Route 80 reopens

The Associated Press

HINDMAN - Kentucky 80 in Knott County was reopened to traffic Wednesday night, two days after a mine blowout spewed water, mud, rock and debris over the highway.

The Kentucky Transportation Cabinet said the highway was reopened at 9:30 p.m. after workers cleared debris from the road at mile marker 17, between Hindman and the Knott-Floyd county line.

A seal in an abandoned underground mine collapsed shortly after noon on Monday, releasing the water. No injuries were reported.

The blowout occurred in the former James Fork Mine, which was operated in the 1980s and 1990s by CONSOL of Kentucky.

Once sealed, water routinely collects inside underground mines. Some eastern Kentucky residents use such abandoned mines as a source of water.

State inspectors are investigating what caused the blowout.

Bankruptcy closes three businesses

by MARY MUSIC STAFF WRITER

PRESTONSBURG - The government has seized three Prestonsburg businesses that, along with their owner, collectively owe $131,666.96 in state and federal taxes.

The U.S. Bankruptcy Court Eastern District in Pikeville closed the doors to the Prestonsburg Pawn Shop, Pizza Palace Fun Center and BLK

Enterprises, also known as the Red Light Diner, Wednesday.

Bankruptcy court records show that all of the businesses, operated by Prestonsburg resident Becky Kuss, owe 1999 state and federal taxes: Pizza Palace owes $11,000 to the state and $11,695.95 federally. The Red Light Diner owes $25,000 in federal taxes and $45,899.01 to the state. The Pawn Shop owes $25,000 in federal taxes and $14,072 to the state.

Kuss, who also individually owes a total of $4,000 in state and federal taxes from 1999 and 2002, sought Chapter 11 bankruptcy protection for the businesses on March 8. She also filed for individual Chapter 13 bankruptcy on April 6. Both Chapter 11 and Chapter 13 bankruptcy allow businesses and individuals, respectively, to reorganize their debts, rather Tourism officials handed out free redbud trees Thursday to area residents in Prestonsburg. The giveaway was part of SEKTDA's "Redbud Trails Program," which aims to increase tourism by increasing the numbers of the trees with colorful springtime blooms.

Tourism officials seek to paint spring with redbuds

by MARY MUSIC STAFF WRITER

PRESTONSBURG - Tourism officials, participating in a program initiated by the Southern and Eastern Kentucky Tourism Development Association and Congressman Hal Rogers, handed out free redbud trees yesterday in Prestonsburg.

Jeffrey Crowe, scenic byway director with SEKTDA, said the program aims to "jump start" the tourist season in towns along the three national scenic byways:

The Country Music Highway, the Wilderness Road Scenic Byway and the Red River Gorge Scenic Byway.

"We're surrounded by God's given natural beauty," he said.

Crowe said 65,000 trees will be given away by the end of the month.

According to Tourism Director Fred James, the city of Prestonsburg will plant 4,000 trees this year around all public buildings, entryways, and highway corridors.

Redbuds will be planted at the Middle Creek National Battlefield, Jenny Wiley State Resort Park, the Mountain Arts Center, Big Sandy Area Development District, David Appalachian Craft, Carl D. Perkins Job Corps Center, Archer Park and Stonecrest, James said.

"We're so appreciative of Congressman Rogers' efforts to begin this Eastern Kentucky beautification project," James said. "During the blooming of the redbud season each spring, visitors to Kentucky will feel welcome to our hospitality all along the redbud trails."

Cocaine case heads to grand jury

by TOM DOTY STAFF WRITER

PRESTONSBURG - A Floyd County grand jury will now decide if a Mud Creek woman will be indicted on charges of drug trafficking and receiving stolen property after a preliminary hearing that was held Wednesday.

Deloris Ann Kidd was originally wanted in connection with the theft of items from a Tennessee man whom she had lived with. According to Deputy Jeremy Shepherd, of the Floyd County Sheriff's Office, who testified at the hearing for the commonwealth, he was contacted by two detectives from Tennessee who were investigating the possible theft of property belonging to a Carl Crumley, who had discovered the items missing after returning from a wedding in Arkansas. When Crumley returned to his home he noted that his girlfriend, Kidd, had moved out and that several items were allegedly missing, including cookware, a computer and a collection of guns.

Shepherd testified that he took the detectives over to Mud Creek, where Kidd was last seen, and began showing her picture to residents. They tracked Kidd to a residence at Big Branch and found that no one was home but they did spy a computer through a window and returned to Prestonsburg to secure a search warrant from

Medical emergency brings court proceedings to halt

PRESTONSBURG - The Prestonsburg Fire Department and TransStar Ambulance responded to an emergency call at the Justice Center yesterday morning.

Floyd Family Court Judge Julie Paxton said a woman had a severe asthma attack while proceedings were underway in her courtroom.

The woman, whose name was not released, began having trouble breathing, Paxton said, then panicked and fell on the floor.

Circuit Court Clerk Denise Porter contacted authorities for assistance after a bailiff informed her that a woman was having chest pains in the courtroom.

Paxton said that the woman, who was accompanying her son, was probably affected by odors in the room from perfume, cologne or cleaning fluids.

"Thinking back, I think she tried to place herself where she wouldn't be behind anyone," Paxton said. "It's very colognish in here. There's lots of cologne

Odds & Ends

■ SAN ANTONIO — Mayoral hopeful Julian Castro really wasn't in two places at once. His twin brother took his place in a parade this week, waving to the crowd of thousands.

Castro told The Associated Press on Wednesday that he had a conflicting event and didn't intend to deceive anyone.

"We can't help that we look like each other," said Castro, a City Council member and leading contender in next month's election.

Retired state appeals court judge Phil Hardberger, one of Castro's opponents, said he believes the parade appearance was dishonest and deceptive.

"If you're 18 years old and having a date, it might be a youthful prank when you swap out your brother. But when you're running for mayor of a city with 1.3 million people and sending in your brother as an impersonator ... I do see a problem with it," Hardberger said.

Julian Castro said his brother usually accompanies him in the parade, and they are rarely mistaken for each other when together.

■ LOS ANGELES — Criminal defense attorney Ronald S. Miller does more than file briefs — he also takes them off.

Miller has spent days in front of a judge and nights in front of a camera as Don Hollywood, a porn star. His wife, a former accountant, is also a porn star.

"My whole life, I've been one of those people who sees the wet paint sign and has to go up and touch it to see if it's wet," said the 56-year-old Miller. "I want to experience everything, try everything."

He has appeared in more than 90 films in the past seven years. Miller said he tells his clients about his night job and has had no trouble balancing the careers.

Ethics expert and attorney Arthur Margolis said Miller isn't breaking any rules moonlighting as a porn actor.

"There isn't anything more unethical about that than being an actor or a novelist or somebody who sells frozen yogurt," Margolis said. "The only thing you have to be careful of, as you would in any other industry, is you don't do anything criminal or unethical in the sense of dishonesty."

Diane Curtis, a spokeswoman for the California Bar Association, declined to comment on Miller's second career but said Wednesday the bar doesn't have a policy prohibiting such activity.

■ PANAMA CITY, Fla. — A defendant who bared his backside in court and told a judge "I am going to the moon" has been ruled mentally competent for trial.

Cornell Jackson, 31, tried to persuade Circuit Judge Michael Overstreet that he was crazy and not faking mental illness at a hearing Tuesday but to no avail.

"I ain't in my right mind," Jackson insisted. He also told the judge: "I am going to the moon. The spirits are gonna take me to the moon."

Jackson is facing a retrial on charges he beat his girlfriend. He was convicted of armed burglary, aggravated battery and aggravated assault at two trials and was sentenced to 33 years in prison.

He declined to attend the first trial and was removed from the second in July 2003 after shouting "cuckoo" and displaying his bottom to jurors. The 1st District Court of Appeal in Tallahassee last year reversed the convictions because Jackson never received a formal hearing to determine his mental competency.

No new trial date has been set.

■ STERLING, Va. — She was really a he. And authorities say he's a would-be bank robber.

Loudoun County investigators say that a 6-foot-3 man — wearing a flowery dress, a dark wig and white gloves — handed a note to a bank teller on Wednesday and implied he had a weapon. The suspect also was carrying a purse, police said.

But the man's purse was still empty when he walked out of the bank. The teller refused to give him any money and he walked away.

Bishop

Sept. 1, 2000.

The arrest put Bishop in jail the night his wife disappeared and enabled Det. Terry Thompson to photograph tell-tale scratches which were on Bishop's face and collect physical evidence from Bishop's residence which proved compelling to the jury that convicted him of his wife's murder.

The trial only lasted an hour and saw Bishop convicted of the DUI, with some arguments heard over whether he should serve one year or six months for the misdemeanor offense, even though the point is moot since Bishop was sentenced to a term of life imprisonment for his wife's murder.

Testimony in the case began with straightforward accounts of the events leading up to the DUI arrest. The witness who saw him drive into the Happy Mart lot at Harold recounted that Bishop and his companion were staggering around before going behind a dumpster to engage in sex. The witness also testified that he waited for Kentucky State Police officers to arrive and reported where he saw the couple go.

Former Trooper Anthony Taulbee testified next and recounted giving Bishop a series of sobriety tests, which he failed. He also noted that he arrested Bishop's companion for intoxication and that Bishop's motorcycle was still warm when he made the arrest.

The trial took on a seedy atmosphere when Bishop took the stand and accused Taulbee of lying on the stand, echoing his testimony at his murder trial, when he accused several officers and Commonwealth's Attorney Brent Turner of being in league against him.

Each of the three accounts differed on one detail. The witness who called police said that Bishop and his companion had emerged from behind the dumpster before Taulbee's arrival. Taulbee said that the two were just coming out from behind the dumpster when he got there. Bishop said that they never went behind the dumpster and instead were partying in the lot for 45 minutes before Taulbee arrived. Bishop's account differed from the one he offered at his murder trial, when he recounted having sex with Vance behind the dumpster which led to her blood getting on his shirt.

County Attorney Keith Bartley cross-examined Bishop and asked him if he had ever been convicted of a felony to which a surprised Bishop answered no. Bartley reminded him that he was convicted of murdering his wife three months ago and Bishop noted, "Yes, I am for now, but I have an appeal."

Bartley returned to the night of Bishop's arrest and used testimony by Bishop from his murder trial to establish that Bishop had been drinking at Marlow's Country Palace before going to the Happy Mart where he had admitted under oath that he had sex with the woman behind a garbage dumpster in the parking lot.

Bishop said that he couldn't remember what he did that day even though he testified to a full account of his movements on the day in question during his murder trial.

At Bishop's request there was no jury impaneled for the trial so Judge Eric Hall made a determination of guilt after hearing the evidence and closing remarks from Bartley and Bishop's lawyer, Emma Jones.

Hall was succinct in his recap of the trial, saying, "He has acknowledged he was drunk and driving that night."

Hall sentenced Bishop to one year in jail, which will run concurrently with his life sentence for murder.

Jones argued that six months was the maximum penalty at the current time. Hall ruled that he would be willing to make it six months and added that Bishop will also face fines adding up to $200 for not having insurance or proper registration for his motorcycle.

