1977 flood to get a second look

by SHELDON COMPTON
STAFF WRITER

PRESTONSBURG — A study is about to get underway in Floyd County that will seek information about flood damage, but not damage which came from the August flooding last year. The study, conducted by the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers, will cover flood markers and various damage still left from the devastating floods that struck the county in April of 1977, a flood that was then compared to a flood 20 years earlier in 1957. Civil Engineer Tammy Riffle will be one of the members of the team who will busy herself with gaining information about the 1977 flood. Plans to gain sources of information are expected to include door-to-door visits with county residents. When asked what she hopes to gain from the visits, postcards and phone calls that are sure to come from that office, Riffle only said that she was hoping to gain as much information as possible. "The work that will be done will vary depending on how eligible each area may be," said Riffle. "In some cases we may look at putting up a floodwalls and then other alternatives in other areas." Some areas that will be looked at closely will be areas in and around schools, said Riffle, but actual work on the project will be several years down the road. "It will probably be about a three-year project," said Riffle, who added that information that would be needed to make the right choices for assistance would take up a large portion of the time during initial stages. The project will be, as is the usual custom, in phases, the first of which will be gathering information. "We need information from anyone who might be able to help," said County Disaster Coordinator Lon May. "Photographs would be a great help and also calls about flood markers would be good to work with." In addition to assessing damage and where work may be needed, new maps will be drawn from the project, according to Eddie Patton. This is something Big Sandy Area Development District

Dwale man chokes to death during dinner

Times Staff Report

DWALE — A Dwale resident with Down Syndrome died Thursday while eating supper with his family after choking while eating a hot dog, according to the Floyd County Coroner's Office.

Dickie Ron Hall, 26, of Dwale, was pronounced dead at Our Lady of the Way Hospital at approximately 5:30 p.m. Thursday after being taken to the hospital by ambulance.

According to reports from the coroner's office, Hall had been eating supper with his family at his home in Dwale when he began choking while eating a hot dog. Family members called the local ambulance service and left with Hall to the hospital.

Hall was pronounced dead by attending doctors at the hospital.

Hall had lived with his parents, Burley and Gladys Hall of Dwale.

Hall was the grandson of Dick Mosley and the late Bossie Hamilton Mosley of Dwale and Ed Hall and Gertrude Hamilton Hall of ROANOKE, Va. — A doctor and paid speaker for the maker of OxyContin was charged Friday with illegally dispensing prescription painkillers and contributing to the death or bodily injury of 10 people. Four other health care workers also were charged.

Dr. Cecil B. Knox III, 52, was arrested at Southwest Virginia Physical Medicine and Rehabilitation P.C., where he worked.

Clinic staff members Beverly G. Boone, 43; Tiffany T. Durham, 28; Kathleen G. O'Gee, 53, and Willard N. James Jr., 56, who worked in the building and sometimes performed services for Knox, also were charged, according to the indict-

KSP kicks off Adopt A School program

SIDNEY — On Thursday, at Bevins Elementary in Sidney, a ceremony was held to announce the official beginning of the Adopt a School program which will soon be coming to Floyd County.

According to officer Scott Hopkins of Kentucky State

Police Post 9, the program is the result of an effort to bring law enforcement and communities together and to promote the positive influence of the police officer as a role model.

"We are not only here to fix a problem, we are here to prevent them also," said Hopkins.

The program was put together with the collaboration of Post 9, the Pike County Board of Education, the state Transportation Cabinet, and the family resource centers of the schools involved.

KSP based the idea on a new computer software program called CRASH. Computers donated by the Pike County Board of Education will be set up in each school, allowing officers

County seeks 'different perspective' in cleaning up old Garth landfill

by SHELDON COMPTON
STAFF WRITER

PRESTONSBURG — The Floyd County Fiscal Court made the decision to change engineers on the Floyd County Landfill project during a special meeting Friday afternoon.

The change came, according to County Judge-Executive Paul Hunt Thompson, in order to find workers for the project who had a "different perspective."

"I'm not going to say it was anybody's fault," said Thompson Friday. "We just felt like we needed to change engineering groups on this landfill to get a different perspective."

Thompson did not elaborate any further on the decision, but added that the project will now move ahead.

The new engineering group will be Smith Management Group, who will be working with IET Inc., a Lexington company. The groups are set to begin work now that Thompson has been given authorization to sign all documents pertaining to their agreement with the fiscal court.

The push to move ahead with a comprehensive plan for a county landfill has been brewing for some time as Floyd County has been troubled in the past with landfill problems, particularly the landfill located at Garth.

The Garth landfill stood in the way last year of county progress and frustrated county officials after potential grants were blocked when the state cited

Police seize cocaine after traffic stop

by SHELDON COMPTON

MAYTOWN — A three-month long investigation by the Kentucky State Police Drug Enforcement Section II, with assistance from the KSP Post 9 in Pikeville, resulted in the arrest of two Floyd County residents Thursday.

Police arrested Ronald L. Triplett, 43, of Maytown, and Lafe Hall, 56, of Martin, and charged both with one count of first-degree trafficking in a controlled substance.

The arrest came after a traffic stop turned up what police are referring to as "suspected cocaine" at this early point in the investigation.

According to the drug enforcement special investigation office in Lexington, Triplett was checked during a traffic stop at which time a search was conducted of the vehicle. The search turned up approximately six ounces of suspected cocaine at which time a search warrant was issued on Triplett's home.

■ LE ROY, N.Y. — It wiggles, it jiggles, and next week Jell-O is going on the road.

The Traveling Jell-O Museum is slated to be unveiled in Salt Lake City on Wednesday by curator Lynne Belluscio and company spokesman Bill Cosby. Utah is the museum's first stop in part because of international attention directed at Salt Lake City because of the Olympics. But the state also has the highest per capita consumption of the dessert, which is the official state snack.

Utah households buy an average of 21 servings per year — twice as much as households across the country, Jell-O spokeswoman Camille Rustige said.

The traveling museum will be on display in Utah through March 5.

"It depicts little snippets of Jell-O's history," Belluscio said in Thursday's editions of The Daily News of Batavia.

The exhibit includes several historical items from the permanent Jell-O Museum in Le Roy, the birthplace of Jell-O. The museum, in a century-old stone building, opened in 1997 marking the 100th anniversary of a simple dessert that has become an American icon.

Pearle Bixby Wait, a carpenter who dabbled in patent medicine, added fruit flavor to gelatin in 1897. His wife christened it Jell-O.

■ BATTLE CREEK, Mich. — Randy Rial is hoping he'll be a millionaire when he leaves the Super Bowl, and he's not even playing in the game.

Rial will compete in Hershey's Million Dollar Kick contest at the Super Bowl XXXVI pre-game show in New Orleans on Feb. 3. He'll be given one chance to make a field goal worth $1 million.

"It's really surreal, it's hard to believe," Rial told the Battle Creek Enquirer for a story Tuesday. "I can't believe I'm going to the Super Bowl."

Rial, 41, a manufacturing manager for Tenneco Automotive, beat out five others Monday in a qualifying round in Jacksonville, Fla. He was the only finalist to make all three field goals from 15, 25 and 35 yards.

Jacksonville Jaguars kicker Mike Hollis will help determine the length of Rial's Super Bowl kick. Hollis is attempting three field goals in the days before the Super Bowl; for each successful kick, Rial's attempt will move five yards closer, starting from 40 yards out.

Hollis also is working with Rial — a field goal kicker during high school — in the days leading up to the big game.

Even if Rial doesn't make the kick, he gets a consolation prize of $10,000. And besides, Rial said the contest means more to him than just the chance to win a million bucks.

"I'm thinking about how I get to go to the Super Bowl, I get to do this kick and I get to watch a great game," he said.

■ RHINEBECK, N.Y. — The burglary of two historic estates in New York's Hudson Valley has baffled police, but one thing is clear: The culprits had an eye for fine kitchenware.

At the Wilderstein Historic Site in Dutchess County last weekend, burglars stole several Tiffany items, including a hot water kettle with matching burner and a cream pot, police said.

At the Edgewater Estate a few miles away, a sterling silver tea set and a silver service for 12 were reported missing.

State police estimated the losses at more than $100,000.

Wilderstein Executive Director Gregory J. Sokanis said that while the items were irreplaceable, he was thankful the burglars did little damage to the house.

"We were very lucky in that respect," he told The Register-Star in Hudson, N.Y. "It could have been a lot worse."

The burglars somehow managed to circumvent an alarm system that included motion detectors, according to state police Investigator Richard Nesbitt. The investigation is continuing.

■ PUNXSUTAWNEY, Pa. — A charity that had been cleared to serve beer at a fundraiser during Groundhog Day festivities has decided not to offer up the suds after all.

"I think we would like to take baby steps to make sure it is a high-quality event," said Pat Joseph, executive director of the western Pennsylvania chapter of the Cystic Fibrosis Foundation, which is holding the fund-raiser. "We're hoping we can bring in something that will be a lot of fun and add things to the weekend in Punxsutawney."

In 1996, Groundhog Day organizers banned drinking on Gobbler's Knob, the spot where Punxsutawney Phil emerges each year in search of his shadow. But earlier this month, Punxsutawney Borough Council voted 5-2 to allow the charity to sell beer.

The charity will still hold its event, charging $10 admission to see bands in a tent large enough to fit 1,200 people.

The 1993 release of

"Groundhog Day," the Bill Murray film set in Punxsutawney, helped generate bigger crowds, including an influx of young people who added drinking and dancing to the annual celebration.

Kentucky man charged with murder

The Associated Press

MADISON, W.Va. — A Kentucky man accused of kidnapping and sexually assaulting a Lincoln County mother and daughter has been charged with first-degree murder in the mother's death.

Ronald E. Lambert Jr., 26, of Radcliff, was indicted last week. The grand jury determined that the alleged sexual assault led to the woman's death.

Lambert allegedly gave Toni Sargent, 44, of Ranger and her 17-year-old daughter a ride in his car Nov. 29.

State Police say Lambert took the mother and daughter to an isolated area off U.S. Route 119 in Boone County, W.Va., and sexually assaulted them.

Lambert allegedly drove off after the attack and left Sargent and the teen-ager to walk several miles back to the highway.

When Sargent tried to flag down a passing motorist, she was struck by a car and killed.

Lambert also faces sexual assault and kidnapping charges.

After financial crash, Alabama's Space Camp tries for another liftoff

by MARK NIESSE
ASSOCIATED PRESS

HUNTSVILLE, Ala. — Fewer commanders are on hand at mission control to guide space shuttle adventures. A dwindling number of explorers float in the simulated weightlessness of outer space or dress in bulky, white astronaut suits.

Those T-shirts of the 1980s proclaiming "I spent the night in space" have disappeared.

Space Camp, once a star program where children could learn and live like astronauts, has fallen on hard times.

Red ink runs into the millions of dollars. Loans are in default. Jobs are cut. And the former director of the organization that runs the camp, the U.S. Space & Rocket Center, has been sued by the state for $7.5 million.

Adding to Space Camp's woes: After Sept. 11, fewer people were willing to put their children in airplanes and travel from out-of-state to the youth camps.

Despite the problems, Space Camp picked up business over the holidays with discount rates. And officials say they're cautiously optimistic that parents will let kids fly again and enjoy the camp's rocket-pack simulators, mock mission control, moon walk machine and neutral-buoyancy water tank.

"There's probably some additional pain coming, but we'll get through it. Space Camp is too good of a program," said Larry Capps, executive director of the U.S. Space & Rocket Center.

Last year, about 12,000 children attended Space Camp sessions, most of which run for a week, down from 18,000 in 1998. Still, the 388,000 visitors who stopped in last year to look at the rockets and other attractions were enough to keep it Alabama's No. 1 tourist attraction.

Capps said the Space Camps in Florida and California have also endured hard times and are facing the consequences of years of mismanagement, poor advertising and unfulfilled dreams.

Space Camp in Mountain

View, Calif., closed its doors Jan. 6. Space Camp in Florida is selling the Astronaut Hall of Fame at Titusville, Fla., to Delaware North, the company that runs concessions for the Kennedy Space Center.

Huntsville's Space Camp started in 1982 and prospered through the early 1990s with the popularity of the space shuttle.

But problems arose when money from supposed corporate backers never materialized for a program, hatched by then-director Mike Wing, that let fifth-grade students attend camp for free. The idea was that those students would spread Space Camp's popularity, and perhaps come back themselves as paying customers in later years.

Amid the red ink, the marketing staff was axed and word-of-mouth between school kids stopped.

The state in a recent lawsuit lays the blame at the feet of Wing, who resigned as director of the U.S. Space & Rocket Center in September 1999 under pressure and left more than $4 million in debt. Most of his management team resigned at Gov. Don Siegelman's request or were fired when they resisted Siegelman's pledge to revamp the board.

Wing, now a baseball coach at LeTourneau University in Texas, didn't return phone calls seeking comment.

But last year, when state auditors said he should pay back $7.5 million, he denied owing the program anything.

"There was no personal gain here. This was to serve kids," he told The Huntsville Times.

Members of the revamped board want to replenish the program's bank accounts.

"When you end one fiscal year with a $74,000 debt and the next year you've got an unaudited deficit of $2.8 million, when your camp attendance is down and you've got significant debt from the foundation that it cannot pay ... these are clear signals you need to go in another direction," said Mary Jane Caylor, the newly elected chairwoman of the board that governs the U.S. Space & Rocket Center.

The California camp faces $13 million in debt and needs $1.5 million to $2 million to reopen the camp, Capps said.

And it looks like that may happen soon — two companies and a private investor are interested in reviving the camp, perhaps as soon as May, said Julio Valencia, who was director of the California program and now runs the Committee to Save Space Camp.

"We offer a positive service to our young generation," Valencia said. "It was awful in this area. The meltdown of the dot-com industry made (the recession) hit harder here. ... We need to identify with the positive parts of society."

The foundation still runs space camps in Florida, Japan, Canada, Turkey and Belgium.

"The future is going to be brighter," said Mike Gillespie, chair of the Space Camp Foundation, which manages the out-of-state programs.

Bush to propose cutting 25 programs, totaling $5.8 million FRANKFORT — President Bush wants to eliminate $5.8 million in funding for school and community programs across Kentucky so the money can be plowed into college grants.

Twenty-five Kentucky projects are on the list. They range from child care and after-school programs at churches and community centers to technology initiatives at state universities.

Bush is to propose the cuts when he submits his 2003 budget on Monday. Congress agreed to finance all the programs last year.

At issue is the popular Pell Grant program for low-income college students. It is running a $1.3 billion deficit because it does not turn away eligible students.

The largest cut Bush wants to make in Kentucky is $1.5 million for a joint venture of the University of Louisville and Northern Kentucky University — the Urban University Partnership for Math and Science Teaching.

The smallest cut would be $10,000 the after-school program at Trinity Family Life Center in Louisville.

Other smaller cuts would be $20,000 at each of two programs in Louisville — Southeast Associated Ministries Inc., which has an after-school program, and Father Maloney's Boys Haven, which was to get the money for technology.

House votes to extend $1 fee on tire sales

by MARK R. CHELLGREN
ASSOCIATED PRESS

FRANKFORT — The House voted unanimously Friday to extend the $1 fee attached to the sales of new tires to finance the cleanup of old tires.

Last year, the fee raised about $2.2 million. Its proceeds were used to pay for the tire amnesty program sponsored by the Natural Resources Cabinet.

Rep. Don Pasley, D-Winchester, said the amnesty program collected 6 million old tires last year. The cabinet's cleanup program collected another 3.5 million tires at 31 sites around the state.

The waste tires were taken to recyclers or sanitary landfills.

The tire fee is scheduled to expire in July. The bill would extend it to July 31, 2006.

"It's cleaning up Kentucky," said Rep. Tom McKee, D-Cynthiana. The vote was 93-0 and the bill now goes to the Senate, where it may face a far more uncertain fate.

The response among House members to the proposal from Rep. Joni Jenkins, D-Louisville, about body armor for law enforcement personnel was more dramatic. Jenkins proposed allowing university security personnel to take advantage of a state program that finances the purchase of body armor.

Rep. Kathy Stein, D-Lexington, offered an amendment that would also allow the purchase of body armor for K-9 units. Her explanation was accompanied by barks and howls from House members before it was adopted. The bill passed 92-0 and also goes to the Senate.

Companies that market credit cards to college students would have to register with campus authorities under another bill passed by the House.

Credit card marketers would also be prohibited from offering free gifts on campus just for making an application for a credit card. Universities would also have to make a segment on credit management part of their standard campus orientation program. The bill passed 91-2 and goes to the Senate.

And the Blue Apple Players of Louisville would be designated the official state touring theatre company under a resolution approved by the House 92-0.

(The waste tire legislation is House Bill 422. The body armor legislation is HB 338. The credit card legislation is HB 298.)

Police suspect homicide in death of woman found in Laurel County

The Associated Press

LONDON — Police have opened a homicide investigation after finding the body of an unidentified woman on a roadside in a remote area of Laurel County.

"Evidence tends to show foul play," said Trooper Craig Sutton, spokesman for the Kentucky State Police in London. "We haven't determined the exact cause of death. An autopsy is being performed."

Sutton said the body was found about 2 a.m. Friday by people riding four-wheelers in the Line Creek area of Cold Hill, about seven miles southwest of London.

The woman was between 5-feet-6-inches and 5-feet-9-inches tall, weighed about 125 pounds and was believed to be in her 30s. She had reddish brown hair, was wearing a turquoise ring on each of her middle fingers and a black necklace with a silver cross with onyx stone in the center.

State monitoring programs seen as key to tackling prescription drug abuse

by NANCY ZUCKERBROD
ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — Danna Droz used to cringe when she got calls from frustrated doctors and police asking if she could help track the pill-popping habits of suspected prescription drug abusers.

"Basically the answer was no," said Droz, who runs the drug enforcement efforts of Kentucky's state health agency. "The only way to find out was to contact every pharmacy and ask, 'Do you have any prescriptions for this patient?'"

Now, however, Droz can give doctors and police answers within 24 hours by turning to a database that tracks who gets medicine such as the addictive painkiller OxyContin and who writes and dispenses prescriptions.

The Kentucky program, implemented in 1999, has received widespread praise, and other states are looking to it as a model.

"What it helps to do is to give us a summary of a particular person's history of receiving medications," said Lt. Col. Joe Williams, who runs the Kentucky State Police drug control unit. "If they're diverting, a lot of times they'll go on a doctor-shopping expedition. They'll go to several doctors in several different communities to get the drug."

Williams says that although the program is working, dealers and addicts are increasingly hopping state lines to get the OxyContin since most of Kentucky's neighbors don't have monitoring programs.

Federal lawmakers hope a pilot program helps solve that by providing seed money for states to launch monitoring systems, but advocates are disappointed Congress approved just $2 million this year for the effort.

"That's only enough for four states our size," Droz said. Kentucky spent $415,000 to start its program and spends about $600,000 annually to operate it, she said.

"Hopefully this money will elicit applications, which will

Board of Pharmacy. Tennessee has a $350 million deficit this year.

Currently 15 states have prescription drug monitoring programs, and about half a dozen others are considering implementing them, according to the Drug Enforcement Administration and the National Alliance for Model State Drug Laws.

States with existing programs are California, Hawaii, Idaho, Illinois, Indiana, Kentucky, Massachusetts, Michigan, Nevada, New York, Oklahoma, Rhode Island, Texas, Utah and Washington.

The systems are not linked, and some law enforcement officials are pushing for that kind of approach.

"A Virginia system would only monitor for Virginia. I can defeat the system by going to Tennessee and getting a Tennessee doctor to write me a prescription," said Tammy McElyea, a prosecutor in Lee County, Va., who spends a lot of time prosecuting OxyContin cases. "We greatly support a statewide program, but our dream would be a nationwide program."

Rogers said he would support a national program, in which the computer systems are linked, but he said Congress would probably have to appropriate more money for that effort — especially if it were mandatory.

McElyea says abuse of OxyContin, which addicts crush and snort or inject for a heroin-like high, is "more widespread than anything we've ever seen before." But officials caution against crafting monitoring programs that single out specific drugs.

The maker of OxyContin, Stamford, Conn.-based Purdue Pharma, successfully opposed efforts last year to single out OxyContin in a program considered in West Virginia, said Dr. J. David Haddox, the company's director of health policy.

"If you pick a specific drug, they'll just go to a different drug," Haddox said. "The only way to do it is to cast a broad net."

The Pharmaceutical Research and Manufacturers of America, the industry's trade group, supports monitoring if safeguards are there, said Marjorie Powell, a lawyer for the organization.

"In general ... we think systems that can identify misuse are appropriate," Powell said. "We do have a concern when the system is so heavy handed that a physician is reluctant to write a prescription for a pain medication when it's truly needed."

The database is used to investigate doctors as well as patients, and physicians have historically been wary of that. But some now seem to view monitoring systems as useful.

Dr. Baretta R. Casey, a family physician in Pikeville, Ky., said doctors worked with legislators to ensure safeguards were in place. For example, police must have a criminal case open to request information about an individual and all such requests must be submitted in writing.

Baretta says Pikeville's OxyContin problem seems to be getting better, and she credits the monitoring program with helping to stop doctor shopping.

"What this has allowed us to do is identify those patients pretty quickly and lock them into one physician or dismiss them so they don't repeat the pattern and also to alert the authorities to this person's name," Baretta said.

She said one way states could improve monitoring programs would be to give doctors direct access to the database, so they could avoid writing prescriptions they might later regret. Officials say that would increase costs and privacy concerns.

States with monitoring programs appear to be on solid legal ground. The Supreme Court ruled in 1997 that state officials could track prescriptions as long as the information was safeguarded.

Droz said officials from other states are calling to find out what it takes to put a program in place.

She says that has been fueled by OxyContin abuse, which federal officials say was the likely cause of 296 deaths in the United States in 2000 and 2001.

"The good thing about all the OxyContin hype is it has raised people's awareness about prescription drugs and that prescription drugs are not inherently safe," Droz said. "It wasn't a sexy problem — now it is."

Redistricting causes shuffling by candidates

by BRUCE SCHREINER
ASSOCIATED PRESS

FRANKFORT — Legislative redistricting caused some last-minute shuffling Friday by candidates rushing to beat the filing deadline.

Some candidates withdrew from districts where they no longer live, then refiled for office in their new districts.

Others filed to represent districts opened by the legislative boundaries agreed to Thursday by the Democrat-controlled House and Republican Senate after weeks of bitter debate.

The frustration, though, was still simmering Friday.

"It's the most unfair system that I've ever witnessed," said Rep. Howard Cornett. "This has been the most stressful two weeks of my life."

Cornett, a Whitesburg Republican, faced a new political reality. Shifted into another district, Cornett had to go to the secretary of state's office Friday to pull out of one race, then enter another.

The redistricting also created new rivalries as Republicans and Democrats battle for numerical superiority in the Senate, where the GOP now has a 20-18 advantage. The House is firmly controlled by Democrats.

Sen. Daniel Mongiardo, D-Hazard, and Rep. Johnnie Turner, R-Harlan, filed to run against each other in the 30th Senate District.

In one of the oddities of redistricting, Mongiardo would remain in the Senate for two more years even if he loses. His district, however, would be in northern Kentucky, far from his Appalachian home.

Democrats fielded a candidate to run against one of their main targets, Republican Sen. Dan Seum. It was Seum's departure from the Democratic Party that helped give Republicans control of the Senate.

Bruce Roberts, a retired Louisville firefighter, stepped up to run in a district that includes a lot of new territory for Seum. Roberts is also president of a statewide firefighters' association.

"Somebody needed to run against him," Roberts said. "Let's see if somebody can beat him as a Republican."

Two Paducah Democrats — Jim Sigler and Larry Sanderson — filed to run against Republican Sen. Bob Leeper, whose party switch tipped the balance of power in the Senate in favor of the GOP.

Two state representatives, Republican Gary Tapp of Shelbyville and Democrat Larry Belcher of Shepherdsville, will run for the 20th Senate District. The seat became open with the retirement of Sen. Marshall Long, a Shelbyville Democrat and a longtime legislator.

Two Democratic senators lumped into one district will square off in the May primary. Sens. R.J. Palmer of Winchester and Ed Miller of Cynthiana were among four Democrats running in the 28th District. One Republican will await the primary winner.

The late filing period brought out some former legislators seeking to return.

Barry Metcalf, a Republican who served a term in the Senate, filed against Democratic incumbent Ed Worley. Both are from Richmond.

Rick Rand, a former Democratic state senator, filed to run in the 47th House District.

Bill Welty, a former Carrollton mayor, is also running in the 47th District, a new district carved out of Carroll, Henry, Trimble and part of Oldham counties. Welty said he traveled to Frankfort on Tuesday to file but waited until the redistricting fight was over to enter the race.

"It kept you on pins and needles from one day to the next," he said.

Williams removes Mongiardo from panel after spat

The Associated Press

FRANKFORT — A war of words between Senate President David Williams and Sen. Daniel Mongiardo escalated Friday when Williams removed Mongiardo, the only physician in the Senate, from a Medicaid oversight panel.

Mongiardo, a Democrat, will be replaced as chairman of the Medicaid Managed Care Oversight Committee by Sen. Vernie McGaha, R-Russell Springs, a retired school administrator.

Williams, a Republican, said Mongiardo has not observed proper decorum, but it was clear he was punishing the freshman from Hazard for challenging him.

The latest sniping between the two took place last week when Williams interrupted a speech by Mongiardo, saying he wanted to make sure Kentucky Educational Television cameras had a clear view of Mongiardo.

Mongiardo responded Thursday. "If you move just a little bit to the left there, I think there's an ego in the way of the camera shot," Mongiardo said to Williams, who presides over the Senate.

Partisan bickering forces state prudence

In a recession, private companies must cut their expenditures to match the shortfall in revenues as their sales and profits decline.

Some economists describe recessions — as painful as they are for everyone — as a sort of cleansing mechanism in which private companies are forced to get back to the basics of their businesses. Recessions also expose the business frauds, such as Enron, whose swindling ways escape notice during the boom days.

While private companies must make do with what revenues they have — and what money they can convince their bankers to lend them — governments have the power to force people to send them more money through higher taxes.

In Kentucky, we have the Republicans who control the state Senate to thank for the fact that Gov. Paul Patton's recent budget was basically a make-do spending plan. Rather than proposing more taxes to make up for recession-induced shortfalls, Patton's budget borrows a little here and cuts a little there on its way to funding the state's essential needs for the next two years.

Since the governor didn't propose any tax increases, it can't be known for sure what would have been their fate in the General Assembly. But what happened two years ago is a pretty good indication of what would have taken place.

In the 2000 legislature, the Democrat-controlled House passed a package of tax "reforms" that basically amounted to an increase, although it also involved shifting some of the tax burden from the backs of lower-income people. But the Republican-controlled Senate refused to go along with the plan, seeing it for what it was — a tax increase.

We have no doubt that had the governor proposed a budget this year that ignored the need for the government to tighten its belt and make adjustments when everyone in the private sector has been forced to do the same thing, the Republicans in the Senate would have shot it down again.

Bipartisan government in Frankfort, in which the Democrats are now being forced to share power with the Republicans, might not be pretty — in fact, it's been downright ugly — but we're convinced it's working in the best interests of people of Kentucky. They should not have to face higher state taxes as they struggle to adjust to a slumping economy.

Enron shows how corrupt Washington is

by DONALD KAUL

A few years ago Daniel Patrick Moynahan (now a former U.S. Senator but then the Senate's reigning intellectual) published a celebrated article entitled "Defining Deviancy Down." In it he argued that our society had a lamentable tendency, when confronted by bad behavior that was widespread, to redefine badness in order to make it seem acceptable, rather than take measures to combat it.

Thus the movements to "decriminalize" marijuana, issue amnesty to draft dodgers and remove the stigma from out-of-wedlock pregnancies, among other things.

"Yes!" said the conservatives. "Exactly right." The country was going to hell in a liberal hand-basket and only a dose of good, old-fashioned conservative values could turn the tide.

