Thieves interrupt telephone service

Many residents in East Kentucky are finding themselves without phone service due to thieves stealing telephone facilities.

Over the past six months, there have been a string of thefts that left many residents out of service. BellSouth and the Kentucky State Police have been working together to locate and apprehend those who are responsible.

According to BellSouth Security Manager Bernie Ubben, "This is a very dangerous act for both the perpetrator and for the general public. We just want to find out who is responsible for this so that we can put a stop to it, and continue to provide our customers with the best service possible."

If you have information that could aid in the investigation of these crimes, contact Det. Adkins with the Kentucky State Police at (606) 433-7711.

Spurlock files against Fannin; Hereford bows out

by TOM DOTY
STAFF WRITER

PRESTONSBURG — The fall campaign picture changed dramatically Monday, as one candidate dropped out to clear a path for another to challenge Prestonsburg Mayor Jerry Fannin in November.

A press conference scheduled Monday by Burl Wells Spurlock saw him announce his plan to run for mayor. The conference, which followed his filing, was held in front of the courthouse and saw one surprise when mayoral hopeful Tom Hereford introduced Spurlock and noted that he was dropping out of the race and throwing his support behind the First Commonwealth Bank chairman.

Spurlock, who was flanked by family and city council member Gorman Collins, indicated his platform would focus on the long-term development of the city of Prestonsburg as it enters its third century.

"From my perspective, the issue is leadership," he said as he addressed supporters after filing.

Spurlock said that in order for the city to reach its full potential in a projected 25 years, business and government would need to work together. He noted that the city needs to focus on housing and business opportunities and said, "We

Wal-Mart celebrates win with $15,000 donation

by TOM DOTY
STAFF WRITER

PRESTONSBURG — Wal-Mart hosted a customer appreciation day Tuesday to thank area shoppers for helping the outlet raise over $15,000 to fight hunger as part of a national contest to raise money for food pantries.

The contest ran all through the month of March and no one was more surprised that the Prestonsburg store raised the most money in the national contest than assistant manager Scott McPeck, who was put in charge of the effort by store manager Mike Hubert.

"We set out to best the Paintsville location," McPeck said, "and it just kept building, thanks to the generosity of our customers."

The contest featured several incentives for stores to compete, with bonus checks offered for area food banks to the stores that could win their region. McPeck soon realized that his location was not only winning the region, which includes stores in Kentucky and Indiana, but was poised to take first place in the country by mid-March. The news spurred the store on and customers responded.

To celebrate the win, the store held the appreciation day on Tuesday, which saw cake and drinks given out to customers, as well as door prizes which consisted of 20 gift cards, for $25 each, given out

City makes new offer for HRMC annexation

by TOM DOTY
STAFF WRITER

PRESTONSBURG — A special called meeting of the Prestonsburg city council on Monday saw an update of the city's plan to annex the Highlands Regional Medical Center into the city limits.

City attorney Jimmy Webb reported that Highlands and Consolidated Health Systems appear poised to accept a proposed agreement for annexation which would see both sides drop out of a pending lawsuit contesting the annexation.

Under the proposed agreement, the hospital would be recognized as nonprofit, which would see the hospital avoid property and insurance tax.

A tax would be levied against staff and Webb used a model of someone who earns $500 a week as an example to show how the tax would be implemented. The staff person would be charged 1 percent of his or her pay in the first year, with that rate increasing by 1 percent for five years, at which time they would be paying out $7 of every $500 earned in tax to the city.

Council members noted that the arrangement would benefit the city by raising revenue for projects the city has wanted to get started for years, which include a water park, YMCA and

Well-wishers chip in to give famous Pike soldier a dream wedding

PRESTONSBURG — On Nov. 10, 2004, the bloody, dirty, sweaty and weary-eyed photo of a neighboring Pike County Marine stationed in Iraq was plastered on about 100 front pages of newspapers and the cover of Time magazine, and was dubbed "the best war photograph in recent years" by Dan Rather.

The famous photograph taken in Fallujah and dubbed the "Marlboro Man" made national news and a following for James Blake Miller and his well-being by multitudes worldwide.

It was the care and kindness of a California couple of this Marine and his wife Jessica that brought Time magazine, Inside Edition, the San Diego Chronicle, Los Angeles Times and local media to record the reality of a dream of having a "real" wedding this past Saturday at Stonecrest Golf Course in Prestonsburg.

Eunice Davis of California had read an article about the young Pike Countian assigned to the 1st Battalion, 8th Marine Regiment of the 2nd Marine Division and both she and her husband Ron's hearts went out to the young couple who had married without getting the wedding of their dreams.

The Davises decided to contact the Pike County Chamber of Commerce, which in turn put them in contact with Michelle Sword and Missy McCoy, own-

Mine workers giving conflicting testimony, miner rep says

by SAMIRA JAFARI
ASSOCIATED PRESS

PIKEVILLE — Some witnesses who worked at a southeastern Kentucky mine where an explosion killed five men have given conflicting testimony about the safety measures taken underground, according to a miner representative who has sat in on private interviews.

A panel of mine safety investigators, company officials and miner representatives, who are privately interviewing the employees of Kentucky Darby Mine No. 1 in Harlan County, have focused the federal investigation largely on underground gas levels and protective seals designed to contain combustible and poisonous gases in the mine.

State officials say they believe methane, a naturally occurring gas in mines, fueled the May 20 blast. What ignited the blast is still unclear.

Attorney Tony Oppegard, a miner representative, said Monday the witnesses have given varying testimony on some safety issues, including the metal straps used as underground roof supports. While some say the straps stretched from the active area of the mine to sealed-off areas containing a build up of methane, others have denied it, he said.

"There is inconsistency in testimony among witnesses as to whether or not there were metal roof straps," Oppegard told the Associated Press in a telephone interview from Harlan, where the interviews were conducted.

The concern is that the metal straps can create a gap between the seal and the roof, allowing methane to spill into the active areas, he said.

"If you have a strap, it may prevent you from having the seal fit snugly under the roof," said Oppegard, former general counsel to the state mine regulatory agency.

Another problem is that metal is a conductor of heat and energy. If an energy source — for example, a welding torch — heated a metal strap that stretched behind a protective seal, it could potentially ignite the methane behind the barrier.

Whether the miners killed by the blast were using some sort of torch or other ignition device has not been disclosed by investigators.

Three of the victims — Bill Petra, Paris Thomas Jr. and Roy Middleton — died of carbon monoxide poisoning while two more, Jimmy Lee and Amon "Cotton" Brock, were killed in the blast. One miner, Paul Ledford was rescued.

The employees were also questioned last week in private interviews as part of the state's separate investigation from the U.S. Mine Safety and Health Administration. Several of them also said the interviews focused on the seals and how they were built.

The federal interviews are scheduled to continue in Harlan on Tuesday.

Fletcher taps Rudolph as new running mate

by BRUCE SCHREINER
ASSOCIATED PRESS

LOUISVILLE — Gov. Ernie Fletcher quickly filled a political void Saturday by naming state Finance Secretary Robbie Rudolph as his running mate for his 2007 re-election campaign after being spurned by his lieutenant governor.

The Republican governor, interrupting a Florida vacation to tend to the political upheaval, vigorously touted his accomplishments in office and vowed to press forward in the face of his indictment as part of an investigation into whether his administration based personnel decisions on political considerations.

"I'm very excited about running and I've got the fire in the belly to do it and we're going to get it done," Fletcher told reporters after speaking to a state Republican gathering that gave him series of standing ovations.

