Man arrested for dealing

by TOM DOTY
STAFF WRITER

PIKEVILLE — Two Pikeville police officers arrested a suspected drug trafficker Thursday after the subject made a scene at a Huddle House restaurant, where patrons observed him waving money around and saying he was a big-time drug dealer.

Patrick N. Sampson, 34, was taken into custody after officers responded to a call from the eatery on South Mayo Trail in Pikeville, complaining that a man who appeared intoxicated was harassing customers. Patrolman Mike Baldrige and Sgt. Aaron Thompson responded to the complaint and made contact with Sampson, who they reported was "intoxicated."

The officers commenced to search Sampson and allegedly found him to be in possession of one marijuana cigarette, 12 and one-half Xanax bars and a pack of rolling papers.

They charged Sampson with trafficking in a controlled substance, possession of a controlled substance, possession of marijuana, and possession of drug paraphernalia.

After lodging Sampson at the Pike County Detention Center, more charges were added when it was discovered that he allegedly had brought drugs into the jail. Staff found three more Xanax bars in his undergarments, as well as two hydrocodone tablets. Sampson was also found to be in possession of over $4,000 in cash, with denominations ranging from singles to 100 dollar bills.

MORE CHARGES

Gora Wicker, 59, of Prestonsburg, attended the preliminary hearing for her codefendant, Deborah Wallen, on Friday but waived her own hearing on one count of receiving stolen property. The charges are just the latest in a series of cases in which two are accused of robbing her neighbors and selling their belongings on the internet.

Witness testifies against eBay theft defendant

PRESTONSBURG — Two women accused of stealing from neighbors and friends and selling the purloined items at the internet marketplace eBay were back in court Friday for a preliminary hearing on a new charge lodged against them last week.

Gora Wicker, 59, and Deborah Wallen, 36, appeared before District Judge James Allen with Wicker, once again, waiving her hearing and Wallen choosing to hear the evidence against her before sending the case on to the grand jury.

Wicker's attorney, Jimmy Webb, asked that his client be allowed to sit in on the hearing. The request was approved by Wallen's attorney, Jerry Patton, who smiled as he gave assent to the request that Webb had vigorously argued against when it was Wallen who wanted to sit in on Wicker's hearing last month. That hearing never happened, however, as Wicker appeared to have a nervous breakdown before the hearing could commence. The episode prompted Webb to waive the hearing on the condition that Wicker be taken out of jail for a mental evaluation.

Law school students help miners seek black lung compensation

by ZINIE CHEN SAMPSON
ASSOCIATED PRESS

LEXINGTON, Va. — Charles Cooper spent all his working life in the West Virginia coal mines, breathing in coal dust and staying underground years after he was diagnosed with black lung disease.

"I had a high-school education. I wasn't qualified to do anything else," said Cooper, a Beckley, W.Va., resident who started mining in 1946. "As long as I could do the work, I had to make a living."

But he increasingly labored to breathe, and decided to retire in 1985 when the Westmoreland Coal Co. mine he worked in closed. That same year, he sought federal black lung benefits, which provide a monthly sum and medical treatments for fully disabled miners, but was turned down.

Cooper's local black lung association told him about Washington & Lee University School of Law's black lung legal clinic, which took his case in 1998, six years after he was diagnosed with complicated coal worker's pneumoconiosis, an advanced case of the disease.

Professor Mary Natkin and a succession of students at the Lexington, Va., school handled his second claim for benefits, hiring medical experts, taking depositions, arguing before federal administrative law judges, and answering Westmoreland's appeals. This spring, he finally won nearly $51,500 in back pay and a $574 monthly stipend from the company — 21 years after he started trying to collect benefits.

Cooper, 78, is one of about 200 clients the pro bono legal clinic has helped since its inception in 1996. Under Natkin's

Hospital countersues radiologist

by TOM DOTY
STAFF WRITER

PRESTONSBURG — Highlands Regional Medical Center and Consolidated Health Systems Incorporated have responded to a suit launched by a former radiologist who claims that he was let go without cause.

The institutions have countersued Dr. Paul Ellis and allege that he was less than honest when dealing with them by failing to disclose that he was a convicted felon, which automatically nullified an arrangement that called for the hospital to keep him on as full-time radiologist after he completed his training.

The suit alleges that Ellis "concealed and did not disclose to defendants his prior record of felonies."

The suit also alleges that Ellis failed to follow other terms of their agreement, which included working with other area radiologists in a spirit of cooperation. They cite a disagreement with another physician which they tried to rectify by arranging a meeting between Ellis and the other radiologist. The suit notes that the meeting never occurred because Ellis informed them that he would not make an appearance if the other doctor was present.

The hospital is also asking that Ellis return the $50,000 recruitment fee he was awarded in light of his failure to disclose information which would have disqualified him from the job.

The suit also asks that Ellis be held liable for complaints he is believed to have made against the hospital which were referred to the Office of the Inspector General and were believed to have been filed after the suit was brought and are "false and defamatory," according to the suit.

The hospital is asking for damages and legal fees and has demanded a jury trial to determine the reward.