Thus the prayer-in-school movement, the rise of William Bennett as a virtue maven and the entire "family values" agenda of the Republican Party, among other things.

Well, we've had our dose of good old Republican values for some time now and the welfare-cheat is no more. Instead we have the corporate crook who operates under the benign patronage of Congress and the president of the United States.

We have Enron, a company whose corrupt but well-connected executives fleeced the public and their own employees of more than a billion dollars before the business crashed and burned. Surveying the wreckage, administration apologists have been quick to say, "Nothing illegal was done." And they may be right.

You see, the Enron people had the foresight to buy off all the relevant politicians beforehand so that they could operate in a virtually unregulated environment. They didn't break any (or many) laws because there weren't any (or many) to break.

I'm using words loosely here. When I say they "bought off" politicians I don't mean that they gave them money directly. Not often, at any rate.

No, they gave them campaign contributions, hundreds and hundreds of thousands of dollars in campaign contributions. They gave them to Republicans and to Democrats, but mostly they gave them to Republicans.

The Republicans are amusing in their efforts to get out from under that cloud. They're saying it's all Bill Clinton's fault. (That's their answer to everything.) And while Mr. Clinton is not blameless in the matter — he rarely is — this is basically a Republican scandal.

Not only was Enron George Bush's chief political sponsor, it put Wendy Gramm, wife of the powerful Republican Phil Gramm, on its board and paid her a million dollars or more for her services. Sen. Gramm, not so incidentally, was instrumental in getting energy commodity trading (Enron's chief business) exempted from government regulation and public disclosure.

I said this was basically a Republican scandal. Let me amend that. It is a Republican scandal primarily because the Republicans were at the wheel at the time of the crash, but Democrats took Enron money too.

Indeed, the company gave money and favors to so many people that it's hard to find a disinterested party in Washington to investigate them. Enron money found its way into the pockets of just about everybody to the right of Ralph Nader.

They're trying to paint this as a business scandal in Washington and it's certainly that. The accounting practices employed in bilking the public certainly should result in jail time for a few of those involved.

Bush's rallying cry to persist in the war on terror

by GEORGE GEDDA
ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — There was little warmup. Only a few seconds passed in his State of the Union address before President Bush got to the heart of his message: "The civilized world faces unprecedented dangers."

As expected, Bush said terrorist groups such as al-Qaida continue to pose a threat. The surprise was the beligerency of his remarks directed at Iraq, Iran and North Korea. These countries, he said, constitute an "axis of evil." He added: "The price of indifference would be catastrophic."

It was perhaps the most pugnacious speech by an American president since Ronald Reagan assailed the Soviet Union as an "evil empire" in 1983.

Just a month ago, the administration was touting the progress made toward the adoption by the U.N. Security Council of "smart sanctions" against Iraq. The plan calls for easing curbs on the flow of civilian goods into Iraq while making it more difficult for Saddam Hussein to acquire ingredients for weapons of mass destruction.

Bush made no mention of smart sanctions and did not say precisely what he had in mind for Saddam. Dovish members of the Bush administration doubt there is a good way militarily to dislodge the Iraqi leader. Others believe, along with former Pentagon aide Richard Perle, that the administration should take pre-emptive action against Saddam lest he strike first.

As for North Korea, the administration was contemplating sending an envoy to Pyongyang to affirm the seriousness of its proposal in June to restart talks on security issues. Again, there was no mention of this Tuesday night nor of Secretary of State Colin Powell's stated willingness to meet the North Koreans "anytime, any place."

On Iran, Powell withdrew last spring a Clinton-era offer to open an official dialogue. Bush clearly raised the ante on Iran, perhaps irritated by Iran's reported role in an abortive attempt to arm Palestinians and reported effort to undermine the newly installed pro-Western government in Afghanistan.

Joseph Cirincione, a nonproliferation expert at the Carnegie Endowment for International Peace, said after Bush's speech he believes the president went too far.

"There are real dangers here, but the president is exaggerating them," Cirincione said. "It is not at all clear that the danger is so great as to begin a new war."

Cirincione said he would have felt more comfortable if Bush had talked about enforcing chemical, biological and other treaties designed to limit the possibility of war.

Baker Spring of the Heritage Foundation saw Bush's speech "as a rallying cry to continue the war on terrorism."

He said Bush was correct in pointing out that the nation is not yet free from the terrorism threat. He added that the potential for an anthrax attack with massive loss of life is far greater than that of another attack by a hijacked aircraft.

Bush's saber rattling almost certainly will cause an outcry in Europe. Turkey, for example, believes an American effort to depose Saddam could lead to instability in the region and perhaps to the fragmentation of Turkey itself. Based on past statements, close allies such as Britain and Germany are expected to be edgy in the wake of Bush's speech.

Bush's address was a startling departure from the great majority of State of the Union addresses, in which the focus has been on domestic policy.

Religion

Bible being issued in a gender-neutral version

by RICHARD N. OSTLING
AP RELIGION WRITER

The International Bible Society said Monday that America's best-selling modern Bible is about to get an update using gender-neutral wording, despite past criticism of that idea from conservatives.

The revision will be called "Today's New International Version," or TNIV. The original "New International Version," which has sold more than 150 million copies worldwide since 1978, will remain on the market.

The New Testament of the latest version goes on sale in April with the full Bible including Old Testament books expected by 2005.

Zondervan of Grand Rapids, Mich., owned by HarperCollins, holds North American rights for both versions. To date, the Bible society and Zondervan have spent $2 million to develop the new translation but they did not disclose other financial terms.

Both versions, the work of evangelical translators, are especially popular in the conservative, Protestant heart of America's competitive Bible market.

Randy Stinson, executive director of the Council on Biblical Manhood and Womanhood, a Louisville, Ky., group that works to preserve gender specific language, said Monday he had not yet seen the revisions but was concerned that word meanings may have been altered.

"This is incredibly serious to evangelicals, how the Bible is translated," Stinson said. "We believe the Bible is the word of God, so changing these things deliberately is dangerous."

The older version's gender usage became hotly disputed in 1997 when World magazine, a conservative weekly, reported that the Bible society was working on an inclusive-language revision. The society had already published such an edition with a British publisher.

Leaders of the Southern Baptist Convention, the largest U.S. Protestant denomination, criticized the language change, as did James Dobson of the influential "Focus on the Family" radio broadcast.

After meeting with critics, the Bible society said it would halt publication of Britain's inclusive edition and had "abandoned all plans for gender-related changes in future editions of the New International Version."

The Bible society, based in Colorado Springs, Colo., isn't quite abandoning its pledge because the latest version won't replace the "New International Version" — it will just be sold alongside the older translation.

Examples of some changes from 1978 to 2002: "sons of God" to "children of God" in Matthew 5:9, and "a man is justified by faith" to "a person is justified by faith" in Romans 3:28.

A publicity release says "the TNIV is not merely a gender-accurate edition of the NIV," because 70 percent of the changes do not relate to gender. Also, terms referring to God and Jesus Christ have not been altered.

Like the 1978 Bible, the new version is aimed at Protestants, and will not appear in an edition with the extra biblical books recognized by Roman Catholic and Orthodox churches.

The major U.S. sales competitor for the NIV has been the venerable King James Version. But the international versions will now also have to compete with two evangelical translations that appeared last year:

■ "English Standard Version" from Crossway, a slight update of the 1952 Revised Standard Version that makes modest use of gender-free terminology.

■ "Holman Christian Standard Bible" from Broadman & Holman, the Southern Baptist book house, which rejects gender-neutral wording. It is currently available only in the New Testament, with the full Bible due in 2004.

All or part of the Bible is currently available in some 70 English translations.

New 'Lord of the Rings' film wins Tolkien more Christian fans

by THOMAS WAGNER
ASSOCIATED PRESS

LONDON — Besides capturing readers' imaginations and thrilling moviegoers, the fantasy epic "The Lord of the Rings" has won high praise from religious groups for what they see as Christian values in the story.

While the extent of the trilogy's Christian parallels is a matter of debate, there's no denying that author J.R.R. Tolkien — usually portrayed as a tweedy Oxford University professor — turned strongly to Roman Catholicism following tragedies in his youth.

Interest in Tolkien and the religious element of his work has heated up since the release of the film "The Lord of the Rings: The Fellowship of the Ring," especially among Roman Catholics and conservative Protestants in the United States.

Baptist Press, the news agency of the Southern Baptist Convention, published a review of the film praising its "spiritual overtones." And a new book, "Finding God in the Lord of the Rings," co-authored by members of Focus on the Family, a conservative American group, praises the film for the "transcendent truths of Christianity (that) bubble up throughout this story."

The roots of those story elements may lie in the author's life.

Born in 1892, John Ronald Reuel Tolkien was only 4 when his father died unexpectedly in South Africa while the rest of the family was on vacation in England.

His mother died when he was 12, having raised her children in a rural village outside Birmingham that Tolkien loved. She had been shunned by her own relatives for leaving the Church of England to become a Catholic, so Tolkien and his younger brother became wards of a kindly priest, the Rev. Francis Morgan. Both boys became devout Catholics.

Tolkien flourished in grammar school, where his language skills allowed him to debate in Greek and Latin.

At Oxford, he became an expert in the Old Norse language, and emphasized the ACLU wants "Jesus is Lord" signs taken down outside Louisiana town

by DOUG SIMPSON
ASSOCIATED PRESS

NEW ORLEANS — The American Civil Liberties Union filed a federal lawsuit Tuesday demanding the removal of signs outside a southeastern Louisiana town that proclaim: "Jesus is Lord over Franklinton."

ACLU officials said public money was used to put up the signs on state roads, violating the constitutional separation of church and state.

"Can you imagine the hostility that Jews, Muslims, members of other minority faiths and non-believers must feel when living in or passing through that community?" asked Linton Carney, who first saw the signs in July while driving through Franklinton, 55 miles north of New Orleans. He said he has no religious affiliation.

The suit names the town, its mayor and surrounding Washington Parish as defendants.

"Public officials in that parish know the law. Unfortunately, they decided to engage in endorsement of religion," said Joe Cook, executive director of the ACLU of Louisiana.

Franklinton Mayor Earle Brown said the town had nothing to do with the signs and has told the ACLU so.

"We have no knowledge of who put them up," said Brown, adding that they appeared a couple of years ago.

Last week, ACLU officials threatened to sue the mayor of Inglis, Fla., unless she removes her proclamation banning Satan within the town limits from posts at the town's entrances.

The mayor, a devout Christian, wrote the proclamation on Halloween night. It was typed on town stationery and affixed with the town seal.

Deficit could force job cuts at headquarters

The Associated Press

LOUISVILLE — The executive director of The Presbyterian Church's General Assembly Council said only two or three employees could lose their jobs at the church's Louisville headquarters because of a $1.9 million budget deficit this year.

John Detterick said the other 10 or so cuts will involve positions that are already vacant. However, Detterick said, the possible $5.6 deficit the church is facing next year could prompt more cuts.

Other proposed cuts include grant programs, education, travel and other expenses.

"We expect no real impact on people in '02," said Detterick, who blamed the budget cuts on less investment income and donations than expected, due to the recession.

The denomination's General Assembly Council, an 87-member governing body, is expected to vote Thursday afternoon on budget recommendations.

If approved, the budget for "unrestricted spending" would decline from $38.2 million to $36.3 million this year. That budget, however, represents less than a third of the $131 million in total spending for the council, which oversees much of the church's administration and mission outreach. Most council revenue comes from endowments and other sources earmarked for specific projects.

A Message to My Friends and Supporters

For several weeks, I have been encouraged by you, my many, many supporters and good friends, to enter the race for Floyd County Judge-Executive. Your demonstration of confidence in me, as a person, and as the chief executive of our county government, has been both humbling and gratifying. Your encouragement, your trust in me, and your belief in my abilities, mean a great deal to me. I also appreciate that you agree with my concerns for the future of our county.

After a lot of thought, I made the very difficult decision not to seek the judge-executive's office this year. Two factors guided me to this decision. First, I am at a point in my life where family obligations and responsibilities must come above all else. Second, I am personally committed to contributing as much of myself as I can, to continue the successes of Governor Paul E. Patton's administration through my position with the Governor's Office. These very powerful influences, and these alone, led me not to stand as a candidate for your judge-executive in 2002.

My decision means I will continue working for the betterment of Floyd County and east Kentucky from a forum other than the county courthouse. It means my energies for improving our county, and the region, will be spent through channels other than the judge-executive's office. While I won't have a county title for the next four years, I will have the best interest of Floyd Countians and east Kentuckians in my heart, in all that I do.

I ask you to remember, I am not out of politics; I'm just not in this year's judge-executive race. I will work to continue to merit your support and your confidence. We will have other elections.

Sponsors sought for summer food program

FRANKFORT — The Kentucky Department of Education is seeking sponsors to operate the 2002 Summer Food Service Program in Kentucky.

The Summer Food Service Program provides nutritious meals to children without regard to race, color, national origin, age (within statutory limits), sex or handicap, during extended school vacation periods.

In most areas, the program operates from May until September. Meals and snacks are served to children in such places as schools, playgrounds and parks.

Public or private nonprofit schools, units of local, municipal, county or state government, and public or private nonprofit agencies may qualify as sponsors of the Summer Food Service Program. Residential summer camps whose enrollment includes needy children may also act as program sponsors.

Qualified sponsors are reimbursed for program operating and administrative expenses up to the current rates of reimbursement. To be eligible, sponsors must provide continuing service to the community, serve meals on a regular schedule to children or provide meals as a part of an organized program for enrolled children at camps and show they are financially and administratively capable of operating the program.

More information is available from Jaci Williams, child nutrition program consultant, Summer Food Service Program, Division of School and Community Nutrition, 1024 Capital Center Drive, Frankfort, KY 40601, phone (502) 573-4390, fax (502) 573-6775. There also is information on the School and Community Nutrition website at www.kde.state.ky.us/odss/nutrition/.

In the operation of child nutrition programs there is no discrimination regardless of race, color, sex, age, handicap, religion, or national origin. Any complaints concerning discrimination should be directed to the Secretary of Agriculture, Washington, DC 20250.

Drugs

ment.

John L. Brownlee, the U.S. attorney for the Western District of Virginia, said he wasn't sure exactly what ties Knox had to Purdue Pharma L.P. of Stamford, Conn., which manufactures OxyContin.

"We know he gave some promotional speeches for Purdue," Brownlee said.

Purdue spokesman Jim Heins said Knox spoke at two seminars in 1999 and was paid $500 by the company for one of his appearances.

"They were not promotional speeches," Heins said. "The subject of those talks were advances in the area of pain management. It wasn't going to be a talk to flog OxyContin."

Heins said he doesn't know if his company recruited Knox to speak. He also said he doesn't know Knox, and Knox had very little to do with Purdue Pharma.

"He only had two speeches. We've had other doctors who've done many more," he said.

OxyContin is one of several drugs that Knox, Boone and Durham are charged with illegally dispensing. The 32-count indictment, unsealed Friday, alleges the three also distributed Oxy IR, MS Contin, oxycodone, methadone, morphine, Dexidrine and Ritalin for no legitimate medical purpose.

Knox's attorney, Tony Anderson, said Friday that he had not read the entire 49-page indictment and couldn't comment on the arrests, or on Knox's ties to Purdue Pharma. "I know that Dr. Knox will enter a plea of not guilty and maintains that he has violated no laws in a way that has done intentionally at any time," Anderson said.

Randy Ramseyer, a federal prosecutor in Abingdon, said fraud investigators in Virginia started to focus on doctors in 1997 after finding several who had a large following of drug-addicted patients.

"It's an easy way to make a lot of money," Ramseyer said.

Doctors would write patients prescriptions for painkillers, and Medicaid or some other insurer would pay for the doctor's visit and the medication. The patient then had a prescription for the medication, and could either use it or sell it for profit on the street, Ramseyer said.

Five doctors have been convicted on criminal charges in Virginia as part of the ongoing federal investigation into health care fraud. Several doctors also are facing criminal charges in other states — including manslaughter and murder charges — for similar crimes.

While investigating Knox's downtown practice, authorities found former patients and relatives of patients who said Knox would prescribe narcotics to anyone who asked with little knowledge of their medical condition.

According to search warrant applications filed in federal court in June and July 2001, Knox and his staff mishandled numerous patients during the past several years.

The applications allege that Knox continued to prescribe narcotics to patients he knew were drug addicts. The brother of a patient who died of an overdose told investigators his brother was trading marijuana to Knox in exchange for OxyContin and methadone.

Another drug addict and former patient said Knox prescribed him the painkiller Dilaudid without any real knowledge of his medical history, according to the warrant application. During the first visit, the patient said Knox prescribed him 120 4 mg tablets after only talking with him for a few minutes.

If convicted on all counts, Knox, Boone and Durham would face maximum penalties of life in prison and a fine of about $27 million. James and O'Gee would each face a maximum of 15 years in prison and a $500,000 fine.

Abuse

In a criminal complaint filed by Collins, Ansel Hall is accused of abuse for allegedly causing harm with a horse whip and a gun barrel to a 12-year-old that he was guardian of.

Trooper Collins also filed a complaint against Georgia Collins for committing the offense of first-degree criminal abuse allegedly causing harm to the boy of whom she had custody and allegedly permitting him to be harmed by Ansel Hall.

The couple was arraigned at the Floyd County Court House on Friday at 8 a.m., at which time Ansel Hall requested a public defender.

Cocaine

Authorities searched Triplett's residence and discovered roughly three more ounces of suspected cocaine, along with various other items that could be, according to police, used as valuable evidence in the case.

The total estimated street value of what the police believe to be the processed cocaine found in both Triplett's car and home is approximately $25,200.

The KSP Drug Enforcement Section II is continuing the investigation.

Both Triplett and Hall are currently being held at the Floyd County Detention Center on a $50,000 cash bond.

Freshman wins Breathitt conservation essay contest

by RENEE M. SNOWDEN
BREATHITT COUNTY BUREAU

A ninth-grade student from the Jackson City School will receive a $50 savings bond from the Louisville Courier-Journal and a $50 cash award from the Breathitt County Conservation District.

This year there were the total of 193 essays entered in the contest. The theme for the contest was "2001 — A Water Odyssey in Kentucky." All students who were in grades 6-12 could participate.

The contest is sponsored annually by the Kentucky Department of Education, the Kentucky Association of Conservation Districts, the Louisville Courier-Journal, Kentucky Farm Bureau Insurance Company and Kentucky Farm Bureau Federation on a statewide level, and locally by the Breathitt County Conservation District and the Breathitt County Board of Education.

This year's winner is Julie Sygiel, a freshman at the Jackson City School. The runner-up is Tyler Richardson, a freshman at the Riverside Christian High School.

The awards will be presented at the district's annual awards banquet, which will be held sometime in early spring.

Beltway

But in a far larger sense this is the ultimate political scandal, one that goes to the rotten core of our political system. Corporations and individuals who give large sums to politicians and their parties do so in the expectation of reward. And the reward often comes at the expense of the public.

My favorite aspect of the scandal so far has been President Bush's response to it. He now insists that he hardly even knew Kenneth Lay, Enron's chief executive and the largest single contributor to Mr.

Bush's political campaigns. He pronounced himself "outraged" that Enron had so badly misled its stockholders. Yes, he said that, and he kept a straight face when he said it.

You have to admire chutzpah like that. Kind of puts you in mind of Bill Clinton, doesn't it?

Donald Kaul recently retired as Washington columnist for the Des Moines Register. He has covered the foolishness in our nation's capital for 29 years, winning a number of modestly coveted awards along the way.

Cry

The president did not ignore those issues, stressing the need to create jobs and improve health care and education. In election year, these are areas Democrats are likely to use against a president whose sustained job approval ratings have been the best of any president since World War II.

But Bush said this was no time to be complacent about the terrorist threat.

When he listed his three "great goals" for America, he said winning the war on terrorism was No. 1. This was followed by protecting the homeland and reviving the economy.

Early on, he said the nation "has never been stronger" but then went on to describe how vulnerable it is in the face of terrorist groups and terrorist-minded nations. In the first 20 minutes or so, he used the word terror or one of its variations 29 times.

America cannot afford to relax, he said, contending that "tens of thousands of trained terrorists are still at large. These enemies view the entire world as a battlefield, and we must pursue them wherever they are. ... I will not stand by as peril draws closer and closer."

violations at the location as a reason for rejecting the court's attempts to secure funding for other county projects.

The Garth landfill was mentioned again as recently as last week when Gov. Paul Patton spotlighted efforts to eliminate similar locations throughout the commonwealth as part of a statewide effort to improve on garbage accumulation in Kentucky.

Second only to improving water conditions for county residents, cleaning up the county has been a high profile concern for Thompson since taking office four years ago.

Thompson and the fiscal court exemplified this continued effort during their meeting Friday through another in a long list of payments to PRIDE workers still busying themselves on the Left Beaver Cleanup Project, which suffered various setbacks after the flash flooding which struck the county in early August.

Thompson issued a payment of $10,100 to Martin Excavating and amended a resolution for payment on Dec. 21 to Conner Enterprises Inc., which the court will now issue a payment of $5,300.

The total for those payments — $15,400 — will be reimbursed to the fiscal court, according to Thompson.

During Friday's meeting the fiscal court also:

Accepted a bid from Johnson Construction Co. for re-roofing efforts on the Floyd County Community Center at Martin for $51,250.

Transferred $92.92 from the Supplies and Equipment budget and $17,450 from the New Equipment budget to be used toward the purchase of a new backhoe for use in county work projects.

Payments were presented as due and payable to Holland Enterprises in the amount of $37,450, and Aileen Luxmore in the amount of $92.92.

Commissioner Larry Foster Stumbo was not present for Friday's meeting.

Female warden not only lives in the 'big house'; she runs it

The Associated Press

SUMMIT — Linda Sanders says she's amused by the reactions people have when she tells them she lives in the big house near the Federal Correctional Institution at Summit.

"They always say, 'Oh, that's the warden's house. Your husband must be the warden,'" she said.

Not quite. The 40-year-old Sanders is the new warden at FCI. She replaced Edward Perez, who transferred to Three Rivers, Texas.

FCI-Summit is Sanders' eighth stop since joining the Federal Bureau of Prisons in 1987.

Among her assignments are two years as case management coordinator at the Metropolitan Detention Center in Los Angeles, a 10-story high-rise in the middle of downtown L.A.; supervisor of a federal boot camp for female inmates in Bryan, Texas, and associate warden at the Federal Medical Center in Carswell, La., the only high-security facility for women in the federal prison system.

Sanders began her career as a correctional officer at the federal prison in Sandstone, Minn. Her resume also includes two stops in Arizona. Before coming to Summit, she was associate warden in Petersburg, Va.

Sanders is FCI-Summit's first female warden, something she dismisses as "not a big deal."

"The big deal to me is that I'm a warden at this point in my career," she said.

Sanders said she is among 17 female wardens out of 105 institutions in the federal prison system.

She said she hadn't faced any special challenges during her career because she is a woman.

"The challenges come mostly from society's view of you as a female working in an institution, and that's a societal institution that's bigger than the prison system," she said.

Sanders is a native of Mount Vernon, Ill. Her current assignment is the closest she has had to her hometown since joining the prison system, she said.

Sanders, a single mother, said she and her children Jalen, 9, and Jordan, 3, moved to Boyd County just before Christmas and spent the holiday in a hotel.

"The kids loved it," she said. "They opened their presents, then they got to go swimming."

Sanders said she was pleased to be coming to an institution that achieved 100 percent compliance with all mandatory standards on its recent re-accreditation audit.

"I don't think there's a lot that needs to be changed here," she said. "It's just a matter of going with the flow and making changes as needed."

Rings

growth of English from its Anglo-Saxon roots. He also taught literary classics, including ancient mythology, rarely discussing works more recent than Chaucer.

He married and had four children, one of whom grew up to become a Catholic priest. In addition to being a devoted husband and father, Tolkien also formed several close male friendships.

Tolkien tried to convert C.S. Lewis, one of his Oxford friends, to Catholicism, but instead helped to move Lewis from atheism to fervent Christianity and loyal Anglicanism. Lewis later won fame as the author of "The Chronicles of Narnia," a children's fantasy series that is widely seen as a Christian allegory.

"The Lord of the Rings," written at Oxford from 1937 to 1949, is a three-volume saga about Frodo, a hobbit from the homely and innocent shire, who must secretly carry an all-powerful ring across the ancient kingdom of Middle Earth to the land of Mordor and destroy it by throwing it into Mount Doom.

That has to happen before Sauron, the evil force who knows Frodo has the ring, can obtain it and rule a world that existed before magic disappeared and humans became Earth's dominant creatures.

Like Tolkien, Frodo is an orphan aided by his loyal male friends. During his quest, Frodo is helped and defended by a fellowship including Gandalf, the wizard; Gimli, the dwarf; Legolas, the elf; and Aragorn, the human.

The book's page-turning adventure of good versus evil, which has hooked millions of children and adults, has been interpreted in many ways by groups as diverse as hippies and pacifists, conservatives and nationalists.

Tolkien, who died in 1973, denied having written an allegory, saying: "I dislike allegory when I SMELL it." At one point, he said he was only writing a fairy tale.

But at the age of 81, the author also wrote to the Rev. Robert Murray, a Jesuit priest, saying: "The Lord of the Rings" is, of course, a fundamentally religious and Catholic work. ... The religious element is absorbed into the story and the symbolism."

Tolkien's official biographer, Humphrey Carpenter, says the story reflects the author's personal religious beliefs but was written for a wide audience.

"The book can be seen as a Christian allegory, but that wasn't Tolkien's primary objective," Carpenter said in an interview. "He set out to experiment with languages, real and invented ones, and the many themes he included in the novel simply reflected his own Catholic background."

Many readers don't see religion in the series, which doesn't include churches, religious ceremonies or gods, and doesn't mention "heaven and hell," "Bible" or "sin."

Still, some Christians believe Tolkien's faith is clearly reflected in the plot, characters and themes of the book, and in the first of director Peter Jackson's three films on the epic.

For example, Frodo is seen by some fans as a Christlike figure, who reluctantly carries the ring — a metaphorical cross — in order to save mankind.

Frodo's fellowship of supporters also has been seen by some Christians as an allegory for Christ's apostles. They include Gandalf, who comes back to life at one point in the story, and the human Boromir, who is tempted by the evil ring, tries to steal it from Frodo, then confesses his mistake and gives up his life for the fellowship.

In addition, the book contains little irony, no sexual relationships, and generally portrays its women as pure, innocent mother figures.

The story has been praised by Anne Navarro, the movie critic for the United States Conference of Catholic Bishops, whose reviews appear in Catholic newspapers around the United States.

"I don't think Tolkien meant it to be a Christian novel," she said in a telephone interview from New York. "But there are values in his book that can be compared to values we find in the gospel."

to access accident reports immediately. Hopkins said it would cut the time it takes to get an accident report from a week or so to a few days.

Each grade and middle school in Pike County was adopted by an officer, with a total of 22 schools and approximately 19 officers. Hopkins said that some officers would adopt more than one school to prevent anyone from being left out.

Officers will be spending time at the schools doing things such as having lunch with the students, getting involved in extracurricular activities, and just being there as a friend to students.

Bevins Elementary was adopted by Trooper Jimmy Nolte. Nolte has been with Post 9 since November 2000 and is a resident of the nearby Canada area.

Nolte spoke at the opening ceremony and encouraged students to feel comfortable around the police officer.

"I know some of you are scared of police officers, and I want you to know that you can come and talk to me," said Nolte.

Nolte later shared why his involvement in such a program is important to him.

"It's a good feeling to be involved with kids, and to play a part in their growing up and being a good example to them," said Nolte.

A sign with the Adopt a School logo and Nolte's name was hung in front of Bevins to let the public know which officer had adopted the school. These signs, made by the Transportation Cabinet, will be placed in front of every school and will list each adopting officer's name on them.

According to Hopkins, the goal of KSP is to engage this program in the entire post area, which includes Pike, Floyd, Martin, Johnson, and Magoffin counties. Hopkins said that it appears that Floyd would be the next county the program would adopt.