Her attorney, ToyRay Adams, later filed a motion to dismiss the bankruptcy case, saying that Kuss' case was filed as an emergency and that she retained his services to resolve the tax debts with the IRS and the Commonwealth of Kentucky Revenue Cabinet. Kuss "no longer wishes to pursue this Chapter 11 bankruptcy case," Adams wrote in the motion.

Trial attorney Rachelle Williams filed a motion on April 13 in U.S. District Court on behalf of U.S. Trustee Richard Clippard, requesting the case be converted from Chapter 11 bankruptcy to Chapter 7, which would require the businesses' assets to be liquidated.

In the motion, Williams claims that Kuss did not provide proof of insurance and failed to set up "debtor in possession" bank accounts. Kuss failed to appear for her initial debtor conference on March 29, Clippard wrote.

U.S. Bankruptcy Judge William D. Howard filed an order April 13 denying the Kuss' motion to drop the bankruptcy proceedings and granting the government's request to convert the case to a Chapter 7 bankruptcy, paving the way for Wednesday's seizure.

On April 18, Phaedra Spradlin, who was appointed trustee after the Chapter 7 conversion filed motions seeking to appoint real estate broker and auctioneer Jim Gambill to sell the properties. Spradlin said yesterday that Kuss can still object to the seizure. Adams would not comment yesterday.

"God is in control," Kuss said yesterday. "I don't understand it, but my faith lies in my God. He will deliver us. Whatever is gonna be, will be."

The Pawn Shop has been in business for 18 years and the restaurants were opened approximately two years ago.

The sudden closures Wednesday are not the first dispute Kuss has had with the federal government. U.S. District Court records indicate that the Hock Shop, also known as the Prestonsburg Pawn Shop, lost its firearms license last December after the Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms accused the business of "willful violations of record keeping requirements."

The Hock Shop failed to properly verify the buyer's identification and record the identification information on 33 gun purchases, court documents say. The business was also cited for recording incomplete or incorrect identification information on 26 separate occasions, accepting expired identification on four occasions, failing to distribute the Youth Handgun Safety Act Notice to handgun purchasers, failing to obtain or completely fill out ATF forms and conduct mandatory background checks on two firearm transfers, failing to file a multiple sale report of pistols and revolvers, and failing to properly maintain acquisition and disposition (A&D) records.

Of the six charges, three were repeat offenses. The business was cited for failing to maintain ATF forms in 2001, 1993 and 1989. They were "noted" of the same violation in 1995 and 1992, according to the file.

The Hock Shop was also cited in 1984, 1989 and 1993 for failing to properly maintain its A&D records. The Hock Shop was "noted" in 1995 and cited in 2001 for failing to file reports of multiple sales of pistols and revolvers.

The record also shows that on Oct. 20, 2003, a physical inventory conducted at the store found 190 firearms on the premises, even though 542 guns were listed in the A&D record as being present in the store.

A total of 28 firearms were never accounted for, the report claims.

"The record clearly establishes that The Hock Shop understood its legal obligations yet repeatedly failed to abide by them," the report says. "All of the above violations are indicative of plain indifference to the requirements of the law, and are therefore willful."

Kuss' husband, Edward, has requested an injunctive order in the case, arguing that ATF "erroneously, arbitrarily and without sufficient evidence" found the violations that led to the revocation of the store's license. The evidence was "erroneously admitted" at an informal hearing with an administrative law judge who recommended the revocation, Kuss argues.

The petition to review the administrative action, filed Dec. 30 in U.S. District Court, is still pending.

Judge rejects shock probation for Kimbler

by TOM DOTY
STAFF WRITER

PRESTONSBURG — An application for early release was denied to a Nippa woman who pleaded guilty to being under the influence of prescription drugs when she caused a wreck on U.S. 23 that injured a Johnson County circuit judge.

Anita Kimbler was sentenced to 12 years in prison for the offense late last year.

Kimbler pleaded for early release in a letter she mailed to Judge John Caudill.

"It was a terrible accident that left two men with injuries that will hurt them the rest of their lives, one the pillar of the community and the other the love of my life," Kimbler wrote.

Kimbler also apologizes to the commonwealth in the letter as well as her family and Judge Daniel Sparks.

At Kimbler's formal sentencing in November she asked, through her attorney, Bob Ganstein, for leniency in her sentencing. Ganstein provided proof that Kimbler was a model prisoner who had completed several programs in prison. The materials he submitted to the court included certificates, letters and a missive from the Big Sandy Regional Detention Center which praised Kimbler and noted that she had completed programs dealing with alcohol and drug addiction.

Caudill noted that he had the material and added that he was also in receipt of a victim impact statement from Judge Sparks.

The case came to the Floyd County courts so as not to create any appearance of impropriety, since Sparks was a circuit judge in Johnson County.

Judge Caudill noted at Kimbler's sentencing that she would become eligible for parole sooner than other felons serving a sentence of similar length since her crime was not classified as violent.

Cocaine

Assistant County Attorney Jimmy Marcum.

Finding no one home when they returned, they gained access to the residence and recovered the computer and the missing cookware. During the search they found 12 plastic bags containing a white powder which tested positive for cocaine. Since the cocaine was packaged individually, it led to a second-degree drug trafficking charge for Kidd.

Upon cross-examination by public advocate Emma Jones, who was engaged to defend Kidd, Shepherd said that the names of both Crumley and Kidd came up on the computer's login screen. He also noted that Kidd told officers she found the cocaine in a box from Kentucky Fried Chicken while cleaning up and said that she planned to keep it for her own recreational use.

Shepherd was asked if he found any papers relating to the sale of drugs, which prompted him to respond, "I don't think drug dealers keep records ma'am."

in here — Oh, I'm liquid!" Paxton, who was nervous after the incident, said another courtroom attendee brought the woman a nebulizer and her son, who had left the courtroom, was called back upstairs.

Emergency medical technicians stabilized the woman and transported her to Highlands Regional Medical Center.

TransStar Ambulance and Lt. Darrell Sparks with the Prestonsburg Fire Department would not comment on the incident.

The woman was not a participant in any court proceeding, Paxton said.

One More Day
Last night I had a crazy dream
A wish was granted just for me.
It could be for anything.
I didn't ask for money or a mansion in Malibu
I simply wished for one more day with you.
One more day, one more time
One more sunset, maybe I'd be satisfied.
But then again, I know what it would do,
Leave me wishing still, for one more day with you.
First thing I'd do is pray for time to crawl.
Then I'd unplug the telephone and keep the T.V. off
I'd be with you every second, say a million I love you's.
That's what I would do with one more day with you.

The Patriot-News, Harrisburg, Pa., on identity theft:

It's unfortunate it took the identity theft of some 300,000 consumers to wake up Congress to companies that sell personal data, but better late than never. ...

In addition to the LexisNexis security breach that allowed the personal information to get into the hands of thieves, another company, ChoicePoint, last year was found to have unwittingly sold data on 145,000 Americans to criminals posing as legitimate companies.

It's troublesome enough that these data information brokers know more about us than we likely know about ourselves. But, with the exception of California, there are no federal or state laws on the books that even require these companies to notify consumers that their personal data is stolen.

Sen. Diane Feinstein, D-Calif., has proposed using California's tough security breach law as a model for federal legislation. Another member of Congress, Rep. Edward J. Markey, D-Mass., wants the Federal Trade Commission to regulate these companies and to also restrict the sale of Social Security numbers.

These seem like good starting points. ...

Uniform federal standards are clearly needed.

Chicago Tribune, on baseball fans:

A baseball fan in Fenway Park got more than he bargained for the other night when he reached over a low right field wall, apparently trying to grab a ball hit for a triple by Red Sox catcher Jason Varitek. The guy's hand collided with the mouth of Yankees outfielder Gary Sheffield, who was trying to field the ball. Sheffield reacted instantly by taking a swing at the fan.

The offender was promptly ejected from the stadium, so he didn't get to see the Red Sox triumph over the hated Yankees. He was lucky not to be arrested, and he can expect to be held in contempt by a lot of fans for daring to interfere with the game. (Even Red Sox players sided with Sheffield, in a rare show of interteam solidarity.) Oh, and the fan would be wise to avoid New York for a while—maybe the next 20 years.

And all this was for what? A lousy baseball, for heaven's sake—which he didn't even get. ...

Teams go through dozens of them in every game without thinking twice about it. But many fans, seeing a round object headed their way, react as though it's a winning lottery ticket or a splinter from the True Cross. Occasionally, say when Barry Bonds hits a record-breaking home run, the ball can be valuable. But most of them have about the same monetary worth as a day-old loaf of bread. ...

So it might be wiser, when a ball arcs toward your seat, just to stay out of the way. If you don't believe us, ask Steve Bartman.

New GOP chairman looking to keep state party moving

by JOE BIESK
ASSOCIATED PRESS

FRANKFORT — Darrell Brock Jr., the new state Republican state party chairman, isn't satisfied with complacency.

Brock, who officially took over the state GOP reins Saturday, said he's planning new successes for his party. That includes an eventual GOP takeover of the House, winning control of more local offices throughout the state and attracting new voters.

"We're full speed ahead. We're aggressive. Everything we're doing is action," Brock said in an interview with The Associated Press last week. "We're raising more money, we're recruiting more candidates, we're registering more voters, and we're mobilizing our manpower."

Brock, who became chairman with the support of Gov. Ernie Fletcher and U.S. Sen. Mitch McConnell, follows current state chairman John McCarthy, whose resignation was effective Friday. McCarthy said he wanted to return to the private sector.

Brock takes over at a time when the state GOP has experienced recent good fortune in Kentucky.

It's registered a series of political blows to Democrats at the polls. Including Fletcher — who became the first Republican governor in a generation — the GOP has four statewide constitutional officeholders. Meanwhile, the Democrats have three.

Republicans also hold five of the state's six congressional seats and both U.S. Senate seats. And, the party maintains control of the state Senate and has made recent inroads in the House.

"It's all about work," Brock said.

"There's no maintaining here. We're moving up, and we're moving fast."

Brock, 39, most recently was commissioner of the Governor's Office for Local Development. In that position, Brock was in charge of the allocation of millions of dollars in state and federal money to local communities.

A Kentucky native, Brock is a graduate of Eastern Kentucky University. Brock has worked for Johnson Controls in Georgetown, and for Total Interior Systems in Evansville, Ind.

While Brock has spent much of his career in the corporate world, he says he's always followed politics. During Fletcher's gubernatorial campaign, Brock served as co-chairman of the governor's western Kentucky operations.

"I've always had an interest," Brock said. "It's been in my heart and a passion that I have."

Now, Brock plans to take that interest and help catapult the GOP forward. That includes gaining control of the state House and winning local offices throughout the state, he said.

Letters

Are your kids really at the movies?

This letter is to all of the parents who have kids that go to the movie theater in Prestonsburg.

I live very near the theater and almost every night, especially the weekends, I watch the kids wander around the back streets of Prestonsburg until time for the movie to turn out.

Evidently what these kids are doing is the minute their parents drive away from the theater they take off from the theater and wander around town until time for the movie to "let out." Then they go back to the theater and wait for their parents to pick them up. Their parents come back and pick them up thinking they have been at the movie the whole time. There are usually large groups consisting of both boys and girls wandering around the back streets.