It was Fletcher's first public appearance in Kentucky since Lt. Gov. Steve Pence told him recently he would not be part of the governor's ticket next year and then turned down Fletcher's request that he step down as second in charge.

Pence also spoke at the state GOP central committee meeting Saturday and then looked on as Fletcher introduced Rudolph as his possible successor.

"I'm absolutely honored to be with my friend, Gov. Ernie Fletcher," said Rudolph, who ran as part of a slate that lost to the Fletcher-Pence team in the 2003 GOP primary but has since become part of Fletcher's inner circle.

Rudolph told reporters that he and Fletcher make a "great working team."

"We agree on almost everything — quite frankly I can't think of anything we do disagree on," he said.

The race will be the 50-year-old Rudolph's second attempt at winning the lieutenant governor's office. He served as a running mate to former Jefferson County Judge-Executive Rebecca Jackson in 2003 in the Republican primary.

Rudolph, founder and owner of a Murray wholesale tire company, later served on Fletcher's transition team before being tapped to head the Finance Cabinet.

Rudolph told reporters Saturday that he would likely step down as finance secretary to avoid any potential conflicts in awarding state contracts. But, Rudolph said, he would remain a part of the governor's inner circle.

Rudolph called Pence a friend but said he thought Pence should leave the administration. "I think it would be best that he would resign," Rudolph said.

Fletcher said he called a number of supporters to ask about his choice for a running mate. They expressed overwhelming support for Rudolph, Fletcher said.

Fletcher, asked if Rudolph, a wealthy businessman, will dip into his own funds to help bankroll the campaign, replied, "I don't think that will be necessary."

Jefferson County GOP Chairman Jack Richardson IV said afterward that Rudolph was a "logical choice" as a key member of Fletcher's administration.

"Robbie's been there through a lot of the tough times, so I'm sure that there's been developed a certain degree of loyalty there," he said.

Asked if Fletcher helped himself with fellow Republicans with his appearance, Richardson said, "I think he gave a powerful and impassioned speech, but we'll just have to see."

Fletcher, Kentucky's first Republican governor since 1971, was indicted recently on misdemeanor charges alleging he broke state law by rewarding political supporters with state jobs after he took office.

Last summer, he issued a blanket pardon for anyone in his administration who might face charges in the probe — except himself.

Since a Franklin County special grand jury began its work last June, it has returned 29 indictments in the case — 14 of which remain sealed.

In his speech to the GOP gathering Saturday, Pence repeated that he intended to remain in office until the end of his term. He said he planned to be a working lieutenant governor but didn't specify what he would be doing. Pence also has said he would sever his duties as head of the state's Justice Cabinet.

Pence, a former federal prosecutor, said he had no plans to run for office.

"It has been one of the greatest honors and privileges of my life, governor, to serve as lieutenant governor," Pence said.

On Saturday, Fletcher and Pence shook hands briefly before the GOP meeting began but sat three rows apart. Pence spoke just before Fletcher.

Fletcher wouldn't offer details of his conversation with Pence when the lieutenant governor informed him by telephone that he wouldn't be on the ticket next year. Fletcher described the discussion as "cordial."

"We have some disagreements, but that doesn't mean that we still can't be friends and cordial," Fletcher said.

Fletcher said he does not expect to have a Republican opponent in his re-election bid next year and cited the rousing response he got from the Republican crowd just a few minutes earlier.

"We've had some very difficult times," Fletcher told reporters. "Clearly that's going to generate some discussion, but I don't think there's anything serious there."

Jeff Hoover, the Republican state House leader, was among those who stressed unity for a party that has eclipsed once-dominant Democrats in Kentucky. Republicans control both U.S. Senate seats, all but one U.S. House seat, the state Senate and have closed the gap

State embracing higher education

It's easy to complain about the status of postsecondary education in Kentucky. The number of Kentuckians age 25-64 with bachelor's degrees is far less than the national average. In 2004, the number was 18.8 percent, compared with 29.1 percent nationwide, according to U.S. census figures, as reported recently in the Lexington Herald-Leader. In a rapidly changing, technology-based world, lack of postsecondary training dulls Kentucky's ability to compete and thrive. ...

Kentucky is trying to match the national figure of 32 percent of adults with bachelor's degrees projected for 2020. Improving by 14 percentage points in 14 years will be a daunting task, requiring that this state's public and private colleges and universities dramatically increase the number of graduates they are producing each year and keep it up for a long time.

Can it be done? Based on what we've seen this month on the campuses of Kentucky's public universities, it seems quite possible.

To say the least, May produced a bumper crop of college and university graduates across Kentucky. And even if the big class of '06 turns out to be an unsustainable anomaly, it has to be encouraging because of the sheer interest Kentuckians are showing in higher education.

Seven of the eight public universities increased the number of degrees they awarded compared with last year, a 12.3 percent jump overall. Five years ago Kentucky public universities awarded just more than 14,000 degrees and other credentials. This year the number was nearly 24,000. That's a 68 percent increase in five years and a 20 percent increase from 2005 to 2006.

Western Kentucky University ... led the 2006 boom with an astounding 27.6 percent increase in degrees awarded, continuing the school's pattern of rapid growth this decade.

The state report on degrees granted underlines the huge contribution the state's community and technical college system is making to higher education. This spring Kentucky Community & Technical College System schools had a 31.6 percent increase in associate's degrees, certificates and diplomas compared with 2005. ...

Kentucky will have to average a 4.5 percent annual increase in bachelor's degrees to meet the 2020 goals. If 2006 is any indication, it is within reach because Kentucky citizens appear to be getting the message about the vital importance of higher education.

Daddy's girl

by KELLY HAMPTON

PROUD DAUGHTER OF CLYDE HAMPTON

I had the wonderful experience of joining my dad for his 50th year high school reunion Memorial Day Weekend. We've always been close and this weekend only confirmed the wonderful father, friend and mentor he is. I am so very proud to be his daughter.

He was a 1956 graduate of Martin High School in Floyd County, Kentucky. He in Martin, a small coal mining town in southeastern Kentucky, the son of a coal miner, and one of 8 children. My dad started earning money before he started high school. He helped support his family by delivering groceries and newspapers and any odd jobs he could find to earn money. To this day, he is still driven and his work ethic is still going strong having started his own business at age 64.

At the reunion, I learned some things I didn't know about my dad; when he could have attended his senior trip, he stayed home and worked at the theater and let his sister go to Washington D.C. instead.

Every graduate of the class of '56 got up and talked a little about their lives. My dad talked about his wife, Ella Jane, children, Kelly, Steve and Kim, and his grandchild, Tylor, (his pride and joy); he talked about his tire business and his love of the Buckeyes.

But when he was finished, I thought there was so much he didn't say.

He didn't say how generous and kind he was. Or how he helps those in need and gives opportunities to those who can't find a job. He didn't mention all the sacrifices he made raising his children on his own after my mother moved away or how he has always been there for his children. He didn't mention that he is more technically savvy than most men half his age and he loves having the latest for his desktop, iPod and Blackberry. He didn't say how much his kids look up to him and thinks he does the job of a hundred dads. He didn't say that his oldest, me, is who she is today because of him. And when his classmates said that I was exactly like him, I thanked them. After all, I am a daddy's girl.

Share the gift of summer reading

by GLENNA FLETCHER

FIRST LADY OF KENTUCKY

Some of my earliest memories of my childhood are of our trips to our public library. I can remember it well—walking up the steps to the Lexington Public Library. I remember looking up at all the books and being overwhelmed at where to begin, but looking forward with anticipation to what I would discover there.