"We have received full support from Supt. Paul Fanning," said Hopkins.

KSP will be meeting with principals of all Floyd County grade and middle schools in February to discuss the program. Hopkins said he anticipates the program to be active by March.

According to Hopkins, the program will generate a database by which officers can identify areas with a high number of accidents and can focus on the causes. It would discourage people with illegal intentions from hanging around the school, possibly preventing abductions and drug introductions. It could also prevent a negative action that a student may be contemplating.

Floyd native receives national education recognition

PARIS — Floyd County native Arnold "Woodrow" Carter has been selected as one of 25 superintendents nationwide to participate in the first annual Urban Superintendents' Academy, sponsored by the Broad Center for Urban Superintendents.

The honor formally recognizes Carter as a creative, accomplished, entrepreneurial leader with a passion for improving education. Through the Urban Superintendents' Academy, Carter will complete a rigorous part-time executive leadership development program designed to meet individual needs and focusing on the development of critical skills needed as an urban superintendent. During the academy's seven-week-long learning sessions, Carter will travel around the country to explore firsthand the responsibilities superintendents face on a daily basis.

Carter, who once served as state manager of the Floyd County School District and who currently serves as superintendent of Bourbon County Schools, views the academy as a wonderful opportunity for both personal professional development and for enriching Bourbon County Schools.

"I have always said that there are three stories — the local story, the state story and the national story. And I've always emphasized how important it is that we be cognizant of all three perspectives," Carter said. "This program will afford me the opportunity to fully experience the national story of education."

The Broad Center for Superintendents is a non-profit organization established in 2001 by the Broad Foundation in cooperation with Gov. John Engler of Michigan. The center's mission is to make a positive difference in the educational achievement of urban children by identifying, preparing and supporting outstanding leaders with the capacity to become successful urban school superintendents.

The above map shows the area being studied for relief from traffic congestion. It runs from Coal Run Village to downtown Pikeville along U.S. 23.

Meeting to focus on ways to relieve congestion on U.S. 23

PIKEVILLE — Residents, business and property owners, and workers who are affected by traffic congestion along U.S. 23 from Pikeville to Cowpen Road are encouraged to attend a public meeting called by the Project Engineering Team from District 12, Department of Highways, on Thursday, Feb. 7, from 5 to 8 p.m. in the commons area at Pikeville High School.

The purpose of the meeting is to review and discuss alternatives for what is known as the highway department's U.S. 23 Congestion Relief Project. Linda Wagner-Justice, Chief District Engineer, said that maps of the options which are being considered to alleviate traffic congestion in this highly-traveled six-mile section of U.S. 23 in Pike County will be displayed so that people can get an "up close" look.

Several stations will be set up where brief presentations by members of the engineering team will be made on a particular alternate about every 15 minutes. Numerous alternates have been studied, including six-laning U.S. 23, building frontage roads through Weddington Plaza, construction of an interchange at Buckley's Creek, and a U.S. 23 bypass.

At about 6 p.m., a presentation will be made by District 12 engineers and project consultants. Questions and public comments will be taken throughout the meeting. Oral and written statements made at the meeting or submitted within 15 days following the meeting will be considered by the Kentucky Transportation Cabinet in the decision-making process for the advancement of the project.

Kevin Damron, P.E., Preconstruction Branch manager for Highway District 12, said that this public meeting is an outgrowth of one held about a year ago.

"We have studied all the ideas and alternatives which were discussed at the first public meeting, and the purpose of this meeting is really to present our findings, the result of our investigation into the options available," Damron said. "All the options are still out there on the table. We will ask the public to tell us what they like and don't like. Our Community Advisory Committee for the project will then help us narrow down our choices to two or three alternatives that we will study in more depth."

The Community Advisory Committee members include Pike County Judge/Executive Karen Gibson, Pikeville Mayor Frank Morris, Robert Billips, Jerry Bishop, Coal Run Mayor Phyllis Muncy, Pastor Paul Badgett, Bill Ramsey Jr., IDEA Board Chairman Leon Huffman, Pikeville College CFO Leslie Combs, Everett Phillips of AEP, Kitty White of the Pike County Chamber, Cpt. Earl Mike Luttrell of Kentucky State Police, Frank Dawahare, Senator Ray S. Jones, Rep. Ira E. Branham.

Representatives of the Kentucky Transportation Cabinet who served on the committee are Damron, John Michael Johnson, Johnnie Ross, and Ray Polley. Consulting engineers include Tom Creasey of Jordan, Jones & Goulding and Brian Johnson, Glen Kelly, David Smith, and Tom Springer of QK4, formerly Presnell Associates.

Chief District Engineer Justice reminded residents that anyone desiring to attend the meeting who has a physical disability or condition for which the Transportation Cabinet needs to provide accommodations should contact John Michael Johnson, Project Manager, or Berita Castle, Engineering Assistant, at the Pikeville District 12 office at 606-433-7791 by Monday, Feb. 4. A request for special accommodation due to physical disability or condition does not have to be in writing.

COMMENTARY

Anything normal on this day?

by RICK BENTLEY
TIMES COLUMNIST

On Sunday evening shortly after 6 p.m., half the civilized world will watch the New England Patriots play for the world championship of American football against the St. Louis Rams.

It's an odd time to play a professional football game. All season long they start these things at 1 p.m. and 4:15, and then the made-for-cable game at 8:30. But for the biggest game of them all, they wait until sometime between six and 6:30.

I don't know why, but it works. Normally, the Super Bowl is the most viewed event of the season. It draws more people than the Oscars, the final episode of Friends and even more than those weird people on Survivor. Everyone will watch it.

And if you've made it through the first 122 words of this, you'll probably see it too.

After all, the Super Bowl has little to do with football, really. Oh, there's a game; that's true enough. But the Super Bowl is more of an event.

For the last several years, I've gone to my friend Mike Spears' house to watch it. I'd say most of you watch it from the same place each year too.

The same 12 to 15 guys are there, the same four to six children, every year.

And we have a blast.

See, this is a group of old friends and new ones who are pretty well drawn together because we've been in the same fantasy football league for a decade now. The Big Sandy Football League is maybe the best around, or has been in the past. There's very little money on the line. It's more about bragging rights.

CAMPBELLSVILLE - Coaching ties run deep in Paintsville. The Paintsville High School boys' basketball program has a whole lot to do with that. Paintsville High alum John Pelphrey is Billy Donovan's top assistant at the University of Florida. His younger brother, Jerry, is a member of Travis Ford's coaching staff at Eastern Kentucky University. The Pelphreys enjoyed stellar careers at Paintsville during their high school days. At about the same time the Pelphrey boys, were starring yet another star was showing bright. A star which would eventually sign with Notre Dame. His name—Keith Adkins. His current occupation—Campbellsville University head men's basketball coach.

In his inaugural season in 2000-2001 Adkins guided the Campbellsville University Tigers to a 20-13 finish that earned the program its second consecutive trip to the NAIA National Championship Tournament and a ranking in the Top 25. Coach Adkins looks to continue to guide the basketball program to new heights.

Adkins played in three state tournaments as an all-star backcourt player for the Tigers in the mid-late 80s. In 1987 he helped lead his Paintsville team to a Final Four appearance and in 1988 he was a member of the Kentucky All-Star team and a first team All-State player. He was named the USA Today Kentucky Male Athlete of the Year in 1988 for his performances in both basketball and baseball at Paintsville High School. His father, Charlie Adkins, is the Paintsville High School base-

PRESTONSBURG - Two standouts from Prestonsburg High School's 2001 Class 2A State Runner-up visited two-time defending NAIA National Champ Georgetown College recently. After a season like the Blackcats had, and with the talent of the P'burg roster, one would think college recruiters would be flocking to the Floyd County city to sign grid players, but such hasn't been the case, at least not yet anyway. A majority of the PHS senior football class could move on to further their playing careers on the collegiate level.

PHS seniors Chris Spriggs and Brandt Brooks visited Georgetown and have hopes of continuing their playing careers with the NAIA power. Both players had similar roles with the Prestonsburg team. Both excelled on defense for Prestonsburg head coach John DeRossett, but also contributed on offense, with Spriggs seeing the more offensive time of the two at a LEXINGTON - Transylvania, playing in its first season as a member of the Heartland Collegiate Athletic Conference, in baseball, has been selected to finish eighth in a vote of league coaches. Eighth is last in the conference.

One Leslie County product is entering his senior season at Transylvania, preparing to start his final season under his third head coach at the Lexington school. Senior Shane Mosley has high hopes for the upcoming season as the Pioneers enter play in a new conference.

Mosley saw time early as a freshman, and his hustle and attitude is infectious. While at Leslie County, Mosley was his team's MVP, best defensive player, was honored with the Leadership Award, and also won the Hustle Award. Mosley showed the type of impact on the baseball dia-

LEXINGTON - This wasn't the scenario Kentucky guard J.P. Blevins envisioned for his senior season.

The 6-2, 185-pounder from Edmonton, began the year on the biggest high of his athletic career, starting at point guard for the team he'd worshipped his entire life.

After only two games, however, he was replaced in the starting lineup by lightning-quick sophomore Cliff Hawkins. A sprained ankle then limited his effectiveness when he did find his way on to the floor.

He started just one of the Wildcats' next five games before breaking his right wrist against Indiana on Dec. 19.

On Saturday, Blevins hoped to return to the court against South Carolina (13-7, 3-4 Southeastern Conference) to resume a final year that began with so much promise.

"I've got the itch bad," he said before the 10th-ranked Wildcats (14-5, 4-3) left for Gainesville ear-

LEXINGTON - Summer play is a big part of a young basketball player's off-season. Or is there really an off-season?

Kentucky bears the distinction of being 'Basketball Country.' At the Kentucky Basketball Academy (KBA), we will honor this tradition. The purpose is to serve the Community while continuing the effort to strengthen the quality of basketball. At 48,000 square feet, the KBA includes five regulation high school floors, full size competition goals and seating for 1,200 spectators. The KBA offers the convenience of location given it is within one mile of Fayette Mall, Lexington Green, Shillito Park, New Circle Road and several hotels, in addition to being located in Central Kentucky. Other features of the KBA include:

- KBA Cafe with area restaurant items
- KBA Sports & Apparel
- Powerhouse Gym weight area
- Banquet and party room
- The KBA calendar will be active year-round. The following events will contribute to the attendance of over 300,000 people:
 - Twenty-two AAU tournaments annually
 - Camps for all skill levels
 - Seasonal leagues for various age groups, men, women, corporations (2nd and 3rd shifts, also) and clubs
 - Memberships for the family, individu-

FOOTBALL

NEW ORLEANS - The St. Louis Rams will start Rod Jones at right offensive tackle in the Super Bowl ahead of Ryan Tucker, who's been slow to recover from a sprained ankle.
NEW ORLEANS - Former San Diego Chargers head coach Mike Riley will join the Saints as assistant head coach and secondary coach.
CINCINNATI - Cincinnati Bengals running back Corey Dillon replaced Pittsburgh's injured Jerome Bettis on the Pro Bowl roster.
ATLANTA - Atlanta Falcons linebacker Keith Brooking was added to the Pro Bowl as the NFC's "need" player. It will be his first Pro Bowl.
SAN DIEGO - Joe Bugel, best known for forging the dominant offensive line known as the "Hogs" with the Washington Redskins in the 1980s, retired after coaching for 26 years in the NFL.

He spent the last four seasons as offensive line coach with the San Diego Chargers.
NEW ORLEANS - The NFL and soccer club F.C. Barcelona have reached an agreement the league hopes will help boost the popularity of American football in Europe. The soccer team believes the deal will give it heightened visibility in the United States.
Under a three-year agreement, the league and F.C. Barcelona will work together to support each other's operations.

OLYMPICS

DENVER - Cammi Granato scored two goals and Angela Ruggiero had four assists as the United States women's hockey team beat China 7-1 to finish 31-0 on its pre-Olympic tour.
SAN JOSE, Calif. - San Jose Sharks goalie Evgeni Nabokov lost his appeal and will not be able to play for Russia in the Salt Lake City Olympics. Nabokov previously represented Kazakhstan.

GOLF

MELBOURNE, Australia - Ernie Els shot a 3-under-par 69 at historic Royal Melbourne to take a three-stroke lead late in the second round of the Heineken Classic.
Els had three birdies and six bogeys to enter weekend play with an 11-under 133 total. Greg Norman was three strokes back at 8 under after shooting a 67. Wales' Mark Pilkington and Australia's Peter O'Malley and Stephen Leaney were tied for second with Norman. Leaney shot a 66, O'Malley 68 and Pilkington 70.

BOXING

LOS ANGELES - Mike Tyson will apply for a license to fight heavyweight champion Lennox Lewis at Staples Center this spring, the Los Angeles Times reported.

BASKETBALL

DALLAS - Belo Corp. has sold its minority stake in the Dallas Mavericks and their new downtown arena to team controlling owner Mark Cuban.
Belo will receive $27 million for its 12.38 percent share of the team and its 6.19 percent stake in the American Airlines Center, where the Mavericks and Dallas Stars play.
The company also withdrew the lawsuit it filed against Cuban. The company had alleged that Cuban reneged on an agreement to purchase the Belo stake under the same financial terms offered to former Mavericks owner Ross Perot Jr.

SOCCER

LOS ANGELES - Todd Saldana, whose college degree turned out to be fraudulent, won't return as UCLA's men's soccer coach next season.

TENNIS

BANGALORE, India - No. 6 Rick Leach and Ellis Ferreira defeated Wimbledon champions Donald Johnson and Jared Palmer 6-4, 7-6 (3) and advanced to the semifinals of the World Doubles Challenge Cup.
MILAN, Italy - Italy's Davide Sanguineti stunned top-seeded Juan Carlos Ferrero 6-2, 6-4 in the $361,000 Milan Indoors ATP tournament.
Defending champion and second-seeded Roger Federer overcame promising Russian Nikolay Davydenko 6-3, 6-7 (4), 7-5.

SKIING

TALLINN, Estonia - Cross-country star Kristina Smigun has tested negative in a second doping test, dramatically restoring the Olympic fortunes of one of Estonia's sports heroes.
The 24-year-old Smigun showed traces of the anabolic steroid 19-norandrostero in an "A" urine sample, but Estonia ski association officials said the "B" sample was negative and she can compete.
ARE, Sweden - Michaela Dorfmeister won the final World Cup giant slalom before the Olympics for her 12th Cup victory.
Dorfmeister increased her overall World Cup-leading points total to 926. Sonja Nef of Switzerland is second with 759, followed by Anja Paerson of Sweden with 724.

COLLEGE FOOTBALL

KNOXVILLE, Tenn. - The NCAA denied Tennessee receiver Donte Stallworth's request to have his eligibility reinstated after he changed his mind about entering the NFL draft.

BASEBALL

PHILADELPHIA - Philadelphia Phillies radio and television announcer Harry Kalas was voted the Ford C. Frick Award and will be inducted into the broadcasters' wing of the Hall of Fame on July 28.
Kalas, the voice of the Phillies since 1971, has called more than 5,000 Phillies games.

HORSE RACING

NEW YORK - Hall of Fame standardbred trainer Jimmy Cruise, Sr., died of a long illness. In 1942, Cruise won 27 consecutive races with the pacing mare, Miss Ruby. In all, he won more than 1,700 races and $6 million in his career.

Las Vegas can't happen, but if the fight is held elsewhere, you can be sure that it will set a pay-per-view record.
Tyson fans - oh yes, there are Tyson fans - will pay to watch, and so will people who hope to see him thrashed. Then there will be the curious, who want to see what wild and crazy thing Mike might do.
In a survey of 1,000 people 18 years and older conducted Jan. 25-27 by marketing research company RoperASW, only 13 percent thought Tyson should not be allowed to fight Lewis.
Lewis said he is hoping the fight will happen, saying the melee involving him and Tyson at the New York news conference and the Nevada commission action were just minor setbacks.
" My main aim for staying around is Mike Tyson," said the 38-year-old Lewis, who has been criticized for his lack of quality opponents and for his one-punch knockout losses to Oliver McCall and Hasim Rahman, both of which he defeated in rematches.
" It's the last notch on my belt, the icing on my cake," Lewis added. " I would love it to happen before I retire."
Tyson needs money, and the fight could bring him at least $20 million. Lewis would get a similar paycheck.
Other states are not prevented from granting Tyson a license just because Nevada denied him. But Tyson's inability to control his emotions, his outbursts of vulgarities and obscene gestures might make him a political hot potato in other states, even those who might normally love to hold the fight.
The sexual assault reports against Tyson, who served three years in prison on a rape conviction, increase political pressure on states to back away from the fight. A second case was confirmed Wednesday by District Attorney Stewart Bell of Clark County, Nev.
At least two foreign promoters, Rodney Berman of South Africa and Mogens and Bettina Palte of Denmark, have expressed an interest in holding the fight. Three of Tyson's last four bouts have been in England, Scotland and Denmark.
But there is the question of Tyson being allowed to leave the country.
" We're not in a position to charge him yet," Bell said. " We're being reluctant to let someone leave the country if we had any doubt we could find him if we needed to, but he's easy to find."
Don't bet against Tyson fighting Lewis. The champion has even provided a new twist for the promotion - righteousness vs. evil.
Asked he had a moral obligation regarding the fight, Lewis said, " The moral obligation is go in and give him a whipping."
Besides, there's a lot of money to be made.

Also in attendance will be Cincinnati Reds Director of Player Development Tim Neashorn.

Super Bowl

Broncos eye 2007 Super Bowl

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

DENVER - Denver will try to land a Super Bowl if the NFL allows the 2007 title game to be played outdoors in a cold-weather stadium.

The league has discussed bringing the 2007 game to the home of the New York Giants or Washington Redskins to help areas hit by the Sept. 11 terrorist attacks.

Team owners are expected to pick a venue in March 2003. Games through 2006 have been scheduled. Since the first Super Bowl in 1967, games have been played in warm weather or at indoor stadiums.

Broncos owner Pat Bowlen supports changing the rules in the hopes Denver will one day hold a game, said Joe Ellis, the team's vice president of business operations.

" We never stop inquiring about getting a Super Bowl in Denver," Ellis said. " People can laugh all they want, but as soon as there's any indication from the league that this could happen, we will jump on it."

The Broncos have a new stadium. The average temperature in Denver during January is 43 with average precipitation of a half-inch, according to the National Weather Service.

That compares with temperatures of 37 with 3.3 inches of precipitation in East Rutherford, N.J. - home of Giants Stadium. The January weather at FedEx Field, home of the Washington Redskins, averages 41 degrees and 3 inches of precipitation.

Jim Steeg, NFL vice president of special events, said Broncos fans and others with outdoor, cold-weather stadiums shouldn't get their hopes up.

" The commissioner is looking at changing the rules because of what happened on Sept. 11," Steeg said. " He's asking that the policies (be amended) specifically for these two sites."

Denver held baseball's All-Star Game in 1998 and the NHL's All-Star Game in February. It hopes to land the NBA All-Star Game in 2005. This year's Super Bowl is in New Orleans.

Olympics

WCYB To Broadcast Winter Olympics In HDTV

BRISTOL, Va. - Television in the Mountain Empire begins a new era on Feb. 8 when WCYB-TV broadcasts NBC's coverage of the 2002 Winter Olympic Games through a high definition (HDTV) signal.

Station Vice President and General Manager Joe Macione Jr. said the Olympic telecast marks another major step toward WCYB's goal of serving viewers with "cutting edge" technology. The station was among the first in the nation to begin transmitting through digital equipment two years ago when WCYB-DT, digital channel 28, went on the air.

" Those who own an HDTV set and a proper antenna and signal converter will see pictures of amazing clarity and detail," Macione said. The resolution of HDTV is nearly four times the current resolution available on a regular analog system. HDTV is also a wide-screen aspect picture, much like that of a movie screen. In addition to the enhanced wider picture, viewers will also notice higher audio quality.

Because cable companies continue to broadcast analog only, viewers will need additional equipment to see the HDTV signal on the air. Full digital sets (16 x 9 widescreen format) with digital tuner and an outdoor UHF antenna should be tuned to Channel 28-3. Viewers who own an HDTV set can go to the WCYB website (www.wcyb.tv) and get detailed information on how to receive the 2002 Winter Olympics in high definition. Digital televisions, converter boxes and antennas are available at regional electronics stores.

The Games kick off in Salt Lake City with an opening ceremony on Feb. 8 at 8 p.m. and coverage continues through Feb. 24.

" There is incredibly heightened interest in these Games, first as a domestic Olympic, but also because the possibility of the world coming together as one," said Dick Ebersol, NBC Sports and NBC Olympics chairman.

Through all its broadcast facilities, NBC will air a record 375.5 hours of coverage from the games, including nightly primetime programming on WCYB from 8-11:30 p.m.

" Viewers will, of course, be able to see the entire Olympics telecast over the region's cable systems and through customary antennas on Channel 5," Macione said. " Nothing else needs to be done to receive this analog telecast."

From its transmitters atop Holston Mountain, WCYB-TV's signal is available to nearly 300,000 households in the Tri-Cities market that includes parts of Virginia, Tennessee, North Carolina and Kentucky. In addition to the NBC network, the station also telecasts the WB Network.

Hunting

Understanding Kentucky's new big game recording and tagging requirements

Hunter Harvest Log

Beginning with the 2002 hunting seasons, all hunters will be required to fill out a hunter harvest log for any turkey or deer they take during those seasons.

On the back of every paper license or permit purchased from a license dealer, such as Wal-Mart or K-Mart, hunters will notice some pre-printed blanks like the example shown here.

Before you move the animal from the spot it is found:

Step 1: Mark the appropriate species box, write in the date, county where taken and sex of the animal, and put the harvest log back in your pocket.
Step 2: When you call to check in the animal, write down the confirmation number on the log in the blank provided, and keep the log with you anytime you're in the field during the season.

Reminder: Turkeys must be checked in on the same day they were taken. Deer must be checked in by 9 a.m. the day after being taken. Call 1-877-245-4263 24-hours a day during the season to check in a turkey or deer. This free call can be made from any touch tone phone.

Hunters who do not receive a hunter log as part of a license or permit purchase may request a blank log sheet from any license dealer, use the example shown here or in the 2002-03 Kentucky Turkey Hunting Guide or Kentucky Hunting & Trapping Guide, or make their own using an index card and writing down the required information as described here.

Hunters must keep log information for any turkey or deer they take in their possession whenever they are in the field hunting during those seasons.

Tagging

Tagging an animal is only required when a harvested turkey or deer, for whatever reason, leaves the hunter's immediate possession. If the hunter who shot the animal leaves the carcass somewhere he or she's not, the carcass must be tagged first. If the hunter who shot the animal leaves the carcass with a processor or taxidermist, the hunter must first attach a carcass tag to the animal.

If the carcass never leaves the hunter's possession, no tag is required.
Carcass Tags are not provided with any type of permit purchase. All hunters must make their own Carcass Tags if necessary.

A tag must be attached so it remains attached to the carcass until processing begins. When carcass tags are required, they must contain the information below:

- 1. Name
2. Address
3. Confirmation Number or Authorization Number

Club seats expanded, scout seat price reduced

TIMES STAFF REPORT

CINCINNATI - In response to great demand, the Cincinnati Reds have expanded the $50 Club Seat section. This expanded area is located behind home plate starting in row 16, and will offer the same club seat amenities. These lower $50 Club Seats are an addition to the original $50 Club Seat neighborhood located on the second level of the ballpark.

The Scout Seats at Great American Ball Park, located in rows 9 through 15 directly behind home plate, have been reduced from $80 to $60.

Prospect agrees to one-year contract

The Reds and RHP Ricardo Arambolés today agreed to terms on a one-year contract for the 2002 season.

Arambolés, 20, last season combined to go 9-9 with a 4.09 ERA in 20 starts and two relief appearances at Class A Tampa, Class A Dayton, Class AA Chattanooga and Class AAA Columbus. He began the season in the Yankees' organization and was acquired by the Reds on June 30 in exchange for RHP Mark Wohlers.

Arambolés was the organization's top pitcher in the fall instructional league. He is rated the fourth-best prospect in the organization by Baseball America, and his changeup was rated the best in the organization.

Tyson's road to fame is getting bumpier

Mike Tyson broke into the public consciousness in dramatic fashion. He was fearless, but he was wrapped in the protective cloak of the heavyweight championship of the world, the wearer of which is expected to be the baddest man on the planet - up to a point.

Loathsome now is an adjective attached to Tyson by many people, especially in the media and in political circles.

In the second half of the 1980s, Tyson fought his way up from bad childhood to become the youngest heavyweight champion in history. He was a rags-to-riches hero.

If idols have feet of clay, however, Tyson's ought to be in hundreds of pieces by now. His well-documented transgressions in and out of the ring have tainted and pocked the yellow brick road he traveled to fame and fortune from one end to the other.

The latest incident was a news conference melee Jan. 22 in New York, where Tyson also made a shambles of political correctness.

He can't get a license to fight in Nevada, and he is facing the possibility of being charged with two sexual offenses.

His planned challenge to heavyweight champion Lennox Lewis on April 6 in the MGM Grand at Actually, it's mostly about not winning the Toilet Bowl.

But every year for the last several we've gone to Mike's place. At first, it was rotated around. Then one year we found Mike's house, which was the biggest any of us had to offer, and it had a ping-pong table.

We were sold. Three of us actually moved in for about two months one year. He figured it out when he realized someone had been using the stove. Mike uses it only on Super Bowl Sunday, and because it was April, he knew that wasn't right.

I'm sorry. We kid Mike. I'm sure his stove is used. He's married now.

So we pile into his house, some in the ping-pong room, others in front of the television, most around the dining room table, and enjoy ourselves. You, I'll hear more laughing than anything else. You'll see more eating than football. It's about the perfect place to watch the game.

Normally there will be some friendly wagering. There's nothing serious, mind you. Vegas has nothing to worry about here. The two most common bets are "I bet a dollar they score this drive," which some-once displayed on the football diamond. In 2000, his sophomore season, he won the Most Improved Award. School size and academic reputation were reasons Mosley choose Transylvania over other schools, including some bigger institutions. Mosley's style of play mimics his personal hero, Pete Rose, and according to his bio., his favorite quote is Philippians 4:13: "I can do everything through him who gives me strength."

Another Eastern Kentucky player on the 2002 Transylvania roster is freshman Brad Turner.

one will always take, and the lottery. Ten people throw a dollar on the floor and draw a number 0 through 9, and when the quarter ends, you add the scores together and if you have the number in the ones column, you win. For example, if it's 10-7 after the first quarter, that adds to 17, so if you drew seven, you win the $10.

As I told you, we ain't exactly big-time gamblers, but we have fun.

Paintsville Turner played baseball for Charlie Adkins and football for David LeMaster. Much like Mosley, Turner would like to go in and make an immediate impact early on in his collegiate career.

Transy, 12-27 last season, received 10 points in preseason league balloting. Anderson and Franklin were the co-choices to finish first, each receiving three first-place ballots and 56 points. Mount St. Joseph was third with 52 points and two first-place votes. Manchester was fourth, followed by Hanover, Defiance, Bluffton, and Transy.

The Pioneers, led by first-year head coach Shayne Stock, will open the 2002 season on Feb. 24 against Centre. While making the transition from the NAIA to the NCAA's Division III, Transy is eligible to compete for the HCAC regular season title.

Anderson is the defending conference champions after finishing the 2001 season with a 22-19 record, 10-8 in HCAC play. The league season begins on March 22.

Transylvania University athletic director Brian Austin named Shayne Stock, previously an assistant coach for two NCAA Division III baseball programs, has been named head baseball coach at Transylvania.

Stock replaces Brett Mann, who served as head coach for one season before resigning to enter private business.

A former player for the University of Southern Indiana, Stock has served as an assistant coach at Hanover (1999-2001) and DePauw (1997-99). He also coached at the prep level at Clarksville High School in Indiana.

At Southern Indiana, Stock played on two NCAA Division II tournament teams and was named to the Academic All-Conference team as a senior. He earned a bachelor of arts degree in social science education in 1996 and is currently working on his master's degree in education at Indiana Southeast.