I am just trying to warn all of these "unknowing" parents. Maybe you should show up a little early one night and see from what side of town your child comes from.

Against Bush cuts

I read the budget sheet for Kentucky, and I feel that Bush should not cut security spending as he is doing, because this leaves many areas without the much needed police officers in certain counties in Kentucky. We do not have enough security as it is the way crime has risen in the past few years.

I recently had to call 911 for assistance and it took them over an hour to get my house. If a weapon would have been involved, someone in my family could have been dead before help would have arrived.

I hope that President Bush will reconsider on cutting this budget so low.

On the health care issue, I know that health care is expensive but it is more expensive for people like me, who doesn't qualify for any health assistance. I have to pay for medical visits and medicine. Even though we are low income, it is not low enough to get assistance for me. My husband gets Medicare and Medicaid, and so do my children. I think that the income levels should be lowered for households like mine so everyone in my home could get assistance.

On the education issue, I know what it is like because I go to college full-time and if I did not get the Pell Grants and student loans I do get, I couldn't go to college. I feel that Bush needs to stop taking away money for people to go to college, so that people like me can get an education and a good job, so we won't have to depend on government assistance.

Also, I feel that Bush should stop the colleges from raising their tuition every chance they can to get more money for their own benefit and take it from us. I still have to do without and my family has to do without a lot of things just so I can go to school, hoping it will all be worth it when I finish.

On the fuel assistance, my family receives assistance on the HEAP program and it helps a great deal during the winter weather. It helps to relieve at least one month of the cost.

TV-Turnoff Week invites you (and the kids) to go seven days without the Tube

by FRAZIER MOORE
AP TELEVISION WRITER

NEW YORK — Television is accused of many things, from corrupting our morals and co-opting our republic to undermining our families and making pudges of our children. For all sorts of reasons, TV routinely gets kicked around plenty. And now's a great time to kick it altogether — at least, for a week.

That's the idea behind TV-Turnoff Week, which for the 11th year is inviting everyone to "Turn off TV, turn on life." From Monday (April 25) through May 1, you can join as many as eight million other viewers in pulling the plug on TV, the Internet and video games.

"We want to encourage people, especially parents of young children, to control and limit screen time in the home," says Frank Vespe, executive director of the nonprofit Washington, D.C.-based TV-Turnoff Network.

Raw numbers suggest a little encouragement is needed.

A Kaiser Family Foundation survey released in March found third-graders through 12th-graders devoted, on average, nearly six and a half hours per day to TV and videos, music, video games and computers.

Not only does TV-Turnoff Network's Web site explain how to participate in a group turnoff, it also offers for download a brochure called "Turn It Off! Real Tips from Real Parents to Limit TV," which looks beyond a week's abstinence: Applying limits for TV use, such as no TV before school or at mealtime. (Half the 2,000 kids in the Kaiser survey said their families had no rules for TV viewing.)

"As parents stop making TV a focal point of the home, they find the kids become active in a lot of other things," Vespe says.

Taking no position on what's "good" and "bad" programming, TV-Turnoff Network holds that excessive screen time, whatever the content, displaces healthier activities such as play and exercise, while much TV advertising promotes an excessive and unhealthy diet.

(And not just in the United States: This year activists in at least 10 other countries — including Brazil, Great Britain, Japan, Italy and Mexico — are promoting TV-Turnoff events, Vespe says.)

Vespe's organization argues against TV as the culture's default mode, challenging the ever-more-entrenched assumption that illuminated screens should always be within sight.

With that in mind, TV-Turnoff Network fights two different battles: In the home, where TV, whatever the dosage, is self-administered; and in the rest of the world, where TV is a forced-fed intravenous drip.

In public spaces — whether stores or schools, arenas or elevators, airline seatbacks or downtown sidewalks — TV has staked its claim as an electronic overlay, mediating and often competing with the real life that accompanies it.

Declares Vespe: "As much as people like TV, I think you can find lots of them who would say, 'I don't like TV all the time, everywhere.' But almost all the cues in society are encouraging us to spend more time with the screens, and encouraging us to think that watching TV is a consequence-free activity.

"How hard is it to say to your child that TV is not appropriate all the time," he adds, "when everywhere the child goes, there are TVs?"

For anyone troubled by television's growing presence, the issue is one of control — or lack of it.

Little wonder, then, that a device called TV-B-Gone got a hearty welcome when it hit the market last October. The size of a keychain fob, TV-B-Gone is a $15 counterweapon that works like a universal remote control, turning off any TV within its 20-to-50-foot range.

"TV is appearing more and more in public space, and we're being marketed to in so many ways everywhere we go," marvels Mitch Altman, the San Francisco-based inventor of the gadget. "TV-B-Gone gives people a little bit of control, or a sense of control, over that."

No, it can't dispatch a panoramic video display pulsating over Times Square. But it can quickly extinguish any TV in a bar or airport waiting area.

"Just point and press," the package says. "The power is in your hands."

And without anyone being the wiser that it's you. Altman, a 48-year-old former TV addict who hasn't owned a TV since 1980, says he has sold 40,000 units, primarily through his Web site, despite an advertising budget of zero. The product seems to tickle the fancy of those who learn about it (including the media, which have given it lots of publicity). If the greatest corrective for TV is the "off" switch, here is an "off" switch that could change the world.

TV-B-Gone "makes it fun to turn off the TV," says Altman. "And in so doing, it gets people talking about turning off TV."

In fact, he plans to talk about it himself at several Bay Area classrooms during TV-Turnoff Week, an eye-opening initiative whose message his product validates: With your television off, you can see TV more clearly for what it is.

New releases out for rent this week were a mixed bag, with the top honors going to a martial arts picture which got a limited theatrical release despite critical acclaim and a fast-paced story.

"House of the Flying Daggers" — This is the best bet for entertainment this week. Director Yimou Zhang, normally associated with dramas like "Raise the Red Lantern," returns to the martial arts genre after scoring a success with last year's Jet Li opus "Hero."

Here Zhang tells the story of two policemen who are convinced that a blind courtesan is actually a spy from a rebel clan called Flying Daggers. They hatch a plan to aid her escape from jail with one of them along as an accomplice. The idea is that she will lead them to the rebels but nothing is what it seems.

This one features more twists than a sidewinder and some action set pieces which rival those depicted in "Crouching Tiger, Hidden Dragon." The cinematography is also topnotch, as are the period costumes and surprising love story that springs up in the final reel and adds poignancy to the action.

"Birth" — Nicole Kidman stars in this little seen film from last year which was directed by Jonathan Grazer ("Sexy Beast"). Audiences failed to show up for this low-key drama which centers on a young woman who is still coping with grief after losing her husband 10 years ago. She meets a boy who was born on the date of her husband's death and slowly forms the impression that he may be the reincarnation of her lost love. This slow-paced drama builds to a startling climax which is worth the effort for determined viewers.

"Meet the Fockers" — The cast from "Meet the Parents" is back in this sequel which finds them heading to Florida to meet the parents of Ben Stiller's character. Robert Deniro and Blythe Danner return as Stiller's uptight future in-laws, and they grate with Stiller's ultra-sensitive, peace-loving folks, who are played by screen greats Dustin Hoffman and Barbra Streisand. The script doesn't pack as many one liners as the first film, but the game cast does a fine job with some stilted material.

"A Love Song for Bobby Long" — This drama failed to find audiences despite a cast which included John Travolta and Scarlett Johansson. The New Orleans locations are flashy but this one fizzles as a young woman returns home following her mother's death to find that mom allowed a former college literature professor to move in while he worked on a book. Travolta plays the prof who seems too busy consuming alcohol and wallowing in self-pity to get any writing done. This one's slow going and never seems to get anywhere.

"Malevolence" — Anchor Bay Video's first theatrical release is a 1970s-style exercise in mayhem that begins with a team of bank robbers seeking shelter in a barn along with a family they've taken hostage. This plays like a cross between "Reservoir Dogs" and "The Texas Chainsaw Massacre" when it turns out that a hostage is kin to a slaughterhouse worker who is a few cans short of a six-pack. Lots of carnage ensues as the night draws on.

"Riding the Bullet" — A so-so adaptation of a Stephen King short story that first appeared online as an e-book. Joshua Jackson stars as man hitching across 100 miles of New England winter to visit his mother in a hospital. Slow going but it perks up when David Arquette appears as a 1950s-style drag racer who offers Jackson a ride. Jackson has adapted several King novels before, including the eight-hour miniseries "The Stand," but this is a weaker effort.

Next week look for the film adaptation of "Lemony Snicket's A Series of Unfortunate Events," starring the rubber-faced Jim Carrey.

Highlands Regional Medical Center pays tribute to and offers sincere thanks to all the Auxilians and Volunteers who give their time and talents to help the Medical Center.

WHY BE A VOLUNTEER

IT'S NOT FOR FORTUNE

IT'S NOT FOR FAME

IT'S NOT FOR ONLY PERSONAL GAIN

IT'S NOT FOR LOVE OF FELLOWMAN
OR JUST TO LEND A HELPING HAND

IT'S NOT FOR MEDALS WORN WITH PRIDE

IT'S FOR THE FEELING DEEP INSIDE OF HELPING OTHERS FAR AND NEAR

THAT MAKES YOU WANT TO Return to your Bible

...Ask now the beasts, and they shall teach thee; and the fowls of the air, and they shall tell thee: or speak to the earth, and it shall teach thee; and the fishes of the sea shall declare unto thee. Who knoweth not in all these that the hand of the LORD hath wrought this? in whose hand is the soul of every living thing, and the breath of all mankind.

 State Democratic Party Chairman Jerry Lundergan said he wished Brock "the very best," as chairman. But, Lundergan said he thought Brock's goals would fall short.
 "The Republican Party has peaked," Lundergan said. "I think that basically they have fooled a lot of Kentucky voters. They have indicated to Kentucky voters one thing and done another."
 Still, Brock points to the passage

 Meanwhile, Fletcher said he supported Brock because he was "an excellent individual" who had knowledge about the state and its citizens.
 "He's a good Republican," Fletcher said last week. "He shares the values of most of Kentuckians and I think he'll do a good job of organizing and leading our party over the next several years."

Bobcats paste Phelps, 11-2

by STEVE LeMASTER
SPORTS EDITOR

PHELPS – Betsy Layne made the long trip to Phelps worthwhile Tuesday evening. The Bobcats came into Tuesday's game losers of their last two contests, losses to Sheldon Clark and East Ridge, respectively. Tuesday's road game in Pike County afforded Betsy Layne a win. The Bobcats went down in order in the top half of the first inning, but did the majority of their scoring in the second and third innings en route to an 11-2 win over the Hornets.

Betsy Layne scored three runs in both the second and third innings.

Shawn Hamilton took to the mound for Betsy Layne and pitched well, recording the win in impressive fashion.

Brandon Thacker and Brendon Combs each had triples for the Bobcats. Cleanup hitter Cody Click scored four times for Betsy Layne and Hamilton helped his cause, cracking a double and scoring twice.

The Bobcats scored one run in the fifth inning and two each in the sixth and seventh innings.