Spears ruled fit for abuse trial

by TOM DOTY

PRESTONSBURG — University of Kentucky law students witnessed the competency hearing of an alleged child sex offender Friday via a video monitoring system that was installed in the Floyd County Justice Center last year.

The cameras were installed in Circuit

Courtroom B, where Judge John D. Caudill presides, and will allow students studying the law to see it in action in Floyd County.

The hearing saw Johnny Spears, 52, of Ruff and Tuff, declared mentally fit to understand the legal proceedings he became a part of when he was indicted on charges of Sarah Newman Hall, left, retiring postmaster of Hi Hat Post Office, was recognized Thursday evening by Ann Wright, right, lead executive for the Kentucky U.S. Postal Service at a retirement party held at the Floyd County Library. Hall, following in the footsteps of her mother, who also served as Hi Hat postmaster for 30 years, is retiring from the postal service following 42 years. The community of Hi Hat was named, in 1943, for the Hi Hat Elkhorn Mining Company, opened in 1936, a company whose trademark was a top hat, symbolizing the company's claim to the production of a high or "top" grade of coal. Hall shared that she is leaving her post with "wonderful memories" of her years with the postal service which she refers to as a "family affair" organization.

Black Lung

guidance, a team of second- and third-year law students handle all aspects of miners' claims, from deciding whether to accept a case to arguing before the 4th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals in Richmond. Attorney's fees collected in successful claims are used for other black lung cases, Natkin said.

It's the only law school clinic handling black lung claims and Natkin said its clients have had a success rate between 50 percent and 60 percent, compared with roughly 11 percent overall. Total disability is tough to prove and coal companies challenge most cases, factors which many miners and their survivors say have discouraged them from pursuing claims.

"We do, in a sense, have the luxury of being able to take just enough cases so that the students can do a very credible job on them," Natkin said. And because the university funds the clinic's costs, "we can afford to treat our clients like million-dollar clients," she said. "That is useful and that shows results."

Laura B. Gardy, a 2001 graduate who works as an attorney at the U.S. Commodity Futures Trading Commission, said working closely with former miners "opened my eyes to this whole other part of the world that I would have never, ever run into." Because of her experience, she was deeply affected by recent mining disasters, such as the Sago explosion that killed 12 workers.

Learning that her first client — a former miner named Jimmy Lucas — ultimately won his case years after she left law school "is more meaningful to me than a lot of the things I've done since," she said.

Douglas Smoot, who defends mining companies against black lung claims, said the students do an excellent job.

"I never thought I was dealing with lightweight people," Smoot said. "I've gone up to the 4th Circuit and gone up against students. That's the big time when you have to argue before three judges. They did well."

The clinic fills a great need among miners navigating the Department of Labor's intricate compensation regulations because most private attorneys can't afford to take such long-term cases, said Tim Cogan, a Wheeling, W.Va., lawyer who has represented miners on black lung claims.

Miners' lawyers must take cases on contingency, "meaning you can't get paid unless you win, and you can't get paid until the case is over," which can take several years, Cogan said.

Only about 20 attorneys across the U.S. regularly handle black lung claims, said Grant Crandall, general counsel of the United Mine Workers of America, which refers a handful of cases to the Washington & Lee clinic annually. Last fiscal year, miners and their survivors filed 4,489 claims, according to Department of Labor figures.

Charles Cooper still has a large dresser drawer full of appeals and other documents filed on his behalf. He regrets that his wife, who died in 2003, didn't get to see him win his case. "She should have had some of that lump sum, too," he said. "It just ain't right to hold people off like that."

Conditions in the mines have improved since Cooper's working days, but Natkin and other advocates say the need for legal representation won't go away anytime soon. They say increasing demand for coal-powered electricity is opening up new jobs in the mines, potentially exposing more workers to unsafe conditions.

At a recent black lung health conference in Pipestem, W.Va., United Mine Workers officials and doctors who treat miners said that they fear they'll see more pneumoconiosis cases, especially in workers in underground mines that don't properly monitor coal dust levels.

Dr. Bob Cohen, an occupational pulmonologist and medical director of Chicago's John J. Stroger Jr. Hospital, which houses one of the nation's most comprehensive black lung clinics, said pneumoconiosis is fully preventable if coal companies require workers to wear personal dust-monitoring systems and follow existing laws.

"This (disease) is something we should only read about in history books," said Cohen, a member of the federal Mine Safety and Health Research Advisory Committee and part of a group investigating the Sago explosion. "These meetings should not be action meetings; they should be nostalgia — 'Remember when people got black lung?'"

At his home in Beckley, Cooper has a hard time pushing, pulling or lifting and loses his breath frequently. He must get regular chest x-rays to monitor his condition, which could worsen but will never improve. Though he had a hard time with his benefits claim, he thinks fondly of his former career and the camaraderie with other miners.

"I don't regret working in the mines," he said. "It was a good job and I liked it."

rape, sodomy and sexual abuse on Feb. 8. The alleged incidents targeted a victim under the age of 12 and took place over a period of time spanning January through November 2005.

Spears appeared alongside his attorney, Jerry Patton, who also made two motions in the case which is scheduled for a pretrial conference on Wednesday, during which Spears will hear a plea offer from the prosecution before deciding whether or not to take the case to trial.