Shayne brings a wealth of NCAA Division III experience to Transylvania that will be invaluable as we make the transition to full Division III status in 2004," Austin said. "He's played and coached at schools that have excellent reputations for both sports and academics. He'll be a tremendous addition to our coaching staff."

Blevins

lier this week to take on No. 5 Florida. "It's tough not to be able to go out there and fight with your team.

"I just have to get to a point where I'm comfortable really snapping passes and where it's not awkward to shoot the ball. It's still uncomfortable, but I'm making progress."

Blevins, who was averaging 2.7 points and 1.5 assists per game before the injury, began practicing with the team Sunday, wearing a red no-contact jersey like quarterbacks often do during contact drills at football practice.

"I kind of like that," he joked.

"I might keep that around for the rest of the season so people can't get too close. Maybe they'd let me wear it in games."

Blevins worked hard to stay in game shape during the layoff, logging mile after mile on the treadmill to keep up his conditioning. His psyche, however, has been more difficult to rehab.

"You have to sit there and watch, and that's hard," he said. "I think away from the court it's easier to keep my spirits high. When you have to sit there on the court and watch from the sideline on the bench, that makes it extra tough."

Kentucky coach Tubby

Smith said Blevins' return will give the team a much-needed jolt of experience and leadership.

"J.P. has been unbelievable in his treatment and rehabilitation," Smith said. "He's done everything we've asked of him.

"He's in good shape, he's mentally ready and he's hungry. We think he can get back into it and help us fairly quickly."

With backup point guard Adam Chiles hampered by a ribcage injury the past few games, sophomore guard Gerald Fitch has had to log a significant number of minutes at the point when Hawkins has needed a rest or gotten in early foul trouble.

"Even though I'm starting to get a little more comfortable at the point, it'll be great to have him back," Fitch said. "We're going to need him from here on out."

With Kentucky on the road for three of its next four contests after the South Carolina game, Blevins said his return couldn't come at a better time.

"Some people have had to play out of position and this should allow things to get back to normal a little bit," he said. "And maybe I can add a little leadership because I've been through all this before."

Blevins noted the similarities in his own season and that of the team, which has had its own share of disappointments - like losing games it had in hand or having a teammate leave and transfer to a bitter rival.

"There's been a couple bumps in the road," he said with a smile. "Hopefully, we'll all be able to rally and end with a bang."

ball coach. Some of Keith Adkins' accolades and honors still reside in trophies cases at Paintsville High. He also has his retired jersey painted on the wall in the gym at Paintsville.

Keith Adkins has built a solid reputation as a top-notch recruiter in his years in coaching and loves to coach the up-tempo pressure defense style of basketball. Prior to taking the head coaching job here at Campbellsville he spent six years as a college assistant at Campbellsville.

UNC-Greensboro and Pikeville College where he recruited and developed eight players which are now playing professional basketball. In his time at Campbellsville seven Tiger basketball players have earned first team All-Mid-South Conference with one earning All-American honors.

played his first two years of college basketball with the University of Notre Dame and Coach Digger Phelps, before transferring away. In 1989 he helped Notre Dame make it to the second round of the NCAA Tournament. After two seasons in South Bend, Adkins transferred to the University of North Carolina-Wilmington where he was a two-year starter averaging 11 points per game as a senior. While at UNC-Wilmington the former Tiger ranked second in the nation in free throw percentage and still holds numerous Seahawk team records. He graduated from UNC-Wilmington with a BA in physical education.

Campbellsville went into play this weekend with a 14-9 overall record and a 5-2 conference mark. The Tigers scored a 105-83 win over struggling Union College on Thursday night in Barbourville.

Kentucky's future shaky following NCAA sanctions

by STEVE BAILEY ASSOCIATED PRESS

LEXINGTON - Kentucky's football team was banned from a bowl game next season and forced to slash scholarships for the next three years in a case the NCAA called one of the most serious it has seen in years.

With national signing day for recruits less than a week away, the punishment coach Guy Morriss and his staff dreaded for months was even more devastating.

"I don't know how much damage is going to be done to the program," a subdued Morriss said following the NCAA's announcement Thursday.

"The first thing I want to do is walk across the street and talk to our players. Then we have to look at what we can do to salvage our new recruiting class."

Kentucky was cited for more than three dozen violations committed during the tenure of former coach Hal Mumme.

In addition to the postseason ban, the school was placed on three years' probation, forced to reduce its total number of football scholarships to 80 instead of 85 for the same period and cited for a lack of institutional control over the program.

The bowl ban was the first the NCAA's committee on infractions has levied against a Division I program since Miami was kept from the postseason seven years ago, said Thomas Yeager, the committee's chairman.

In its 41-page report, the NCAA said it was "troubled by the widespread nature of the undetected violations in time, frequency and the number of individuals who would have some knowledge that the activities were improper and failed to report them to the proper authorities."

According to the report, Kentucky can sign only 16 of a possible 25 recruits for next season, 18 the following season and 22 in 2004.

"This is an embarrassment to the university, it's an embarrassment to our fans and it's an embarrassment to the athletic department," Kentucky athletics director Larry Ivy said. "It's something we wish hadn't happened and something we hope never happens again."

Former recruiting coordinator Claude Bassett, who was linked to most of the violations, also was effectively banned from working at an NCAA school for the next eight years.

President Lee Todd said the school would accept the NCAA's sanctions, although it may appeal the postseason ban.

The violations were committed from 1998 to 2000 under Mumme, who resigned as coach under pressure last February. He was charged in the report with failure to monitor the program, but was not given any individual sanctions.

Bassett was found in violation of ethical conduct bylaws and received a show-cause order, which means any NCAA institution that wishes to hire Bassett during that period would have to demonstrate to the committee why it should not be penalized if it hired Bassett.

In its report, the committee said Mumme failed to adequately oversee the program because he did not closely monitor Bassett's activities even after being told on three occasions about possible rules violations.

"I think one of the things most troublesome to the committee was the sheer number of individuals that were involved and did not come forward with information that might have stopped these violations much earlier than they eventually were," Yeager said.

This is not the first time the Wildcats have been hit by NCAA sanctions. The Wildcats' basketball program was banned from playing in the NCAA tournament in 1989 and 1990 because of numerous recruiting violations, including the mailing of cash to a recruit's home.

The Kentucky investigation began in November 2000 and intensified the following month when a Louisville newspaper published copies of $1,400 in money orders sent from Bassett to the coach of a Memphis, Tenn., high school where the Wildcats were courting recruits.

Morriss said he expected his players, who finished 2-9 last season with only one Southeastern Conference victory, to be ready to play in the fall.

"Honestly, I don't think we'll lose a player," he said. "Maybe that's unrealistic."

The ping-pong, now that's another story. It gets serious up there, boys.

There's a window behind one of the players, and one year when I was walking up to the house I caught a wayward ball. As soon as I made it up the spiral staircase, the game continued.

But beware: If you step up to the table, the action will be fierce, and you will be made fun of. You may be too good. Odds are, you'll be really bad, or do something stupid. But you will be laughed at. It comes with the territory.

The table comes in handy on the occasion of a blowout, which all Super Bowl fans know happens more often than not. It's always the pregame show, and usually lasts until shortly after kickoff, unless the national anthem singer is particularly attractive. The table is always busy during halftime too.

Ok, I'll tell you the truth. Most people come for the food. We eat well. As a league, we've gone through some expansion through the years, even though we've always had eight members.

After the food, the ping-pong is the next big attraction. The game falls somewhere after those two.

And of course, like everyone else, we enjoy the commercials. To be honest, I think it's a dying art form. There will be the occasional smash, but for the most part, the best ones were made during the 1980s.

The best was probably the Mean Joe Greene spot for Coke, where he meets the kid in the tunnel. In fact, I'm not sure it was even made for a Super Bowl, but even that isn't a factor. That may be the top advertising spot in history.

I'm sure many of you have your own Super Bowl traditions. I'm also positive many of you will think this is a lame party with a bunch of squares, and maybe you're right.

However you watch the game, relax and enjoy it. Laugh, eat a little more than you should and have some fun. Explain some football to The Wife, and maybe she'll explain a commercial to you.

And if you live above Mike Spears' house and see a ping-pong ball bouncing by, toss it back through the window, will ya?

Brooks

split end position. Spriggs went into the 2002 season touted as one of the top two players in Class 2A District 8 along with senior teammates Matt Slone and Kevin Younce. Slone has talked with Georgetown College coaches and appears to have the athletic abilities Tiger coaches look for in a recruit, but has yet to qualify academically. Spriggs and Brooks are both already academically eligible.

"Spriggs and Brooks both came away from the Georgetown visit happy," said PHS Coach John DeRossett. "I think they both have what it takes to go to Georgetown and play for Coach Cronin and his staff."

DeRossett spent one season at Georgetown College, his freshman season of college, before transferring to Eastern Kentucky University where he received his degree.

Georgetown coaches appear to be high on Spriggs, Brooks and Slone. All three players have impressed several college recruiters over the past couple years, but none of the three have yet to sign. A Georgetown College recruiter stumbled onto Slone while on a recruiting trip to Whitley County, one of only two teams to beat Prestonsburg this past season. The Whitley County loss was the only regular season setback on Prestonsburg's record.

No. 1 Georgetown College (14-0) became the first team in 12 years to win consecutive football national championships with a 49-27 victory against the University of Sioux Falls (S.D.) in the 46th Annual NAIA Football National Championship contest at Jim Carroll Stadium in Savannah, Tenn.

Three-time NAIA National Player of the Year Eddie Eviston threw for 188 yards and a pair of touchdowns in leading the Tigers to victory.

Georgetown, the No. 1 team in the NAIA, finished the year with a perfect 14-0 record for the second straight year, running its winning streak to 28 games. Sioux Falls had its 10-game winning streak snapped with the loss. The Cougars end the year at 12-2.

In claiming the title, Georgetown is the first NAIA school to win consecutive national championships since Carson-Newman College (Tenn.) accomplished the feat in NAIA Division I and Westminster College (Pa.) did the same in NAIA Division II in 1988-89. It was the Tigers' third NAIA national championship, having also earned the title in 1991.

"I've been proud of our kids all season long, and I'm really proud of them today," said Georgetown head coach Bill Cronin, who also guided the Tigers to the 1999 NAIA championship contest. "This was a goal we set for ourselves, and we achieved that. I'm proud of the focus we showed this year."

The 76 points scored by Georgetown and Sioux Falls are the most combined points in an NAIA final since East Central University (Okla.) defeated Glenville State College (W.Va.) in the 1993 NAIA Division I championship game, 49-35. The 49 points scored by Georgetown are also a school record for a championship game.

Georgetown (14-0) became the ninth team in NAIA history to win back-to-back titles and the first in 12 years. The Tigers complete their second consecutive perfect season at 14-0 and move to 41-1 in the past three seasons combined.

When Bill Cronin was announced as the new head football coach at Georgetown College in the spring of 1997, many Tiger faithful thought it would bring about renewal. Renewal of the Tiger football tradition built, partially by then-assistant Cronin, in the 1980s and early 1990s. From 1987-92 under Georgetown's all-time winningest coach, Kevin Donley, the Tigers were 52-15-1. Cronin was Donley's chief assistant during those years, and hasn't disappointed Donley and others.

SUPERBOWL XXXVI

Big game brings out best stories in players, coaches

by EDDIE PELLIS
ASSOCIATED PRESS

NEW ORLEANS — One Super Bowl participant used to haul 75-pound bags of coffee beans in the wild heat. Another is related to Evel Knievel.

One is a former All-Pro receiver who had to volunteer for a year to get a job in coaching. Another is making a new name for himself after his own fans tried to chase him out of town.

Every season, the Super Bowl brings together a collection of players and coaches with stories of heartbreak, comebacks, rejection and rejuvenation.

People like kicker Adam Vinatieri and receiver David Patten of the Patriots, and defensive lineman Leonard Little and receivers coach Henry Ellard of the Rams.

MAKING THE LEAP: @ Cool under pressure must run in the family with Adam Vinatieri.

Born and raised in South Dakota, Vinatieri is a distant cousin of daredevil Evel Knievel and great, great grandson of General George Custer's bandmaster, Felix Vinatieri.

"He left them back when they went into the Battle of Little Horn," Vinatieri said. "Thank goodness."

A century and a half later, the Patriots are the benefactors from old Felix Vinatieri's wise decision. Who else, after all, could have made that 45-yard field goal in a blizzard against the Raiders?

The kick, and the "easy" 23-yarder that won the game in overtime, have already elevated Vinatieri into one of New England's greats. The sixth-year kicker is also gaining wide recognition as one of the most clutch performers in NFL playoff history.

Kickers are a different bunch, of course, but Vinatieri always tries to keep it real. Unlike many at his position, he has shunned superstitions, for fear they might mess up the already complicated routine most kickers employ.

But there must be a story behind that heavy beard, right? Normally a clean-shaven sort, Vinatieri insists it was no idea of his.

"It started before the first playoff game," he said. "After we beat the Raiders, my teammates told me I better not shave."

STARTING OVER: @ Leonard Little wanted to quit football.

Little drove drunk on Oct. 19, 1998, his 24th birthday, and got into an accident that resulted in the death of Susan Gutweiler, 47. He pleaded guilty to involuntary manslaughter, a plea that included a jail sentence.

When the case was settled, Little went home for the rest of the season. On the week of his scheduled return in 1999, Mothers Against Drunk Driving held a protest rally outside the dome in St. Louis. A reserve linebacker at the time, he played mostly on special teams. An awkward silence enveloped the dome whenever he made a play.

Little's role has grown. He moved to defensive end for the Rams and became their pass-rush specialist this year. He had 14 1/2 sacks in the regular season and will almost certainly sign a big free-agent contract after the Super Bowl.

Slowly, he feels, the fans have forgiven.

"You can't judge a person by one situation," he said. "I think people in the community are starting to know me more. And knowing me, knowing what kind of person I am, they know I'm not a bad person."

For a while after the tragedy, Little thought about never playing football again. Then, he thought about it in a different light.

"Why try to run away from your problems instead of face them head-on?" he said.

Little realizes now that success on the football field has had its bonuses, but he will never get over what happened. He thinks about it every day.

"But I had to get to the point where I had to do what's best for my family and what's best for the people I love," he said. "That was playing football, and doing the best I can to contribute to this team."

COACH HENRY: @ As an All-Pro and the leading receiver in Rams history, Henry Ellard shouldn't have had to go begging for coaching jobs once his stellar career ended.

But his entree into the profession took a more roundabout path than anyone could have expected. He helped out coaching high school kids while he was at the end of his playing career, bouncing around from team to team. When his playing days were over, he landed at his alma mater, Fresno State, working as a 30-something graduate assistant.

"When I was a player, I didn't really worry about how they coached," Ellard said. "But I learned a lot there."

Ellard credits much of his playing and coaching career to Rams coach Mike Martz.

Martz was an assistant at Fresno State in 1979 when he recruited Ellard out of high school.

They crossed paths again in Los Angeles, when Martz was an assistant for the Rams and Ellard was in his prime. When the receiver was in the second of two stints with the Redskins in 1998, the assistant again was Martz.

Now, they're reunited with the Rams.

"I never thought coaching was something I wanted to do," Ellard said. "But now, I could see staying with it for a good period of time. This has been such a pleasant experience, because of the situations I've been in."

COFFEE BEANS: @ He lacked focus and size, and that's why David Patten found himself lugging bags of coffee beans in a factory instead of trying out for the NFL after college.

"I didn't have a degree, so here I was, four years have gone by, and I have nothing to show for it," said the 5-foot-10, 190-pound receiver.

After a few months on coffee detail, and a while longer in the landscaping business, Patten finally got his chance in the pros — with the Albany Firebirds of the Arena League.

Players can be discovered in Arena ball — just ask Kurt Warner — and slowly, Patten's stock rose.

He got a tryout with the Giants and made the team in 1997. After three nondescript seasons there, he spent 2000 in Cleveland.

But now he is a starter, and a budding star.

In October, he became the first player in 22 seasons to throw, catch and run for a touchdown in a single game.

The playoffs were even better. Patten caught eight passes for 107 yards in New England's snowy playoff victory over Oakland. And when Drew Bledsoe entered for the injured Tom Brady against Pittsburgh, Patten was his target at the end of Bledsoe's first touchdown drive.

"When he came here, I kept saying 'What's wrong with this guy? Why is he still out there? Why have I never heard of him?'" Bledsoe said. "I kept waiting to see where the bugs were, and they never showed up."

Rams used foresight and fortune to build champion

by BARRY WILNER
ASSOCIATED PRESS

NEW ORLEANS — Anyone who marvels at how the St. Louis Rams rebuilt their defense this season should think back a few years. In 1999, they did the same thing to their offense.

That produced a Super Bowl championship. And now the Rams are back in the big game, heavy favorites to beat the New England Patriots on Sunday.

It's all been according to a grand design that has included strong drafts, wise free-agent signings and that pro football rarity, trades.

"You have to use all the resources at your disposal, and I think we've done a good job of that," said Rams president of football operations Jay Zigmunt. "Sometimes it's not signing the original player, this is the right decision."

That was a reference to defensive end Kevin Carter, who fell from All-Pro to all-disappointment and, last year, was traded to Tennessee for a first-round pick. Had Carter accepted the Rams' offer, the team wouldn't have been able to sign safety Kim Herring or trade for cornerback Aeneas Williams.

"It's the value of players, being selective and signing certain players you can't replace or must have," Zigmunt added. "It's as much a qualitative analysis as quantitative."

"We have to be cognizant we can't keep everybody, but we have to keep the right guys."

That would mean quarterback Kurt Warner, running back Marshall Faulk and wide receiver Isaac Bruce. After that trio led the Rams to their first Super Bowl crown in '99, the organization made certain to sign them to long-term contracts.

But the Rams also made sure they didn't mortgage the future to do it, the way the Cowboys and 49ers did, causing their demise in the late 1990s.

"It's where you want to move your money," Zigmunt said. "San Francisco and Dallas kept pushing it back and their day of reckoning came. We are not in that situation."

Indeed, 37 Rams are under contract for next season, at least. Zigmunt projects the team will not struggle to stay under the projected 2002 salary cap of $72 million.

Even if the three prime free agents — middle linebacker London Fletcher, wide receiver Az Zahir-Hakim and defensive Leonard Little — are not re-signed, it would not be a devastating blow.

Few pro sports teams these days have as many stars as the Rams. Here's how the Rams, first under coach Dick Vermeil and now under Mike Martz, did that:

—They dealt a 1999 second-round and fifth-round draft pick to Indianapolis for Faulk, who was the perfect back for the high-speed offense Vermeil was installing. Today, Faulk would be worth, well, at least what New Orleans paid for Ricky Williams.

Warner was signed as the third-string quarterback in 1998 after bouncing around the Arena League and NFL Europe. When Trent Green wrecked his knee in the '99 preseason, Vermeil gave Warner a shot. The rest is two-time MVP history.

—Thanks to a 4-12 record in '98, St. Louis owned the sixth overall pick, which it used for Torry Holt, a gamebreaking receiver who fit right in from the outset.

—In 1997, Vermeil so coveted tackle Orlando Pace he traded up to the first overall slot to grab the Ohio State All-American who has turned into an All-Pro.

—When the defense let them down in 2000, the Rams rebuilt through the draft, free agency and trades. They hired Lovie Smith as coordinator. They dealt Carter, freeing up more than $5 million.

They also drafted rookies Adam Archuleta and Tommy Polley and signed free agent Don Davis — all major factors on the league's most improved unit.

Then there is the character issue. If controversial Randy Moss or Ray Lewis were available, the Rams likely would pass on them.

"No question it adds to our chemistry," Warner said. "We've got a lot of character guys. It's been an issue for this organization when a lot of these guys were brought in. We do not have a lot of guys out for themselves. "We're like a family."

A family whose makeup keeps changing each year, but whose strength seems to grow.

"If you don't have the right players," Zigmunt said, "it doesn't matter how much talent they have. It won't work."

EARNHARDT TRIBUTE

EARNHARDT, DALE (1951 - 2001)

American automobile racer and seven-time National Association for Stock Car Auto Racing (NASCAR) championship driver Dale Earnhardt was born in 1951, in Kannapolis, North Carolina. He first raced NASCAR vehicles in 1975. Earnhardt's first Winston Cup win came in his 16th Winston Cup race, when he claimed the Southeastern 500 at Bristol, Tennessee, in 1979. He captured NASCAR championships in 1980, 1986, 1987, 1990, 1991, 1993 and 1994. Richard Petty is the only other driver to win seven Winston Cup championships.

Dale Earnhardt tragically lost his life on Sunday, February 18, 2001, in the season-opening Daytona 500. He was 49.

Please join with us in honoring NASCAR legend Dale Earnhardt.

This newspaper is compiling a special section devoted to the life, times, triumphs and victories of this American legend. Ad space is now available for this tribute. Deadline, Tuesday, February 12th.

Why Buddy won't be coming to New Orleans

by JIM LITKE
ASSOCIATED PRESS

NEW ORLEANS — He runs up the score, mocks opponents, scolds reporters and even ridicules the occasional stadium employee.

Still, people have no idea how cold Rams coach Mike Martz can be.

One of the last executive decisions he made before departing St. Louis for the Super Bowl was to leave Buddy, one of his best friends, behind.

"He's out," Martz told the Post-Dispatch on Sunday. "He's a little front-runner."

Buddy is a Dachshund. But that didn't spare him from becoming the target of one of Martz's slice-and-dice sessions.

"He avoided me this year when we lost. Wouldn't come near me. But lately, he's been jumping into bed. We beat Green Bay, and he hopped on my lap and started licking my face," Martz said. "He doesn't fool me."

Every so often a coach arrives at the Super Bowl with a reputation as one kind of guy and turns out to be quite another. Two years ago, Dick Vermeil completed a two decades-long transformation from tough guy to sweetheart. This year, the funny man zipped inside Martz's familiar sweatsuit is making a break for it.

When he stepped off the plane Monday, the coach was wearing a suit and tie. Reporters fretted that Martz was trying to upgrade his image. He told them not to worry.

"Putting a tie on me," Martz said, "is like putting a diamond on a pig."

All season long, people watched him prowling the sideline, an intense glare frozen on his mug. Most assumed he was as straight as the part running down the middle of his silver-haired head, and that someone else was responsible for the record-breaking, fire-drill brand of football St. Louis plays.

Somebody who looks a little more like the mad scientist Martz turns out to be. Somebody more devious — Baltimore's Brian Billick, say — or more rumped — Seattle's Mike Holmgren, maybe. But no.

Martz had been preparing for the role ever since high school. Growing up, he spent Saturday nights watching coach Don Coryell's San Diego State offensive juggernauts play, then returned to the same stadium the next afternoon to watch coach Sid Gillman's equally potent Chargers.

"Our offensive system really stems from Don Coryell," Martz said. "It allows you to be as creative as the players will allow you to be. There are no limitations on it, and that's what makes it fun."

Martz throws around terms like "three-digit system" and "Max Q" — NASA terminology for maximizing potential — but his players have no problem relating.

"He was my receivers coach going back to the Rams days in Los Angeles," receiver Isaac Bruce recalled. "And believe me, he made you pay attention to detail even back then. But I'm a guy who can make a play anywhere on the field, and once you realize that's what coach Martz's schemes let you do, you're willing to do and learn anything he tells you."

The wonder of Martz is not that his schemes work flawlessly at the highest level, but that he continued to believe they would through a 26-year apprenticeship that would wear down most men.

His first job was as an assistant at Bullard High in Fresno, Calif., and he worked 15 more jobs in the profession before anybody gambled on him as a head coach. The low point came in 1991, when Martz was fired as part of a housecleaning effort at Arizona State. He had four young kids and few prospects. But his wife, Julie, persuaded him to give it one more go.

Martz landed his first NFL job the following year as a Rams assistant — for no pay. During the next seven seasons, he worked for losing teams in Los Angeles, Washington and then St. Louis. That tested his faith as much as his patience.

"I didn't question whether I was any good, only whether it was worth proving it. Losing wears you down emotionally," he said. "It's like a series of small cracks in a rock. You wonder when it's going to break."

What broke instead was the opportunity Martz had begged, borrowed and stolen time to get. Vermeil became head coach in St. Louis in 1997, and after two disappointing seasons, he persuaded Martz to leave Norv Turner's staff in Washington and rejoin the Rams as offensive coordinator. A Super Bowl title followed soon after, and Martz succeeded Vermeil in 2000.

The sailing has been mostly smooth ever since. But that's assuming you:

Forget the running feud Martz has with Saints coach Jim Haslett: "You just get tired of all the talk."

Overlook his digs at the Giants'

Jason Sehom: "I'd like to line up against Jason Sehom every week."

Skip the occasional tirade at reporters: "Why don't you just give them our game plan?"

Ignore the zinger he left for the grounds crew when he found a soaked field at the Meadowlands:

"Might have been just a cloudburst or something right over the stadium."

Disregard the way he deserted Buddy.

■ FISHING

Winter fishing opportunities

by LEE McCLELLAN
KDFWR

The late January sky is so low and leaden that it seems it could hit you on the head. It is spitting sleet and snow with strong gusty winds with temperatures in the mid-30s. This weather drives most people in front of a fireplace with a cup of hot cocoa and a book.

But, to hardcore winter anglers in Kentucky, this weather signals its time to head to lower ends of Green, Cumberland or Laurel River Lakes and chase trophy smallmouth bass. The unstable, blustery weather of late winter brings smallmouth bass out of their deep haunts and accessible to anglers. Plus, anglers may find they have the entire lake to themselves.

The lower one-third of these reservoirs offer the best fishing for smallmouth bass in winter because that is where the most highly oxygenated water is found. Fish points, cuts and small coves adjacent to the old river channel. Winter smallmouth like the deep-water sanctuary of the old channel and the shallower cuts, points and coves serve as feeding areas. The riprap rock on the face of the dam is also a good winter smallmouth location.

The best lure is a live minnow rigged on a size 2 or size 4 hook with a tiny split shot or two attached to the line about 18 inches above the hook. The bottom bouncer set-ups used for walleye are very effective in this situation. Cast the minnow to the bank and let the minnow slowly fall through the depths. The split shot should just tick the bottom occasionally on the retrieve and it should take several minutes to work the minnow back to the boat. In water below 50 degrees, sucker minnows are best because they stay more active in cold water.

Blade baits like the Silver Buddy or a spoon worked in the same manner are good alternatives to minnows for those who don't like live bait. A hair jig and a pork trailer are also effective as well as a smoke or black colored curly tailed grub rigged on a lead head.

Smallmouth bass are not the only fish that bite in winter. The overlooked and under appreciated sauger bite willingly all winter long. The best places to catch them are in tailrace areas of dams on the Ohio River. The tailrace areas of major reservoirs produce winter sauger as well. Dams halt the migration of sauger and they stack up in great numbers below them.

Fuzzy grubs in orange, yellow or white tipped with minnows are very good for winter sauger. Small spoons and in-line spinners work well. The main thing is to keep the bait close to bottom where sauger feed. Saugers are excellent table fare, comparable to walleye in flavor.

Striped bass at Lake Cumberland and in the tailrace areas of the Ohio River are good fish to target in winter. On Lake Cumberland, strippers will be near baitfish. Strippers in winter often crowd baitfish against points or channel banks and gorge themselves during a warm spell. A white doll fly cast to these fish will draw a strike. Live shad, sucker minnows or alewives drifted across points or drop-offs are especially effective at this time of the year. When the fish are seemingly inactive, live shad fished on the bottom may draw a strike.

Seagulls are prominent on Lake Cumberland in winter and their feeding tips an angler to the location of baitfish. The northern side of the lake catches more of the southern sun and stays a little warmer in winter. If one finds slightly warmer water, they will usually find baitfish, and therefore, striped bass. Striped bass bite all winter long in Lake Cumberland.

The tailrace areas of the Ohio River hold winter strippers. Drifting live shad in the current with a heavy enough weight to keep it down is very effective. A large lipless crankbait in shad colors cast into the current and retrieved back to the boat will draw a strike as will a large silver spoon fished in the same manner. Large white doll flies tipped with white curly tailed grubs are also very good for these fish.