Betsy Layne was due back in action yesterday on the road at Paintsville. On Tuesday, the Bobcats and Allen Central are tabbed to hook up in the second of two regular-season contests.

East Ridge 4, Betsy Layne 0: On Monday, Betsy Layne played on the road in Pike County against the host East Ridge Warriors. The Bobcats lacked offense in a big way, struggling to get any runs across in the loss. East Ridge made the most of strong pitching, defense and hitting.

ROCKFORD, Ill. – It was a night that shined the spotlight on college bowling, with a good deal of it landing on our fair school.

Pikeville College has received a lot of media attention this week, with some casting a dark shadow on the school. You wouldn't have known it on Wednesday however at the "Night of Champions" banquet, which served as a precursor to this week's Intercollegiate Bowling Championships.

Five Pikeville bowlers were among the 277 Academic All-Americans this year. I want you to think about that. It's flabbergasting to me that 277 college bowlers have maintained a cumulative – that means not just for one semester, but overall – grade-point average of 3.5 for their college career.

For Pikeville, Cassady Schuab was joined by four teammates on the women's side – Kayla Bandy, LaDeanna Damron, Michelle McKay and Stacey Wyatt.

For their talents on the lanes, two Lady Bears were Second Team All-Americans. Junior Michelle Leonard and freshman Kayla Bandy were honored. Also, Bandy was named the Rookie of the Year as the best first-year bowler in the country.

However, the night was stolen by Pikeville College Coach Ron Damron, who delivered a keynote address that was informative, enlightening and all-encompassing. In short, before a houseful of bowlers, administrators, coaches and parents, he offered something for everybody.

In his 15-minute address, Damron talked about how bowling has enhanced Pikeville College, providing the single reason that 36 student-athletes call the school home. He talked about how it also had a positive impact on the school's bottom line and enrollment figures.

The most touching part was when the coach spoke about three of his bowlers and the difference college bowling had made in their lives. The students, all seniors who will graduate in May, were facing difficulties and stood at the crossroads when happenstance and a healthy dose of good luck brought them to a town they'd never heard of before.

One had already been dismissed from a state university, one was at a community college and the other was out of school working odd jobs. All three needed direc-

ALLEN – Allen Central beat Floyd County rival South Floyd 7-3 Tuesday and in the process broke a five-game losing streak that included losses to Pikeville, Pike County Central and Prestonsburg. Prior to Tuesday's win over South Floyd, which at 0-7 remains winless on the season, Allen Central hadn't won since the 15th Region All "A" Classic semifinals.

South Floyd continues to look for its first win of the 2005 season. On Saturday, Magoffin County edged South Floyd 10-9.

Nick Music went the distance on the mound for the Rebels. Music, a junior, gave up three hits in the first inning before settling down.

Scott Allen started and absorbed the loss for the Raiders.

Allen Central Coach Kenneth Johnson welcomed the winning effort.

"We finally got back on the winning track," Johnson said with a sense of relief. "I just tried to keep

Ladycats beat Allen Central, fall to Pikeville

PIKEVILLE – Betsy Layne simply took care of business in the opening round of the 15th Region All "A" Classic softball tournament Monday night. The Ladycats, after drawing Allen Central in the opening round, went out and shook off a slow start. Neither team scored in either of the first two innings. Both came alive in the third inning. Betsy Layne was the livelier of the two, though. The Ladycats plated seven runs in the third inning. Betsy Layne took a 7-3 lead out of the third inning and went on to beat the Lady Rebels 16-5.

"I believe both teams came out a little nervous and hesitant," said Betsy Layne Coach Christina Crase. "After the first two innings the nerves began to fade away. The third inning was huge for us. We scored seven runs. We had a few walks to start us off and then some tremendous hits from Kim Clark, Breann Akers, and Megan Hamilton. We made a few mental errors in the third and fourth innings allowing for a slight come back, but we were able to overcome in the last two innings.

Akers, who is set to sign to play volleyball for nearby Pikeville College, took the pitching duties for Betsy Layne and ran with them.

Akers, in the winning performance, allowed just two earned runs while walking just four batters and striking out five.

Kim Clark led the Betsy Layne offensive charge. Clark, who has already signed to play both basketball and softball at Pikeville College, provided a single, double and triple.

Clark finished with four runs batted in. Tiffany Bishop drove in three runs.

Amanda Hunter, Kayla Case and Misty Tackett all scored three times each for the Ladycats.

Senior pitcher Becky Thomas took the loss for the Lady Rebels.

Offensively, Tanda Conn led Allen Central with three hits. Alanna Cline added two hits. Five different Lady Rebels scored runs.

Allen Central managed 11 hits. Betsy Layne pulled away late, scoring eight runs in the last two innings.

"Senior Tiffany Bishop came alive in the seventh with a clutch triple, with two outs which allowed for three of our five runs," Crase said, looking back. "A couple starters came out of a hitting slump in this game and I hope it continues throughout the tournament."

On Tuesday, Betsy Layne advanced to face Pikeville and subsequently ended its regional All "A" run. Pikeville won 9-0. Betsy Layne failed to find any offense in the shutout loss.

tion in their lives, and the combination of an opportunity to bowl at the collegiate level and a coach and school offering them the chance to improve their stance have made a huge difference in their lives.

Damron also challenged his audience, encouraging them to make their own breaks, both at school and in life. College bowling is considered a club sport at most schools, and therefore is afforded very little financial support. Using his own team as an example, he challenged the coaches and student athletes to improve their standing in the classroom as a means for seeking additional funding.

At Pikeville, the grade-point average of student athletes surpasses the general population. And within the athletics department, the bowling team's overall grade-point average is the highest of any of Pikeville's 15 sports.

He challenged the bowlers to raise their own standards to force their schools to raise the attention given to college bowling. I came to Pikeville College in August of 1996 because of my relationship with two people - former basketball coach Roy Cutright and Ron Damron. I'd known Ron for a long time, primarily because his wife Shella was one of the finest teachers I'd ever had.

Over the last nine years, Ron and I have been through a lot, both good times and bad. We've seen close, personal friends come to Pikeville and leave, had coaches turn out to be not all we'd hoped they were and many more exceed our grandest expectations.

We've seen our department grow from five sports in 1996 to 17 in 2005, and have played a small role in the lives of thousands of students and hundreds of athletes, many of which we still call friends today.

After nine years at Pikeville, I can assure you that I still look forward to coming to work every day, and the chief reason for that is my boss, Ron Damron. He's the kind of boss we all want, someone who tells you what he wants done and then sends you out to do it, knowing he won't be standing over your shoulder tapping his foot.

He has given me many opportunities in our time together, some I've taken advantage of and other times I've failed him. One of those chances is something called "Dear Diary," an online journal I write from national tournaments such as this and post them unedited on the college's Web site. (To read them, visit www.pc.edu and follow the link at the bottom of the page.)

But I can tell you this: I've never been more proud of Ron or Pikeville College than I was on Wednesday, sitting about 10 yards from him as he delivered a speech that told people why Pikeville College and college bowling have been a perfect marriage, and how they too can improve their program.

Things aren't perfect at Pikeville College, and none of us, from President Smith on down, would tell you that. But there are times when it all comes together and even an old, tired employee and alum like me are caused to sit up a little straighter and stick his chest out a little farther.

One of those times was Wednesday.

On Wednesday, Ron Damron made me proud to represent Pikeville College.

And, he made me proud to call him my friend.

No. 3 ranking entering the tournament.

Meanwhile, freshman Kayla Bandy was honored twice. Not only was she tabbed a second-team pick by the coaches, she also took the organization's Rookie of the Year honor. The Danville, Va., product, who also plays on the school's volleyball team, averaged 197 this season.

"Michelle and Kayla are very deserving of the recognition they got tonight, and I'm very proud of them," said Damron. "They will be very important to the success we have this week as we try to win another national championship."

Karl Nicholai, president of the NCBCA, also announced that the organization had honored 277 bowlers for their work in the classroom with the title of Academic All-Americans. Five of them were from Pikeville.

Junior Cassady Schaub of Polk, Ohio, was joined by four members of the women's team - Bandy; LaDeanna Damron, a junior from Millard; Michelle McKay, a freshman from Guelph, Ont.; and Stacey Wyatt, a senior from Louisville.

Damron delivered an address from his unique position as a school administrator (he serves as Vice-President of Student Services), an athletics director, coach and parent (LaDeanna Damron is his daughter).

He talked about the impact college bowling has had on Pikeville College and on several of his student-athletes. He also talked about how the program had gained the success it has in such a brief period of time and offered suggestions and challenges for coaches, administrators and student-athletes.

Following his speech, Mike Jakubowski, USBC manager of sponsorship acquisitions and the evenings master of ceremonies, call Damron "one of the tremendous people in college bowling," while Penn State senior Jennifer McDowell, who spoke on behalf of the USBC, challenged everyone to "take the things Pikeville's coach has told you and put them into action in your own school and community."

The 2005 IBC national tournament began Thursday morning at The Cherry Bowl here in Rockford, with the championship round, taped for future airing on CSTV, slated for Saturday afternoon.

my guys positive. We haven't been playing well, and we didn't play up to our abilities in this game. We've went through some difficulties and some injuries, but it looks like we are back on the right track.

"I told my guys that we still have a lot to look forward to. We had lost the five previous games in a row and we still have a winning record. I just tried to keep their heads up, and I think this win maybe got us back on the right track."

Allen Central put the bat on the baseball noticeably better in Tuesday's win over South Floyd.

"We haven't been hitting the ball well the last six or seven games either," Johnson added. "In the first eight games we were averaging around 10 runs per game, and the last seven we have only averaged a little over one run per game. Our pitching hasn't been the same either as when we started. I am glad we are struggling now though so we can work out our problems and be peaking by tournament time."

Allen Central's five-game losing streak also included a pair of losses suffered over the weekend.

At press time, Allen Central was due to host Breathitt County. This evening, Allen Central is scheduled to host Knox Central.

South Floyd's next game, weather permitting, will come Monday on the road at Pike County Central.

Fontaine fired up for Football Wildcats

TIMES STAFF REPORT

LEXINGTON — Because of injuries and other factors, Chuck Smith has had to deal with some changes during his first spring as Kentucky linebackers coach, but one constant has been the steady play delivered by Raymond Fontaine.

"Raymond is our only senior (linebacker) now, so he has to play the role of a leader. I'm really pleased with the way he has done that," Smith said. "He has game experience, and there's no substitute for that. He has the ability to be a big-play linebacker and a great attitude toward work."

Smith noted that Fontaine has helped set the tone for his younger teammates.

"Their attitude toward work has been really good," Smith said. "They're working hard to make plays, although young guys have to learn how to get into position to make a play. The little things make a difference."

Fontaine's challenge this spring has been adjusting to playing weakside linebacker in the 4-3 defensive alignment as opposed to the 3-4 scheme used last season.

"The pass coverages are similar and the reads are similar. Adjusting to the run responsibilities is the biggest change," said Fontaine, who is a Canadian from Ottawa, Ontario. "Now I am much more active against the run. I was more of a support player last year."

Fontaine has been a part-time starter the last two seasons, accounting for 33 tackles each year. With the end of spring practice drawing near, he is pleased with what he's seen.