Patton asked that Spears' bond be reduced and argued that he cannot afford to pay the $100,000 cash bond that has been imposed by the court. Patton noted that Spears has been in jail for six months and could help him in preparing his defense if released.

Assistant Commonwealth's Attorney Wayne Taylor launched the state's objections to the motion by saying that the nature of the charges merited a high bond.

Judge Caudill agreed with the prosecution and noted that the bond is appropriate in that it would induce Spears to face his charges if he could raise the funds. Caudill also said that the charges, which include two class A felonies punishable by 20 years to life in prison, merit a high bond traditionally.

Patton also asked the court intervene on Spears' behalf in an issue related to the jail. Patton said that his client is a smoker but has been lodged in a nonsmoking section of the jail.

Judge Caudill said he had sympathy for Spears' plight but could not intervene, as the jail falls under the Department of Corrections and he has no authority over the department's operations.

Cooling the hot air

Perhaps the most iconic image of global climate change is what researchers refer to as the hockey stick, a graph charting temperatures in the Northern Hemisphere over the past 1,000 years that shows a sharp increase, angled like the blade of a hockey stick, starting in the 1990s.

There is no mistaking the implication: After several centuries of belching greenhouse gases into the atmosphere, we're beginning to feel the effects. The graph's key message is that the 20th century was the warmest of the past millennium, and that the 1990s were the warmest years of that warm century.

Last week, a panel of the prestigious National Academies of Science endorsed that graph and the scientists who first published it, led by climatologist Michael E. Mann of Pennsylvania State University.

The NAS endorsement of the hockey stick delivered a sharp blow to the anti-global-warming crowd. Those denizens of denial and the industries that enable them have argued that scientists manipulated data and that flaws in computer programs skewed the results. They also have argued that the scientists downplayed uncertainties connected with the research.

The latter is a tough argument to make convincingly. The original title of the paper in which the hockey stick first appeared contains the words "uncertainties" and "limitations," as in "the limitations of what can be inferred with these data." But that hasn't stopped U.S. Rep. Joe Barton, R-Texas, and others from trying to undermine the scientists' work.

Last summer, Barton gave Mann and his colleagues three weeks to produce reams of unpublished data they used in their study, as well as detailed information on funding sources of other published work and an explanation of their studies for the Intergovernmental Panel on Climate Change. Barton eventually backed down, but only after his demands provoked charges of attempted intimidation and the prestigious National Academies of Science agreed to review Mann's work.

That review was released last week. The panel found no evidence that Mann manipulated any data or that he relied on flawed computer programs.

Mann was the first to stitch together evidence of global climate change from a variety of sources that included historical records, tree rings and analyses of ice cores. Although all science is subject to revision as more data accumulate over time, the strength of Mann's analysis is that it pulls together disparate pieces of information. It demonstrates that what plant biologists find when counting and measuring tree rings corresponds with what climatologists find when they examine air that became trapped in glaciers hundreds of years ago. And in the seven years since Mann's original paper was published, scientists working around the world have validated his findings and expanded on them. It will take more than one review panel, even this prestigious one, to take the hot air out of the global-warming deniers. But the scientific consensus keeps getting more and more solid. That's bad news for people who say global warming is a hoax, but it is good news for those who realize how important the stakes are and understand that the time for action has come.

The Senate travesty

The Senate is being praised for its bipartisan stewardship of a "comprehensive" immigration bill to passage. What comprehensive means in this context, however, is dishonest, unworkable and radical.

The Senate bill pretends to do what it doesn't truly intend to do — tighten up enforcement — while really doing what its supporters hope no one will notice: conducting a vast social experiment that involves extending the benefits of the welfare state of the world's richest country to tens of millions of poor, uneducated inhabitants of Latin America, through the expedient of importing them into America.

The Senate bill — which the House, thankfully, is resisting — requires that a system for employers to verify the legal status of employees be created in 18 months. That sounds admirably rapid. Only it's a fantasy. The people who will be charged with meeting the deadline at the Department of Homeland Security told the Senate prior to passage that it couldn't possibly happen.

The Senate's attitude is, to paraphrase St. Augustine's famous prayer, "Oh, Lord, give us immigration enforcement — just not yet."

The bill's supporters hate the word "amnesty," but it is apt when illegals get a green card and a path to citizenship. To avoid simply waving everyone into the U.S., the bill creates three tiers of illegals, with those here more than five years first in line for legalization. But the immigration bureaucracy can't process the work it has now, let alone sort through who got here when based on unsecure documents like utility bills.

Once illegals become citizens, they become expensive. Robert Rector of the Heritage Foundation says that the Senate bill will be the largest expansion of the welfare state in 35 years. College-educated immigrants are a net fiscal benefit to the U.S., but high-school graduates are problematic, and high-school dropouts are an outright fiscal disaster. About half of illegal aliens are dropouts, and the out-of-wedlock birth rate for illegals is roughly 45 percent.

This is a population primed for welfare. Supporters of amnesty argue that illegal aliens aren't a drag because they hold jobs. But our welfare and tax systems are geared to providing support to exactly such low-income workers. Rector points out that a family making less than $40,000 a year essentially pays nothing in income taxes, thanks to various tax benefits. The median income for high-school dropouts in the U.S. is $22,000 a year for men and $12,000 a year for women.