Safety is very important at this time of the year. Anglers should dress appropriately when winter fishing and wear a life jacket at all times. Hypothermia, a gradual lowering of body temperature, is deadly. Frostbite may cause the loss of fingers or toes. Mother Nature is at her meanest in winter and is the time of the year when she should be most respected.

The 2002 Sport Fishing and Boating Guides are now available wherever licenses are sold. You may also request one by calling the Kentucky Department of Fish and Wildlife Resources at 1-800-858-1549.

UT football chaplain to visit ALC

SPORTS EDITOR

PIPPA PASSES — The Alice Lloyd College Leadership Program will host the appearance of Dr. Larry W. Fields on Tuesday, Feb. 12 at 1 p.m. in the Estelle Campbell Center for the Arts on the Alice Lloyd College campus.

Senior pastor of the Central Baptist Church of Bearden, Knoxville, Tenn., and chaplain for the University of Tennessee football team, Dr. Fields has received several awards for his dedication and service. He has also worked with the Fellowship of Christian Athletes and the American National Red Cross. Alice Lloyd College invites everyone to attend this free event. For more information on Dr. Fields' upcoming appearance, call 606/368-6136.

College Goal Sunday, a statewide charitable program that provides free information and assistance to families applying for college financial aid, will take place on Sunday, Feb. 10, just two days prior to Dr. Fields' scheduled visit, on the ALC campus from 2-4 p.m. The event will be held on the second floor of the June Buchanan Alumni Center. For more information, contact Nancy Melton at 606/368-6059.

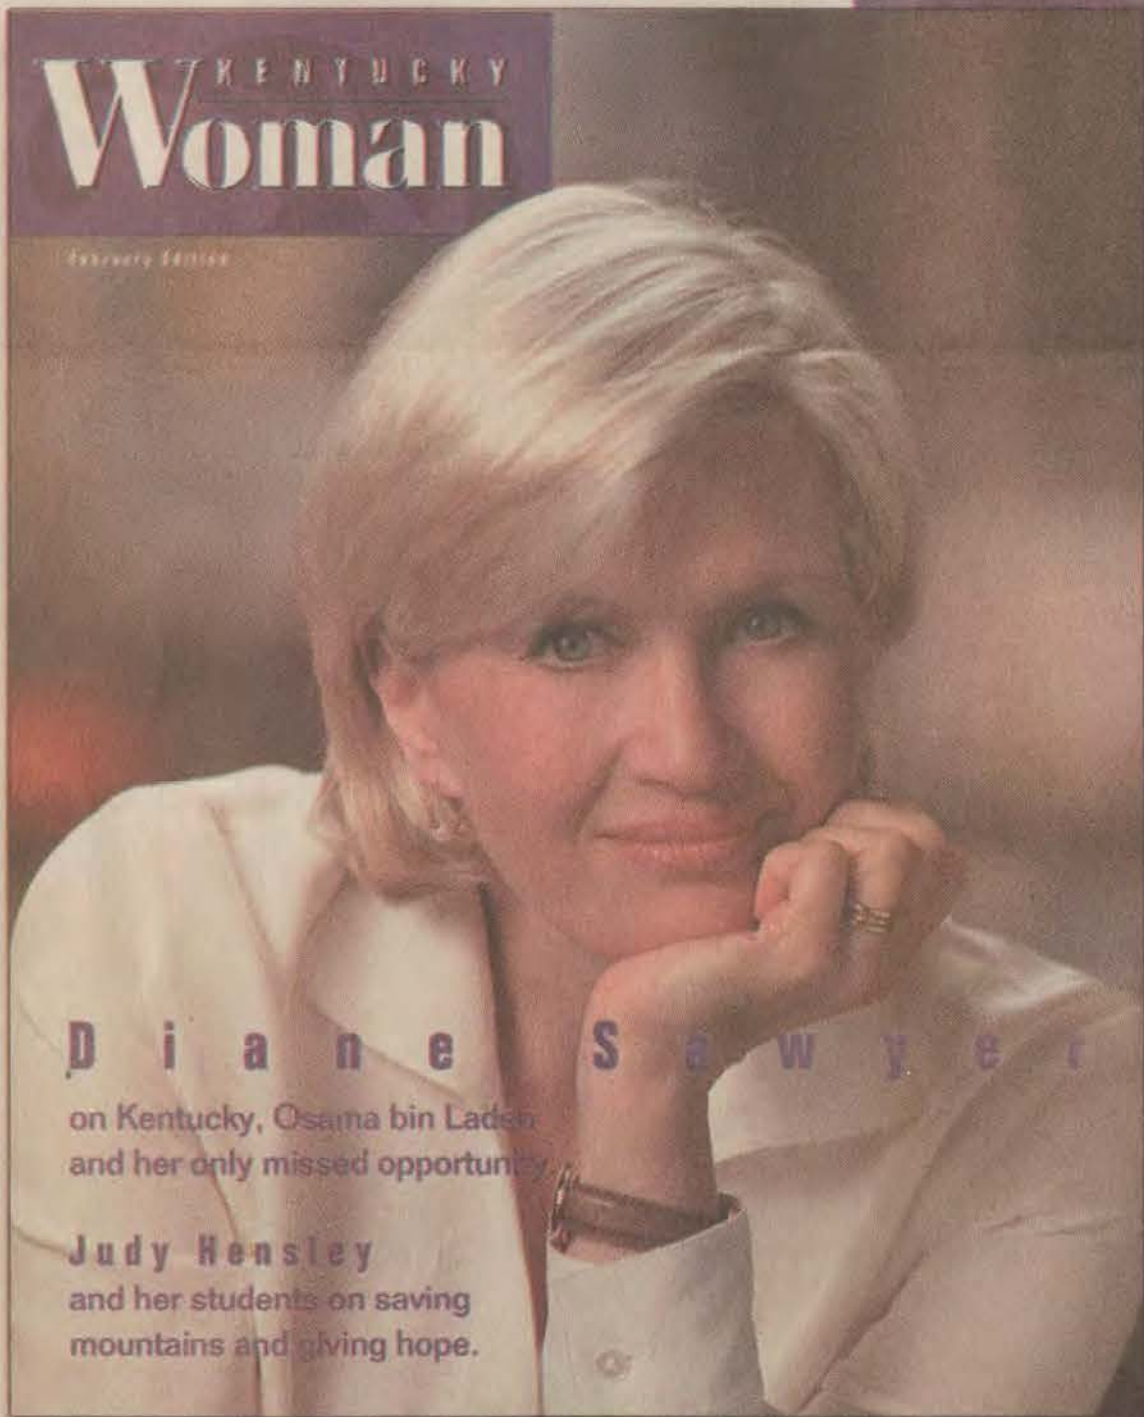

■ RECRUITING

Cumberland adds two to its lists of stellar athletes

The Cumberland College track and cross country teams recently signed two runners. Michael Jessee, a native of Waddey, comes to Cumberland after leaving the high school ranks as one of the Top 10 senior runners in cross-country for the state of Kentucky. Head Coach Floyd Stroud remarked, "We are very happy to have a runner like Jessee to become a part of our team, and we know that he will make a great impact."

Another Michael, Michael

Congleton, joins the team and reigns from Booneville. His stellar stats include being Kentucky's Single-A State Champion in cross-country. There is no doubt in the minds of the coaching staff as to whether or not Congleton will advance the team's efforts: "We are very fortunate to have a state champion in our ranks. We feel that he will help us right away and challenge those already running for Cumberland."

Would consumers really miss Kmart if it went away?

by ANNE D'INNOCENZIO
AP BUSINESS WRITER

NEW YORK - Would consumers miss Kmart if it went away?

Capri DeMarco, a mother of three from Duanesburg, N.Y., has a frank answer.

"No. Their customer service rots," she said. "We have Wal-Mart. Wal-Mart has taken over."

Shoppers like DeMarco offer proof that the nation's third-largest discounter — squeezed by low-price operator Wal-Mart and cheap chic purveyor Target — needs to change dramatically and fast as it reorganizes in Chapter 11 bankruptcy proceedings.

If it doesn't, analysts say, Kmart could find itself joining the retail scrap heap that's expected to pile higher in this recessionary environment.

Bradlees and 128-year-old Montgomery Ward tried to use Chapter 11 bankruptcy to restructure but ended up liquidating after failing to come up with a new formula that would set themselves apart from their rivals.

And analysts believe Ames Department Stores, which filed for bankruptcy last August — its second time around — might meet the same fate. In December, it announced it would close another 54 stores, leaving it with 333. Ames hopes to exit bankruptcy by the second quarter.

Other big names that have disappeared include discounter Caldor, which called it quits in 1999, and Merry-Go-Round Enterprises, which ruled teen apparel retailing with 800 stores at its heyday in the late 1980s and early '90s but ended up liquidating in 1996.

As Conor Reilly, a senior partner at the New York law firm Gibson, Dunn & Crutcher, who specializes in bankruptcy, puts it, "I just don't think consumers will miss Kmart in its current format. If they don't have a big plan, they just won't come out" of bankruptcy intact.

In announcing the Chapter 11 filing

Medicare AND YOU

Q Does Medicare cover dental services?

A Medicare does not cover routine dental care or most dental procedures such as cleanings, fillings, tooth extractions, or dentures. In rare cases, Medicare Part B will help pay for certain dental services. In addition, Medicare Part A will pay for certain dental services that you get when you are in the hospital. If you think there is a possibility that your situation would be an exception to the rule, you may call the Medicare contractor in Kentucky at 1-800-999-7608 for more information.

Q Does Medicare help pay for acupuncture?

A At this time Medicare guidelines do not allow payment for acupuncture services.

Q How do I get a new Medicare card if my card is lost, stolen, or damaged?

A The Social Security Administration issues Medicare cards. You may contact Social Security at 1-800-772-1213 or visit your local office. If you have a computer with Internet access you can now request a replacement Medicare card online by visiting www.ssa.gov. This online service for card replacement may be accessed;

- Monday-Friday 6 a.m. until 1 a.m.
- Saturday 8 a.m. until 11 p.m.
- Sunday 8 a.m. until 8 p.m.

To make your online request you will need the following information:

- Your name as it appears on your most recent Social Security card
- Social Security number
- Date and place of birth
- Mother's maiden name
- Phone number (in case Social Security needs to contact you about your request)
- Your last payment amount or the month and year you last received a payment if you have received benefits in the last 12 months

Have questions about Medicare? Call 1-800-MEDICARE (1-800-633-4227), TTY/TDD 1-877-486-2048 (toll free for the hearing impaired), or visit www.medicare.gov on the internet.

HI HAT — "Roadie's," a locally owned restaurant featuring home-style cookin' recently opened in the Hi Hat area. Owners Loretta and Gary Tackett, also operate "Country Roads Cafe," located in Harold.

Roadie's offers a complete menu of breakfast, lunch and dinner menu items. On the breakfast menu you will find everything from Grandma's biscuits and gravy to pancakes, waffles, eggs any style you like 'em, and made-to-order fresh egg omelets.

Lunch will find you hungry for the establishment's signature "Roadie Burger," a home-style, fresh hamburger dressed with lettuce, tomato, onion, pickle and cheese. Add bacon to make it a "Bacon Roadie," or an extra patty of beef for a "Double Roadie," or add both for a "Double Bacon Roadie."

Other sandwiches on the lunch menu include a grilled chicken, fish, grilled cheese and foot long hot dog with chili.

The dinner menu offers a fresh catfish dinner with piping hot french fries, creamy cole slaw and a hot dinner roll. Diners may also choose dinners featuring fish, shrimp, chicken strips, tender roast beef, Italian spaghetti or cavatini, an oriental chicken stir-fry, a three piece chicken dinner (breast, thigh, leg), or a choice of a hefty ribeye or t-bone steak grilled to your order. Steak dinners come with fresh tossed salads, hot baked potatoes and your choice of dressing.

Loretta and Gary love kids and they have not been forgotten, as Roadie's offers kids size meals at reduced prices. Children may choose from meals featuring hamburgers/cheeseburgers, hot dog, mini corn dogs or chicken nuggets.

Pizzas are a hot item at Roadie's, also. You can custom order a 12", 14", or 16" pizza with your favorite toppings. Choose either a thick, pan crust or original crust. Roadie's offers an everyday special wherein you can order a 16" "everything" pizza and receive a free one topping 12" pizza. Also, Roadie's will provide a complimentary 2-liter of your favorite soda with every 16" pizza order.

In addition to the already mentioned delicious menu items, Roadie's also offers homemade Italian, roast beef, ham and cheese, pizza, and Philly-style sub sandwiches, along with an appetizer menu that includes cheesesticks

AEI Resources giving control to creditors

ASHLAND — AEI Resources Holding Inc., the country's fourth-largest coal producer, will give control of the company to its largest creditors and file a bankruptcy reorganization plan that will take interest in the company away from the Addington family.

The Ashland-based company, commonly known as Addington Enterprises, announced the agreement with its largest lenders and note-holders Monday.

The company will receive a loan of $150 million to continue operations during the Chapter 11 bankruptcy proceedings and a loan of an additional $250 million once the bankruptcy court approves the plan.

"These proceedings are not expected to have any impact on daily operations. Our mines and office will remain open, and transactions will proceed as always," Don Brown, the company's chief executive officer and chairman, said in a statement.

"These proceedings are not expected to have any impact on daily operations. Our mines and office will remain open, and transactions will proceed as always," Don Brown, the company's chief executive officer and chairman, said in a statement.

Michael Nemser, the company's chief financial officer, said Monday night that the company's approximately 4,000 employees should not be affected and that the company should emerge stronger.

As part of the agreement, the company will present the court with a "prepackaged" plan for reorganization that will strip the Addington family of its interest in AEI.

The company is largely owned by Larry Addington and his family. It operates mines in Appalachia, the Illinois basin and the Rocky Mountains. Most of the company's employees are in Kentucky and West

Edward Jones named 'Best Company to Work For' by Fortune Magazine

Sam Blankenship, of the Prestonsburg office of the financial services firm Edward Jones, announced Jan. 25 that Fortune Magazine ranked Edward Jones number one in its annual listing of the "Best Companies to Work For" in America. The ranking appears in the magazine's Feb. 4 edition, which hit newsstands Jan. 28.

This is Edward Jones' fourth consecutive appearance on the list, but its first number-one ranking.

"Clearly, I am excited by this number-one ranking," said Blankenship. "I believe the climate within our firm has a ripple effect on our clients and on the communities we serve. The firm values its associates and treats them with respect. This is a great place to work and having Fortune Magazine recognize our efforts is icing on the cake."

The magazine said that despite difficult economic times, the firm had no layoffs. The magazine also said that 97 percent of Edward Jones employees praise management's honesty.

Edward Jones Managing Partner John Bachmann said that to be on the list of the '100 Best Companies to Work For' is an extraordinary honor, but to be at the top of the list is beyond anything anyone at the firm could have imagined.

"One of the keys to being an attractive workplace is the fact that everyone is organized around a single customer and a single mission," Bachmann said. "We know our responsibility is to serve the serious long-term investor, and in order to do that effectively, we have to align all of our resources so that we are focusing on a team effort and doing everything we can to support that relationship between our investment representative and the customer."

More than any other national survey of companies, the Fortune 100 Best ranking is employee-driven, with two-thirds of the scoring based upon how randomly-selected employees respond to an anonymous survey designed to Federal regulators to target e-mail that cons consumers

ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — Deceptive junk e-mail is the latest target for federal regulators seeking to purge the Internet of fraud. The Federal Trade Commission will announce in the next couple of weeks its first effort to prosecute con artists who specifically use e-mail spam to dupe consumers, said Howard Beales, the agency's director of consumer protection.

"We are interested in a systematic attack on deceptive spam," Beales said Thursday in an interview. "It's clear that there's enough fraudulent and deceptive spam out there that if we got rid of it, a lot of people would be happier, but I don't think we'll be in any danger of running out of potential cases."

Many scams sent by e-mail often involve business opportunities that promise huge earnings but provide few details and often turn out to be illegal pyramid schemes. Internet chain letters and promotions selling lists of millions of e-mail addresses to continue the cycle of spam also are common.

Beales said people who get spam they don't like should forward it to the FTC, which gets 10,000 such e-mails daily.

Other spam scams involve work-at-home programs such as envelope stuffing and craft assembly; bogus weight-loss products that promise to melt away at cells; and cable descrambler kits that would be illegal if they would work — and they often don't.

Nineteen states have passed spam-specific laws that prohibit false messages or headers and require labels in subject lines or the option of declining a marketer's future mailings.

Beales said the agency will pursue those who trap consumers by using their requests to unsubscribe from an e-mail lists to sell their addresses to other spammers.

For years the agency has worked to combat websites making dubious offers, but the new effort is the first time the FTC has gone after fraud in e-mail alone, Beales said.

with sauce, hot wings, deep fried mushrooms, and garlic fingers.

Eating light? Try Roadie's garden, chef, and taco salads. Fresh, light and just right!

Roadie's is open seven days a week, with extended Friday and Saturday evening hours. They will deliver free of charge to your home with a minimum purchase order, but why not come out and dine in a friendly atmosphere and comfortable surroundings while the kids busy themselves with a variety of video games. Roadie's even offers pool tables for your enjoyment. "We enjoy having people come in and sit and talk and enjoy themselves," said Gary, "but no alcohol is allowed at Roadie's. We keep a family atmosphere here."

"And, we always serve our county's deputies, state police officers, rescue workers and such free of charge," added Loretta. "If they're in uniform, we will feed them for free."

Kmart

Tuesday, Kmart offered few clues as to what exactly the restructuring would entail. It only said it will evaluate store performance and lease terms by the end of the first quarter of 2002 and will close unprofitable or underperforming stores. Kmart also said it would reduce staff.

Analysts say Kmart, with sales last year of $37 billion, could close anywhere from 250 to 700 of its 2,100 stores.

Plenty of competitors are available to fill the void. With Merry-Go-Round's disappearance, rivals like Gap, Abercrombie & Fitch and American Eagle Outfitters quickly moved in. Meanwhile, such powerful players as Wal-Mart, Target and Kohl's snapped up real estate from Bradlees and Montgomery Ward.

But unlike many of its now-extinct discount rivals, which lacked powerful exclusive brands, Kmart does have several unique attributes, analysts note. For one, the retailer has exclusive partnerships with such names as Martha Stewart, its top-selling brand; Sesame Street and Jaclyn Smith.

For some customers, like Michele Tekler of Wausau, Wis., Martha Stewart is the "No. 1 priority" at Kmart.

"It's the reason I do come," said Tekler, who was buying household items Friday morning at one of the two Kmarts in her town.

Some shoppers also prefer Kmart over its competitors because of its convenience and variety.

"I can find what I want easily here, even more so than at Wal-Mart," said Jeannie Dinoto, from Ventnor, N.J. "I can get something for the baby, something for myself, something for the house, and it's easy."

Kmart also has established roots in the urban market, with two-thirds of its store base in cities, according to Burt Flickinger III, managing director of Reach Marketing, a Westport, Conn.-based retail consulting firm.

However, in order to survive, Kmart needs to come up with a specific marketing niche, and analysts are hard-pressed to come up with solutions.

Furthermore, just as Kmart helped bring about the demise of Bradlees and Caldor's when it moved into the Northeast, the discounter now faces similar competitive pressures as Wal-Mart and Target continue to expand.

"The fight will definitely be in the urban area" that Kmart has dominated, Flickinger said.

Some analysts believe Kmart's future might lie in fortifying its relationship with Hispanic and black consumers. Flickinger said Kmart must de-emphasize food retailing, an area that's dominated by Wal-Mart, and eliminate electronics.

Kmart also needs to make sure its key brands, particularly Martha Stewart, don't leave. Sharon Patrick, president and chief operating officer of Martha Stewart Living Omnimedia said in a statement Tuesday it would continue to sell Martha Stewart's line of home and garden products to Kmart under the terms of its contract for the "foreseeable future."

But she also left open the possibility that the label might have to eventually find other mass retail outlets.

BBB now offering consumer memberships; Gov. Patton becomes first LEXINGTON — For the first time ever, consumers are now eligible to become members of the Better Business Bureau of Central & Eastern Kentucky. The very first consumer member is Kentucky Gov. Paul Patton, who accepted the membership from BBB President and CEO Neil Kingery recently in Frankfort.

"Joining the BBB as a Consumer Member is the perfect way to celebrate National Consumer Protection Week (Feb. 3-9)," said Kingery. "If you have the money to spend, a telephone, or a mailbox, you are a prospect to an unscrupulous business or a phony charity solicitation. By becoming a BBB Consumer Member, you are investing in your own consumer education, plus saving money, aggravation and time."

"Consumer membership in the BBB allows Kentuckians to take advantage of special access to enhanced services in order to protect their money or resolve problems," Kingery explained. "Of course, the BBB will continue to offer its basic level of excellent customer assistance that we've provided for nearly 45 years."

Consumer members will enjoy some enhanced services for their annual investment:

- "Members' only" hotline number — extended hours with immediate access to a live operator ... no waiting your turn in the automated system.

- Telephone complaint intake — you no longer have to submit complaints in writing.

- Consumer member newsletter — this publication is sent out to members monthly.

- "Fast Facts" alerts — timely, important bulletins with tips and warnings.

- "BBB Watch" consumer member door decal — alerts door-to-door solicitors that you will check them out with the BBB.

- BBB phone decal with your exclusive "Members' Only" phone number to the BBB.
- News releases — be among the first to learn of scams hitting Central and Eastern Kentucky.

- Local/national charity evaluation quarterly reports — know where your donation is going before you give.

- Annual "Tips" booklets sent to members from our resource library.

- Special invitation to any BBB event — workshops, Business Builders, etc.

Plus, consumers will receive immediate, preferred help from a BBB team member with our regular services:

- Reliability reports — Check out a company before doing business to avoid headaches. If the company is out-of-state, we'll get the BBB report from that area for you.

- BBB member referral lists — Do business with firms that have already been checked out.

- Referral agencies — Not sure where to turn for help or information? The BBB has an extensive list of referral agencies that may be of help.

- General advice reports — Informative reports with tips and advice on many consumer topics.

"One membership is good for an entire household," said Kingery. "You can also give this membership as a gift to an elderly parent or a young adult living on their own for the first time, helping your loved one save time and money."

There are two different levels of membership available:

- $25/year — At this level, member newsletters, "Fast Facts" Alerts and news releases will be e-mailed or faxed, in addition to the other benefits.

- $30/year — If you (or the recipient of your gift) would rather receive the newsletters, "Fast Facts" and news releases through the mail, the BBB is offering this enhanced level of membership.

Kentuckians who wish to become consumer members of the BBB (or would just like more information) can 859-259-1008 or toll-free in Kentucky at 800-866-6668. They may also apply for membership through the BBB website at www.ky.bbb.org by clicking on the "Consumer Membership" icon.

Burgers

one of 20 students at Washington's Van Ness Elementary School who tried several new products that the Agriculture Department may offer to schools.

Mustafa, 12, said the burgers, which are a blend of beef and prune puree, were better than the usual school fare. A raisin-tomato barbecue dip for chicken nuggets also was a hit with the students at Tuesday's taste test.

The Agriculture Department is under pressure from Congress to bolster produce prices by buying up surplus crops, including cranberries and prunes, and giving them to schools. Results from the taste test will be tabulated and sent to schools.

In a similar test last year in the Los Angeles area, the sweet potato pancakes were very popular, as were snack bars made with dates and almonds. Broccoli guacamole was a dud, and so was an asparagus version. The prune burgers and pizza topped with a prune-based sauce got better reviews.

USDA eventually intends to hold regular school taste tests in seven regions of the country.

"What we're really trying to do is find new uses for the products we've been purchasing," said Robert Keeney, deputy administrator of USDA's Agricultural Marketing Service.

There's such a glut of prunes that the department is paying growers to destroy 20,000 acres of plum trees. USDA also has been paying farmers to destroy potato and sugar crops, and last year sharply restricted the amount of cranberries that could be brought to market.

Schools, however, are leery of trying new products without evidence that kids will accept them.

"This is something we've been asking them to do for numerous years," said Marcia Smith, school food director in Polk County, Fla., and president of the American School Food Service Association.

The children at Van Ness tried 11 different items Tuesday and were asked to grade each on a scale from 1 (worst) to 5 (best) on taste, smell, color and overall appeal.

"Remember, all the kids around the country are going to hold you responsible for this," sixth-grade teacher Brenda Maxwell told one of her students who seemed reluctant to give bad grades.

Franklin Murphy, 10, gave all 5s to the sweet potato pancakes, but he frowned at all three versions of grapefruit juice he was offered, including those mixed with different kinds of grape juice.

Jane Henry, 12, gave the turkey-prune hot dogs a 3 on color but 5s on everything else, including taste. "It's light, and I'm used to dark colors," she said.

The kids weren't supposed to know what was in the food until they ate it, but some had seen a display of the products before the test started.

The presence of plums in the burgers turned off some of the kids. Both the government and the industry now refer to prunes as "dried plums."

The burgers, which contain about 4 percent prune puree and some soy, have about 40 percent less fat than an all-beef patty. The prune mixture adds moisture to replace the lost fat. The prune burgers served Tuesday were flame-broiled by the processor to give them the grilled flavor.

John Lund, a USDA official who oversaw the taste test, said there's no reason for schools to disclose that the burgers contain prunes, since there's too little of the fruit to have the laxative effect for which prunes are known.

measure the quality of workplace culture. The remainder of the score is based on an in-depth analysis of company culture and human resources practices.

The application probed 279 employers of choice that evaluated trust in management, pride in work and the company, and camaraderie.

Bachmann said he is proud that Edward Jones has remained committed to being an employer of choice during this time of rapid growth for the firm.

"Any ranking is a rear-view mirror look, because it shows us what happened in the past," Bachmann said. "What we concern ourselves with is what's in the windshield and making sure that we maintain an environment that is going to attract the most talented and most able people, wherever they are and wherever we find them."

When Bachmann took the reins of the firm in 1980, Edward Jones had just 300 branch offices. Today, the firm boasts more than 8,000 branches, and is hiring about 200 new investment representatives each month with the goal of having 10,000 branches by 2003.

Edward Jones recruits its investment representatives from all walks of life. They are former teachers, bankers, salespeople, attorneys, CPAs and more. What they share, however, is an entrepreneurial spirit to work independently and help others. This ensures that the firm's brokers are a diverse group trained to establish their own style of working with clients within the confines of Edward Jones' culture and philosophy.

In addition to hiring 200 new investment representatives a month, Edward Jones also hires one full-time branch office administrator for every investment representative. Growth in the field also affects hiring at the firm's St. Louis headquarters in the areas of marketing, information systems, operations, training, research and various other disciplines. The firm employs more than 21,000 people in the United States and, through its affiliates, in Canada and the United Kingdom.

Edward Jones has consistently earned high marks as an employer in other national publications. The firm was ranked by Working Mother in October 2001 as one of the 100 Best Companies for Working Mothers. Registered Representative also has rated Edward Jones number one for nine consecutive years among the nation's leading brokerages in its anonymous survey of the firm's own brokers.

Edward Jones, the only major financial-services firm advising individual investors exclusively, traces its roots to 1871 and currently serves nearly 5 million clients. The firm offers its clients a variety of investments, including certificates of deposit, taxable and non-taxable bonds, stocks and mutual funds.

The company is being forced into bankruptcy in large part by the failure of Addington's bonding company, Frontier Insurance Co., which New York regulators took over in August. Kentucky Insurance Commissioner Janie Miller then suspended Frontier from doing business in Kentucky.

Mining companies are required to purchase bonds to cover the costs of reclamation and workers' compensation.

After Frontier's failure, Nemser said, the company was able to replace only some of the bonds. To replace the other bonds, he said, the company would have had to post 100 percent of the bonding amount for collateral.

Nemser said a tight market and the events of Sept. 11 made it difficult to buy bonds. He also said the company has accumulated a substantial amount of debt through acquisitions.