Last year, over 122,000 children and teens in 113 counties across Kentucky participated in public library summer reading programs. Since 1981, these programs have motivated children to read books without the pressure to take tests or score points. It's an opportunity to read purely for pleasure. Recently, Kentucky has joined a consortium of 36 states which share the same summer reading theme. It is very exciting to know that Kentucky is part of a larger effort to generate a love of reading among our nation's young people. As First Lady of Kentucky, encouraging and promoting early literacy is one of my top priorities. I have traveled around the state promoting the Read to Achieve Act of 2005 and other reading initiatives, encouraging children to get excited about reading.

Reading is the gateway skill needed for academic success. Studies on summer reading show conclusively that the number of books read during the summer is consistently related to academic gains and that reading as a leisure activity is the best predictor of comprehension, vocabulary and reading speed. That is why summer reading programs are so important. They help children progress during the long summer months and they spark interest in reading.

This year the children's summer reading program theme is "Paws, Claws, Scales and Tales;" the companion program for teens is called "Creature Feature." Activities at libraries will feature pets both real and imaginary. Libraries will have opportunities not only to entertain children with stories and activities about beloved pets, like our two-year old West Highland white terrier Abby, but also to educate them about humane treatment of animals, responsible pet ownership, opportunities and careers for children who love animals, and about those non-pet animals helpful to humans in so many ways.

As a young girl, I remember long, hot summer nights, reading with the aid of a flashlight, to avoid keeping my little sister awake. Nancy Drew Mysteries were one of my favorites, but biographies about Kentucky pioneers were another area I loved. I remember reading about Ephraim McDowell—which might have sparked my later interest in nursing.

Books and reading can have a profound impact on a child's life. By our encouraging them, taking trips to the library, and reading together, a child's life can be changed. I credit my mom and dad with my love of reading; I now share that joy with my grandchildren through trips to the library and reading our favorite books together. Even our dog Abby joins in our fun. Reading opens the window to mystery and excitement, and this summer I am urging parents to encourage their children to maintain their reading skills while on summer vacation by participating in public library summer reading programs.

Summer library activities have the goal of promoting enjoyable, voluntary reading to help students of all ages maintain reading skills while on vacation. So I encourage Kentucky families to join their libraries' summer reading programs, read about favorite pet characters and live pets too, and enjoy the treasures of good books. I strongly believe that if we get the reading right, the rest will fall into place.

PEANUT BUTTER

What Two Can Do for You!

FAMILY FEATURES

Peanut butter has been a pantry staple in households for generations. While best known for its starring role in the classic peanut butter and jelly sandwich, it is also a nutrient dense food that can be used in a variety of dishes and snacks as part of a healthy lifestyle.

Just one serving of peanut butter — two tablespoons — provides eight grams of protein, two grams of fiber, 10 percent of the USDA Reference Daily Intake (RDI) of vitamin E and 12 percent of the RDI of magnesium. Additionally, the USDA's new MyPyramid recognizes the importance of varying dietary protein sources and suggests that peanut butter, along with nuts and other nut butters, may be substituted for meat or poultry in meals. Peanut butter is cholesterol free and contains zero grams of trans-fats per serving.

"When consumed as part of a balanced diet and exercise regimen, the dietary fat in peanut butter promotes satiety, or a feeling of fullness, a factor that can curb hunger and contribute to weight loss," according to Kelli Calabrese, Personal Fitness Professional's 2004 Personal Trainer of the Year for Online Training.

Today's grocery store is full of a wide variety of peanut butters to meet everyone's tastes and dietary needs, from crunchy to creamy, from sweetened to natural. For your next meal or snack on the go, open a jar of your favorite variety of peanut butter and see what two tablespoons can do for you.

For more ways to enjoy peanut butter, visit www.smuckers.com or www.jiff.com. For more fitness tips from Kelli Calabrese, visit www.kellicalabrese.com.

Eyes require special care during summer

With summer and warmer weather finally here, many think of days filled with sun and fun. While most of us are aware of the skin problems that can result from overexposure to ultraviolet (UV) rays and use sunscreen to protect ourselves, few know the harmful effects UV rays can have on our eyes.

"Excessive UV exposure has been associated with cataracts and other eye disease and damage, such as pterygium (tissue growth on the cornea that can block vision), degeneration of the macula (the part of the retina responsible for central vision) and skin cancer around the eyes," said Douglas Katz, M.D., assistant professor in the UK College of Medicine Department of Ophthalmology and Visual Sciences. Sure, you wear sunglasses, but that may not be enough. You are actually better off not wearing sunglasses than wearing sunglasses that have no protection. Pupils will naturally constrict in the sun, thus allowing less sun to get in; in contrast pupils open wider behind dark lenses, and you can actually do much more damage to your eye by wearing non-UV protected sunglasses.

Sunglasses that provide 99 to 100 percent UV-A and UV-B protection greatly reduce the amount of harmful rays that can reach the eye. Always look for the sticker on the sunglasses detailing their level of UV protection. If you are still unsure whether your sunglasses offer proper protection, take them to your optician to get tested for UV blockage.

People who have preexisting vision problems such as albinism and retinitis pigmentosa should be especially cautious, as they are more sensitive to glare. It is also important to remember to wear eye protection on overcast days, as clouds do not completely reduce UV levels.

"For these reasons, it is recommended that anyone who even spends a limited amount of time outdoors this summer use proper eye protection to reduce the risk of cataracts and other eye damage," said Katz.

Follow this practical advice when you are outdoors:

■ Stay out of the sun during the hottest times of the day.

Wear sunglasses with complete UV protection

■ Protect the whole eye, by wearing close fitting sunglasses. To prevent radiation from reaching your eyes around the edges of the frames, wrap-around styles are best.

■ When applying sunscreen, use caution around the eyes. Sunscreen can dump into the eye causing irritation and even infection.

■ If you wear contacts, check for 99 to 100 percent UV-A and UV-B protection.

■ A brimmed or peaked hat can help with the sun and help reduce glare.

■ It is also important to remember that sunglasses are not the only eye wear needed in the summer. Many other summer activities require additional eye protection for safety. Safety glasses or goggles should be worn while trimming hedges, using a weed trimmer or lawn mower. Swimmers should also wear goggles to protect themselves from waterborne bacteria and potentially harmful swimming pool chemicals.

■ Allergy sufferers know that summer allergens including pollen and mold are at their highest levels. These allergens can irritate your eyes. If you suffer from redness and irritation, Katz advises talking to your pharmacist about some of the new and more effective eyedrops available over the counter. For chronic or acute sufferers, see a doctor about medicated products.

Summer is a great time to get outdoors with family and friends and enjoy the warm weather. A little bit of caution and prevention can help keep your eyes safe and healthy not only for the summer, but for a lifetime.

Fun in the sun holds major health threat for skin cancer

LEXINGTON — Dan Kenady enjoys summer as much as the rest of us, but he sees potentially threatening clouds where others see only sunshine.

"There's mounting evidence that one bad sunburn at any point in your life will dramatically increase the risk of melanoma, the most serious skin cancer," says Kenady, a physician at the University of Kentucky Chandler Medical Center and professor of surgery in the UK College of Medicine.

In fact, he says, about one out of every 85 Americans can expect to have melanoma sometime during his or her life — a percentage that has grown over time.

"These (cancers) are increasing because people are lying outside without sunscreen and without hats. Men definitely should wear hats when they are out in the sun because as they age they lose hair," Kenady says.

Kenady says there are three types of skin cancer that can result from too much exposure to the sun.