So, the new citizens created by the Senate bill will disproportionately be on the receiving end of means-tested welfare programs, at a cost of $580 billion a year. The Senate bill will legalize 10 million immigrants, allow them to bring their parents, and import millions more low-skilled workers through a guest-worker program. Rector estimates that the annual cost of the Senate bill — which he says will bring an astonishing 60 million people into the U.S. over 20 years — will eventually reach $50 billion a year.

That's the final indignity. Not only will your lawmakers engage in an unconvincing pretense of enforcement as they pass their amnesty — you have to pay for the privilege.

Conserving wetlands doesn't interest conservatives

by DONALD KAUL
MINUTEMAN MEDIA

I don't know exactly what it is that conservatives want to conserve but I'm sure of one thing: It's not clean water.

The conservatives of the Supreme Court, all four of them, did their best to wipe away the Clean Water Act last week. That they failed to do so was due to the reluctance of Justice Anthony Kennedy, who is a conservative but not crazy, to go along with the gag.

At issue was the right of property owners to fill in watery areas on their land in order to develop them. The Clean Water Act requires getting Army Corps of Engineers permission before filling in wetlands that are connected to larger, navigable bodies of water.

The Corps, with the support (oddly) of the Bush administration, interprets this widely to include ponds and ditches that flow into larger bodies, in some cases, many miles away.

This interpretation enrages the most virulent conservative on the Court, Antonin (Crazy Tony) Scalia.

In a dissenting opinion on the wetlands cases he argued that "the immense expansion of federal regulation of land use that has occurred under the Clean Water Act" has stretched governmental authority "beyond parody."

The only wetlands that should be under the jurisdiction of the Corps of Engineers, he said, are those "with a continuous surface connection" to navigable waterways; in other words, backwaters. He was joined in this interpretation by his gang members:

Silent Clarence Thomas, Sam (The Sham) Alito and John (The Chief) Roberts.

On the other side of the argument — the rational side, I would say — was the usual group of clear-thinking Justices: David Souter, Ruth Bader Ginsburg, Stephen Breyer and John Paul Stephens.

Justice Stevens got in what some of us thought was the best shot of the day when he accused the conservatives of "antagonism to environmentalism," then accused the conservative Justices of disregarding its "obligation to interpret laws rather than make them."

That last is a nice backhanded swipe at conservatives who are always yowling about "judicial activism" — liberal judges making law instead of interpreting it.

(Editor's note: The reason our Constitution has lasted 230 years is that it is a flexible document that can be interpreted and reinterpreted, by judges to fit the circumstances of the times. Conservatives have never figured this out.)

It was Kennedy, finally, who broke the tie with an opinion that gave something to both sides — and both sides claimed victory. Basically, the Clean Water Act lived to fight another day, but just barely. One more Bush appointee on the Court and we're India.

I know, that seems a contradiction given the fact that the Administration supported the Corps in these cases. But that only proved that the word hadn't seeped down to the lower reaches of the bureaucracy — yet.

If past history is any guide, the people who provided that support will soon be wearing muzzles and setting up their office desks in broom closets.

That's basically what happened to James Titus, an Environmental Protection Agency official, who published an article warning of the need to preserve wetlands and beaches in the face of global warming. The article was called: "Does the U.S. Government Realize

That the Sea is Rising?"

When a New York Times reporter contacted him recently for an article on global warming and the erosion of our beaches, Titus told him that he was no longer allowed to discuss such issues publicly and referred the reporter to an EPA administrator who told him what a good job the Administration was doing studying the problem.

Wait! I just figured out what conservatives want to conserve:

■ The bank accounts of developers, large land-owners and people who make a buck depleting our national resources.

■ The after-tax income of corporate executives, lobbyists and others making more than $200,000-a-year.

■ The inheritances of rich kids who are not supposed to pay any taxes when their parents die.

But let's cut Medicare, by all means. Federal spending is out of control.

This Town, That World

Editor's Note: For years, Floyd County Times founder and former publisher Norman Allen wrote a weekly column that looked at Floyd County through his eyes. His columns are being reprinted due to request.

Last week I brought on a cool spell by referring to the heat. It might help, this week, if I would make a firm prediction to the effect that the thermometer will boil over.

HAPPY BIRTHDAY!

Dr. J. H. Allen remarked, this week, that he might be getting old since he had a birthday recently. Out of my experience I assured him he wasn't, that it was only when a fellow gets to skipping birthdays that he's, as they say, really gettin' on in years.

OFT-TOLD TALE

The yarns told about a certain hotel at Hindman, which, in other years, was a gathering place for all the legal lights, and others, of this and Knott counties, are many. This paravansary "set a good table," and its hospitality was widely known, yet its owner took a lot of ribbing, and stories about the place came back to him that he knew never happened.

One they tell is of the court term, held when the late O. C. Hall was commonwealth's attorney, while Knott and Floyd were in the same judicial district. It seems that a hog's head, well-cooked, appeared on the big hotel table, first day of the term, and remained there, day after day, while the clientele picked away at it. On the last day of the session, the well-picked head of the late porker still was in the middle of the table.