Nemser wouldn't say how much the company needs to bond its mining operations, but a company lawyer said earlier this month that Addington held $400 million in reclamation bonds with Frontier a year ago.

EKU announces spring nursing/health education series

RICHMOND — Eastern Kentucky University's College of Health Sciences will offer 20 continuing education courses this spring for nurses and other health professionals.

The Continuing Education Program, which includes three self-study courses, is structured to meet the needs of a diverse audience, according to Director Dr. Janet Collins.

"We attract people from small hospitals and small facilities that don't have a continuing education program," Collins noted. "Our programs are designed to have a broad appeal to people regardless of their situation."

Many of the courses address topical health concerns that touch all segments of society. They include "AIDS Update for Health Care Professionals," "Domestic Violence: More Prevalent Than You Think," "Hypertension: Treatment Guidelines for the Primary Care Clinician," "Biological and Chemical Terrorism" and "Eating Disorders," among others.

Several courses help nurses and other health professionals develop leadership skills, communicate more effectively with patients and colleagues and deal with the daily pressures of their jobs. They include "Coding Rules and Regulations," "What's A Nurse Need to Know about Farming?" "Spirituality: The Foundation of Holistic Nursing," "Yoga for Healthcare Professionals," "Cultural Care: Nursing for the Future" and "Health Ministries and Parish Nursing."

Some courses deal with specific age or patient groups. They include "Childhood Obesity," "Managing Psychotic Symptoms in Parkinsonism," "Polypharmacy in the Elderly," "Women and Heart Disease: Planning for the Diabetes Epidemic and "Depression and Anxiety in Women."

All courses are approved by the American Nurses Credentialing Center's Commission on Accreditation and the Kentucky Board of Nursing. They are taught by PRESTONSBURG — Gov. Paul E. Patton recently appointed three new members of the Prestonsburg Community College Board of Directors. Among those appointed were Peggy Blankenship, Malcom Layne and Kitty White. Reappointed to the board was Dr. Rodney Handshoe. Serving as members, their duties will include evaluating the community college president and approving annual plans and budget requests.

Replacing Bob M. Hutchison is Peggy Blankenship. Blankenship, a realtor at Realty One USA in Inez, is a graduate of Pikeville College. She obtained a B.S. degree in education and then received a Masters and Rank 1 in education from Morehead State University. She has devoted many years toward educating the youth of Martin County. Job Corps lends helping hand at Prestonsburg Community College

PRESTONSBURG — Jean Rosenberg, the program director of Education Pays Career Development Center, at Prestonsburg Community College, was grateful for a helping hand from Dennis Conley, carpentry instructor at Carl Perkins Job Corps Center, and a crew of his carpentry students.

When Rosenberg was informed that the Education Pays Career Development Center program office would take new residence in the Johnson Building, on the Prestonsburg Campus, she was excited. But Rosenberg was concerned that in the new location she would not have a private inner space to consult with participants.

When Dennis Conley learned of the need for a director's office to be built within the new office location, he and his students responded by lending their time and talent to creating the needed private space.

For more information concerning Education Pays Career Development Center, contact Jean Rosenberg or Lisa Stanley at Prestonsburg Community College 886-641-4132, ext. 239.

Rosenberg and her office manager, Lisa Stanley, were very delighted and were moved on Jan. 23.

The program is designed to help parents attending school while balancing the needs of a family. The program has several funding sources and offers many activities such as workshops on career development, exploration of careers, and career planning. The program, in cooperation with local social service agencies and educational institutions, will assist parents in making the best possible vocational choices.

Both Jean and Lisa are excited to begin work in their new office and invite everyone to stop by and discover the many resources available. MSU prepares to give center a facelift

An artist's rendering of how the Adron Doran University Center will appear following its renovation.

MOREHEAD — Actual construction is expected to begin in late summer on the $10 million first phase expansion and partial renovation of Morehead State University's Adron Doran University Center.

"We are excited about the prospect of starting the process of enlarging and improving this important structure to transform it into a more modern facility to meet the needs of today's students," said MSU President Ronald G. Eaglin.

His sentiments were echoed by Brian Martin, Floyd County senior and president of the Student Government Association, who described the ADUC project as "sorely needed and greatly appreciated."

Martin, who also serves as the student member of MSU's Board of Regents, noted that the last expansion of ADUC was more than 32 years ago and that the building had become outmoded and overcrowded.

"We are badly in need of additional, more functional space for student activities and services and for other operations which benefit all members of our campus community," Martin added.

Dr. Eaglin and Martin expressed MSU's gratitude to Gov. Paul Patton, State Rep. John Will Stacy and State Sen. Robert Stivers for their personal support of the project.

"The governor and our legislators were most effective in securing funding for the first phase of this project and we are anxious to get the work started," Dr.

Eaglin added. "We realize that the state's budget situation probably means we will have to be patient about the second phase. However, the first phase should alleviate the worst problems for the time being."

Dr. Eaglin and Martin said they are pleased that the front of the building will be restored to its original red brick and limestone exterior, similar to the collegiate gothic architecture prevalent in the main campus area. The second phase would add the brick-and-limestone look to the remainder of the structure.

Built in 1957 as the Doran Student House, the tri-level building was expanded in 1969 and renamed the Adron Doran

Spotlight jazz series features Fusion's Wayne Shorter

LEXINGTON — The University of Kentucky 2001-02 Spotlight Jazz Series continues this spring with a performance by the Wayne Shorter Quartet at 8 p.m. Thursday, Feb. 28, at the UK Singletary Center for the Arts.

Wayne Shorter began his foray into jazz at age 16, when he took up the clarinet, which he later traded for the tenor saxophone. In 1956, he earned a degree in music education from New York University and, after two years in the U.S.

Army, began a professional jazz career in 1959 with the Maynard Ferguson Orchestra. He became close friends with John Coltrane, who would become a musical mentor of sorts to him. In 1959, Shorter made his breakthrough by joining Art Blakey's Jazz Messengers with Lee Morgan. In 1964, he joined the Miles Davis Quintet, working and performing alongside Herbie Hancock, Ron Carter and Tony Williams. During the 1960s, he also recorded under his own name under the Blue Note label and wrote and played for many other Blue Note recording sessions. In the late '60s, Shorter and Joe Zawinul founded the fusion band Weather Report, which they co-led until 1985.

The Wayne Shorter Quartet will take the stage at 8 p.m. Thursday, Feb. 28, at the UK Singletary Center for the Arts, located at the corner of Rose Street and Euclid Avenue. The next event in the Spotlight Jazz Series will be a performance by the John Scofield Band at 8 p.m.,

Saturday, April 6, at the Lexington Opera House, 401 W. Short St., Lexington.

Tickets for the Spotlight Jazz events are sold through the UK Student Center Ticket Office at (859) 257-8427 and Ticketmaster outlets. Ticket prices for the Wayne Shorter event are $17 for students and $25 for the public.

Spotlight Jazz is one of the oldest series of its kind at a university. It is sponsored by UK African-American Student Affairs and the UK Student Activities Board.

Washington

WASHINGTON, D.C. — Tonda Hughes, the daughter of Earl and Ruby Hughes of East Point, recently became a Fellow in the American Academy of Nurses. Induction into the American Academy of Nurses — an elite organization of approximately 1400 members is the nursing profession's highest honor.

The Academy induction recognized Dr. Hughes' outstanding research contributions to women's health and substance abuse. Dr. Hughes has conducted more than a dozen funded studies on women's use of alcohol and other drugs, including a study currently funded by the National Institute of Alcohol Abuse and Alcoholism (NIAAA) and the Office for Women's Health Research (OWHR), United States Department of Health and Human Services. She has also published extensively on issues related to substance abuse in vulnerable populations of women and has addressed numerous national and international audiences. She has been invited to present her research at conferences in Italy and the Netherlands later this year. She co-edited one of the first books to address the topic of addiction in the nursing profession. This book won the American Journal of Nursing Book of the Year Award.

Dr. Hughes serves as consultant or advisory to a number of federal agencies, including the National Institute on Alcohol Abuse and Alcoholism (NIAAA), Centers for Disease Control (CDC), Center for Substance Abuse Prevention (CSAP), Center for Substance Abuse Treatment (CSAT), and the Office for Women's Health Research.

Dr. Hughes has a bachelor's degree from Eastern Kentucky University, a master's degree from the University of Kentucky and a PhD from the University of Illinois at Chicago (UIC). She also completed a three-year National Institute on Drug Abuse, postdoctoral fellowship in the School of Public Health at UIC. She is presently Associate Professor of Nursing and Director of Research for the Center of Excellence in Women's Health at UIC.

Dr. Hughes' parents, Ruby and Earl Hughes, lived for more than 40 years in Weeksbury. They moved to East Point in 2000.

University Center. It carries the name of MSU's seventh president who held office for nearly 23 years. He died in late 2001 at the age of 1992.

ADUC currently consists of 104,668 square feet of floor space and will be expanded by 22,700 square feet in the first phase and by 45,824 in the second phase. Slightly more than half of the existing space will be renovated in the first phase.

The second phase, with an estimated cost of $18 million, is not expected to be funded in the immediate future.

The first phase will see the building expanded on its east and north sides. As a result, pedestrian and vehicular traffic patterns will be altered on University Boulevard, University Street and Normal Avenue. The University is acquiring additional property east of ADUC in connection with the project.

school assistant principal for 15. "Working with the youth of the area has been a priority in my life," Blankenship explained.

Blankenship said she felt honored to have been appointed as a member of the PCC Board of Directors and looks forward to learning more about the current established goals for improvement and having dialogue with everyone involved to allow for continuity and on going progress.

"As a member of the board, I am anxious to assume my roles and responsibilities," Blankenship said.

Replacing Paul Gearheart will be Malcom Layne. Layne is a local businessman and president and CEO of Layne Bros. Ford, Lincoln, Mercury, Honda Inc. located at Ivel. He was born in Floyd County, and has resided most of his life in Ivel, where he has been actively involved in the community.

Layne's concern for the community and economy are shown through his past and current involvement with agencies, government offices, committees and local chambers. Past activities include teaching positions at Betsy Layne, McDowell and Wheelwright. He has served as an assistant boys' basketball coach at Betsy Layne High School and the head boys' baseball coach and assistant boys' and girls' basketball coach at McDowell High School. He is a member of the Christ United Methodist Church located in Allen, and serves on the Board at Wesley Christian School.

Being an alumnus of PCC, Layne said he feels honored to have been appointed as a member of the board of directors.

"PCC has changed so much over the years," Layne said, "and when one drives on the campus you can see tremendous growth. I just want to give something back to the college that gave so much to me."

Kitty White will be replacing Frank E. Salisbury. White is the executive director of the Pike County Chamber of Commerce. She also expressed her admiration for PCC and the doorway for higher education it has provided for Eastern Kentucky leaders and the future impact it will have on the community.

"Now, with its (PCC) close association with Mayo Technical College and under the capable leadership of Dr. George Edwards," White said, "the Big Sandy Community Kentucky and Technical College District is poised to provide an even greater selection of academic courses and technical skills to prepare our young people for successful, productive lives."

White, graduating from the University of Kentucky with a major in English and minors in sociology and journalism, realizes the importance of education and wants to help continue the successful leadership at PCC.

"I will do my best to continue the tradition of excellence already demonstrated by the board and to work with other board members, administrators, faculty and staff to ensure that PCC continues to expand its services to our students and our area," White said.

Dr. George Edwards, president of PCC, indicated that the board would be meeting approximately six times during 2002.

"I am pleased to have these three outstanding community leaders join us on our board of directors," Edwards said. "We have made significant progress recently and I am confident that this Board will help Prestonsburg Community College to become the community's college."

The company is still seeking final approval from creditors who will be affected by the agreement. Other creditors, who will not become the company's owners, will be paid in full, Nemser said.

The deal with creditors will give the company additional financial backing and reduce the company's debt, Nemser said.

"This is a positive step in our efforts to create a more appropriate capital structure, to continue to strengthen AEI and to make the company more competitive," Brown said.

Donna's Day

Creative family fun

by Donna Erickson

Pass the popcorn

When friends and family gather around the television to watch the Super Bowl, pass the popcorn for a crowd-pleasing snack! This version with a Southwest twist can be assembled ahead of time with the kids. When guests arrive, pop it in the oven and serve.

DAVID LAROCHELLE

You'll need:

- 10 cups popped popcorn
- 1/2 cup grated Monterey Jack cheese and 1/2 cup grated cheddar cheese
- 3-2-1 popcorn flavoring to taste (see recipe below) or use taco seasoning mix
- 10-oz. package tortilla chips
- 1 tablespoon chopped scallions
- 1 cup salsa

Spread popcorn into an 11-by-13-inch baking dish. Sprinkle 3-2-1 flavoring and cheese onto the popcorn. Place tortilla chips around the popcorn along edges of the baking dish. Bake in oven at 350 degrees F for 2-3 minutes, until cheese is melted. Remove from oven, garnish with chopped scallions, set a bowl of salsa in the center of the dish and serve.

Tip: Make a mold for the salsa bowl by pressing the bowl into the popcorn in the baking dish. Remove the bowl and then place the baking dish in the oven.

3-2-1 POPCORN FLAVORING

- 3 tablespoons white cheddar cheese powder
 - 2 tablespoons chili powder
 - 1 tablespoon cumin powder
- Combine the ingredients and pour into a clean spice jar.

Sauces take pancakes to the next level

In my family, we learned early on that pancakes aren't just for Sunday breakfast. They also serve well for an easy supper, whether they're pancakes, griddlecakes or hot cakes. Or, if you use a thinner batter, they become crepes suitable for a sophisticated first course, main dish or dessert.

Today we're looking at sauces as a change from butter and syrup. First, we have a honeyed, fruity sauce; next, a maple syrup spiced with cinnamon and apples and dotted with chopped walnuts.

For the pancakes, you may start from scratch with a basic recipe. Opt for a good packaged mix, or try our cornmeal pancakes for a different taste and texture.

CORNMEAL PANCAKES

- 1/2 cup all-purpose flour
- 1/2 cup cornmeal
- 3 teaspoons baking powder
- 1/2 teaspoon salt
- 1 cup milk
- 1 egg
- 3 tablespoons honey
- 3 tablespoons melted butter

1. In a medium bowl, combine flour, cornmeal, baking powder and salt; mix well; set aside.
2. In a small bowl, combine milk, egg, honey and melted butter; mix well.
3. Pour milk mixture into flour mixture; stir only until moistened (batter will be lumpy).
4. Pour about 1/4 cup batter for each pancake into a hot skillet or on a griddle, over medium-low heat; cook until bubbles form on surface and break, and the edges become dry. Turn pancake and cook 2 minutes longer or until golden.

Makes 8 pancakes.

HONEY FRUIT SAUCE

- 1 cup orange juice
- 1 apple, peeled, cored and diced
- 1 pear, peeled, cored and diced
- 1/3 cup honey
- 1 teaspoon grated orange peel
- 1 tablespoon cornstarch
- 1/4 cup water

Combine orange juice, apple, pear, honey and orange peel in medium saucepan. Bring to boil, reduce heat and simmer to 10 minutes or until fruits are tender. Dissolve cornstarch in water. Stir into hot mixture; cook and stir until mixture comes to boil; simmer 1 minute. Makes about 2 1/3 cups.

APPLE WALNUT SYRUP

- 1 cup maple syrup
- 1 large apple, peeled and thinly sliced (about 2 1/2 cups)
- 3 tablespoons butter or margarine
- 1/2 teaspoon cinnamon
- Dash of salt
- 1 cup chopped walnuts
- Squeeze of lemon juice

In saucepan combine syrup, apple, butter, cinnamon and salt. Slowly bring to boil, stirring. Reduce heat; simmer 8 minutes. Stir in nuts and lemon juice. Serve hot over pancakes. Syrup may be stored in covered container in refrigerator for several days. Reheat over low heat. Makes about 2 cups.

Chocolate Heaven

If a poll were taken of the Top Five Favorite Foods of the Average Person, it is almost a "given" that nine out of 10 people would have chocolate on their list. And, after one bite of this, I'm certain it will be a mainstay on your list!

CHOCOLATE MAYO SNACK CAKE

- 1 1/2 cups cake flour

- Sugar substitute to equal 3/4 cup sugar, suitable for baking
- 1/4 cup unsweetened cocoa
- 1 teaspoon baking powder
- 1 teaspoon baking soda
- 3/4 cup fat-free mayonnaise
- 1/2 cup unsweetened applesauce
- 1/2 cup water
- 1 1/2 teaspoons vanilla extract
- 1 cup fat-free whipped topping

Dear Diane... Forever girl

DEAR DIANE:

I am a 21-year-old college student, and I have been dating "Dorothy" for two years. I love her with all my heart.

Dorothy and I have been living together for six months now, and recently, Dorothy has been dropping hints that she is ready and willing to settle down with me. She has mentioned the "M" word on several occasions.

Contrary to the stereotype of men who are afraid of commitment, I am so gung-ho about marrying Dorothy I could bust. She's the best. She's my Forever Girl, and I couldn't be happier.

So what's the problem, right? Here we go: I want to propose to Dorothy on Valentine's Day and set our wedding date for Valentine's Day of next year.

My best friend, Doug (who will be my best man), says that I am out of my mind. Doug says that even though I think that Dorothy is my Forever Girl, we just don't know what's going to happen in the future. If we should ever divorce, my Valentine's Days from then on would be tainted with the bad memory of my failed romance and marriage.

Doug suggested that I pick another date — one that isn't around a holiday.

I think a Valentine's Day wedding would be very romantic, but I'm not so deep in love that I can't see Doug's point.

— A VALENTINE-O IN VICKSBURG

DEAR VICKSBURG:

I know many successful couples who have tied the knot on Feb. 14th. It's the couple, NOT the date, that makes a successful marriage. If you and Dorothy are in love, are compatible and have developed healthy communication skills, you should have many happy years — and Valentine's Days — together. Good luck.

Heartburn treatments include surgery

DEAR DR. DONOHUE:

I don't remember seeing anything in your column about heartburn and hiatal hernia. I have both. My gastroenterologist wants me to see a surgeon because I don't get much relief from medicines. Isn't surgery a bit drastic? — Z.M.

ANSWER:

Heartburn and hiatal hernia are such frequent topics in this column that I fear I am boring readers. But your question has a uniqueness that caught my attention.

A flat sheet of muscle separates the chest cavity from the abdominal cavity. That muscle is the diaphragm. In it are openings (hiatuses) that allow structures to pass through the chest into the abdomen.

One is for the esophagus, the swallowing tube, to join the stomach. A hiatal hernia is an upward bulging of the stomach through the gap and into the chest.

by Paul G. Donohue, M.D.

Sometimes a hiatal hernia is responsible for heartburn, known as GERD — gastroesophageal reflux disease. GERD is the splashing upward of stomach acid and digestive juices into the esophagus. At other times, GERD occurs without a hiatal hernia. You happen to have both problems.

There are many, many medicines that are nearly always effective in GERD control. One group of such medicines includes Tagamet, Pepcid, Axid and Zantac. They turn the stomach's acid-production faucet almost to the "off" position so corrosive stomach acid does not

Sheba caught his eye immediately

Michael A. Obenski, V.M.D.

(FROM "CHICKEN SOUP FOR THE CAT AND DOG LOVER'S SOUL")

Reprinted by permission of Michael A. Obenski, V.M.D. (c)1999 Michael A. Obenski, V.M.D.

I first met Sheba in 1956. I was a third-grade student at Round Meadow Elementary School. She was a 7-week-old kitten in a pet-shop window. She caught my eye immediately. I had always wanted a kitten, or at least that's what I told myself when I saw her there on display.

At first, she didn't even notice me standing there. I tried tapping on the glass, but her concentration remained elsewhere as she gave full attention to the task at hand. A thousand generations of hunting-and-stalking instincts were brought to bear as she successfully brought down her quarry — her sister's tail.

I tapped again. She stared at me for a moment, and the bond was made. Following a brief discussion through the glass we concluded that we were made for each other. I vowed to return later in the day to take her home with me.

Unfortunately, I soon found that the road to kitten ownership was not without obstacles. Mom and Dad didn't think much of my plans. It seemed that they knew quite a lot about the subject of acquiring pets. "Who ever heard of paying money for a cat? A kitten is something you can get for free anywhere."

I wasn't sure what that meant, but, even at 8 years old, I could see that the only true stumbling stone here was the finances. You see, Sheba came with a stiff price tag, $2.50. "A lot of money for something that you can get for free anywhere."

Getting my own way this time was not going to be easy. However, I felt up to the challenge at hand, and after a day of typical little-kid whining and a chunk of "birthday money" that came from Uncle Lou, Sheba was mine.

I was an instant hit with her, and the feeling was mutual. She slept on my bed every night. We had long and meaningful conversations when no one else was around. In fact, it was Sheba who was largely responsible for my deciding somewhat early in life to pursue a career as a veterinarian.

Through junior high, high school, college and veterinary school, she remained a close feline friend. Many important decisions regarding my career as well as my personal life were influenced by conversations, whether real or imagined, with Sheba.

Though she lived with Mom and Dad while I was busy getting married, raising a family and practicing the profession that she influenced me to join, she remained a close friend and seemed to enjoy visits from me, my wife and kids.

Undoubtedly, it was her influence once again that got me thinking about opening a veterinary hospital for cats only. She seemed to love the idea when we "talked" about it, and I knew from past experience that her judgement was flawless, so I set off down a new career path. In June of 1978, my new hospital, The Allentown Clinic for Cats, opened its doors.

Sheba was 22-years old on opening day when Mom and Dad brought her to see me and the beautiful new hospital that she had inspired. They hadn't warned me in advance that there was a second reason for the visit.

Sheba looked horrible. Apparently she had become quite ill that week. I did a thorough exam and was forced to a bitter conclusion. You see, I had been in practice long enough to know when a situation was hopeless.

It seemed fitting that in the new hospital, Sheba was the first cat whose suffering we could ease. We had the last of our long conversations as she fell gently asleep in my arms.

“Digital Domain: The Leading Edge of Special Effects”

OK, it looks like just another coffee table book, but “Digital Domain” is anything but. It is a lavishly illustrated textbook and glimpse into the world of cutting-edge movie special effects.

In 1993, filmmaker James Cameron (“Titanic,” “The Terminator”), make-up and creature effects wizard Stan Winston and Scott Ross founded Digital Domain. In its brief, eight-year history, the company has garnered five Academy Award nominations and two Oscars.

Digital Domain has provided the special effects for such films as “Titanic,” “X-Men,” “Apollo 13,”

“The Fifth Element” and others. In this book, readers will get a chance to see how the effects were accomplished for these and many other films.

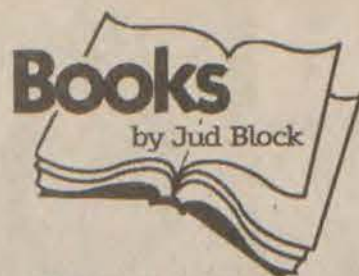

One thing the average filmgoer might discover is that despite the conventional wisdom that almost all special effects are generated by computer, this is hardly the case. A complex meshing of various elements: live-action, stunt doubles, miniatures, paintings and digital imagery is, instead, the norm.

In addition to just highlighting the accomplishments of Cameron’s effects house, “Digital Domain” is also a wonderful primer on the history of film effects, from “Ben Hur” to “2001” and “Close Encounters of the Third Kind,” all the way up to “Titanic” and “How the Grinch Stole Christmas.”

My only gripe would be with the title of the book. True, Digital Domain is one of the major effects houses in Hollywood, but is it THE Leading Edge? What about George Lucas’ Industrial Light and Magic, and New Zealand’s WETA, which did the astounding effects for “The Lord of the Rings”?

But quibbling aside, “Digital Domain: The Leading Edge of

For some people, measuring body fat (composition) is a way to determine progress in their workout routines. Unfortunately, meaningful results aren’t always in the measurement. Shouldn’t we just go by how we feel, how our clothes fit and what the scale tells us? However, since excessive body fat is a significant factor in heart disease and some forms of cancer, it is important that you have some idea of your body composition.

For a healthy, average male, body fat should range from 8 percent to 15 percent of total body mass; for females, the range of body fat is between 15 percent and 22 percent.

The exercise and medical fields have found a hot market in fat measurement.

Currently there are more than eight different ways to calculate body composition. These techniques are limited in their usefulness in one way or another. Some are too simplistic; others are expensive in terms of equipment and personnel to administer the test; still others are too complex and error-prone. They range from a simplistic calculation of weight for height to sophisticated, expensive measurement techniques such as hydrostatic weighing.

The accuracy of these measurements varies widely. For instance, the skin-fold measurement, a method used in most gym facilities using calipers to measure subcutaneous body fat, has an accurate measurement of 4 percent to 5 percent. That’s not too good. In dual energy X-ray absorptiometry (or DEXA), your body is scanned from head to toe, normally in a hospital setting, measuring tissue density with low doses of X-rays. Here the margin of error is 2 percent to 3 percent.

Several attempts have been made to find a method that is accurate, accessible, quick and valid. Some now say it can be provided by a device called the Bod Pod.

The Bod Pod works along the same lines as hydrostatic weighing, which assumes that a muscular body is denser, and therefore takes up less space, than a body of similar weight that has more fat. You first punch in your weight; then, once you’re sitting inside the egg-shaped compartment, the Pod measures your volume — or how much space you take up. It then calculates your overall density. Finally, it plugs your density into a fancy formula that tells you your body-fat percentage. It all takes about five minutes.

The feedback the Bod Pod provides is valuable, but at a cost of $30,000 per machine, it is unlikely to be seen in most fitness facilities.

If you track your body fat composition, you should re-test periodically using the same procedure. And if you’re looking to reduce your body fat, the most effective way is to combine regular exercise with a healthy diet.

The celebrity list

DEAR SAM & DAVE:

My boyfriend “Lloyd” and I have been dating for three months, and I thought we had a pretty secure relationship — until last night, that is. We were talking about fidelity, and Lloyd said that he would always be faithful to me, unless he got hit on by Angelina Jolie. Or Carmen Electra. Or Mayim Bialik, TV’s Blossom.

He actually has a list of celebrities in his head that he would cheat on me with. Lloyd then asked me which celebrities I’d cheat on him with. I told him that cheating is cheating, no matter whom you do it with. Lloyd says that all couples have The Celebrity List, and that I should just lighten up. What do you say?

— LOYAL IN LEWISTON

DAVE SAYS:

Yes, you do have a point, Lewiston; cheating IS cheating, no matter whom you do it with. But I think that Lloyd is also right that you should lighten up. The Celebrity List is nothing but good, innocent fantasy fun. Besides, I can’t believe that in the three months that you’ve been dating Lloyd that you haven’t once fantasized about a celebrity.

Take a deep breath, relax, and make up your own Celebrity List. Then spring it on Lloyd. Who knows? It might spice up your love life. If you’ve got a thing for Harrison Ford, maybe one night Lloyd could dress up like Indiana Jones, and you could put on a skimpy little “Lara Croft: Tomb Raider” outfit. Have fun.

SAM SAYS:

Being a woman, I suppose my expected reaction should be righteous indignation that a man would fantasize about anyone other than his significant other. Being a human being, however, my reaction is the same as Dave’s: Get over it. It’s harmless. Do you really expect Carmen Electra to show up at your boyfriend’s door, dying to go to bed with him? Of course not, and neither does Lloyd.

Let me go out on a limb here and say that the people he mentioned are hardly members of your social circle. Neither of you is likely to run into any of them at the grocery store or at work, so nothing will ever come of it. Unless he starts adding your best friend or his secretary to the list, you have nothing to worry about.

February festivals

February may be the shortest month of the year, but what it lacks in longevity it makes up for in holidays and fun-filled traditions. It is the month of Valentine’s Day and Presidents Day, of Punxsutawney Phil and Polar Bear plunges. So, jump into one of these wonderful February events.