"Spring practice is going well, although the defense always has room to improve," he said. "Our defensive players are focused and together, wanting the same dream."

The Wildcats have their final practice of the spring on Friday, plus the Blue/White Spring Game on Saturday at 1 p.m. at Commonwealth Stadium.

Brown, Mitchell to miss remainder of spring: Redshirt freshman quarterback Joe Brown and senior wide receiver Scott Mitchell were not at today's practice and will miss the remainder of this week's work, Coach Rich Brooks announced Wednesday.

Brown is concentrating on academic responsibilities. Mitchell underwent surgery to repair a sports hernia and is expected to be fully recovered when practice resumes in August.

i-wireless/ FOX19 Prep Classic returns with powerhouse lineup

SPECIAL TO THE TIMES

CINCINNATI — Storied programs with longstanding histories of tradition and championship success, and a Cincinnati Public School rivalry game will all be on display when high school football returns to Paul Brown Stadium over Labor Day weekend with the second annual Prep Classic.

On Saturday, Sept. 3, eight high school football programs are scheduled to collide as part of a four-game card that promises to deliver another full day of exciting prep gridiron action.

Teams appearing in this year's event include Cincinnati Taft, Cincinnati Hughes, Cincinnati Moeller, Cincinnati Elder, Cincinnati Colerain, Massillon Washington (Ohio) and Highlands and Covington Catholic of Northern Kentucky.

These eight programs have combined for a staggering 54 state football titles in their illustrious pasts.

Taft and Hughes get the day started with a 10:30 a.m. kick-off. These two Southwest Ohio Public League National Division rivals play annually and both will be making their first-ever appearance at Paul Brown Stadium.

Moeller, a seven-time Ohio state champion and regional finalist in 2004, takes on Covington Catholic at 1 p.m. The Colonels have won five Kentucky state titles and advanced to the regional finals last season.

Elder takes on Massillon in a 4 p.m. contest. The Panthers have won two of the last three Ohio Division I championships while Massillon has won a state-record 23 Ohio state titles.

The nightcap scheduled to kick-off at 7:30 p.m. featuring Colerain and Highlands is being billed as the battle between defending state champions. The Bluebirds of Highlands won the Kentucky Class AAA state title game last season and in the process re-claimed the overall lead in Kentucky prep football history with its 16th state title. The Cardinals of Colerain turned in one of the most dominant seasons in Cincinnati prep football history last season, capping off their seventh unbeaten regular season in the past 11 years with their first Ohio Division I state title.

The Prep Classic, conducted by Reach Event Marketing, is the direct result of a concerted effort between Hamilton County officials, the Cincinnati Bengals, Anthony Muñoz Foundation, Marvin Lewis Community Fund and Cris Collinsworth ProScan Foundation to bring an annual showcase prep football event to the Greater Cincinnati area that features top prep football programs.

"The Prep Classic is fast becoming a high school football tradition in Cincinnati. We are especially excited about the opportunity this event will bring to the players, students and fans of Hughes and Taft high schools. On a personal note, I am sure that my grandfather would be pleased to see his Massillon Tigers take the field at Cincinnati's Paul Brown Stadium," said Katie Blackburn, Cincinnati Bengals Executive Vice President.

Once again, i-wireless will be the title sponsor of this year's event. "Cincinnati Bell is proud to sponsor the 2nd annual i-wireless FOX19 Prep Classic," said Jack Cassidy, president and CEO of Cincinnati Bell. "This event provides a terrific opportunity to showcase the talents of our community's youth and its success also helps provide funding for important community initiatives throughout our city."

Beneficiaries of the Prep Classic include the Anthony Muñoz Foundation, Cris Collinsworth ProScan Foundation and Marvin Lewis Community Fund, with 90 percent of the event proceeds benefiting the three charities. All three Foundations' proceeds will be earmarked to aid the ProScan Pink Ribbon Women's Center, a downtown women's health clinic in Over-The-Rhine concentrating on breast cancer early detection.

Information pertaining to FOX19 television coverage of the event and ticket prices is forthcoming.

For more information on the Prep Classic, go online to www.prepclassic.com.

Friday night fights helped prep Texas linebacker for NFL

by JIM VERTUNO
ASSOCIATED PRESS

AUSTIN, Texas — The sniffling 9-year-old begged his mother not to make him get out of the car.

"Don't make me go, Mama," Derrick Johnson cried while tugging his mother's skirt. "I don't want to play football."

Beverly Johnson was having none of that: "Stop acting like a little girl!" she said. "You're going."

So he did, trudging across the practice field on a walk that eventually led to stardom as a linebacker at the University of Texas. Now considered one of the best players to ever wear the burnt orange, Johnson is projected to be one of the first defensive players selected Saturday in the NFL draft.

The Nagurski and Butkus awards winner who set an NCAA record with nine forced fumbles last season, he can laugh now about his wimpy beginning.

"I didn't like the coach. He was always yelling. I wasn't used to that," Johnson said. "It turned out pretty good."

Added Beverly Johnson: "It took him about three or four times before he realized the coach wasn't going to chew him up and spit him out."

Once he got over the coaching thing, it was clear her son was faster and more physical than the other kids.

"Football is in his blood," said older brother Dwight Johnson, who was a defensive tackle at Baylor and played with the Philadelphia Eagles and New York Giants. "We trained him like a pit bull to have a killer instinct."

Dwight Johnson said Derrick always was a scrapper. When Derrick was about 2, his brother would take him for walks around the neighborhood where a friend had a little brother about his age. The two older boys would set their brothers to wrestling.

"They'd be slamming each other down," Dwight said. "Mama would ask later, 'What are all those scratches on my baby's face?'"

Before long, the Johnson brothers were staging "Friday Night Fights" in the yard to toughen up Derrick. Derrick would strap on gloves and duke it out with other kids. Dwight Johnson said the fights never got vicious, but there was more than one split lip.

"We were just country boys," having fun, he said. "Derrick would be this little boy with these big old gloves on."

A skinny kid in middle school and high school — his brothers used to eat food off his plate — Johnson quickly grew up to lay big hits on his opponents.

By his senior year at Waco High School, he was a prep All-American and his speed and knack for making the big play quickly earned him a spot on the field at Texas as a freshman. As a junior, he was projected as a first-round draft pick, but was having too much fun to leave college early.

Instead, he spent his final season learning from Greg Robinson, who spent a year as the Longhorns' defensive coordinator before becoming the head coach at Syracuse.

Robinson, who coached 14 seasons in the NFL, taught Johnson how to corral the speed and natural instincts that sometimes caused him to overrun plays. At one of their first meetings, Robinson played Johnson a video of 30 plays from the 2003 season, half of which showed him making a mistake. Johnson welcomed the criticism.

"I looked at it as positive," he said. "I didn't need to look at the good plays."

Johnson soaked up everything he could from Robinson. He finished his career with 458 tackles and is set to be the first UT linebacker drafted in the first round since Tommy Nobis was the No. 1 pick by the Atlanta Falcons in 1966.

Scouts love his speed and ability to create turnovers.

NFL.com's draft analysis calls him a "natural leader with exceptional quickness" and says he is "regarded as one of the finest pass defenders to ever play linebacker in the collegiate ranks."

He had 18 tackles in a win over Oklahoma State. On one play he ran about 60 yards to catch a ball carrier, reminding NFL chief draft consultant Gil Brandt of Lawrence Taylor.

"It took me back to the 1970s," Brandt said. "Taylor made the same kind of play."

Yet for all the tussles of "Friday Night Fights" and the big hits under the lights at Royal Memorial Stadium, some scouts question whether he's willing to take on blocks of a 300-pound guard or tackle.

"Johnson is more of a drag-down tackler than one who will collide on impact," the same NFL.com report reads.

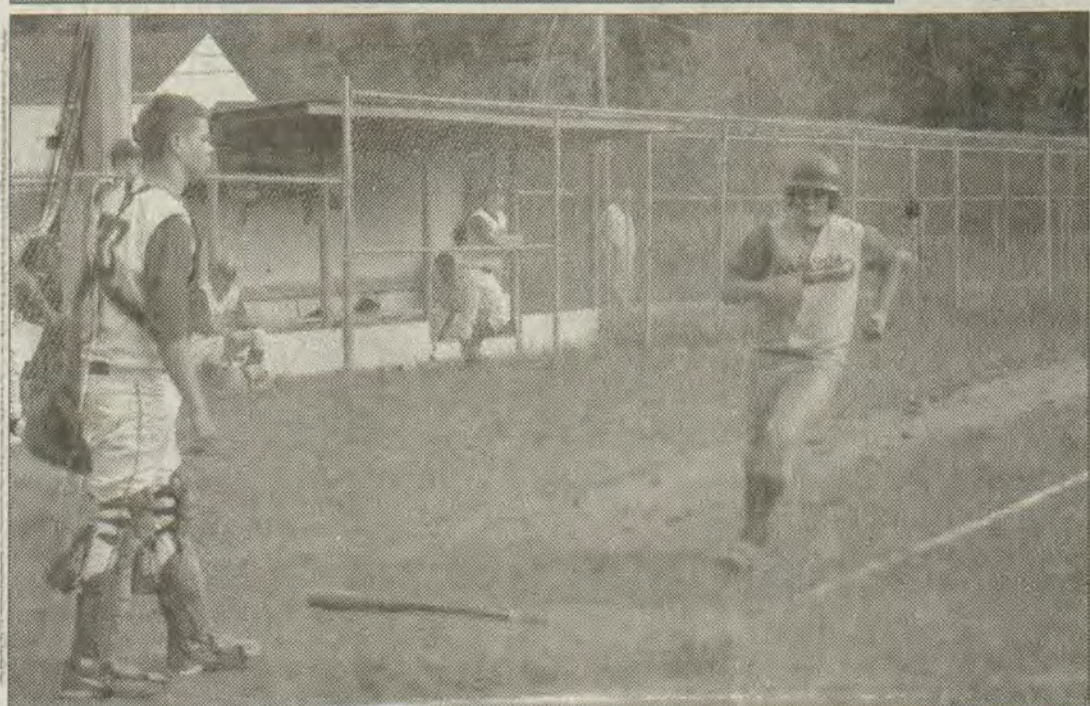

Johnson dismisses that. In his college debut, his first big play came when he smashed through a blocker and broke up a screen pass.

"I blew up some lineman to make the tackle," he said. "They've got to nitpick something. The old saying is 'The higher you are on the ladder, the more people will see you and say things about you.'"

Most of what they're saying is good. Very good.

Wednesday's game: Reds 6, Pirates 4

by JOE KAY
ASSOCIATED PRESS

CINCINNATI — As long as he is hitting like this, Wily Mo Pena won't spend much time on the Cincinnati Reds bench.

Pena hit two more homers, including a tiebreaking two-run shot in the seventh inning that sent the Reds to a 6-4 victory Wednesday night over the Pittsburgh Pirates, mired in their worst start since 1995.

Rich Aurilia also homered twice, providing more than enough for Paul Wilson (1-1) to get his first win in four starts. The right-hander gave up three runs and nine hits — eight of them singles — in seven innings.