Court over and ready to go home, Hall stalked in as other court officials stood by, seized the head by the snout and held, holding it aloft, intoned in his best courtroom manner.

"I summon you to appear here at the first day of the next term of the Knott circuit court!"

HUMAN BATTLEGROUND

We meet all kinds. This fellow was, shall we say, distraught. "I," he moaned, "believe there is constant warfare between good and evil, but I tell you, bein' the battleground every time they fight, finally wears a-body down."

FARM REPORT

"Show" White hasn't been around, all week. Lenna Moore is absent, too. Last time I saw the former, I expressed some concern about both. They had recited in great detail their labors in their respective gardens, and I feared for them in this heat. Then Mr. White allayed my fears with a right pertinent question: "Did you ever hear of a man having sunstroke, just spouting hot air!"

I had thought I might get a mess of corn from Moore, but he killed those hopes the other morning by telling how the muskrats were working his corn patch over, something awful. Was very careful to remind me that those critters were eating the very corn out of the hill that he had intended to give to neighbors, and other less-fortunate people.

The 2006 Kentucky Opry Performing Arts School, a program that is offered FREE and open only to children entering the 6th, 7th or 8th grades, will begin Monday, July 3, at 9 a.m., at the Mountain Arts Center, in Prestonsburg. Participating students will meet Mondays - Thursdays, from 9 a.m. to 1 p.m. from Monday, July 3 through Thursday, July 27. (There will be no classes on Tuesday, July 4.) A performance will be held on Thursday, July 27, in the Mountain Arts Center Theater, for parents and friends. Free lunch will be provided each day to participating students. School buses will also be provided each day for those students in need of transportation.

If your student is interested in participating, contact the Mountain Arts Center at 889-9125 for more information.

The antique

by HARRIET MAY SAVITZ
"CHICKEN SOUP FOR THE GRANDPARENT'S SOUL"

My 6-year-old granddaughter stares at me as if she is seeing me for the first time. "Grandma, you are an antique," she says. "You are old. Antiques are old. You are my antique."

I am not satisfied to let the matter rest there. I take out Webster's Dictionary and read the definition to Jenny. I explain: "An antique is not only just old; it's an object existing since or belonging to earlier times ... a work of art ... a piece of furniture. Antiques are treasured," I tell Jenny as I put away the dictionary. "They have to be handled carefully because they sometimes are very valuable."

According to various customs laws, in order to be qualified as an antique, the object has to be at least 100 years old.

"I'm only 67," I remind Jenny. We look around the house for other antiques besides me. There is a bureau that was handed down from one aunt to another and finally to our family. "It's very old," I tell Jenny. "I try to keep it polished, and I show it off whenever I can. You do that with antiques." When Jenny gets older and understands such things, I might also tell her that whenever I look at the bureau or touch it, I am reminded of the aunt so dear to me who gave me the bureau as a gift. I see her face again, though she is no longer with us. I even hear her voice and recall her smile. I remember myself as a little girl leaning against this antique, listening to one of her stories. The bureau does that for me.

There is a picture on the wall purchased at a garage sale. It is dated 1867. "Now that's an antique." I boast. "More than 100 years old." Of course it is marked up and scratched and not in very good condition. "Sometimes age does that," I tell Jenny. "But the marks are good marks. They show living, being around. That's something to display with pride. In fact, sometimes, the more an object shows age, the more valuable it can become." It is important that I believe this for my own self-esteem.

Our tour of antiques continues. There is a vase on the floor. It has been in my household for a long time.

I'm not certain where it came from, but I didn't buy it new. And then there is the four-poster bed, sent to me 40 years ago from an uncle who slept in it for 50 years.

The one thing about antiques, I explain to Jenny, is that they usually have a story.

They've been in one home and then another, handed down from one family to another, traveling all

Reader's wife is in the hot seat

by TOM and RAY MAGLIOZZI

Dear Tom and Ray:
My wife's butt is SO HOT ... and it was caused by a 2003 Ford Focus Wagon's "seat warmers"! The seat warmers burned the seat material and my wife's new winter coat! I wrote Ford's Consumer Affairs department to warn them of a very serious burn/fire hazard. All I got back was some goofy letter about being unable to offer any assistance about our claim. We didn't submit a claim! We just wanted Ford to look into this safety issue so that nobody gets hurt! We filed a report with the NTSB. Anyplace else we should contact regarding this? — Bill

RAY: Well, we're glad you spoke to the NTSB — the National Association of Toasted and Singed Butts.

TOM: Actually, NTSB — the National Transportation Safety Board — is the wrong place for this. It investigates airplane crashes and stuff like that. And while it may have seemed nearly that dire when your wife was doing the lambada in the seat, the place to go is NHTSA, the National Highway Traffic Safety Administration. They're the people who handle auto safety.

RAY: You should definitely report this to NHTSA. You can do it from the organization's Web site, www.safercar.gov, or through the auto-safety hotline, 1-888-327-4236.

TOM: And, in fact, we checked the list of customer safety complaints (which you can do, too), and there have already been a few reports of overheating seat warmers on Ford Focuses. So I'm sure NHTSA will be interested in hearing from you. If they get enough complaints about a certain safety problem, they can open an investigation, which can eventually lead to a safety recall.