"As many as 65 percent of the folks who live to age 80 will get basal cell carcinoma, the most common type of skin cancer. This cancer strikes the basal layer of the skin and is usually very slow-growing. It can be treated with various methods, but if it is neglected, it can grow and sometimes be lethal," he says.

An intermediate skin cancer, squamous carcinoma, tends to be somewhat more aggressive.

The major danger is melanoma, usually a dark patch on the skin.

"If these are diagnosed when the melanoma is 'thin,' the patient will have a good prognosis for recovery," Kenady says. "But the thicker the melanoma gets, the more it can spread. And it can go into the bone and internal organs and cause death."

"All these cancers are related at least to some degree to sun exposure," he said.

Kenady encourages sunbathers and people who work in the sun to wear sunscreens with a sun protection factor (SPF) rating of at least 30.

"Thirty SPF will give you 30 times the protection of no sunscreen at all, and 45 SPF is even better," he says.

He urges people with red hair and light skin to use the higher-rated sunscreens, because they are more susceptible to damaging sunburns that can lay the groundwork for future skin cancers.

"I recommend that people stay out in the sun in short doses, and avoid going out in the middle of the day, when the sun's rays are at their strongest," Kenady said.

"If people get sunburns, they can get some relief by using moisturizing lotions like aloe. But when sunburns occur, you're going to damage some skin."

Ky. Chautauqua presents 'Price Hollowell, Black Patch War hero'

PIKEVILLE — When the Night Riders came to terrorize Price Hollowell's family during the Black Patch War in western Kentucky a century ago, one of them gloated, "We Night Riders fear no judge or jury." They eventually had to eat those words, thanks in great measure to 13-year-old Price, whose testimony in federal court proved crucial in winning a large judgment against the Night Riders who destroyed the Hollowells' farm and ran them out of Kentucky.

Ethan Sullivan Smith as Price Hollowell

Hollowell, Price's mother, ran a boarding house in Princeton and witnessed the raid there. She was so disgusted she went to the Caldwell County Grand Jury and named some of the 300 men who had attacked Princeton and blown up two independent warehouses.

That didn't sit well with the Night Riders. On the night of May 2, 1907, some 30 Riders raided the Hollowell Farm, shooting up the house and beating and whipping Robert and Mary Lou. One of the Rider's was Robert's brother John, who threatened to cut his nephew Price's throat.

The family fled to Oklahoma, but soon returned to Kentucky and hired a smart Paducah lawyer, John G. Miller, who advised them to go to Indiana and file a lawsuit against the Night Riders.

Because they filed out-of-state, the case was tried in federal court where the Riders had much less influence than they had in state courts. Nevertheless, a single juror with Association ties hung the jury in the first trial. The second trial, with a jury from the Louisville area, went better for the Hollowells. The Night Riders denied everything, even offering concocted alibis, but young Price's credible account of the raid, plus the testimony of an informant who had heard the Riders plan the raid, carried the day. Twenty-eight Night Riders were ordered to pay the Hollowells total damages of $35,000. The Planters Protective Association, with membership declining, officially collapsed in 1914.

The Kentucky Chautauqua performance is an exclusive presentation of the Kentucky Humanities Council Inc., with support from Toyota, People's Bank & Trust Company in Hazard, the Honorable Order of Kentucky Colonels, Brown-Forman Corporation and National City banks in Lexington and London. For more information on the June 7 performance at Pikeville College call 218-5704.

Smith, a high school student from Cynthiana, has been performing since he was six. He was a three-time state champion in public speaking and prose interpretation at the middle school level. His credits include the Georgetown Children's Theatre and the Kentucky On Stage series at Georgetown College.

The Black Patch War, so named because it occurred in the area of west Tennessee and western Kentucky where dark tobacco is grown, began in 1904. The cause was low tobacco prices, which were the product of two factors: the return to the gold standard, which depressed all agricultural prices, and the American Tobacco Company's monopolization of the tobacco market, which depressed prices even further. By 1904, American Tobacco, headed by James B. Duke was paying less for tobacco than it cost farmers to grow it.

Growers in the Black Patch responded by forming the Planters' Protective Association. Its strategy was simple — withhold tobacco from the market until better prices were offered. The Association managed to sign up about a third of the Black Patch's tobacco growers — 25,000 farmers attended an Association meeting in Guthrie, Ky., in 1906 — but American Tobacco fought back by offering high prices to farmers who were not part of the boycott. Some of these "nonpoolers" as they were called refused to cooperate with the Association on principle. One of the nonpoolers was Price Hollowell's father Robert, whose farm was in Caldwell County.

The Association's strategy did not work. American Tobacco refused to deal with the Association, whose members suffered financially. Frustrated, some of them resorted to violence, sometimes pitting neighbor against neighbor and brother against brother. Armed, hooded vigilantes — the Night Riders — raided the farms of nonpoolers, destroying tobacco fields and whipping their owners. There were even some murders. The Riders raided several towns and burned warehouses full of nonpooler tobacco. This is when the Hollowells got involved. Mary Lou

Eagles sign three players

TIMES STAFF REPORT

PIPPA PASSES - Alice Lloyd College men's basketball coach Gary Gibson has announced the signings of three area players for the 2006-07 season. Daniel Day (6-4, 185), a forward from Leslie County, signed with the Eagles Thursday. Day averaged 15 points, seven rebounds and three assists per game for Leslie County Coach Tim Sizemore and a very talented Eagle team that advanced to the semifinals of the 14th Region Tournament.

Day scored over 1,000 points in his high school career.

"Daniel will fit right in with the style that we play at ALC," said Gibson. "He has good size and quickness and he runs the floor well. He handles the ball well and he can score from inside and out on the floor."

On Friday, the Eagles signed Jordan Fugate, a guard from Jackson City High School. This past season, Fugate and his team advanced to the 14th Region Tournament finals. He aver-

Robinson out at Morgan

WEST LIBERTY - Floyd County native Donna Robinson won't be back to guide the Morgan County High School girls' basketball program. Robinson, who played locally for Allen Central High, coached the Lady Cougars for three seasons. In May, MCHS officials informed Robinson that she wouldn't be hired back to coach the Lady Cougars.

Morgan County looked to be on the right track last season. Despite finishing short of making it back into the 16th Region Tournament, Morgan County ended this past season with an 11-14 record. West Carter knocked the Lady Cougars out of the first round of the 62nd District Tournament.

Kentucky amateurs capture Cup again

Pikeville's Walters duo help lead way for Bluegrass team

SPECIAL TO THE TIMES

LOUISVILLE - The event title took on more than its share of meanings today at the 2006 Mobile ProShop Challenge Cup at Louisville Country Club. Not only were the state's top amateurs challenged by the state's top golf professionals but today's weather created a challenge to just get a chance to compete in this annual event.

Scheduled to begin at 8 a.m.

with four-ball matches and continue into the afternoon with singles matches, Mother Nature wouldn't cooperate and thus the event was modified to a 4-Ball Team event for 18 holes beginning at 1 p.m. Taking a strong lead for the KGA Amateurs was defending Kentucky Open Champion Cale Barr and KGA-PGA Junior Player of the Year Karsten Clements. With Barr making eight or nine birdies, they closed out their match on hole No. 16 and posted a 3&1 victory over Louisville PGA Professionals Greg Basham and Ted Beckmann. The following match pitted current Florida State standouts Matt Savage and Bradley Ruch against KPGA

Senior Player of the Year Eddie Mudd and Lincoln Trail CC PGA Pro Steve Cox. The amateurs again opened with strong showings and were 4 up at the turn before closing their opponents out on hole No. 15 at 4&3.