But it was Pena who got the curtain call with another show of power that amazed 16,857 fans and at least one teammate.

"I've played with some pretty good players, and he hits the ball harder and the ball jumps off his bat more than anybody I've seen," said Aurilia, who played with Barry Bonds in San Francisco. "It's fun to get in the act."

Manager Dave Miley has started juggling his lineup to find a place for Pena, who opened the season as the fourth outfielder. Pena played center field on Wednesday in place of slumping Ken Griffey Jr.

Pena is hitting .400 with five homers in eight starts.

"It's almost impossible to get him out of it right now," Miley said. "He's swinging as well as anybody on the club. Everything he hits is hard."

Pittsburgh lost its fifth in a row, falling to 4-11 with a struggling rotation and the least-productive lineup in the majors.

Pena led off the fourth with a homer off Oliver Perez, and Aurilia hit a two-run shot two batters later. They formed a tag team again in the seventh against Solomon Torres (1-1) to break a 3-all tie.

After Adam Dunn doubled, Pena hit a line drive that barely cleared the wall in left field, his third homer in the last four games.

"I thought it was a line drive off the wall," Pena said. "When I heard the fireworks and the umpire said, 'Home run,' I said, 'thank you!'"

One out later, Aurilia also homered to left for a 6-3 lead.

Kent Mercker gave up an RBI single in the eighth to Bobby Hill, one of his three hits. Danny Graves got the last three outs to stay perfect in six save chances.

The Pirates had turned Great American Ball Park into a cozy summer retreat, going 12-6 in its first two seasons while averaging five runs a game. Perez and the majors' lowest-scoring offense were hoping for a refreshing visit.

Instead, they stayed in their funk.

Perez lasted only four innings, giving up seven hits, four walks and three runs in a performance that underscored his struggles. Last year, the left-hander went 4-0 in five starts against the Reds with a 1.59 ERA.

"I was a little wild," said Perez, who threw only 46 strikes out of 90 pitches. "I have to forget this and get ready for the next game."

He started for the Pirates on opening day but hasn't pitched up to the billing, giving up 19 runs in 19 innings. He's 0-2 and hasn't made it through the fifth inning in two of his four starts.

"Oliver had a nice year for us last year," manager Lloyd McClendon said. "But he's still not a finished product. There's still work to be done. Like any other 23-year-old pitcher, he's going to struggle at times."

Wilson, the Reds' opening day starter, struck out nine and retired 11 in a row over the middle innings. Matt Lawton had an RBI infield single in the second, and Rob Mackowiak — a .300 career hitter at Great American — doubled home two more in the third for a 3-0 lead.

But the Pirates' offense froze up, as it has all season. Pittsburgh has scored three runs or fewer in 11 of its 15 games.

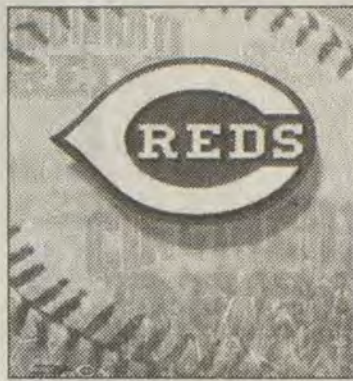

Dunn gave Perez an early break by botching what should have been a sacrifice fly — the most elusive part of the game for the power-hitting outfielder.

Last season, Dunn became the third player in major league history to drive in 100 runs in without getting a sacrifice fly. Before Wednesday's game, he got a shipment of bats that featured one engraved: Sacrifice

Fly Adam Dunn."

A year ago, he had trouble hitting them. In the second inning Wednesday, he had trouble running one out. He left third base too early on Aurilia's fly to left field, and was called out on appeal.

Notes: Pirates 2B Jose Castillo, sidelined by a strained muscle in his side, took batting practice Wednesday in Pittsburgh. Castillo went on the 15-day DL on April 7 after hurting himself while swinging at a pitch. ... Griffey pinch-hit and popped out, leaving him in a 7-for-36 slump. ... 2B D'Angelo Jimenez singled in his first at-bat, snapping an 0-for-14 slump.

Reds call up RH Coffey

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

CINCINNATI — The Reds called up right-handed reliever Todd Coffey on Monday to take the roster spot of starter Ramon Ortiz.

Coffey, 24, had two saves for Triple-A Louisville when he got his first promotion to the majors. He'll take the bullpen spot vacated by right-hander Matt Belisle, who is in the rotation while Ortiz recovers from a strained groin.

Ortiz went on the 15-day disabled list Sunday, when he had pain and soreness in the groin a day after throwing off a bullpen mound.

Vincent Hayes, 14, an eighth-grader at Adams Middle School, recently bagged his first two turkeys. The first, which he took on April 2, weighed 20 1/2 pounds and sported a beard measuring 9 1/2 inches with spurs registering 1 1/16. The second, taken on April 16, weighed in at 20 1/2 pounds with a 10 1/4 beard and 1 5/16 spurs. The young hunter is the son of Bryan and Lisa Hayes of Prestonsburg.

Jerry Bailey's autobiography details his battle with alcohol

by RICHARD ROSENBLATT
ASSOCIATED PRESS

NEW YORK — Jerry Bailey is one of racing's most accomplished jockeys, a two-time Kentucky Derby winner, a seven-time Eclipse Award winner as the nation's top rider and the winner of a record 14 Breeders' Cup races.

There's a side to Bailey, though, that most people haven't seen: recovering alcoholic.

"I had hit bottom. My descent into alcoholism had been slow ... but now it felt as though I was lying at the bottom of the ocean, searching for a ray of light that would lead me to the surface.

"I needed to breathe again. I needed to live again," Bailey writes in the opening chapter of his autobiography, "Against the Odds: Riding for My Life."

The 47-year-old Bailey decided the time was right to detail his battle with alcohol that threatened his career, his marriage and even his life in the 1980s.

"I've been wanting to write this for the past five years, but I just didn't have the time," Bailey said in a telephone interview Tuesday. "I wrote it primarily for people who feel like they don't fit in, for the addictive person who feels he has to do something to fit into the mainstream. That's how I felt. I was never big enough or good enough to fit in, and that's the main reason why I drank."

Bailey's book will be released Wednesday, less than three weeks before the Hall of Fame rider attempts to win the Kentucky Derby aboard top contender High Fly.

"He's a horse that wins a lot and will be very competitive in the Derby," Bailey said. "He won't be the definitive favorite, but he rates a chance and that's all you can ask for."

Bailey's book is not just another tale about a jockey riding good horses and making lots of money; it's about a person fighting alcoholism and revealing many private and painful moments in his life. He also writes about infertility problems he and his wife, Suzee, had before giving birth to their son, Justin, in 1992.

"By divulging what hurts most, that's what heals best," Bailey said Tuesday. "In telling your story, it relieves the burden on you, and hopefully it will help others."

Bailey started drinking in high school in El Paso, Texas. When his riding career began in 1974 and he set out on his own, Bailey hit the bottle even harder. What the heck, he figured. He was making decent money, so why not live it up? Party first, worry about riding later.

"I was going out almost every night because that is what pretty much everybody around me did," Bailey writes. "We would order a couple of drinks, eat a light dinner, then drink some more. We never cared where the evening took us. Sometimes, it led to strange places."

"There was the time I awoke with a jolt to the acrid smell of cleaning solvents. I could see in the darkness that I was crammed into a small space, with my knees pressed against my stomach. There were sponges and soiled rags all around. Welcome to the mop closet at Caravan East, a nightclub in Albuquerque, N.M."

Bailey finally realized he had a drinking problem about the time he married Suzee in December 1985. He writes that he was never drunk when he rode, but all-night parties often left him weary and not in the best of shape to compete with the top riders.

In 1989, with his career mired in mediocrity and his marriage close to collapse, Bailey sought help. He went to counseling and to an outpatient program in Miami recommended by a friend on the Miami-Dade police department. He was in the program for three months, and the changes began to show.

"My preparation, always a strength, was even better," Bailey writes. "I looked at past performances and it was as if the race was unfolding before my eyes. I was able to see where every horse was likely to be placed at different stages."

In 1990, his first alcohol-free year, Bailey won 224 races and his horses earned $9.4 million. Two years earlier, he won 159 races and his horses earned $5.6 million.

"I am firmly convinced that if I had not hit bottom, I would never have been able to see my way to the top," Bailey writes.

The book, written with USA Today's Tom Pedulla, also details Bailey's on-track achievements, with three chapters devoted to Cigar, the two-time Horse of the Year he guided to a record-equaling 16 wins in a row.

Bailey also writes about winning the Derby with Sea Hero and Grindstone, his two Preakness victories and his two Belmont Stakes wins.

Santangelo leads Legends to 6-2 win over Power

SPECIAL TO THE TIMES

CHARLESTON, W.Va. — The Lexington Legends won their third straight game with a 6-2 decision over West Virginia, Wednesday morning. The Legends continued their dominance over the Power with a fifth straight win. The win also improves Lexington's record to 7-6. The modest win streak matches the Legends season high.

Lexington wasted very little time getting started. Jonny Ash led off the game with a walk and advanced to second on a ground out by Ben Zobrist. After a strikeout of Hunter Pence, Scott Robinson singled Ash in with a single to right field.

The Legends doubled their lead in the third inning on Lou Santangelo's solo home run to centerfield. Santangelo tripled in the fifth inning and scored on a sacrifice fly by Ash to make it 3-0.

West Virginia trimmed the Lexington lead to a run with two in the fifth inning. Jake Serfess and Grant Richardson both scored on Alcides Escobar's triple to left centerfield.

The Legends had some insurance with a three spot in the ninth frame. Jonny Ash's second sacrifice fly of the game scored Santangelo. Scott Robinson singled in Zobrist and Pence.

Troy Patton (1-0) pitched five innings allowing two runs on five hits. He struck out a season high nine batters. Ryan Thompson worked two scoreless innings, striking out four. Jeff Widgahl earned his second save with two shutout innings.

The Legends staff struck out 14 batters, tying a season high set against West Virginia on April 12 in Lexington. Lou Santangelo had his best game of the year with a triple and a home run. Scott Robinson had three RBI on two singles. Mitch Einertson and Hunter Pence each had two hits.

Biffle showing signs of being new NASCAR star

by MIKE HARRIS
ASSOCIATED PRESS

AVONDALE, Ariz. — Greg Biffle never has lacked confidence.

In 1997, the Vancouver, Wash., native was racing with some success in one of NASCAR's regional touring series when he got a call from a friend saying team owner Jack Roush was interested in giving him a ride. The drawback was that Biffle would have to come to Charlotte, N.C., to make the deal.

"Before he and I had a conversation, he'd locked his shop in Vancouver — he had a restaurant and a race car shop — and he locked them up and came and camped with us until we made the deal," Roush said, grinning. "He wasn't going to leave until his deal was done."

"That really showed a lot of commitment on his part to be able to tear up his roots and to come in and say, 'I want to be part of this and I'll make it work.' I think if we weren't able to move as fast as he wanted to move right away, he was going to drag us into another zip code."

Biffle, then 28, was an instant hit with Roush Racing.