RAY: But in the meantime, you should get this fixed! I mean, it might be a fun trick to play on your passengers, but you don't want to create any actual griddle marks on anybody's tuchus. Or start a fire.

TOM: So take the car to your dealer and ask him to investigate. There should be a resistor that limits the amount of current the heating element is allowed to pull. That resistor, or the element itself, may be faulty.

RAY: And on your way home from the dealership, be a nice guy and pick up a gift for your wife. See what's on sale at Victoria's Flame-Retardant Secret.

Highway route longer but better for cars

Dear Tom and Ray:
I live in Vermont, and I have two possible ways to go to work. The first way is what people who don't live in Vermont would call "quaint," but what I would call "lousy." The road winds through the hills and is dirt for part of the way. In mud season, it turns into a bog. It's rutted and has washboards in places. During winter, it's peppered with frost heaves. The other way is all highway driving. Seems like a no-brainer, right? The problem is that the "quaint" way is nine miles shorter each way. In the course of a year, that adds up to something close to 5,000 fewer miles. Which route should I choose: The dirt road that saves miles while beating up my car, or the highway that treats my car well but racks up thousands of extra miles a year? — Greg

TOM: Take the advice of Bobby Troupe, Greg. He was the former piano player for the Tommy Dorsey Orchestra, who wrote about Route 66: "Travel my way, take the highway, that's the best."

RAY: I thought Nat King Cole did "Route 66."

TOM: He recorded it first. But Troupe wrote the lyrics.

RAY: Hey, how do you know all this stuff?

TOM: Well, you remember yesterday afternoon, when I was supposed to be putting a clutch in that Nissan? I was lying under the car reading a great music-trivia book. I'll lend it to you.

RAY: Thanks. Well, that's the right advice, Greg. Even though you'll put more miles on the car by taking the longer highway route, you'll spend less on maintenance and repairs over the car's life.

TOM: Smooth highway driving is easier on everything: tires, shocks, springs, brakes and the entire front end. Even the fuzzy dice knock around less and lose less of their fuzz in transit.

RAY: Washboards, rutted roads and potholes are among the worst things you can subject your car to. All that shaking and banging and bouncing loosens stuff up, and wears out your suspension system and steering components even faster than my brother can talk his way out of a clutch job.

TOM: And if the repairs aren't enough, after a couple of months on the "quaint" road, you'll need to pay for psychiatric help, because all of the rattles in your car will be driving you nuts.

RAY: So stick to the highway, Greg. Five thousand extra highway miles a year is far less damaging than bouncing over the back roads every day.

Odds & Ends

■ TORRANCE, Calif. — A man found his brother's boyhood baseball glove at a flea market — 42 years after it disappeared.

Patrick Reynolds' name and phone number were still legible on the left-hander's mitt, which his brother, Jeff, plucked from a barrel of used sports equipment. Jeff Reynolds paid $5 for the glove last week and returned it to his brother.

"He thought maybe I'd had the glove all these years," quipped Jeff Reynolds, 47, a telephone service technician.

Patrick Reynolds always thought his father had given the glove away to needy children. His father had been drafted by the old St. Louis Browns and, after serving in the military during World War II, played recreational ball and mentored young players.

"He was always collecting old gloves and relacing them and giving them to kids who needed them," said Patrick Reynolds, a 57-year-old senior county parks landscape architect from Lomita. "I figure he found mine at home and donated it to somebody to use."

Patrick Reynolds said he will display his old glove on a shelf.

"All my grandkids are right-handed, so they can't use it," he said.

■ SAN ANTONIO — Ready ... aim ... fire! Just kidding.

Soldiers practicing for Fourth of July festivities aimed World War II-era cannons at nearby homes and cars and fired several loud blanks, much to the dismay of neighbors who complained of ringing ears, shaken homes and frightened pets.

The members of Fort Sam Houston's Honors Platoon usually pretend to set off the 75 mm Pack howitzers when they practice, post spokesman Phil Reidinger said.

"What possessed them to use the actual blank ammunition, I have no idea," he said.

Maj. Peter Franco, chief of the battalion that oversees the honors platoon, told post officials that "corrective action" was taken after Wednesday's practice, but Reidinger wouldn't say what it was.

"The combination of the close proximity and the direct aiming toward our homes knocked pictures off walls, set off car alarms, caused ringing in the ears of those caught outside, severely distressed animals and created a massive cloud of smoke that we inhaled on this air quality alert day," said resident Ronald Ward.

The troops moved the five howitzers to within 50 yards of some residences and fired in "rapid succession."

Col. Wendy Martinson, Fort Sam Houston's garrison commander, apologized to residents for "disrupting their quality of life as a result of inappropriate training by soldiers."

■ SAN MATEO, Calif. — Andrew Padilla first saw the monkey in the backyard of his Palo Alto home, hanging out by a fence. He thought it must be a squirrel.

It turned out to be a marmoset — and one that was a long, long way from its native home in the rain forests of South and Central America.

"I wanted to adopt him," Padilla said. "He was so cute and friendly."