In what may be the first of its' kind pairings, father and son were sent out to compete against a former Kentucky Open Champion and a former tour pro. Pikeville's own Bruce G. Walters and son Bruce Walters II took a 3&2 victory away from 2002 Champion Grant Sturgeon and Wildwood CC PGA Pro Ken Postlewait. That match guaranteed the return of the cup to the KGA Amateur

Two days after helping Powell County to the 14th Region championship, Pirate Keenan Muncie signed a scholarship to play baseball and continue his educational opportunities with Pikeville College. The Bears just finished their 12th season under former Major League shortstop Johnnie LeMaster, a native of Paintsville, with a third-place finish in the Mid-South Conference tournament. Muncie was the winning pitcher in Powell's 12-7 win over Perry Central in the 14th Region semifinals. One day later, they knocked off Leslie County 5-4 for the regional title. Muncie and the Pirates will take a 23-12 record into next week's sectional tournament where they'll play for the right to play in the state tournament.

A wild night of racing at Florence saw Johnson win his Heat and bring home a 10th place finish in the 20th Annual Ralph Latham Memorial. The finish was good enough to net the Indiana native the Kentucky Speedweek Championship Trophy and Check as well as the guaranteed starting spot in the $50,000 to win/$1,500 to start North-South 100 at Florence Speedway Aug. 11-12

"This team worked hard all week," Johnson said after being crowned the Kentucky Speedweek Champion. "I have to thank my car owner, John Hall, for giving me this opportunity, as well as my sponsors Intimidator Race Cars, Pro Power Engines, Hall's Angus Farms, and J&H Construction."

Finishing second in the final Kentucky Speedweek points standings was defending Lucas Oil Late Model Dirt Series Rookie of the Year Scott James of Greendale, Ind. Third place honors went to defending O'Reilly NARA Battle of the Bluegrass DirtCar Series Co-Champion Mike Jewell of Scottsburg, Ind. The other defending O'Reilly NARA Battle of the Bluegrass DirtCar Series Co-Champion, Tim Tungate, of Campbellsville, would be fourth in the final points rundown. Rounding out the top five was Greenbrier, AR native Jack Sullivan and Campbellsville youngster Justin Rattliff, each with 450 points.

Reviewing the weeklong festivities, Mother Nature was victor three times during the week. Rain washed out the program at the Bluegrass Speedway on two separate occasions as well as the Friday night show at the Ponderosa Speedway. The Kentucky Speedweek began with Johnson's dominating win at the Kentucky Lake Motor Speedway on Monday, May 29. Following Johnson to the stripe in that event was Terry English, Brad Neat, Don O'Neal, and Tim Brown. After the back-to-back rainouts at Bluegrass, the Kentucky Speedweek rolled into the Richmond Raceway where Mike Jewell picked up a hard-fought win over Tim Tungate, Scott James, Greg Johnson, and Mike Marlar. With Friday night's program at the Ponderosa Speedway washed out, the Speedweek came to a thrilling close at the Florence Speedway with Scott Bloomquist's last lap pass of Darrell Lanigan with Dan Schlieper, Wendell Wallace, and 19th-starting Earl Pearson Jr. completing the top five. Over 100 different drivers competed in the Kentucky Speedweek events.

COLLEGE BASEBALL

Region finals: College of Charleston 7, UK 4

by JEFFREY McMURRAY ASSOCIATED PRESS

LEXINGTON — As a speed guy who'd only homered twice, Phillip Coker was under strict instructions from manager John Pawlowski: hit the ball on the ground, not in the air.
So much for that advice.
Coker's first-inning grand slam highlighted a two-out, six run rally as College of Charleston defeated Kentucky 7-4 Sunday night to win its first NCAA regional.
"Not something we teach, but something we'll take," Pawlowski said.
Coker is also taking the Cougars (46-15) to their first-ever super-regional this weekend against Georgia Tech for the right to advance to the College World Series. The Southern Conference tournament champs, seeded second, swept the Lexington regional by beating all three opponents — Notre Dame, Ball State and Kentucky.
Top-seeded Kentucky (44-

17) was eliminated after its finest season in which it set a school record for wins and captured a share of its first-ever Southeastern Conference regular-season title. The Wildcats had beaten Ball State earlier Sunday but needed to defeat Charleston both Sunday and Monday nights to advance.
Kentucky starter Aaron Tennyson (4-3) struck out the first two batters he faced Sunday night but imploded after that.
Eight consecutive Charleston hitters reached base and six of them scored — four on Coker's slam, his third home run of the year.
"You knew he's got to come with a fastball, but I was sitting on it," Coker said.
Larry Cobb contributed a solo shot in the inning and Graham Maiden got an RBI when he was hit by a pitch.
Tennyson didn't return for the second. It marked the first time since April 4, 2004, that the Wildcats had surrendered six runs in the opening inning.

Kentucky coach John Cohen said even though the inning "got away from us," he was confident the Wildcats would mount a comeback.
It didn't take Kentucky long to get back in it. Michael Bertram's first-inning ground-out gave the Wildcats their first run, and Antone DeJesus launched a three-run homer in the second to pull within two.
But after that, there were missed opportunities galore. Kentucky stranded a season-high 15 runners.
DeJesus had another prime RBI opportunity with the bases loaded in the third, but he struck out and Collin Cowgill flied out to get Charleston out of the jam.
Kentucky again loaded the bases — without a hit — in the seventh, but Sean Coughlin popped out to first to end the threat.
"We fought the whole way," Bertram said. "If we get a ball to fall here, a ball to fall there, who knows? The game could be completely different."

The Cougars scored the game's final run in the fourth when Alex Garabedian grounded into a double play. Garabedian was named the outstanding player of the tournament.
Garabedian's sacrifice bunt in the ninth was the 94th of the season for College of Charleston — a Southern Conference record.
Both teams got solid relief pitching. Quinn Monsma (7-2) allowed three hits and no runs in four-plus innings. Josh McLaughlin pitched the final two-plus innings for his 15th save.
"That's the bullpen's job," McLaughlin said. "If we're given the lead, our job is to keep it."
Zach Dials went eight strong innings for Kentucky, giving up eight hits and no runs.

tenure as head coach.
Graduation took away four of South Floyd's five starters. Gone are starters Ryan Johnson, Mason Hall, Ryan Little and T.J. Hall. Johnson, Mason Hall and Ryan Little were three of South Floyd's top four scorers last season. Johnson led the Raiders in scoring. Mason Hall paced South Floyd in both three-point and free-throw shooting.

Little ranked as the team's leading rebounder.
Ethan Johnson, South Floyd's other starter from last season, is returning for his senior season with the Raider basketball team.
Several underclassmen will have to step in and play for South Floyd during the 2006-07 season.
"Our younger kids worked real hard last season," said

South Floyd Coach Barry Hall. "They worked against our starters and other varsity players during practices all season."
South Floyd finished the 2005-06 season 14-15. The Raiders fell to Prestonsburg in the opening round of the 58th District Tournament.
South Floyd will attend the Georgetown College team camp June 8-11.

New contact lenses designed to give athletes an edge

by TERESA M. WALKER
ASSOCIATED PRESS

BRENTWOOD, Tenn. — When Camille Walters plays soccer, her normally brown eyes have a spooky red tint.

That's because the 15-year-old wears tinted contact lenses that block certain wavelengths of light and help athletes see better. Oh, and they look cool, too.

"It gives me more confidence because you feel intimidating and bigger and stronger, kind of an ego-booster," said Walters, who plays for Father Ryan, a Catholic high school in Nashville.