Think you are pretty handy with a snow shovel? Watch the true pros at the World Shovel Race Championships, Feb. 1-3 at the Angel Fire Resort in New Mexico. What started with lift operators using shovels to ride down the slopes at the end of the day has turned into a shovel-wielding free-for-all. Contact (505) 377-4237 or log on to www.angelfiresort.com for more information.

For more snow fun, head over to Frankenmuth, Mich., for Zehnder’s Snowfest, running Jan. 30 to Feb. 3. A premier event for snow sculpting, the dueling chainsaw carving alone makes it worthwhile. And how about having your portrait done in ice? Call 1-800-863-7999, or check out www.zehnders.com for details.

Next up, an event even the snow crabs will want to make it to: the World Championship Crab Races in Crescent City, Calif. On Feb. 17, the Del Norte County Fairgrounds hosts the event, which costs you nothing to watch and very little to eat (maybe the snow crabs will want to sit this part out). To get your claws on more details, check out www.northern-california.net or call (707) 464-3174.

Now to kick things up a notch — on Feb. 20-24, mosey on down to Tucson, Ariz., for La Fiesta de los Vaqueros, featuring “the largest non-motorized parade in the world.” This Old West gathering has not only precision riders and top-notch rodeo clowns, but also a rodeo education program. Ticket prices vary by date, so call (520) 741-2233, or log on to www.tusconrodeo.com.

Over on the East Coast, you can be one of more than 2,000 participants to take the plunge for charity — into the cold Atlantic Ocean, that is. One of many Polar Plunge Festivals this month, the Virginia Beach, Va., event takes place on Feb. 2 on the oceanfront between 5th and 8th streets, and benefits the Special Olympics. There will be plenty of protection — the Ring of Life firemen and divers — as well as a contest for the best-dressed group or individual. Music and food follow on the beach afterward. Apple’s not in the furniture business Apple Computer founder and CEO Steve Jobs has surprised us all again.

by Samantha Weaver & Amy Anderson

The new iMac is out, and the most you can say about it is that it’s absolutely the most fashionable desktop PC around. Its compact and sleek design has made even Tony, the PC tech at my office, say, “Man, I wouldn’t mind having one of those.” Pretty remarkable, when you consider that Tony enjoys deer hunting and NASCAR.

In case you haven’t seen it, the new iMac’s chassis is the shape of a 10.6-inch melon that’s been cut in half and placed face down. Out of its top sprouts an adjustable flat-screen 15-inch LCD monitor. Jobs, reflecting on the design of the new iMac, told Time magazine, “It should look like a snowflower.” And it does.

Now, it may be an understatement to say that computer geeks (such as myself) usually are not known for their fashion sense. (Yes, I wear a brown belt with black shoes!) But Apple geeks tend to fancy themselves a little different than the rest. Jobs himself can always be seen wearing his signature black faux turtle-neck sweaters, and he’s been known to dabble with Zen Buddhism.

Let’s face it. The man’s hip. But what about the Mac faithful, the so-called Cult of Mac? Wired Magazine just published a story about Andrew Dusing, a New York City computer tech who enjoys fashioning chairs, tables and other furniture out of empty Apple computer boxes and their Styrofoam inserts. Dusing has even made a couch, which, for obvious reasons, is “not all that comfortable,” he says.

But it doesn’t stop there. He’s made various cardboard sculptures of animals — a sofa-size rhino and a giraffe — and showed them off at a college art exhibition.

I can appreciate the artistic expertise required to cut apart pieces of cardboard into geometric shapes and make animal sculptures, even if said cardboard wasn’t used for packaging home-computer equipment. But furniture? I love Macs, but isn’t this going a bit far?

“I’ll never need to buy furniture again,” says Dusing. “Whenever a need arises, I know I can make it out of cardboard.” Here’s a novel idea. Whenever you need a cardboard box, why not use it as such?

lead to heartburn. Another group of medicines turns the acid-production faucet right to the “off” position. They include Nexium, Prevacid, Prilosec, Protonix and Aciphex. If the heartburn goes away, the hiatal hernia can be ignored.

There is a place for surgery. It is for those whose response to medicine is poor. One procedure is done via a small incision through which a scope and operating instruments can be manipulated to tighten the end of the esophagus so it does not permit acid reflux. Another new technique is accomplished with the gastroscope, another viewing device that is inserted into the esophagus through the mouth. It has a little sewing machine attached that can, with a few stitches, create a valve to stop acid reflux.

Readers interested in this subject can order the hiatal hernia report by writing: Dr. Donohue — SR 18W, Box 536475, Orlando, FL 32853-6475. Enclose a check or money order (no cash) for $4.50 along with the recipient’s name and mailing address, printed clearly. Allow 4-6 weeks for delivery.

Dr. Donohue regrets that he is unable to answer individual letters, but he will incorporate them in his column whenever possible. Readers may write him or request an order form of available health newsletters at P.O. Box 536475, Orlando, FL 32853-6475.

The Enron scandal: Could it be just what we needed?

by KEVIN NOBLET
AP BUSINESS WRITER

NEW YORK — Enron's collapse added a smacking insult to the injury of the stock market's decline over the last two years.

That kind of slap is what businesses and investors, and those tasked with watching over them, may have needed.

Many had claimed to be chastened by the painful reverse in fortunes of Internet and technology companies, and their stocks, more than a year ago. There was soul-searching over the ways companies calculated their profits or losses, and how they revealed their liabilities. There was an examination of auditors' conflicts of interest when their firms did other business with the companies whose books they monitored.

Humbled investors acknowledged the need to lower their expectations of fat, quick returns. Many of the analysts who helped build expectations faced a grueling public examination because of the stakes they, or their firms, had in the performance of stocks they covered.

But real action was limited. Some investment banks faced sanctions for possibly manipulating the sales of coveted first offerings of stock during the tech boom. Beyond that, the general attitude can be summed up: Yes, the system needed some fine tuning but, since we're all acting in good faith, why rush to reform?

The apparent bad faith at Enron Corp. and some Arthur Andersen LLP auditors, dramatized by the alleged shredding of documents even after a Securities and Exchange Commission investigation began, changed all that.

"I think it could lead to some good reforms in the long run," said Jeremy Siegel, a finance professor at the University of Pennsylvania's Wharton School of Business.

He cited, among others, the need for standardizing how businesses report their earnings. Companies now have a lot of latitude in formulating profit or loss, how they add up revenues and expenses, where and even whether they list their debts or other liabilities. Different companies use different formulas, creating confusion about a company's real bottom line.

In addition, Siegel said in a telephone interview, the system needs firewalls between accountants who audit a company's books and others who, working for the same accounting firm, do consulting or other work for the company. He urged a formal division "like we had 60 years ago between commercial banks and investment banks."

Several of the big accounting firms last week were beginning to build those walls, spinning off or otherwise separating auditing and consulting operations.

Siegel, long an advocate of the stock market as the best place for long-term investment, also hoped for a return to an emphasis on dividends for company shareholders — a tried and true indication that a company is really making money, not just tweaking its books or making promises it can't keep so its stock will get a short-term boost.

He saw no reason for investors who lost money on Enron stock to lose faith in the market or business in general. "The vast majority of CEOs and CFOs are honest people," he said.

But if small investors come to realize just how hard it is to analyze a business's balance sheet, that won't be bad.

"Most small investors have no ability to translate those sheets," Siegel said.

Wayne Firebaugh, an independent financial planner in Roanoke, Va., agreed that in recent years "people were investing in businesses they didn't understand." People interested in buying Enron stock, for instance, often were asking him, "What does Enron do?"

They're simply aware a stock is rising and "they're buying on momentum," he said.

The problem, of course, is that by the time a small investor gets wind of a stock's potential for success, the big traders probably have already moved in — and in fact may have found reasons to move out.

Like Siegel, Firebaugh sees a silver lining to the storm over Enron. "It has increased understanding, and hopefully will change some behavior," he said.

He finds individual investors more easily steered toward mutual funds, where an expert can make investment decisions, and away from individual stocks. They better understand the need for a diversified portfolio, where losses in one company or sector can be balanced by a better performance elsewhere, he said.

And they've gained a new skepticism toward those who tout stocks, he said, listening more closely when he explains why some analysts would promote some stocks and not others.

"You have a competition in who's going to get into a good deal, and you also have a competition in who's going to get out of a bad deal," he said. The competition is who will get there first, and anyone who isn't a professional probably won't.

GTECH announces five-year contract extension with Ky. Lottery

The Associated Press

WEST GREENWICH, R.I. — GTECH has signed a five-year contract extension to provide online lottery products and services to the Kentucky Lottery Corp., the company announced Monday.

Under Kentucky law, the extension agreement is subject to approval of the state's Government Contract Review Committee. If approved, it would be good through June 27, 2008.

Under the contract, GTECH will install and maintain 175 terminals offering basic online lottery capabilities to retailers who may not otherwise qualify to sell online tickets due to lower sales volumes.

GTECH also will install 300 terminals that allow for players to find out for themselves if they have winning tickets.

Other systems also are included in the contract, including a scrolling messaging system that provides instant promotion and lottery information, and display units for lottery terminals that show transaction totals to players.

GTECH has provided online lottery equipment and services for the Kentucky Lottery since 1989.

Railroad company supports regional airport construction

The Associated Press

HUNTINGTON, W.Va. — A top executive of CSX Transportation Inc. said Wednesday that the railroad company supports construction of a new regional airport between Charleston and Huntington.

"I am a former resident of West Virginia and I want to see this state move forward ... and prosper," said AL Crown, execu-utive vice president for transportation for CSX, based in Jacksonville, Fla.

Crown said CSX Corp., the railroad's parent company, is the state's second-largest private employer when its 3,500 railroad employees and 1,600 employees of The Greenbrier resort are included.

According to Crown, the company averages 2,700 flights annually in or out of Tri-State and Yeager airports.

Construction of the airport along the Interstate 64 corridor would combine the populations of Charleston and Huntington, Crown said.

He complained about "the enormous amount of time" it has taken him in recent years to get in and out of West Virginia. A regional airport would attract more direct flights, Crown said.

CSX has no plans to invest in the airport or otherwise help in its construction, he said.

Kentucky Crafted: The Market 2002 celebrates 20th anniversary

FRANKFORT — Plans for the 20th anniversary year of Kentucky's handcrafted gift market are in full swing.

The Market will feature contemporary and traditional crafts, two-dimensional visual art, books, musical recordings, and food products, along with children's craft activities and cultural entertainment. The Market will again include craftspeople from several surrounding states' craft programs, in addition to offering the best of Kentucky.

New to The Market will be an exciting exhibition titled, "Kentucky Folk Artists Salute the Great American Spirit," said Fran Redmon, Former Kentucky First Lady Phyllis George will collaborate with the Kentucky Folk Art Center in Morehead and sponsor, Woodford Reserve, to bring this patriotic project to the public.

Also new this year, the Kentucky Ballet Theatre will conduct a workshop in the children's activities area on Saturday.

The 2002 Market also has several new sponsors. The Silver Sponsor for 2002 is NPC (National Processing Company). Media sponsors are WAVE 3-TV, WHAS-TV, WFPK Public Radio, and Metro Traffic Radio.

Kentucky Crafted: The Market, 2002, is scheduled for Feb. 28 and March 1, for trade only, at the Kentucky Fair and Exposition Center, South Wing A, Louisville. Trade hours are Thursday, February 28, 4 - 8 p.m. and Friday, March 1, from 9 - 6 p.m. Saturday, March 2, the show opens to the general public, and the hours are 9 a.m.-6 p.m., and from noon to 5 p.m. on Sunday, March 3. Admission for adults is $6 and $3 for children 6-12; children under six are admitted free.

The Market attracts buyers from all over the United States, both wholesale and retail. "Last year's Market saw crowds of over 13,000, with nearly 500 retail shops attending," said Fran Redmon, Kentucky craft marketing program director. "Kentucky still holds the distinction of being one of the few states in the country to sponsor a wholesale/retail show for its craft businesses. The Market serves as a major sales outlet for Kentucky businesses and generates 2 to 3 million dollars in sales, annually."

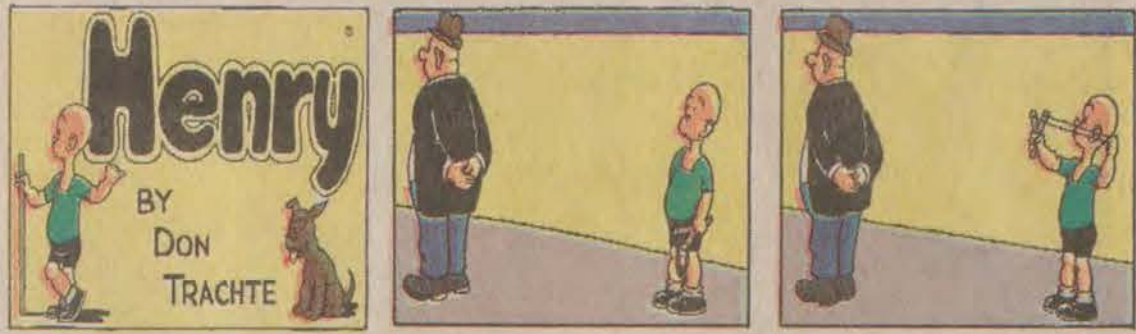

The Market is produced by the Kentucky Craft Marketing Program, a state agency in the Kentucky Arts Council, Education, Arts & Humanities Cabinet, Commonwealth of Kentucky. Any business interested in becoming a sponsor should contact the Kentucky Craft Marketing Program, at 888 KY CRAFT (592-7238), ext. 4801. Or visit the program's website at www.kycraft.org.

Fine, fine, there's another Super Bowl on Sunday ... but what's on television after the game?

For some people, that's just as important. The traditionally enormous ratings for the game have made the slot following it one of television's most important pieces of realty. However, its occupants have varied considerably, from Mr. T to Bill Clinton.

New shows were launched in that spot for a long time, until the networks reasoned that ongoing series might do a better job of holding the Super Bowl audience. That's what Fox is counting on this year, since it will follow the game with Malcolm in the Middle.

Here's a look at many Super Bowl nights gone by, and the post-game programming that tried to cash in. 1983: The A-Team (NBC). Any programmer who debated the value of premiering a show behind the Super Bowl had all doubts removed through the high-rated debut of this adventure series with humor. Mr. T became a pop-culture icon as one member of the troubleshooting team that also featured George Peppard and Battles-tar Galactica alumnus Dirk Benedict. The show lasted until 1987.

1984: Airwolf (CBS). Starring Jan-Michael Vincent and Ernest Borgnine, the adventure about a superhelicopter had a super ratings start. It lasted through the late winter of 1985, then had a USA Network revival in 1987 with a different cast.

1985: MacGruder & Loud (ABC). OK, so a post-Super Bowl premiere didn't always guarantee a hit. This crime drama starred John Getz and Kathryn Harrold as secretly married police partners. They didn't have to keep their relationship quiet for long - by the following fall, the series was gone.

1986: The Last Precinct (NBC). This police spoof - featuring former TV Batman Adam West - didn't even make it to the summer. NBC didn't show the next episode until nearly three months later.

1987: Hard Copy (CBS). No, not the tabloid show, but a drama about a newspaper. It was gone by mid-summer, but led to the marriage of series stars Michael Murphy and Wendy Crewson and co-star Dean Devlin's career as a top movie producer (Independence Day).

1988: The Wonder Years (ABC).

Orange County

If you were to go by the trailers for "Orange County," you'd probably think this is just another raunchy, puerile teen movie aimed at the MTV generation. If you were to take a look at the credits, you'd see that the film stars Tom Hanks' son Colin, Sissy Spacek's daughter Schuyler Fisk, and was directed by Lawrence Kasdan's son Jake, and you would probably think this was some kind of gimmick movie.

But ... if you were to actually ignore the above and go see "Orange County," you'd find that it isn't some stupid teen movie. Instead, you would discover a gem of a film about the coming of age of a high-school senior (Hanks) who discovers that despite his dysfunctional family and screwed-up neighborhood, there still is no place like home.

Colin Hanks plays Shaun Brumder, a surfer dude from Orange County who is extremely bright, has a cute girlfriend (Schuyler Fisk) and is generally well-liked and centered. The same cannot be said of anyone else within the county limits. His mother (Catherine O'Hara) is an alcoholic; his brother Lance (Jack Black) has more drugs in him than Keith Richards. His principal has the hots for Britney Spears; his English teacher thinks William Shakespeare wrote "Waterworld," and his divorced father (John Lithgow) is remarried to a woman young enough to attend Shaun's prom.

Although smart, Shaun has no ambition — until he has an epiphany following the drowning death of one of his best friends. While at the beach mourning his pal, Shaun finds a book half-buried in the sand. After reading the novel (written by a Stanford professor played brilliantly by Kevin Kline), Shaun decides he wants to be a writer, go to Stanford and study at the feet of the book's author.

Shaun, who is a stellar student, class president and sports a wicked-high SAT score, is a "shoo-in" to be accepted at Stanford.

Unfortunately, his dippy-doodle guidance counselor (Lily Tomlin) ends up sending the wrong transcript to Stanford, and Shaun doesn't get in.

Shaun now has 24 hours to get to Stanford and convince the dean of admissions that a mistake has been made and that he should be accepted to the school.

What follows are some of the funniest scenes I've seen on film in quite some time — all due to the brilliant chemistry between Colin Hanks and Jack Black.

Hanks carries this movie. He proves that he has star power equal to his father's. His comic timing is spot-on, and he can also turn on a dime and play serious scenes with a believable sincerity.

The entire cast gives great performances and manages to save what could have been a very uneven film in lesser hands.

Don't be fooled by the trailers. Although it's been marketed to teens, this is a film adults will love, too.

HOW TO STOP YOUR TEENAGE SON FROM GETTING A HEROIN ADDICTION LONG BEFORE HE'S A TEENAGER.

The Times FLOYD COUNTY

Q I felt that Cameron Diaz was brilliant in the movie "Vanilla Sky" (starring Tom Cruise and Penelope Cruz). My question is, did she do a movie with Jim Carrey, and if so, what was it called? A friend says she was supposed to do a movie with him, but it never happened. — Jan McG.

A Not only did Cameron Diaz make a movie with Jim Carrey, called "The Mask," but the 1994 flick proved to be the breakthrough movie for both of them.

Q One of my favorite movies was "AI" (starring Jude Law and Haley Joel Osment), about a robotic boy who wants to be loved. I've been waiting for the DVD to come out, but so far I haven't read anything about it. Do you have any information on this? — Stephanie J.

A Indeed, I do. Dreamworks, which produced "AI," says the DVD will be released March 5 and will feature interviews with Law, Osment, producer Steven Spielberg and others.

Q I was told by a friend that there'll be a series that will deal with the diseases of war veterans. This would be a wonderful show for a lot of people like myself who came back from the Gulf War with health problems. — Neal R.

A From time to time the news-magazine shows, such as "Dateline," or "60 Minutes," will do features on veterans' health problems that may be linked to their military service. But I'm not aware of any show that will deal only with this subject.

That being said ... your friend's information might have come from a newspaper item indicating that starting Feb. 8, the SciFi Channel will air a series called "Strange World." This show, which was created by "X-Files" writer Howard Gordon, centers around a Gulf War veteran who relies on a mysterious woman to help cure him of a degenerative disease. The 13-part series was originally scheduled to air on ABC. Although ABC canceled it after three episodes, the SciFi Channel will broadcast all 13 parts.

"Sesame Street" returns for its 33rd season on PBS on Feb. 4 (check local listings) with a new format geared to providing a deeper focus on preparing youngsters for school. Among the highlights is "Journey to Ernie," a problem-solving game of hide-and-seek. The popular "Elmo's World" will continue as "Sesame Street's" signature segment.

Cable's TV Land pays tribute to Black History Month with a three-part series, "African Americans In Television," debuting Feb. 1 (with a re-airing on Feb. 8) and continuing on Feb. 15 and 22. All three episodes will be re-shown on March 1.

Tennis champion John McEnroe will host a new "reality" series for ABC called "The Chair." The program involves contestants sitting in the "hot seat," where their heart rates will be monitored as they answer questions. Those who can keep their hearts beating at a normal rate, win money. Those who lose their cool, lose money.

"Roswell" fans are advised not to miss the Feb. 4 episode of the popular UPN series. Katherine Heigl, who plays the half-human, half-alien Isabel Evans on the show, says, "Something very significant is going to happen."

Dan Aykroyd, a long-time student of the paranormal (his great grandfather was a member of the British Society of Psychical Research), will host the upcoming SciFi Channel's five-nights-a-week series, "Dan Aykroyd's Out There." The program will look at what Aykroyd calls the wild, the weird and the seemingly unexplainable phenomena that have puzzled people for centuries. Viewers with questions or comments about topics such as spontaneous human combustion, spirit channeling and alien abductions are invited to contact the show direct-

News of the Weird

■ In January, after the California restaurant chain Carl's Jr. began televising a commercial chiding competitors' chicken-nugget meals (the ad: executives examining a chicken in a futile attempt to find a body part called the "nugget"), the animal rights group United Poultry Concerns objected, not just because the chicken was mishandled but because the examination hurt the chicken's feelings (treated the chicken "derisively," United's chief Karen Davis told the Los Angeles Times). (A few days later, seemingly in support of Davis, Australian neuroscientists Charles Watson and George Paxinos announced the startup of their project to compile a comprehensive atlas of a bird's "sophisticated and complex" brain, emphasizing features in common with humans' brains.)

■ The Los Angeles Times reported in January that the ex-wife of casino mogul Kirk Kerkorian had recently filed a petition claiming that the $50,000 a month in child support Kerkorian pays for his 3-year-old daughter is insufficient and asking a Los Angeles judge to up the amount to $320,000 a month. Included as little Kira's requirements are $144,000 a month for travel, $14,000 for parties (her first-birthday party cost $70,000), $10,200 for food (about $340 per meal), and $7,000 a month for little Kira to give back to the community (in charitable donations).

Democracy in Action

■ Right-to-Life Party candidate Richard Hobbs, 47, overwhelmingly lost his campaign for the legislature of Westchester County, N.Y., in November, probably because it got out that he was a twice-convicted pedophile; he told reporters that he didn't think the convictions were relevant to the campaign because "there are no children at the county legislature." And San Francisco election officials denied any misconduct in counting the November ballots on the initiative that would have authorized public seizure of PG&E electric utility lines (which lost by only a few hundred votes); among the alleged irregularities:

ballot-box lids blown off, 240 uncounted ballots stuck in a machine, 400 blank ballots found at a pollworker's house, and 5,500 absentee ballots quixotically moved from a heavily guarded room to a lightly guarded one on election night.

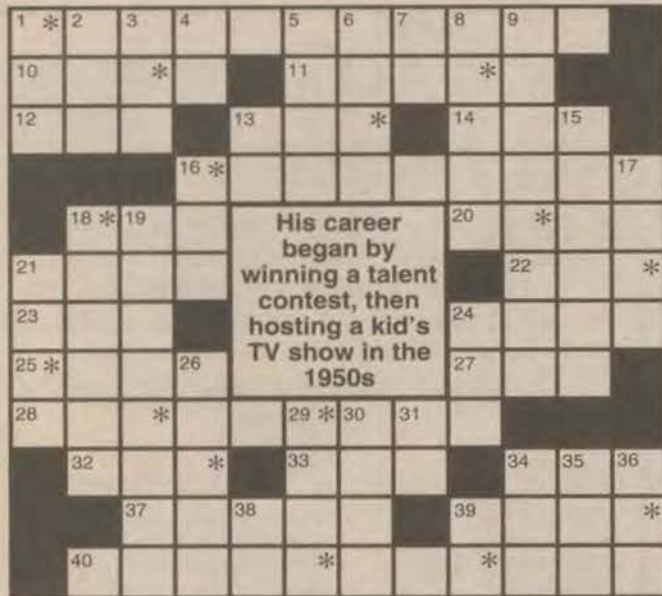

Police Blotter

■ In October, police in Fairbanks, Alaska, charged Gail Bergman, 41, with second-degree assault for stabbing her live-in boyfriend in the buttocks with two paring knives in a domestic squabble. Bergman denied it, claiming that the boyfriend actually showed up at the door that night naked with the two knives already stuck in him. According to police, Bergman's main concern seemed to be that she had finally relocated the knives: "I've been asking him where those knives have been for the last three weeks. Why is he walking around town with knives sticking out of his butt?"

■ From the Crime Watch column of the Leaf-Chronicle (Clarksville, Tenn.), Dec. 5, 2001: "A 36-year-old cab driver reported one of his riders sexually paid off every time. As it is, they will work much harder for that random pay-off, even when the machine takes their money most of the time.

So the first rule for changing any unwanted behavior is to never reward it. I can almost guarantee that the behavior will get worse before it gets better, so don't give up too soon. This worsening is called an "extinction burst" and is actually a good sign that your refusal to reward is working. Example: if the copy machine at work suddenly balks, do you just walk off and never try to make another copy? No. You repeatedly try to refeed the paper, which has worked in the past, then you take the tray out, then you check the toner cartridge, then the drum, etc.

etc. It may take a long time before you admit defeat and call a repairman.

Any unwanted behavior will extinguish itself much faster if you give the dog an alternate and acceptable behavior to perform. The simplest one in many cases is our old tried-and-true command, "Sit". If the dog doesn't know this, he should. Start teaching it immediately.

Now you just need to keep the dog's paws off you while you train a new greeting behavior. I know that a lot of people will tell you to knock the dog off with your knee or the flat of your hand on his chest, or even to step on his rear toes. Toe mashing is downright mean and unfair to the dog, and using a knee or hand to the dog's chest can either cause injury or make the dog think you are playing. I do sometimes lift one knee in a defensive gesture to ward off the assault. It generally works better to just turn away from the oncoming dog, or to actually move into him, taking away his personal space. At the same time, give a firm command such as "No!", "Phooey!", or "Off!" (Note, do not use "Down", if you also use this command to mean, "lie down".) Once the dog has aborted his flight, give a "Sit" command. If he complies, bend over and praise him at his level. If he doesn't sit, ignore him and walk on past. If you can avoid making a huge fuss over the dog as soon as you see him, it can help keep him calmer. Wait a few minutes until you have put your things down and can give the dog your full attention, then ask him to "Sit", and proceed as before. The goal is to make him understand that sitting quietly is now the behavior that will get him what he wants a proper greeting and attention.

Everyone who interacts with the dog needs to know the game plan and follow it. For unsuspecting people and those who are unable to do this, have the dog on a leash so that you can give and reinforce the appropriate commands.

Greeting rituals are important to dogs, so don't try to eliminate them altogether. Just try to come up with a new routine that works for both of you.

Winter X-Games VI

With the Olympics coming up Friday on NBC, ABC and ESPN offer up the extreme version of the cold-weather games. Taped Jan. 17-20 in the ski resort town of Aspen, Colo., these games feature events in the categories of skiing, moto-x, snowmobiling and snowboarding -- arguably its signature event. New events this year include SuperPipe, where skiers perform stunts on a 50-foot-wide, 17-foot-high and 400-foot-long parabolic course, and Skier X, a relay race that combines skiing and snowboarding. Athletes to watch include snowboarder Erin Simmons, moto-x rider Kenny Bartram, skier Mike Nick and snowmobiler Justin Tate. After today, coverage runs through Tuesday on ESPN and ESPN2.

6 p.m. FOX

Super Bowl XXXVI

The championship of the National Football League is decided today when the top team in the AFC meets the NFC's best squad in Super Bowl XXXVI. Though heavily hyped, historically this game has been one of the dullest deciding contests in all of sports, typically resulting in blowouts such as last year's 34-7 drubbing of the New York Giants by the Baltimore Ravens in a game that saw a defensive player (Ravens linebacker Ray Lewis) take game MVP honors. John Madden and Pat Summerall call the action, which offers seven hours of pregame and game coverage this afternoon and evening.

8 p.m. SCI-FI

Crossing Over

If Who Wants to Be a Millionaire and Fear Factor can showcase celebs, why not this cult favorite? Medium John Edward, whose claim to fame is communicating with the dead, hosts a special edition of his series featuring a minigame of stars. They include actress and talk show host Ricki Lake; author Anne Rice, whose specialty is not the dead, but the undead; and actress Roma Downey, who isn't a messenger from the other side but plays one on TV.