Padilla said he fed the stray monkey bananas and crackers before calling the Peninsula Humane Society & SPCA to report him.

"We thought, 'Sure. What have you been drinking?' But when our officer arrived, there he was," said Scott Delucchi, spokesman for the animal care agency.

An officer coaxed the marmoset into custody with a banana. The agency has kept the animal in a small cage at its shelter in San Mateo.

Officials don't know where the animal came from but they plan to send it to Primarily Primates, a 75-acre animal sanctuary just north of San Antonio.

The marmoset, which weighs about 12 ounces, appears healthy but a little disoriented, Delucchi said.

■ PENN HILLS, Pa. — A puppy who got stuck in a pipe has a new name: Sewer.

Emergency crews used a backhoe to dig the 7-week-old puppy out of the 6-inch sewer pipe early Thursday. He was stuck there head-first for more than five hours.

Marlene Thrower, who named the dog "Sewer" after the ordeal, said the drain leading to the pipe usually has a cover to keep out animals. She believes someone removed the cover when the grass was cut last weekend and forgot to replace it.

The dog is one of four in a litter from Thrower's 4-year-old pit bull, Thirsty — so named because she's afraid of water. Thrower left the dogs out overnight, thinking the drain was covered.

When she heard the puppy crying and pinpointed its location around 2 a.m., she called police.

An animal control officer arrived, but could not reach the dog with a lure because it had become wedged about 7 feet deep into the pipe, police said. After the backhoe dug in, workers reached the dog around 7:30 a.m.

■ NEW YORK — They should have seen it coming.

Three women were arrested for running phony fortune telling operations, including one who tried to dupe an undercover police officer out of more than $1,000 for an exorcism to banish evil spirits, authorities said Wednesday.

Police said the women violated a state law that requires all readings be done for entertainment or amusement purposes only, authorities said.

The three suspects weren't amused when they discovered their clients were undercover police officers taking part in a sting operation. The probe began in March.

"The defendants themselves apparently suffered vision deficiencies as they could not see themselves being prosecuted on fraud charges in their futures," Queens District Attorney Richard A. Brown said.

One suspect, who operated under the name Readings by Julia, told one undercover agent that she could eliminate evil spirits for an additional $900 on top of her usual fee, prosecutors said. A second undercover officer was told that a $1,300 payment would return her wayward boyfriend, authorities said.

■ FEDERAL WAY, Wash. — The school board in this suburb between Seattle and Tacoma has flip-flopped on flip-flops.

The board voted Tuesday to drop a proposed flip-flop ban on grounds that it would be impossible to enforce.

Two anti-flip-flop board members changed their minds after hearing appeals from parents and students. The panel had taken a preliminary vote on flip-flops two weeks ago.

"I don't see myself how flip-flops are disrespectful," Board President Evelyn Castellar said.

The dress code adopted Tuesday bans students from wearing slippers, pajamas, halter tops, any shirt that exposes the stomach, low-riding pants and any shorts or skirts that end higher than a student's fingertips when she is standing with her arms at her side.

■ BENTON — These fish stories were, in fact, too good to be true.

Two fishing buddies were charged with 10 felonies after being accused of cheating in fishing tournaments on Kentucky Lake and Lake Barkley on the Kentucky-Tennessee line.

Dwayne E. Nesmith, 43, of Island, and Brian K. Thomas, 31, of Dawson Springs, were indicted on nine counts of theft and attempted theft.

The men allegedly stashed five live bass in a fish basket at the Relay for Life Buddy Bass Tournament on April 30, and then scooped them up for the weigh-in.

Nesmith and Thomas were witnessed picking up the fish early on the morning of April 30, then putting their catch in the boat, said Kentucky Department of Fish and Wildlife Resources Sgt. Bill Snow.

That sparked an investigation into tournaments the pair had previously won, Snow said. The two men were arrested Tuesday.

■ BERKLEY, Mich. — Robert Militzer paid a parking ticket with another $10 check — this one without the eight-letter notation that could have landed him in jail for 30 days.

Militzer appeared Wednesday in Berkley District Court on a contempt of court charge filed after he scrawled "BULL (expletive) MONEY GRAB" on the original check with which he paid the fine.

The American Civil Liberties Union came to the defense of the 38-year-old computer programmer from Allen Park. ACLU lawyer Elsa Shartsis filed a six-page brief contending the remark was constitutionally protected free speech.

But the anticipated First Amendment showdown didn't happen. Militzer appeared in court Wednesday with Shartsis, who told Judge William Sauer: "My client does regret any offense that he made to the court. He disagrees with the ticket but had no intent of offending the court."

The apology, and Militzer's agreement to pay the ticket with a G-rated check, was enough for Sauer to dismiss the contempt charge.

"He's a chip off the old block. I'm outspoken, too," said Militzer's father, also named Robert Militzer. "I wish he'd restrained himself, obviously. I'm certainly glad it's over."

Hazard Herb Festival highlighted by good food

The Bobby Davis Museum held the annual Perry County Heritage Herb Festival as part of the "Key Ingredients Celebration of Food in our Region" on June 24. The Hazard Community and Technical College Humanities Council sponsored the event which offered visitors the chance to sample delicious foods and drinks made with herbs and the opportunity to purchase herbal products, including fresh produce, baked goods, soaps and books.

