellen DeGeneres, Jill Hennessy, Garth Brooks, Jennifer Lopez, Mel Gibson and Denzel Washington.

9 p.m. HBO

Sex and the City

Now Aidan's (John Corbett) fiancee, Carrie (Sarah Jessica Parker) debates whether she's ready to give up her identity as a single woman in "All That Glitters." Samantha(Kim Cattrail) faces the same dilemma as she finds herself increasingly drawn to Richard (James Remar), but the unhappily wed Charlotte (Kristin Davis) provides counterpoint to her friends. Willie Garson, Mario Cantone, Murray Bartlett, Daniel Serafini Sauli and Chris Payne Gilbert are also featured

Mark Twain

Is Ken Burns downsizing? He has gone from marathon miniseries about world-changing events (The Civil War), national pastimes (Baseball), entire musical genres (Jazz) and vast tracts of land (The West) to the tale of a single individual. But it's surely not for lack of material that Burns' take on Mark Twain is only four hours long. The two-part documentary explores both sides of the man born Samuel Langhome Cle-mens: the writer whom many consider the great-est American author, and the man whose life was beset by personal and financial losses. Interviewees include comic and activist Dick Gregory, author William Styron and veteran Twain portrayer Hal Holbrook. Part 2 airs Tuesday.

8 p.m. TCM

Movie: High Noon

Gary Cooper gives an Oscar-winning performance as a Western lawman forced to take on an old nemesis single-handedly when the townspeople turn yellow. Grace Kelly, Lon Chaney Jr., Lloyd Bridges and Ian MacDonald also star in the 1952 film, which also won Oscars for editing, scoring and best song.

9 p.m. CBS

Everybody Loves Raymond

There's no place else for the relatives to go when a snowstorm traps them all at Frank and Marie's (Peter Boyle, Doris Roberts) house in the premiere of "Snow Day." That becomes especially problematic when Debra (Patricia Heaton) offends Frank, making things particularly tense. Marie rallies to her husband's defense, but she also reveals something surprising.

9 p.m. FOX

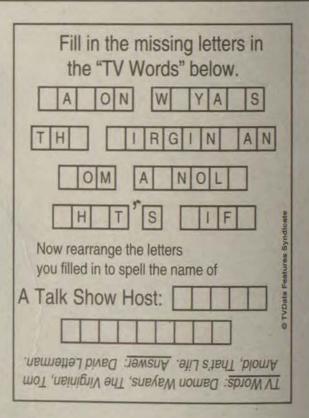

Ally McBeal

Ally creator David E. Kelley continues to show his Hollywood A-list magnetism as he pulls rocker Jon Bon Jovi into the unisex mix. Audiences may never be the same after the departure of Robert Downey Jr., but Bon Jovi has packed his bags for at least nine episodes. His guest run begins this week in "Blowin' in the Wind" as Ally (Calista Flockhart) considers buying a house and making some improvements to it. Bon Jovi plays a contractor who aids the willowy lawyer in her house hunt. The relationship doesn't start out on a romantic note, but with longstanding love-lorn Ally that may not last long.

Movie: Monday Night Mayhem

John Turturro (Quiz Show) stars as outrageous sportscaster Howard Cosell in this new drama about the birth of an American institution: ABC's Monday Night Football. It was radical television for 1970, when sporting events were presented in a fairly straightforward manner. Roone Arledge, head of ABCSports, had a different vision for the weekly NFL event; he wanted to make viewers feel like participants, not spectators. Cameras and mikes where they'd never been before helped bring viewers into the action. But it was the trio of announcers – Cosell, Frank Gifford and Don Meredith – that gave MNF its magic. Kevin Anderson and Brad Beyer play Gifford and Meredith, respectively, with John Heard as Arledge. Patti LuPone also stars.

Faucet Fixes By Samantha Mazzotta

My kitchen faucet has a slow drip, and when I turn it on, water leaks out of the base. Do I need to replace a gasket, or should I scrap the whole thing? — Terry L., Minneapolis

You don't need to scrap the faucet. My guess is that you have a cartridge-type faucet (you turn on the water by lifting a single handle) and that both the cartridge and the O-ring seals near the base of the faucet need to be replaced.

The constant drip is due to the deterioration of seals on the cartridge; the leak at the base occurs because water is getting past the O-rings.

Fortunately, most cartridge-type kitchen faucets are easy to fix, compared with other designs. If you installed a custom faucet, find the manufacturer's booklet and any additional parts or tools that may have come with it.

Then, gather these items: a screwdriver, adjustable (channel-type) pliers, a utility knife and heatproof grease.

Write down the model number and type of faucet and take that information to the hardware store. Purchase the right size of cartridge and O-rings. (Or, take apart the faucet as instructed below and take the parts to the store.)

Turn off the water at the nearest shutoff valve (or at the main supply valve near the meter). With your screwdriver, pry off the cap on top of the faucet. Remove the handle screw underneath. Tilt the faucet handle up and back to remove it.

Underneath the handle you'll see the retaining ring — a threaded plastic ring that holds the cartridge in place. Use adjustable pliers to unscrew the ring. This will free the cartridge for removal.

Grip the top of the cartridge with your pliers and pull straight up. Toss the old cartridge and install the new one in the same position.

Next, replace the O-rings. Now that the retaining ring has been removed, the spout can be lifted away from the base. You'll see the old O-rings at the bottorn and midway up the faucet base. Cut them off with a utility knife.

Coat the new O-rings with heatproof grease and incall them in the same places.

To finish, slide the spout back into place. Screw the retaining ring back on and tighten. Then, reattach the handle, replace the handle screw in the top and pop on the cap.

Open the faucet, and then slowly open the shutoff valve until the water is running. Check around the base for leaks, shut off the faucet and make sure the drip has stopped. If the leak continues, disassemble the faucet again (turn off the water valve) and tighten all the connections.

HOME TIP

I had trouble getting a showerhead loose so that I could replace it. My husband just sprayed some WD-40 (or penetrating oil) just above the threads and let it sit there for 24 hours. Removing it the next day was a snap! — Joyce D., Marietta, Ga.

Daly hopes to address topical events on Last Call as well, to the degree that pretaping will allow for that. "I don't like taping shows," he says, "but we'll have the license to reflect what's going on in the news, especially if it's something like Sept. 11 or Columbine, This isn't a monologue-driven show, Continued from p2 Daly's MTV fame - and following could draw a different audience demographic to NBC at an unlikely hour. "It's the best of both worlds for me," he maintains. "I'm still at MTV, and I'm still going to host TRL, so I have that audience. I got to MTV almost five years ago, so figure those people (who were watching then) are now in college. I feel I'll re-establish myself with them through Last Call, and I'm also introducing myself to a new audience. I have to buy everyone I know a TiVo, though, so they can tape the show.