9 p.m. CBS

Movie: Sabrina

Director Sydney Pollack's entertaining 1995 remake of the romantic-comedy classic casts Harrison Ford and Greg Kinnear as wealthy brothers who vie for the love of their chauffeur's daughter (Julia Ormond). Kinnear's character is already engaged, and the conservative Ford fears a big financial deal will be upset if his sibling dares to rock the love boat.

9 p.m. HBO

Sex and the City

Carrie (Sarah Jessica Parker) has plenty of things to consider in this new episode "A Vogue Idea." Carrie starts a new job at a magazine. Certain encounters lead her to debate whether her flawed relationship with her father has played out in her attempted connections to other men. Meanwhile, an envious Charlotte (Kristin Davis) agrees to arrange a baby shower for Miranda (Cynthia Nixon). Kim Cattrall also stars.

10 p.m. ABC

The Practice

In "Honor Code," Bobby (Dylan McDermott) believes the firm could use an image boost, so he tackles a 10-year-old case. It involves the potential settlement over an accident, and Bobby must deal with insurance investigators to resolve the matter. Eugene's and Jimmy's (Steve Harris, Michael Badalucco) mutual dismay finally erupts.

10 p.m. FOX

Malcolm in the Middle

The Super Bowl has proved itself a lucrative lead-in to new network endeavors -- thanks, perhaps, to the abundance of viewers too full of beer and nachos to find the channel changer or power button. The producers of Malcolm are banking on that, airing a special hourlong episode of the quirky family comedy immediately after the game. Like those long-awaited game-time commercials, the details are a secret, but if the series' past performance is any indication, there will be laughs in abundance. Jane Kaczmarek and Bryan Cranston star, with Frankie Muniz as the boy genius of the title.

Super Commercials

It's quite fitting that this new offering is airing at the time of the Super Bowl, since the football championship commands big bucks for advertisements meant to rivet viewers' attention. That's also the subject of this program, as host John Forde surveys panelists for their reactions to some of the "spots" (as they're known in the ad business) designed to be shown during the big game.

MONDAY FEBRUARY 4, 2002

8 p.m. SHOWTIME

Movie: The Virgin Suicides

Director Sofia Coppola's affecting 2000 version of the Jeffrey Eugenides novel casts Kirsten Dunst as one of several sisters in a family deeply affected by the suicide of one member. This prompts the parents (James Woods, Kathleen Turner) to forbid the surviving siblings to have social lives, frustrating the would-be suitor (Josh Hartnett) of Dunst's character.

8:30 p.m. CBS

Yes, Dear

9 p.m. ABC

Movie: Patch Adams

Robin Williams scored another box-office hit with this true 1998 story of an unconventional medical student. Though the antics of the title character irritate his superiors, they charm patients and one of his peers (Monica Potter). The star gets plenty of chances for his trademark humor, though the film -- which also airs Friday -- has its dramatic moments, too. One of its producers is Providence co-star Mike Farrell.

Masterpiece Theatre

Bertie and Elizabeth is a sort of royal Roots, timed to coincide with the 50th anniversary year of Queen Elizabeth II's reign. It's a dramatized account of the relationship between Her Majesty's parents: King George VI and Queen Elizabeth, better known these days as the Queen Mum. He, of course, ruled during the most turbulent years of the 20th century -- World War I -- and his beloved wife was always there to lend moral support to him and to Britain's fighting forces. Juliet Aubrey (Middlemarch), James Wilby (Howards End) and Alan Bates star.

Angel (David Boreanaz) spends an evening at the ballet and is mysteriously moved by the principal dancer in Angel, airing Monday on The WB Network.

9 p.m. WB

Angel

Angel (David Boreanaz) and company have a decidedly unusual night at the ballet in the new episode "Waiting in the Wings." As he watches the performance, Angel becomes certain he knew the principal dancer in his past life. His consequent investigation brings him and Cordelia (Charisma Carpenter) closer than they've ever been.

10 p.m. CBS

Family Law

The controversial issue of stem cell research figures into the new episode "Arlene's Choice." A pregnant woman (Annie Larussa) wants to have her unborn baby delivered early so the child's stem cells can be used to save the life of her dying 8-year-old (Bobby Preston). Lynn and Joe (Kathleen Quinlan, Tony Danza) represent the mother, though Randi (Dixie Carter) disagrees with them.

Movie: Gods and Monsters

Ian McKellen earned an Academy Award nomination for his portrayal of British director James Whale (Frankenstein) in this 1998 drama, a fictionalized account of the last year of Whale's life. Reclusive and mildly incapacitated by a stroke, the openly gay Whale takes a liking to a young gardener (Brendan Fraser), who becomes a platonic friend and sounding board for his reminiscences about his experiences during World War I and his career — most notably, the making of Bride of Frankenstein. Lynn Redgrave was also nominated for an Oscar for her performance as Whale's housekeeper. Lolita Davidovich also stars.

Nova

The possible presence of Soviet spies in key American organizations during the 1940s is examined in this new installment. In "Secrets, Lies & Atomic Spies," viewers learn foreign agents may have been privy to some of this country's most closely held secrets, including the atomic weapons operation known as the Manhattan Project. In an interview filmed before his death, scientist Ted Hall talks about his espionage activities.

8 p.m. TCM

Added Attractions

Although these days they aren't as much a part of movie-theater programs as they once were, short subjects used to be staples before the main feature began. This new documentary surveys the variety of styles used to create them, from cartoons and musical performances to travelogues and newsreels. Chevy Chase narrates the special, which film historian Leonard Maltin co-produced.

9 p.m. ABC

NYPD Blue

Recent precinct addition Ortiz (Jacqueline Obradors) finds it tough to keep her focus on work in the new episode "Humpty Dumped." She finds out her husband is being unfaithful to her, and has a hard time digesting the news. Sipowicz and Clark (Dennis Franz, Mark Paul-Gosselaar) struggle to make a case against a murder suspect.

9 p.m. CBS

The Guardian

Burton (Dabney Coleman) has mixed emotions about providing legal representation for his sister-in-law (Christine Estabrook) in the new episode "Family." Terminally ill, she wants to sell her business. Her troubled son (Dan Byrd) gets unsolicited advice from Nick (Simon Baker), while James' (Charles Malik Whitfield) bid to secure asylum for a young Thai woman gets complicated.

9 p.m. WB

Smallville

Clark (Tom Welling) can't envision his Earth father (John Schneider) giving up the family farm for anything. That's why he's shocked when the elder Kent agrees to sell it to a pesticide tycoon, who wants the land for a new manufacturing location, in the new episode "Hug." That prompts Clark to seek the services of an unexpected ally in determining what's really going on.

10 p.m. ABC

Philly

Kathleen (Kim Delaney) finds it hard to keep her attention on her work in the new episode "Meat Me in Philly," since she can't stop thinking about the date she had with a judge. However, she's drawn back into her usual mindset when new facts become known about a 15-year-old rape case. Terry (Rick Hoffman) takes a more-than-professional interest in a new prosecutor.

WEDNESDAY FEBRUARY 6, 2002

7:30 p.m. SHOWTIME

Black Filmmaker Showcase

As part of its contribution to Black History Month, Showtime presents another annual edition of its yearly festival of short subjects. The first, titled "Milk and Honey," is about the unlikely alliance that develops between a soldier and a young woman in early-1950s Texas. Five other stories follow, including one about a soul that is about to be born, but is not sure that it wants to be.

8 p.m. NBC

Ed

Ed (Tom Cavanagh) faces mortality in this new episode. He is stunned by the death of the former classmate who founded their high-school rock group. Mike (Josh Randall) was also a member of the band, and he and Ed gather the other surviving members to perform at their deceased friend's funeral. Andy Richter, Conan O'Brien's former late-night sidekick, plays another of the musicians.

American Family

Nina (Constance Marie) offers sage counsel to a woman whose husband is deported back to Guatemala in the new two-part episode "La Llorona." The woman's search for her spouse eventually leads her to a center run by the INS, a place Nina advises her against going to. Young Pablito (Austin Marques) faces being separated from his mother indefinitely. Part 2 airs next Wednesday.

8 p.m. TNT

NBA Basketball

The Minnesota Timberwolves have been one of the true success stories of the season's first half. They have maintained their position near the top of the Midwest Division on the strong play of All-Star forward Kevin Garnett and point guard Terrell Brandon. They play host to the Portland Trail Blazers, long one of the Pacific Division's top teams, who are now struggling to stay around the .500 mark. The Blazers are led by point guard Damon Stoudamire and forward Rasheed Wallace. These teams last met Dec. 30, when Garnett and guard Wally Szczerbiak both scored 27 points in a 95-93 triumph by the Timberwolves.

8 p.m. UPN

Enterprise

A member of the starship's crew may be leaving in the new episode "Shadows of P.Jem." T'Pol (Jolene Blalock) receives a Vulcan directive to return to her home planet, and she doesn't seem to find her loyalties all that torn, leaving her shipmates dismayed. However, all bets are off when she and Archer (Scott Bakula) become captives of the Andorians. Jeffrey Combs (Re-Animator) guest stars.

9 p.m. CBS

Movie: Diagnosis Murder: Town Without Pity

Though the weekly show is over, Dick Van Dyke reprises his long-running role as doctor and amateur sleuth Mark Sloan in this new TV movie. Here, he searches for his daughter (Stacy Van Dyke, the actor's real-life offspring), who vanishes after phoning him from a mountain town where everyone denies having seen her. Victoria Rowell and Charlie Schlatter also return.

9 p.m. WB

Glory Days

A serial killer is on the loose in the new episode "Death, Lies and Videotape," and FBI agents suspect that the culprit may be on the island. That leads a jealous Mike (Eddie Cahill) to wonder if Ellie's (Poppy Montgomery) guest might be the felon. However, Sara's (Amy Stewart) new beau might be connected to the slayings, so there's certainly no lack of individuals for Mike to check out.

A videotape that was meant for expectant mom Rachel (Jennifer Aniston) is viewed by an unsuspecting friend in the first of two episodes of Friends, airing Thursday on NBC.

9:30 p.m. ABC

The Job

Gina Gershon (Bound, Snoops) plays herself in this new episode. She's in need of protection, and though Ruben (John Ortiz) has that mission at first, McNeil (Denis Leary) figures out a way to cut in. Others in the precinct are impressed by the idea of furnishing private security to stars, and Scott Wolf (Party of Five) becomes another client in "Gina."

Biography

Gladys Knight: A Knight's Tale traces the career of the child star who was a winner on The Original Amateur Hour. By age 12, she was touring with the Pips, the group with which she had such hits as "Midnight Train to Georgia" and "If I Were Your Woman." But for all the success she has enjoyed, Knight has also endured many personal crises.

8 p.m. HBO

Inside the NFL

The program brings its season to an end at a logical point, using this installment as a recap of Super Bowl XXXVI. Undoubtedly, there will have been a lot of analysis concerning the big game by the time this show runs, but this boasts the official NFL Films footage of the contest. Len Dawson, Nick Buoniconti, Cris Collinsworth, Jerry Glanville and Dan Marino are the hosts.

8 p.m. NBC

Friends

Monica (Courteney Cox Arquette) sets out to give

Chandler (Matthew Perry) a St. Valentine's Day he'll never forget, but it turns out that way for unexpected reasons in the new episode "The One With the Birthing Video." She devises a sexy video for him, but instead, Chandler watches a birthing tape that was earmarked for Rachel (Jennifer Aniston). Ross' (David Schwimmer) relationships get complicated.

8:30 p.m. NBC

Friends

Back in November, in an bid to lure viewers away from Thanksgiving leftovers, the repeat "The One With the Rumor" promised a "superstar mystery guest." It turned out to be Brad Pitt — the husband of series regular Jennifer Aniston — and his character knew Monica (Courteney Cox Arquette) when both were much heavier. She invites him to join everyone for a holiday feast, but he isn't thrilled to find Rachel (Aniston) at the table.

9 p.m. WB

Charmed

In the new episode "Charmed and Dangerous," Leo and Cole (Brian Krause, Julian McMahon) could be the individuals to suffer the most from a villain's targeting of the Halliwell sisters. When that enemy tries to save himself by eliminating the powers of Phoebe, Piper and Paige (Alyssa Milano, Holly Marie Combs, Rose McGowan), the men in their lives also end up being potential victims.

10 p.m. CBS

The Agency

The fictionalized CIA gets a new chief in "The Gauntlet," as Beau Bridges joins the series as Tom Gage, a former senator who becomes the head of the organization. That doesn't please Robert Quinn (Daniel Benzali), who is removed as acting director and reassigned as the agency's liaison. The safety of Matt and Terri (Gil Bellows, Paige Turco) is at risk during a mission in Russia.

Biography

As visions of gold medals dance in hockey fans' heads with the return of the Olympic Winter Games to U.S. ice (remember Team USA's victory over the Soviets at Lake Placid, N.Y., in 1980?), Wayne Gretzky: The Great One profiles one of the sport's latter-day legends, who will be in Salt Lake City for the 2002 Games as team executive director of Canada's Olympic men's hockey team. Gretzky's story is a true David and Goliath tale; small in stature, he rose to the top of the game, thanks in large part to his dad, who taught him how to compensate for his size with skill. The profile includes interviews with Gretzky's mom, several former coaches and team-mates, and leading sports journalists.

8 p.m. NBC

2002 Olympic Winter Games

The 2002 Winter Olympic Games kick off with the opening ceremonies from Salt Lake City. NBC, MSNBC and CNBC carry 375.5 hours of live and same-day coverage. The games run Feb. 8-24 and feature 17 events, including alpine skiing, biathlon, bobsled, cross-country skiing, curling, figure skating, freestyle skiing, ice hockey, luge, nordic combined, speed skating (long and short track), skeleton, ski jumping and snowboarding. That, of course, isn't counting the opening and closing ceremonies. NBC trots out its big guns for the occasion, including Bob Costas, Jim Lampley, Hannah Storm, Pat O'Brien, Scott Hamilton, Dwight Stones and Jimmy Roberts.

ARIES

(March 21 to April 19)

The changes you've waited to see in your work situation might not be happening quite as quickly as you hoped. Although the pace is slow, it's ongoing. Expect to hear news soon.

TAURUS

(April 20 to May 20)

You should be feeling very proud of the fine effort you've made to get that important project done. Now take some time out to celebrate with family and friends. You've earned it.

GEMINI

(May 21 to June 20)

You're close to reaching your objectives. That's the good news. But be careful: Your aspects show lots of potential distractions looming. Stay focused and keep your eyes fixed on your goals.

CANCER

(June 21 to July 22)

Be careful not to let that suspicious Cancerian mind create a problem where none exists. What you might believe is an act of betrayal could be nothing more than a misunderstanding.

LEO

(July 23 to August 22)

Your Lion's heart overflows with self-confidence. All you need to do is tap into it, and you'll be able to handle any change that must be made regarding that recent surprise development.

VIRGO

(August 23 to September 22)

The need to watch what you say becomes increasingly crucial this week. Be as temperate as you can with your comments and avoid arguments for the sake of controversy.

LIBRA

(September 23 to October 22)

A longtime family problem presents new demands. But this time, you won't have to go it alone: Someone else is asking to help share your responsibilities. Let it happen.

SCORPIO

(October 23 to November 21)

A period of feeling vulnerable is about to give way to a stronger, more self-confident aspect. Use this new strength to reaffirm promises you've made to others and yourself.

SAGITTARIUS

(November 22 to December 21)

A creative dilemma stalls your progress. Instead of letting it raise your ire, use the time to re-examine your aims and, perhaps, come up with a new target.

CAPRICORN

(December 22 to January 19)

Your nimble will finds a way for you to work out those newly emerged problems plaguing your new project. Stay with it. The results will be well worth your efforts.

AQUARIUS

(January 20 to February 18)

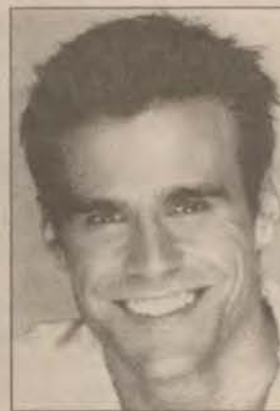

You might feel overwhelmed at having to decide which new opportunity you should follow. Best advice: Check them all out and see which offers what you really want.

PISCES

(February 19 to March 20)

Continue to tread water before you even consider plunging into something that never seemed quite right. Some facts will soon emerge that can help you make a decision.

YOU BORN THIS WEEK: You are a natural-born peacemaker. You value truth and have little patience with those who lie to you for their own purposes.

Luke on his emergency phone line and ordered him to return home. Wait to see: Alan apologizes to Melissa. Skye gets called to General Hospital.

GUIDING LIGHT

Josh had a surprise for Reva. A guilt-ridden Ross gave in to Blake's demands. Tony was unaware that he might be bound to Catalina forever. Michelle and Gus each vowed to learn the truth about Danny's accident, but for different reasons. Camille got Richard wondering about Cassie and Alonzo's relationship. Wait to See: Mel gets news about Rick.

ONE LIFE TO LIVE

Todd kept Paloma from telling Blair the truth about baby Jack, but then compounded his lies to her about seeing their "own baby" die at the hospital. Max told a shocked Lindsay that (despite the possibility that he'll be paralyzed for life) Al won't press charges against Cristian. Seth told Viki he can't ignore his love for Jessica. Meanwhile, Roxy pulled Jessica deeper into her scheme by "revealing" that she had an illness that would run up large medical bills. Wait to See: Todd must deal with David Vickers.

PASSIONS

Tabitha tried to get Sam to believe that a murder had taken place. Gwen told Ivy she'll fight to get Ethan back. Grace asked Eve about a photo

David took. Theresa was crushed when Ethan said they were through for good. Timmy tried to get Miguel headed in the right direction to find the real Charity. Wait to See: Liz and Brian worry as "Diana's" (Sheridan) behavior grows more erratic.

PORT CHARLES

Casey accused Paige and Amy of lying about their reasons for returning to Earth, leading Paige to admit she has unfinished business with Kevin. Later, after the three shared stories of their deaths with Rafe, all four were chastised by Ed for their sloppy work in interacting with the people of Port Charles. Alison hoped she and Jamal could restore the love in their relationship. Wait to See: The gunshot victim's identity is revealed.

THE YOUNG AND THE RESTLESS

Victor wondered why Ashley was sympathetic to Sharon for blaming Nick for the death of their baby. Colleen was puzzled by Troy's reaction after she mentioned Billy's name. Isabella told Paul she made him believe he fathered her baby because she needed a way of supporting herself. Meanwhile, Lauren confided to Kay that she may have mishandled things with Paul. Warton told Amanda he'll help her get a job. Victor and Nikki continued to work on their relationship. Diane realized she had her answer when Justin said he couldn't tell her who switched Victor's sperm sample. Wait to See: Diane sets her plan in motion.

A New Look for Old Furniture

My mother recently gave me a table and chairs that sat in the basement for years. She says it's good wood, but they're really dark and dirty and full of dings and scratches, and they don't match anything in my apartment. I just want to chuck everything. Should I? — Jane C., Birmingham, Ala.

Give your mom's furniture a chance! When she says it's "good wood," she probably means that you have a solid wood table and chairs, rather than inexpensive pressed-board furniture. The difference is that you can refinish this gift and make it a worthy centerpiece again.

First, check the pieces for cracked or peeling veneer — thin, decorative pieces of wood covering a base piece. Also, look for large cracks or split wood, especially in the legs. In both cases, damaged pieces should be taken to a furniture repair shop.

If there is no major damage, go ahead and strip the piece. Purchase a stripping/refinishing solution, steel wool and a wide-edged putty knife. Gather lots of old rags and an old paintbrush.

Place the furniture on a drop cloth in a very well-ventilated area. The driveway or inside an open garage are recommended spots. If you live in an apartment, ask the manager if there is a place to do this, or take the piece to your mom's garage.

Wipe away surface dust with a damp cloth. Apply stripping solution with either the paintbrush or by pouring a small amount of solution onto an old rag and wiping it on. Rub the area in small circles; the finish should start coming off immediately.

Old finish can be difficult to remove. Try to get all the finish off just using old rags; if blotches of finish remain (common with old wax-based finishes), rub solution over the blotches and then very gently slide the putty knife under them.

Once stripped, fill scratches and gouges with a stainable wood filler. Smooth the filler in with your putty knife so that it's flush with the wood, and let it dry. With the various dings filled, sand the entire piece.

Now for the finish! Determine what kind of wood your table is made of and what color you'd like it to be. If the table is made of soft pine (rather than a hardwood like oak), pre-treat it with a wood conditioner so that the finish will go on evenly.

Buy enough finish or wood stain to cover all the pieces. Apply evenly with a synthetic paintbrush and let it dry.

Finally, since your table will see a lot of use, consider applying a polyurethane finish, which will protect the wood from small dings, dripping wax and water stains.

Just when hope was fading for any post-Super Bowl series to have longevity, along came the wistful and nostalgic saga of young Kevin Arnold (Fred Savage), narrated by Daniel Stern. The sentimental sitcom became a TV classic, running until 1993.

1989: Brotherhood of the Rose (NBC). Never start a miniseries after the Super Bowl. That was the lesson learned from this melodrama, which starred Peter Strauss and David Morse as CIA agents. So few people watched on Sunday, hardly anyone tuned in for the ending on Monday.

1990: Grand Slam (CBS). Dukes of Hazzard alum John Schneider — now enjoying a successful return to series TV in the WBNetwork hit Smallville — failed to capture an audience with this bounty-hunter project, which paired him with comic Paul Rodriguez. It was history by March.

1991: Davis Rules (ABC). Randy Quaid and Jonathan Winters played a school principal and his father, respectively, in this sitcom, which had a potent-enough January launch to keep it on the air until the following fall. It then got a short reprieve from CBS.

1992: 60 Minutes (CBS). Arguably the most historic post-Super Bowl telecast, this edition of the newsmagazine featured Steve Kroft's interview with then-presidential candidate Bill Clinton and wife Hillary. The discussion of the politician's alleged infidelity made headlines.

1993: Homicide: Life on the Street (NBC). After a promising start, the gritty Baltimore crime drama from producers Tom Fontana (Oz) and Barry Levinson never was a blockbuster in its weekly run — in fact, it would be a while before the show even got a full-season order — but it remained one of NBC's most respected series until its 1999 cancellation.

1994: The Good Life (NBC). This barely remembered sitcom premiered earlier in January, and NBC tried to give it a Super Bowl-night boost. It evaporated in April, though the future held good things for supporting player Drew Carey.

1995: Extreme (ABC). James Brolin mentored a youthful Utah search-and-rescue team in this adventure series, which vanished the following April. However, co-star Julie Bowen (Ed), Danny Masterson (That '70s Show) and Brooke Langton (The Net) went on to have longer series runs.

Since then, the networks that have shown Super Bowls mainly have opted to use continuing shows as follow-up attractions. Those have included Friends (1996, NBC), The X-Files (1997, Fox), 3rd Rock From the Sun (1998, NBC) and The Practice (2000, ABC). Still, Fox gave Family Guy a post-Bowl premiere by pairing it with The Simpsons in 1999, and CBS kept people watching last year by unveiling Survivor: The Australian Outback right after the game.

Now, it's Malcolm in the Middle's turn. Whether its certain bumpin viewership lasts beyond Super Bowl Sunday is anyone's guess, but the show's cast and crew are sure to enjoy the ride while it lasts.

Strange World

The cable channel rescues the very short-lived ABC series -- it aired only three times on the alphabet network -- from oblivion, airing not only the original trio of episodes, but 10 more that never saw the light of prime time. It's the story of a Gulf War veteran (Tim Guinee) who is battling a degenerative disease with the help of a mysterious drug, and working to protect humanity and the environment from exploitation by profit-hungry scientists. Kristin Lehman, Sandra Quarterman and Vivian Wu also star in "Pilot."

Movie: Fallen

A homicide detective (Denzel Washington) thinks at least one killer is out of commission for good; he's been executed. But then more people start turning up murdered in a manner that's exactly like the dead killer's M.O. A little digging reveals this is not a simple case of copycat crime. The same spirit that drove the original killer has found a new host -- and it likes to travel. John Goodman, Donald Sutherland and Embeth Davidtz (Schindler's List) also star in this creepy suspense tale.

8 p.m. WB

Movie: Sabrina Goes to Rome

Teenage witch Sabrina (Melissa Joan Hart) travels to Rome to unlock the secret of an heirloom necklace with her cat, Salem (voice of Nick Bakay), as a stowaway. In the Eternal City, Sabrina meets Gwen (Tara Charendoff), another teen witch; Paul (Eddie Mills), a handsome young photographer; and his friend Travis (James Fields), who could bring the vacation to a disastrous end.

Movie: Heat

Though they were both in The Godfather, Part II, Al Pacino and Robert De Niro didn't appear together. That's resolved by director Michael Mann's (The Insider) lengthy, pulsating 1995 crime drama, casting Pacino as a veteran police detective determined to stop a career crook's (De Niro) serial robberies. Val Kilmer, Ashley Judd, Tom Sizemore and Amy Brenneman also star.

Egg the Arts Show

Male creativity is showcased in the new installment "Men Have Feelings, Too." One of those profiled is Kenneth Lonergan, the playwright who earned wide acclaim by writing and directing the 2000 movie You Can Count on Me, which starred the Oscar-nominated Laura Linney. Writer Richard Ford, photographer Charlie White and musician Glyn Styler also discuss their respective efforts.

NFL Football

After all the sound and fury of the Super Bowl comes the relative obscurity of the Pro Bowl, the NFL's version of the All-Star Game. Top players from the AFC and the NFC (as determined by a fan vote) gather in the idyllic setting of Honolulu and Aloha Stadium for a weekend of sun and half-hearted football. Last year, Oakland Raider Rich Gannon earned game MVP honors by throwing for two touchdowns and 160 yards on 12-14 passing in leading the AFC to a 38-17 victory. Overall, the NFC leads the series 16-15.

7 p.m. TBS

Movie: Cliffhanger

Sylvester Stallone placed himself back on top of the action-movie heap -- and also on top of some very high mountains -- in director Renny Harlin's effective 1993 adventure. Doing many of his own stunts here, Stallone plays a veteran rescuer forced to help a villain (John Lithgow) retrieve missing loot. Janine Turner (Northern Exposure) and Michael Rooker co-star.

8 p.m. ABC

Movie: Goldfinger

The third James Bond film introduces Harold Sakata as Oddjob, who enforces his boss's orders with a razor-edged bowler hat. Goldfinger is the rich villain who, after buying up all the world's private gold, plans to bomb Fort Knox. Honor Blackman stars as Pussy Galore and Sean Connery plays Agent 007. Gert Frobe and Shirley Eaton also star.

8 p.m. CBS

Touched by an Angel

After watching a deadly building explosion and having her faith in mankind seriously shaken, Monica (Roma Downey) gets a visit from Satan (guest star Mandy Patinkin), who tempts her with visions of what it would be like to be human. A husband, children ... it sounds very appealing, but Monica prays for strength. She needs it, too, as she needs to help the new angel, Gloria (Valerie Bertinelli), figure out how this thing called a heart works. Della Reese and John Dye also star in the encore of "Netherlands."

8 p.m. NBC

2002 Olympic Winter Games

Coverage of plenty of events is on tap in this first prime-time package devoted solely to the athletics of those competing. Included is figure skating (with Tom Hammond as host, and Scott Hamilton and Sandra Bezic among analysts), freestyle skiing (featuring Steve Podborski on play-by-play) and Nordic combined. Bob Costas continues as the overall host.

8 p.m. SHOWTIME

Movie: Dracula 2000

Co-produced by horror maven Wes Craven, this update of the classic tale sets the title vampire free again. Played here by Gerard Butler who also had the role in a TV movie about the Transylvanian, the count targets the daughter (Justine Waddell) of his old nemesis, Van Helsing (Christopher Plummer). Jonny Lee Miller, Omar Epps and Jennifer Esposito are also featured.