Walters and a growing number of other athletes are wearing the MaxSight lenses, which were developed jointly by Nike Inc. and contact lens maker Bausch & Lomb Inc.

The lens — large enough to extend a ring around the iris — comes in two colors: amber and grey-green.

The amber lens is for fast-moving balls sports, such as tennis, baseball, football or soccer. Grey-green is better for blocking glare for runners or helping a golfer read the contour of the ground.

Professional athletes tested the lenses last year before they were rolled out for general sales.

Golfer Michelle Wie and baseball players Ken Griffey Jr. and A.J. Pierzynski wear MaxSight lenses, along with members of Manchester United, the U.S. men's soccer team and the Texas Longhorns' football team.

"The bulk of the business we expect will be with the college, high school type athlete who is really looking for that edge," Nike spokeswoman Joanie Komlos said. "We've seen that sales are far exceeding our expectations, and we're going to continue to roll out distribution."

The sport lenses can be purchased only through a doctor's office at a cost of $80 per box, $160 if the prescription for each eye varies.

Dr. Jeff Kegarise, an optometrist whose office is in Brentwood, has already prescribed the lenses for college baseball players, golfers, equestrian riders and tennis players.

"The first reaction from the first two people I fit in this, they went outside and said, 'This is really cool. It's like wearing sunglasses outside,'" Kegarise said.

Even though the amber lens is intended for outdoor use, he has an Arena Football League player who used them indoors because of the bright lights.

Walters, who plays both for her high school and on a travel team, is farsighted and uses MaxSight prescription lenses, but they also come in a non-corrective version.

"It cut out some of the sun, so it wasn't as bright," Walters said. "It was easier to pick out where the ball was at times when it was in the air."

But does the MaxSight lens give some athletes an unfair advantage? The associations that govern high school and college sports don't think so, but they're keeping an eye on the lenses.

Jerry Diehl, assistant director of the National Federation of State High School Associations in Indianapolis, said his group doesn't believe the lenses provide the competitive advantage that Nike claims.

The federation allows the lenses and puts them in the same category as sunglasses or corrective lenses. The NCAA also allows the sports lenses because it considers them similar to sunglasses.

But Diehl said he's worried about the perception of an unfair advantage.

"If one affluent team can get this, it forces everybody else to go out and do that," Diehl said. "Is it really something that makes a difference? In this instance, at this juncture anyway, it doesn't seem to be any better or any worse than allowing what is already under the rule."

Dr. William Jones of Nashville said price will keep some athletes from buying the lenses, but he expects them to be popular on high school athletics teams in wealthier school districts.

Jones said his retired father wears the grey-green lens on the golf course and loves them.

"Most of these people, they're spending tons of money already on equipment, training and everything else. This is just a drop in the bucket for most of them; generally cost isn't much of an issue," Jones said.

Kenseth rallies with three laps left to win at Dover

by DAN GELSTON
ASSOCIATED PRESS

DOVER, Del. — One day after turning 30, Jamie McMurray came close to giving himself the perfect belated birthday gift: a trip to Victory Lane.

But Matt Kenseth spoiled the party.

Kenseth's decision to not pit on the final caution was a smart one, helping him zip past his Roush Racing teammate with three laps left to pull away Sunday and win at Dover International Speedway.

Crew chief Robbie Reiser wanted Kenseth to pit for fresh tires late in a race that had become marred by yellow flags. With three others in the hunt, Kenseth decided to stay out and take a risk that his tires were strong enough to hold up for the final, frantic laps.

The move paid off. "I just thought that was my only chance to win the race," Kenseth said. "I felt like that if we got four tires, we weren't going to get back up and win the race."

McMurray held the lead for most of the final 90 laps until the patient Kenseth made his move, passing Jeff Burton and Kevin Harvick late before the leader was firmly in view.

Kenseth reached McMurray in lapped traffic, raced side-by-side, then dipped low on a clean pass off the fourth turn to race to his second win of the season and 12th of his career.

"I knew I better finish pretty good, or it was going to be a long couple of months," Kenseth said.

The win earned him a small boost in the points standings. Kenseth sliced Johnson's lead from 109 points to 74.

"I never thought about the points at all today. We're thinking about winning races," Kenseth said. "It's early enough in the year. We're in a pretty solid position in the points."

Harvick finished third, followed by Burton and Kyle Busch. Jimmie Johnson maintained the points lead, finishing sixth after starting a season-worst 42nd.

Injured defending champ Tony Stewart completed 38 laps before Ricky Rudd replaced him. Stewart drove with a broken shoulder blade suffered last week at Charlotte, and had trouble lifting his right arm before he was eased into his car.

Stewart made a quick exit, lifting himself halfway out already unstrapped and with his helmet off before he was gently pulled out the rest of the way.

Stewart said he never felt comfortable and complained of some soreness.

"I feel like I got beat up," said Stewart, who fell a spot to fifth in the standings.

Rudd came out of a self-imposed, one-year break to race for the first time this season in the Nextel Cup series. He finished 25th, two laps off the lead.

"That was fun, sitting right there, being in the hunt and being able to run with some of those guys," Rudd said.

McMurray still finished with one of the best performances of his career. McMurray hasn't been in Victory Lane since winning his second career Nextel Cup race in October 2002.

"It's been a long time," McMurray said. "I thought I had him."

McMurray did record his second straight top-10 finish and jumped three spots to 15th in the points race.

"Making the chase is a huge deal," he said. "If we can run as well as we did today, we'll make the chase."

He surely needed the confidence boost. With McMurray struggling early in his first season with Roush Racing, owner Jack Roush ordered a shakeup designed to jump-start their struggling team. Bob Osborne, who was Carl Edwards' crew chief, took over McMurray's team and the move has seemingly paid off.

"What about Jamie McMurray? Was that not awesome today?" Roush said. "Jamie was certainly the underdog given the season he's had. Until Matt had passed Jamie, I was standing beside Bob Osborne in the 26 pit rooting for him as hard as I could."

Maybe not hard enough. Only 15 laps were run under caution through 269 laps, but that quickly deteriorated with six more cautions for 36 laps the rest of the way.

McMurray never stopped and took the lead on 302, and stayed out on the last yellow flag.

Kenseth, who started 19th, recorded his ninth top-10 finish and won for the first time since California in the second race of the season. He made his Nextel Cup debut at Dover in 1998 as a substitute for Bill Elliott.

"Everything just kind of went right for us," he said.

The current Commission member from the Eighth Wildlife District is Dr. Robert C. Webb, Grayson.

Cup

Team for 2006.

The last two matches were won by the KPGA Professional teams, but too little too late to change the outcome. OVC Coach of the Year Pat Stephens and Juniper Hills PGA Pro Kirk Schooley were able to outlast and take a 4&3 victory over reigning BellSouth State Amateur Champion Rick Cochran and former KGA Public Links Champion John Brooks.

Perhaps the finest performance of the day came from the last match of the day. Oldham County CC PGA Pro Russ Johnson found the newly renovated Louisville Country Club to his liking and posted several low scores including two eagles on the day. His partner and former Kentucky Open Champion Chris Osborne contributed to their 1 up victory over Western Kentucky University standout Robby Shaw and US Open local qualifier Jamie Frazier.

This marks the second straight year for KGA Vice President Sammy Levinson to pilot his team to victory. KPGA Vice President Mike Riley captured his first squad and came up only match short of his first victory. Many thanks to Louisville Country Club members and staff and to the tournament sponsor Mobile ProShop and representative Phil Armbruster.