He won rookie of the year honors in the Craftsman Truck Series in 1998, was the series runner-up in 1999 and the champion the next year. Roush moved Biffle up to the Busch Series in 2001 and Biffle was again the top rookie before coming back in 2002 and winning the Busch title.

Stepping up to what was then the Winston Cup series full-time in 2003 presented a whole new challenge. Biffle was not an instant success this time.

His rookie year, Biffle won the July race at Daytona but had only five other top-10 finishes and wound up an undistinguished 20th in the points.

Last year, Biffle started slowly but came on in the second half of the year to win races at Michigan and Homestead — the season finale — and moved up to 17th in the standings.

While everyone agreed he was a talented driver, some observers were starting to use the word journeyman to describe Biffle, now 35.

His start this season has quieted that kind of talk.

Biffle has five top-10 finishes, including a pair of victories, in the first seven races of 2005. He goes into Saturday night's Subway Fresh 500 at Phoenix International Raceway second in the standings, trailing Jimmie Johnson by just 135 points.

Johnson, who raced against Biffle in the Busch Series, said he never doubted Biffle's ability.

"He's always been fast," Johnson said. "He's always been hard on the gas. When you're in a race with him, he's definitely going to be very aggressive, and that's not a bad thing. I'm not saying that in a negative way at all."

"Some guys are reckless and aggressive and other guys aren't. You know with Greg that he's going to be aggressive and put up a really good fight."

Biffle's truck and Busch titles were the first NASCAR championships for Roush. Now he has the opportunity to give the team owner his third straight Cup title, joining 2003 champ Matt Kenseth and reigning champion Kurt Busch.

"It takes three things to make these teams work," Roush said. "It takes a driver that can do it. It takes technology that is competitive and it takes a team that can.

"As much as I hate to admit it, it took me three years to get the team where it was able to do for Greg what we've been able to do with Mark (Martin), and for Matt and for Kurt."

The last two years have been frustrating for the impatient Biffle. He has openly criticized the team at times, something that usually doesn't endear a driver to his crew or team hierarchy.

The speculation has been that Biffle, in the final year of his contract, would not be rehired by Roush. He has been mentioned as the front-runner for just about every other possible ride next year.

But Biffle insists he isn't going anywhere.

"Because I'm on a list to drive somebody else's car doesn't mean that they've talked to me," Biffle said.

Asked if that means he plans to stay with Roush's No. 16 Ford team, Biffle said, "Yes, absolutely. There isn't any question about it and there hasn't been this year. We're working on just finalizing some things."

Greg Biffle is making major moves on the NASCAR Nextel Cup circuit.

The scene is Burke Lakefront Airport. The event is the Grand Prix of Cleveland. And all the hard work Bruno Junqueira put in during the off-season is about to pay off.

As he gets ready to race on the 2.106-mile temporary street circuit off Lake Erie, an event he calls the 'Champ Car series' toughest, Junqueira has time to reflect on the 6:30 a.m. wake-up call; the 50-mile bike rides near his Miami home; the Pilates sessions; the running, the weight training.

"It's very hot," Junqueira said. "The temperature is around 100. There's high-speed corners. The lateral G-forces are incredible. It's the toughest track of the year. The steering wheel gets heavy because the track has a lot of grip. It makes your muscles work harder and the temperature makes it harder."

The fifth-year driver for Newman-Haas Racing, the runner-up in the series points three straight years, shed about eight pounds from his 5-foot-7, 148-pound frame in the race last July. The seven-time race winner is convinced his car is tougher to race than a NASCAR vehicle.

"Oh, yeah," he told The Associated Press in a telephone interview. "Our car is maybe not as hot (as NASCAR) but it is 50 times harder to drive. It's very intense. I think during a NASCAR race you lose water. (In our series) you burn a lot of fat. Our heart rate is high."

Junqueira, a 28-year-old Brazilian, estimates he burns a half-pound of fat during those summer races.

"I think you need to be in really good shape," he said. "The car is hard to drive. At Long Beach, we shifted 3,500 times.

It's harder than people imagine."

And Junqueira is a firm believer that diet goes a long way in giving him a competitive edge on the track.

"I think it's important for everybody to eat healthy," said Junqueira, whose No. 2 car is sponsored by PacificCare. "Eat the right food and at the right time. Especially in racing, we spend a long time without eating. You have to have good balance to keep a good strength level throughout the race."

"It's really important to eat good carbs like pasta, rice and potatoes as a source of energy. I eat lean protein, which helps my muscles recover. And good fats as well — olive oil and almonds, especially when you work out."

NASCAR Nextel Cup driver Kyle Petty is not one to disagree with Junqueira when comparing the difficulty in driving in the two series.

"I don't think fitness has got, in this sport, like it has in open wheel," Petty told The AP in an e-mail interview. "In Formula One and other open wheel series, it's an important part of what they do. I don't think we've seen that here in NASCAR."

Nonetheless, the 45-year-old Petty is an avid runner, especially after he broke his thighbone in 1991. After the fracture, he started out bike riding and gradually advanced to running. In fact, he and fellow NASCAR driver Michael Waltrip recently did a marathon in Las Vegas to raise money for Petty's Victory Junction Gang Camp, a summer home for chronically ill children.

"I think I run because you get to do it by yourself," he said. "I enjoy that part. When you are at the track you are just around so many people, and there are so many things going on, but running is something you do by yourself."

Petty believes NASCAR's old guard, including his father, Richard Petty, and Darrell Waltrip, didn't worry about staying in shape. They got by on guts, guile and talent. Now, with young stars such as Nextel Cup champion Kurt Busch and preseason title favorite Jimmie Johnson upping the competitive ante, some of NASCAR's aging stars have had to rethink their philosophy.

"Guys like myself, Dale Jarrett, Michael Waltrip, and us who are up and over 40 then, yeah, we are up working out trying to keep up with the 20- and 30-year-olds," said Petty, who drives the No. 45 Dodge Charger. "But I don't think (the younger drivers) are doing anything different today. A few of them might be lifting weights every now and then. A few of them might be running every now and then, but I don't think any of them are doing it on a hard effort like Mark Martin is."

Martin, the driver of the No. 6 Ford Taurus, is considered NASCAR's workout king. Now in his last full season, the diminutive Martin has set the standard. The 46-year-old, who is only 5-foot-6 and 135 pounds, has 34 series wins. He has even written a book, "Strength Training for Performance Driving."

"Mark is a good example of a guy who really works hard and is in great shape," Kyle Petty said.

One thing Petty and Junqueira agree on is a healthy diet and the importance of drinking plenty of fluids.

"I think a lot of these races, how you prepare nutritionally has become a habit," Petty said. "It's probably different for everyone. Yeah, you like to keep hydrated. We take vitamins, and that's a big boost too."

"I think it's just a habit that you get into after you've been doing it for so long," he continued. "You just want to keep hydrated. The summer races, and ones where they can get pretty hot, it's important. We can lose up to five pounds in a race in the heat. But a lot of these races are more mental than physical."

Though Petty believes the short tracks of Bristol and Martinsville are the circuit's toughest ovals, they pale in comparison to the road courses of Sonoma and Watkins Glen.

"I think they are physical," Petty said. "The reason I say physical is because you are dancing around in the car. You are on the gas, on the brake, you're shifting, you're turning, and you are doing a lot of stuff inside the car."

Not to be outdone is the Indy Racing League's IndyCar Series champion, Tony Kanaan, a fitness enthusiast who bikes and runs regularly. He hopes to do an Ironman triathlon competition later this year.

Jay Green, a California-based personal trainer, has worked with racers to strengthen the muscle groups they need to perform.

"There's a lot of reasons, mostly endurance issues to get through races," Green said in a telephone interview. "I ask, 'What got tired?' The neck gets tired because of a lot of G-forces around the corners."

Green, who has worked with sports car driver Rick Sutherland and drag racer Bob Rieger, said Rieger wanted to get stronger so his "body wouldn't fly apart."

"We work on things, what fatigued on him. The shoulders and neck get tired. We also did forearm work and legs to stabilize yourself in the car," Green said.

THROUGH MY EYES
A Spirit lives on

My Aunt Alice passed away last Friday. I was out of town and learned of her death just in time to attend the funeral services, but sadly, not in time to be of much comfort to my cousins in the days prior.

Kathy Prater
Lifestyles editor

When I think of my Aunt Alice, I think of gleaming hardwood floors and an immaculate home filled with good cooking, busy hands and open hearts. I think of fresh grown home produce and canned vegetables, aprons and dish towels. Aunt Alice was always busy in the days when my family and I would visit as I was growing up. In my mind's eye, I can see her now, sitting on a swinging lawn chaise, large aluminum pans all around her as her hands quickly, and expertly, "strung" and broke into bite-size pieces, green beans from her garden.

My aunt had many children - beautiful girls and handsome sons. She reared them to be hard working, honest and loyal people. In return, they grew up to bless her in many ways, with beautiful grandchildren, great-grandchildren and great-great grandchildren.

Her home has always been

POSTSCRIPT

Aging ungracefully

My washing machine died last summer.

Or, actually, I killed it. I tried to wash three quilts at one time.

These are not your regular sissy quilts made of wispy fabric with light foam in the middle. These were my grandmother's creations, made with pieces of denim and wool scraps and whatever she could find for the padding and lining.

These are the kinds of quilts you used to stay warm in a house where precious fuel was not wasted, no matter what the temperature.

These are the kinds of quilts folks joke about when they say somebody had to wake them up to remind them to turn over.

Dry, they're heavy. Wet, they're quadrupled heavy.

The old Maytag that my late Aunt Erie bought more than 20 years ago just couldn't hold up

Prestonsburg Woman's Club hosts annual spring luncheon

Springtime blooms and sunny skies provide the perfect backdrop for the Prestonsburg Woman's Club annual spring luncheon and this past Wednesday afternoon found Mother Nature fully cooperating as the community-minded ladies got to work.

Donning aprons, smiles and positive attitudes, club members got to work stirring up homemade chicken salad, mandarin orange salad, rolls and devilishly delicious chocolate-walnut iced brownies.

For a mere $5 a plate, community members were treated to a palate-pleasing luncheon, hand-delivered to their homes and work places. "Everything is homemade," said club member

Lillian Baldrige, who won the distinction of having sold the greatest number (65) of tickets for the annual fundraiser, proceeds of which go to support the club's largest annual endeavor, Christmas in the Park, held each year in mid-December at Archer Park.

THINGS TO PONDER

Adjusting to change

By Dr. Mable Rowe Lineberger, Ph.D.

Change. Change of habits. Change of routines. "Can't do it the usual way anymore, it has to be done this way. Starting now!" People are such creatures of habit. Once you become set in doing something one way, you tend to resist changing to another way. In addition, it is not unusual for reason to be overpowered by emotional resistance sometimes. You might end up defending what you are doing and thinking about with great passion. Then, the other side of the story might be told by an observer that wonders why in the world someone would act in such a manner

BUT, imagine how you might feel after you made the necessary appropriate changes.

Even though humans, like most every other organism, are "creatures of habits," things change, whether we like it or not. A major contributing factor in how you adjust to change is time. The faster you or others try to push you to change, the more difficult it becomes for you to do so and the more difficult you are likely to be with others. Besides, since habits are hard to change, there are concerns when a change occurs quickly, such as whether or not the change has "staying power." With regards to time and making significant adjustments, you need to accept that completing major life changes, such as retirement, bereavement, or marriage break-up, are likely to take from two to five years.

Similar to any other source of distress, your first priority is to recognize your need to make changes, plus recognizing your natural resistance to do so. It is thought that you are not likely to change much, if it were not for the changes in life that you cannot control. However, with each adaptation, there is the "opportunity to grow and make reasonable changes." You also need to keep in mind that change for change's sake is foolish, doing different because that is what others are doing, such as with fashion and bureaucracies. When you have that inner feeling that you just cannot face adjusting to change and you dig in your heels into being resistant consider the following four questions: (1) Is my resistance partly a normal resistance of not liking change? (2) What are my subjective (personal) feelings and emotions about the change? (3) What are the objective facts about the change? (4) What are the possible advantages and gains from the change?

As discussed above, adjusting to changes takes time. It has been found that people typically adjust to change in stages, similar to how they cope with death or other losses in life. The first reaction to change frequently is fear, which is viewed as a "good thing" in that the fear increases alertness and forces you to think more clearly. Then, the other stages follow, such as resistance, compliance, acceptance, and eventually support for the change.

Family Medicine

Medication, hand-cleanliness keys to treating pinworms

Martha A. Simpson, D.O., M.B.A.
Associate Professor of Family Medicine

Question: My cat was recently treated for worms. Then my 6 year-old son got pinworms, which required treatment. He must have gotten them from the cat since we are very clean people. Should I get rid of my cat?

Answer: Pinworms or thread worms — known to the medical world as "Enterobius vermicularis" — are the most common type of human worm infestation in the United States. This infestation is most often seen in children between the ages of 5 and 14. These worms belong to a class of critters known as helminthes, most of which are parasitic. The specific pinworm variety, however, only lives in humans, so they did NOT come from the cat. Your cat must have had a different type of parasitic worm.

Pinworms eggs are infective almost as soon as they are laid. The life cycle of the pinworm starts when a human swallows pinworm eggs. The eggs hatch just below the stomach in the duodenum. The larva then move on to the small intestine, where they mature into adult pinworms. Their next stop is the large intestine, or bowel. While living in this habitat, the female moves at night to the rectal area and lays her eggs. A single female can lay up to 15,000 eggs each night. These are invisible to the naked eye and become infective in about 6 hours.

The eggs contaminate hands, sheets, bed clothing, rugs, and counter tops, and use the dust in your house to travel widely. Humans pick up these infective eggs, then contaminate food they pick up or bite their own fingernails, and the pinworm cycle continues. Eggs can survive on contaminated surfaces for up to two weeks. They are highly contagious.

The primary symptom is itching in the rectal area — sometimes quite severe. The female worms can be easily seen with un-aided vision in the rectal area. At night, children may become restless, cry and complain of itching in the anal area.

The treatment for pinworms is a chewable prescription medication that sometimes is repeated in two weeks. There are also some over-the-counter medications, but you should check with your doctor before treating your children with these products. Many doctors recommend treating other members of the household even if they have no symptoms.

Once the infestation has begun in your home, it is important to help break the cycle by destroying as many eggs as possible. Here are some tips to help do that: Change bed linens and underwear every morning. Take sheets and clothing straight to the washing machine for a hot water wash, being careful not to shake them. Open curtains and let the sun shine in to help to kill the sun-sensitive eggs. Avoid putting your hands into your mouth, especially nail biting.

Hand cleanliness is mandatory. Wash your hands thoroughly before meals and after using the toilet. You should keep your nails short, and clean them regularly with a nail brush. This will eliminate a place for the eggs to hide. Wet wiping food preparation surfaces prior to preparing meals can also help.

Once the pinworm infestation has been controlled, you should turn your focus to prevention. Continuing to practice good hand cleanliness and the other measures I've mentioned will make another bout with pinworms less likely. But, you'll be relieved to know, the cat can stay.

Postscript

Under the load, and especially on my unlevel utility room floor.

In the way it is with families, a few months ago, my cousin Malt replaced her aging washer and dryer set with a newer set that had belonged to her sister Peewee who died last spring.

Malt then passed her washer and dryer to me, but I had to wait a few months until her brother Randal and I could get our schedules to mesh, so he could do the hauling and installation.

Last Sunday, it happened. Randal came over from London with his wife Cathy to help Malt with mowing and to set out some garden goodies.

Late in the afternoon, he, Cathy and Malt delivered the new-to-me appliances.

All of this to talk about Shadow, the dear little dog Malt dotes on and takes just about everywhere she goes.

We don't know for sure how old Shadow is. He was adopted in the early 1990s by my Uncle Dan's son Michael, when Michael's son Ryan was a boy. Uncle Dan has since died and Ryan has grown up.

Something about Shadow touched my cousin Fred, who adopted the tyke from Ryan and brought him home to Kentucky from Ohio about 1993 or thereabouts.

Fred rearranged his life for Shadow, and I'm sure the cute little black terrier saved Fred from some of his demons more than once.

When Fred died in 1998, just a few months after my mother, his sister Malt inherited Shadow.

We know Shadow is at least 15, probably more. He's always been extremely active, an incessant fetcher, a tireless walker on the mile-long trip up the holler that once belonged to my aunt and uncle, then to Fred and now to Malt.

But over the past year or so, he's slowed down considerably. He breathes with more difficulty, he takes coughing spells, he doesn't chase the rubber newspaper as far, and he has little interest in going all the way up the holler.

He has arthritis, which is eased somewhat with a daily aspirin, but still he winces when you touch him the wrong way. Last summer he gave me a pretty severe bite on the hand when I lifted him into my car to take him home with me for a few days while Malt went to Ohio to take care of some business. I still have a noticeable scar.

Sunday, he managed to get into Randal's truck and come with the family to my house with the washer and dryer. He managed to follow my Ben and Daisy around the house a couple of times and to join in their threats to train crews and passersby.

But getting back into Randal's pickup was another matter. He simply could not garner the strength to hop up into the high truck. Attempts to help him were met with a fierce growl and memories of my own swollen, infected hand.

We tried to fashion a ramp, but he never got the hang of it. We put a cement block where he could step up, but he was so frustrated he wouldn't use it.

Randal finally got him in the truck by putting a floor mat under him and lifting him quickly amid yelps of pain.

He looked at us with such profound confusion. Why would his legs not work? Why did it hurt to be helped?

We were all near tears as we tried to encourage this once-feisty, always active friend. We knew that all too soon Shadow will be only a memory.

But, oh, what a fine memory. No regrets.

Ponder

Now, that you know that you HAVE to make a change, whether or not you want to, and you have a personal aversion to change, a suggestion was that you are more likely to become comfortable with change by taking "baby steps." Examples might be sitting in a different seat at the dinner table or driving to or from work by a different route. Change within the workplace is apt to result in stress, anger, and low morale. During the time needed for adaptation, employees also need a safe place to express themselves. Remember that feelings of anger need to be expressed or they linger and result in other problems.

An author (Maureen Burns, Run with Your Dreams and Forgiveness—A Gift You Give Yourself) referred to four ways individuals can use to cope with change. (1) Attitude – this is when you maintain an open mind, being prepared to "stretch" (do something different). We can all do more than we think we can if we stretch. Individuals tend to be most successful with the process of change when they expect the best, lead by example, and have faith in themselves, thus creating a the positive attitude. (2) Self – Remind yourself of the previous crises that you dealt with successfully, when you feel insecure about upcoming changes. Typically, we tend to not give ourselves enough credit. (3) Supportive people – Since negative people and negative thinking is prone to bring your feelings down, enclose yourself with supportive people and avoid the negative others. (4) Stress reducers – Take charge of your life and increase those qualities that are more apt to reduce stress, such as routine exercise, reasonable nutrition, relaxation, and adequate sleep.

There are also other coping strategies that are helpful in adding to the probability of making successful adjustment to change, with the goal being increased problem solving skills and a healthy expression of emotions. Lower your expectations of the situation. Try to be flexible in your view of the state of affairs and attempt to see more than one side. Identify any self-beliefs that might be harmful, such as "asking for help is a weakness," and make an effort to change them. Learn to perceive crises as a chance to learn and grow. Perceive setbacks as temporary instead of permanent. Utilize spiritual or religious values to provide meaning and context. By all means, learn to see the humor in situations and to laugh at yourself. Express any distressing emotions to a supportive person or by writing a journal.

Finally, do not forget that adjustment to change is a process and you are not going to take care of all the details overnight. Expect the changes to take time and patience, especially for major life ones. If you just cannot shake the disruptive feelings created by the need to change, seek professional psychological services. Sometimes there are other issues that are interfering with you getting on with the show.

Science Olympiad a success

by Rachele Burchett, BSCTC

The largest Regional Science Olympiad ever held at Big Sandy Community and Technical College took place on Saturday, March 12. Three hundred twenty five students converged on the Prestonsburg campus, after a snowy morning with a questionable forecast, to experience a wonderful day of science exploration.

"The Science Olympiad is an international nonprofit organization devoted to improving the quality of science education, increasing student interest in science and providing recognition for outstanding achievement in science education by both students and teachers. These goals are accomplished through classroom activities, research, training workshops and the encouragement of intramural, district, regional, state and national tournaments. The Science Olympiad tournaments are rigorous academic inter-scholastic competitions that consist of a series of individual and team events, which students prepare for during the year. The competitions follow the format of popular board games, TV shows and athletic games," states the official rules manual.

Students from Allen Central Middle School, Allen Elementary School, Betsy Layne Elementary School, Holy Family School in Ashland, Mountain Christian Academy, Paintsville Independent Middle School, Allen Central High School, Betsy Layne High School, Morgan

County High School, Paintsville Independent High School, Prestonsburg High School and the Piarist School gathered to compete in the Science Olympiad. Winners qualifying for state competition were: busy with the bustlings of a large family and I know that my aunt has spent a lifetime enjoying every minute of it.

Eyes

When I think of the word "farm," I think of Aunt Alice and Uncle Earnest. They kept livestock, raised chickens, tended to large gardens and thanked God each day for the bounty they received.

The world today isn't making too many people like Aunt Alice and Uncle Earnest. I'm thankful that I had them as role models as I was growing up. They leave behind a legacy of honor, love and many warm hearts to carry on.

A while back, my cousin, Phyllis, shared with me a beautiful poem she had written about her mother. We put it in the paper so that Aunt Alice would have the pleasure of seeing it while she was still with us. I am running it again today, because I think it sums up my aunt's life much better than any words that I could string together ever would.

Mama

By Phyllis P. Dotson

My Mother was a forceful River, she gave her very heart and soul. She was a mountain woman and my Dad, he mined the Coal. She gave birth to ten children and all but one was born at home. The pain she endured, and she endured it all alone. She gave to her family all that she had. We had plenty, we were never really sad. We were born back in the mountains, where we lived a poor man's way. We never did go hungry, not even for one day. My Mother knows that she is leaving, to a Home she has talked about. It will be sad when she is gone, but she will be with Dad, no doubt. Her Spirit will live on and the River still will flow, for I am a part of Mama. And she is in my Soul.