Champion Supports & Services, Inc.

We are a privately owned and locally operated human services agency committed to providing quality support and services to individuals diagnosed with mental retardation and/or developmental disabilities. We are a Division of Mental Retardation Certified provider of SCL (Supports for Community Living) Waiver Services. Our primary service area is the beautiful hills of the Big Sandy Region; however, we do branch into locals as requested.

Champions out about Town and Making Music

On April 18, 2006, Kimberly Wilson (38), and Ronnie Joe Sword (24), achieved a previously set goal and a life-long dream. Each recorded a song at the Mountain Arts Center's recording studio along with the assistance of the MAC staff.

Kim belted-out and jammed to Toby Keith's, "What Happens in Mexico Stays in Mexico;" another resident wowed everyone with his rendition of Toby Keith's, "Honky Tonk U;" and Ronnie Joe stirred-up emotions when singing Alan Jackson's, "Monday Morning Church." Each of the individuals expressed that it was one of the "best days" of their lives and expressed much gratitude and appreciation of the Mountain Arts Center staff for their support, hard work and wonderful attitude!

What is SCL?

SCL is a Home and Community based Waiver-type program under the Kentucky Medicaid Program and is administered by the Division of Mental Retardation. SCL was developed in September 1997, for Kentucky residents as an alternative to institutional care and allow individuals with mental retardation and/or developmental disabilities to remain in or return to the community. This promotes community involvement and provides individuals with mental retardation and/or disabilities with the same opportunities as other Kentucky residents: The opportunities to be educated, live, work, worship, play, and socialize according to their own wants, needs, interests, and desires.

We believe:

All people are unique, therefore, it is necessary for supports and services to be individualized to meet their needs. The person is a person first and foremost—not a diagnosis or label.

KIM'S KORNER

Being a part of the Paparazzi

Saturday evening came with a flood of emotions. I was privileged to be invited, along with a select few, to Pike County's own "Marlboro Man" Blake Miller, and his wife Jessica's, renewal of their vows at Prestonsburg's Stone Crest Golf Course.

Kim Little Frasure

It was my first experience of feeling like a member of the Paparazzi. Alongside the likes of photojournalist Louis Sinco, from the Los Angeles Times, who captured the world's best photo of Blake in 2004 - the one that has appeared on Time magazine, and the front pages of newspapers and on television networks worldwide, as well as many others and a few, also, from right here at home.

Just as the pastor announced "Ladies and Gentlemen, I present Mr. & Mrs. Blake Miller," the most beautiful sunset imaginable began to take place.

As Blake and Jessica proceeded to the most perfectly picturesque spot on the mountain, those of us with camera's in hand scurried to get the perfect shot. It was such an amazing feeling. Only on TV do you actually witness

And the living was easy

Summertime was a wonderful time when I was a kid.

On those occasions when there were not enough boys my age around for at least a five-on-a-side baseball game, about all the rest of us could do was find us a spot in the dappled shade provided by the giant sycamore that had become our gathering place, and watch the girls play their little games, like hop scotch or jump rope.

Once in a while, one of the girls would mockingly invite us to join them, knowing full well that in a 1940s coal camp, a real man most definitely did no play girls' games.

Sometimes when they were jumping rope, they'd chant little rhymes, like, "Johnny on a steamboat, Johnny on the sea. Johnny broke a teacup and blamed it on to me. I told Ma and Ma told Pa, and Pa gave Johnny H...O...T!"

As they spelled the word "hot," they'd throw the rope as fast as they could, and the girl doing the jumping would see how long she could "stay in." Of course, we boys thought that was silly and poked fun when the jumper messed up.

Before too long, we'd wander off, maybe go get our slingshots and a pocketful of smooth, marble-sized rail gravels (always in ample supply), and mosey up the head of Slaughter Pen Holler on a safari. Our prey was any unsuspecting fowl of the air that would light within range of our deadly weapons. Well, they would likely have been deadly if we could have actually hit something. Now, we could bust those Clorox bottles on a regular basis, because, unlike the birds, the

Region's youth are performers at Jenny Wiley Theatre

Stage-struck young people in Eastern Kentucky have a rare opportunity to experience "the real thing" as part of the performing cast of Jenny Wiley Theatre.

Twenty-five young actors, musicians and dancers from around the region successfully auditioned for the 2006 season, according to theatre director Martin Childers. They will play a variety of roles in this year's productions, which include "The Music Man," "Nunsense," and "Footloose."

"Hundreds of young performers realize their first taste of theater at Jenny Wiley," Childers said. "It's a chance to perform in a professional setting and hone their talent, and to consider whether they want to pursue a stage career. For most of them, it instills a life-long love and appreciation of theater."

Appearing in the 2006 cast, which premieres its first production on Friday, June 9, are:

Parvovirus

By Dr. Carol Combs-Morris, DVM

I realize that I repeat this particular article every year, but if it educates one more dog owner about Parvovirus, it is worth boring the rest of you! Each spring, I encounter an astounding number of people who are unfamiliar with the disease.

Cases seem to drastically increase this time of year, probably because more dogs are outside moving around and because more litters tend to be born in the spring.

Before we go any further, a quick lesson is in order: it's pronounced Par'vo Vi'-rus. I am astounded at the number of ways this can be mispronounced, but my personal favorite is Porno Virus!

This disease is a relative newcomer to dogs. The first recognized outbreak occurred in Texas, I think, around 1979. The virus had unknowingly made its public debut at a large dog show, and was quickly spread throughout the country. Dogs were becoming infected and dying at an alarming rate. Since there was no immunity to this new disease, older dogs were being affected almost as frequently as puppies.

Luckily, scientists recognized a similarity to the virus that causes Feline Panleukopenia in cats; this allowed us to use cat vaccine to get a little immunity established in the dog population. It bought some time for a more effective vaccine to be developed to the canine form of the virus. If Canine Parvovirus did originally mutate from the cat virus, as is specu-

The most recent AKC Canine Good Citizenship test was administered by certified evaluators from the Eastern Kentucky Kennel Club on Wednesday, May 24, on the Prestonsburg campus of the Big Sandy Community and Technical College. The goals of the Canine Good Citizen Program (CGC) are: (1) teach responsible dog ownership to owners, and (2) provide basic training and teach good manners to dogs. All dogs (purebreds and mixed breeds alike) who pass the test receive a certificate from the American Kennel Club. Recent graduates, pictured from left to right, are: Alan Siegel & "Duke," of Denver; Cindra Messer & "Hercules," of Flat Gap; Brenca Valdez and "Duchess," also of Flat Gap; Juliana Cybriwsky and "Heidi," of Paintsville; and Justin Ross & "Ralph," of Prestonsburg.

such commotion by photographers to get "the shot" of the famous couple. At any minute, I just knew helicopters were going to fly overhead. Totally taken by the likes of such journalists from the San Diego Chronicle, Inside Edition, and Time Magazine and there was little of me from the Floyd County Times - Wow!

That's when it hit like a punch in the gut! Standing alongside the California journalist that has shown the world, through one amazing photo, the heart-wrenching reality of war on the face of Blake Miller - it hit me that he was now about to capture the love, beauty, and happiness this young man and his bride are finally able to celebrate thanks to a very special California couple who read their story and wanted to make their dreams come true.

Blake and Jessica had not had the opportunity to have the wedding of their dreams before Blake departed to serve our country in the war. Still, they had said their "I do's" and became husband and wife before his departure, just not in the setting they had dreamed of.

Eunice and Ron Davis, of California, wanted the couple to have their special day and set things in motion to make it happen, and special it was!

Never one to be shy, the opportunity was present to tell Louis Sinco how wonderful his photo of Blake was and to welcome him to Prestonsburg. "I love it here, it is beautiful and the people are so unique," he said.

Wow, "unique," huh? "That's a really nice and kind description I haven't heard when describing us," I told him. He shared that he had visited during Hillbilly Days in Pikeville and had absolutely loved it.

It was amazing to share this special occasion with Blake and Jessica, their family and friends, and to have the opportunity to meet Ron and Eunice Davis.

Michelle, Jamie and Missie of Signature Events in Pikeville outdid themselves with the displays of beautiful flowers, elegant table settings, and the entire organization of the wedding.

It was truly just beautiful!

The food, prepared by Four Guys and a Grill, was fantastic and it does the heart so good to be a part of witnessing such a blessed event.

To Blake and Jessica, may the rest of your lives be filled with happiness and wash tubs full and overflowing of blessings!

Til Next Week...
G Bless...

target never moved. If it took 15 or 20 attempts before we would hit the bottle, so be it. But those birds, on the other hand, took wing after the first shot.

After a miss, the shooters would agree they'd missed on purpose.

"Just meant to scare him. That was a songbird. We don't want to hurt a songbird."

Truth be known, except for a crow or a redbird, we couldn't have distinguished one bird from another.

Anyway, had one of us actually hit a bird, (something I never witnessed in all my slingshot-hunting days), he'd probably have carved a notch in the handle of his slingshot, reminiscent of Audie Murphy in the Billy the Kid movie we'd seen at the Royal Theater the weekend before.

When we'd get bored with bird hunting, which we usually did after we'd shot up all our gravels, we might hit the creek to see if we could stir up a waterdog or two. Waterdogs

(some people called them mud puppies) were plentiful and fairly easy to catch. Sometimes we'd throw them on one of the rope jumpers and poke fun when she'd scam and act scared. Of course, real men weren't afraid of waterdogs.

As the song from Gershwin's "Porgy and Bess" says.

"Summertime, and the living is easy," sure did apply when I was a kid.

lated, it has changed enough so that it cannot be spread between dogs and cats.

Parvovirus attacks fast-growing cells; the cells lining the digestive tract of young puppies are ideal. The disease damages them so badly that they cannot perform their function of absorbing nutrients and fluids from the GI system. The surface of the small intestine literally becomes raw and "weepy," causing intense nausea, vomiting, bloody diarrhea and severe dehydration.

There is a very good blood supply to the intestines, which is normally protected from the vast pool of bacteria normally present in the gut. With its protective mechanism compromised, secondary bacterial infections can overwhelm the entire system. This can occur unbelievably fast. I have seen apparently healthy pups become sick and die within 12 hours; in extreme cases of toxemia, the pup may die of septic shock before even having time to develop the classic signs of the disease. This is why vets may appear to overreact when you call to ask about a puppy that is not feeling well. It's very likely something minor, but we don't have the luxury of waiting around to see if it gets better on its own.

There is no specific treatment for the virus. Therapy centers on treating the symptoms, especially correcting dehydration and giving antibiotics to fight the secondary bacterial infection. Every vet has a specific treatment routine that works best for him or her.

Because the virus is so contagious to other dogs, the vet will either not be able to keep the puppy at the clinic (in which case you will be given detailed home nursing instructions), or will have a special isolation area set up where strict sanitation can be carried out. If the puppy is going to pull through, you will usually see some improvement within three days. There is about a 7 to 10 day incubation period in which you need to observe any other dogs in the household for signs of infection.

The good news is that this disease is very preventable if a good vaccination schedule is carried out. The newer vaccines are much more effective, but they must be given properly. The exact schedule will vary from vet to vet, depending on their personal experience and vaccine they are using.

Most older dogs have some degree of immunity, either from vaccination or past exposures to the disease. When puppies are born, the mother passes along her immunity to her litter. The pups' bodies are not yet able to manufacture their own. As the pup gets older, his mother's immunity gradually wears off. It is during this time that we need to turn on his own antibody factory through vaccination.

Basically, vaccination exposes the body to a non-disease-producing form of the virus so the body "recognizes the enemy" and makes the weapons it needs to fight it. Periodic boosters maintain the level of the body's defenses at a level where it can fight effectively. Generally this involves a shot given every 2-3 weeks from about 6 weeks of age to 4 ? months or older. Even then, there may be a "window" of time when the pup is not well protected—the mother's immunity is declining and the active immunity is not yet strong enough; so remain observant of your pup's health.

I cannot stress enough how contagious this virus is to other dogs; it is present virtually everywhere, and can be carried on your shoes, clothing, even the tires of your car, so no dog is safe from exposure. One part household bleach to 30 parts water is still one of the best disinfecting solutions for surfaces (floors, food bowls, etc.) Let it sit on the surface for 5-10 minutes and always rinse well. There is no way to disinfect the soil, which may harbor infective virus for long periods.

Finally, I want to address parents' concern for their children's health. I know there have been some recent rumors that Parvo is contagious to humans, but the experts agree that there is absolutely no evidence of this. Humans are affected by a different species of Parvovirus, which likewise is not contagious to dogs. Remember that even as closely related as the dog and cat versions are, they cannot pass between the two. The standard recommendation with any disease is to always practice good hygiene and to keep children away from sick animals.

UK Center for Rural Health announces program to better prepare health professionals

HAZARD — The University of Kentucky Center for Rural Health will begin offering an academic program this fall designed to prepare health care professionals in southeastern Kentucky for management roles and responsibilities.
 The Clinical Leadership and Management program is intended for current providers who have an associate degree in a health-related discipline and at least one year of employment experience in a health care setting. Program graduates receive a Bachelor of Health Sciences degree from UK and will be prepared to assume greater responsibilities at their current jobs, be better qualified for job promotions, and positioned for graduate studies.

 "This program provides a career ladder for associate degree trained health care professionals who want to pursue a bachelor's degree," said Karen O. Skaff, director of the Clinical Leadership and Management program. "We are excited about the opportunity to offer the program at off-campus sites, beginning with Hazard, because we have an established relationship with the Center for Rural Health."

 Historically, there have been limited educational advancement options for associate degree trained health professionals in Kentucky. This degree completion program accommodates transfer students for many allied health disciplines, including radiological technology, respiratory therapy, dental hygiene and nursing.
 "I am thrilled that we can offer a bachelor's degree that will allow Eastern Kentucky residents to stay at home while obtaining a higher education," Dr. Baretta R. Casey said of the initial academic program added to the Center for Rural Health during her first year as director.

 The admissions process for prospective students begins with an application to UK by Aug. 1 for fall enrollment. Courses to be offered during the fall semester are Health Services Administration (Mondays), Health Law (Tuesdays) and Health Policy (Wednesdays). All classes will be taught using interactive television and will be available from 6 p.m. to 8:30 p.m. in Room 220 of the UK Center for Rural Health Bailey-Stumbo Building, located at 750 Morton Boulevard in Hazard.

 It is anticipated that graduates of the program, which includes a core curriculum of 39 credits, will benefit from advanced knowledge and skills that will enhance their career, work environment and quality of life. Program graduates may also benefit their employers, health care facility and patients.

 Academic programs already offered at the Center for Rural Health include physical therapy, master of social work, clinical laboratory science, and residency programs in family practice medicine and dentistry. The center also houses the Kentucky Homeplace program, Kentucky State Office of Rural Health and the UK North Fork Valley Community Health Center.