The Key Ingredients Traveling

Exhibit from the Smithsonian Institution and the Kentucky Humanities Council will begin on Oct. 21 at the Hazard Community and Technical College Stephens Library located at the Hazard Campus. In addition, there are various upcoming events including cooking classes for children and adults, a Film Festival, an Oral History program, and a Book Club for Adults.

For more information on these activities, contact Eileen Haddix at 606-487-3148.

Lagoon

send in a sadistic jarhead who likes to photograph himself with anything he shoots, which appears to be an unfunny reminder of Abu Ghraib, though the rest of the jokes are spot on.

What follows are plenty of "Aliens"-type encounters and the group doesn't help themselves much by splitting up early in the action. That said the action sequences are well rendered and the finale, involving a quick run back to campus after a few survivors are almost home while a missile is enroute to blow up the whole shebang, is well paced.

There's more hits than misses here and you have to give the producers credit for not repackaging the first film, which would have been a heck of an insult to anyone who suffered through it already.

What makes this all work is that they deliver on the standard action scenes but they also employ a wicked sense of humor which pokes fun at all manner of subjects and reveals that the writers were not content to just dish out another tired sequel. Great bits include a target practice scene where the Marines unload on targets painted to look like zombies, except for one which is a dead ringer for Paris Hilton. They also poke fun at the current administration with audio bits coming over the radio such as one which states that everything is under control with the vice president giving orders from his secret bunker.

Okay, so half of the cast look like they stepped out of the annual Sport's Illustrated swimsuit edition, at least they appear comfortable with their weapons, though their fashion choices don't always appear suitable for hunting zombies.

You get all of the above plus an appearance by 1970s genre star Sid Haig ("The Devil's Rejects") as the requisite mad scientist. There are also some zombie virus-carrying mosquitoes which is a great idea that they could have done more with. All in all it's a good time waster that doesn't overstay its welcome.

Best line: "The vice president has ordered a scorching of the city from his undisclosed location."

over the place. They've lasted through years and years. They could have been tossed away, or ignored, or destroyed, or lost. But instead, they survived.

For a moment Jenny looks thoughtful. "I don't have any antiques but you," she says. Then her face brightens. "Could I take you to school for show and tell?"

"Only if I fit into your backpack," I answer.

And then her antique lifted up and embraced her in a hug that would last through the years.

Shoot Hoops Not Drugs Tour brings game to hundreds of youth

by STEVE LeMASTER
SPORTS EDITOR

SALYERSVILLE — Georgia native Jeff Sheppard fell in love with the game of basketball at an early age. The former University of Kentucky Wildcat continues to give back to the game and the state that's become his home. In June, Sheppard conducted seven free one-day regional basketball camps in the Fifth Congressional District. The Shoot Hoops Not Drugs Tour headed by Sheppard taught school-age youth fundamental basketball skills while emphasizing the importance of them staying drug-free. Local Operation UNITE coalition members, in conjunction with the camps, presented information on drug abuse awareness, current anti-drug efforts in their area, and held activities promoting family cohesiveness. Southeast Telephone provided a picnic lunch during the one-day camps and each camper received a free autographed Jeff Sheppard UNITE regulation basketball and a T-shirt. All participants at each of the camps were also entered into a drawing for a portable basketball goal courtesy of Wal-Mart.

Each of the seven Shoot Hoops Not Drugs camps drew many participants. The breakdown for the seven camps follows.

Thursday, June 1, at Mt. Vernon Elementary School in Rockcastle County, attended by 98 youth from six counties with 69 registered volunteers.

Saturday, June 10, at Lee County High School in Beattyville, attended by 79 youth from four counties with 15 registered volunteers.

Tuesday, June 13, at Cawood High School in Harlan County, attended by 96 youth from two counties, West Virginia and Tennessee with nine registered volunteers.

Thursday, June 15, at Whitley County High School, attended by 175

Ratliff returns to coach at college alma mater

TIMES STAFF REPORT

HUNTINGTON, W.Va. — Former Marshall University standout Phil Ratliff has returned to his college alma mat. The former Thundering Herd All-American is the MU football program's new tight ends coach. Marshall Coach Mark Snyder, set to enter his second season at the helm of the Thundering Herd football program, hired Ratliff away from NCAA Division I-AA member James Madison University.

Phil Ratliff

"I am excited about being able to bring home one of our own," Snyder said. "Phil is an outstanding coach and a quality individual that has a great rapport with his players. There is no doubt in my mind that he will be a valuable asset to our program."

Ratliff was a two-time All-American selection as an offensive lineman at Marshall from 1989 to 1992 and was captain of the Thundering Herd's 1992 NCAA Division I-AA National Championship team. Ratliff won the Jacobs Blocking Award, which is presented annually to the Southern Conference Lineman of the Year, in 1992. He returns to Marshall following a two-year stint as tight ends coach at James Madison University.

"It has always been a dream of mine to coach at my alma mater," Ratliff said. "I believe in what Coach Snyder is doing with the program and I am ready to help take it to the next level."

Betsy Layne 13 & Under squad finishes third in state

by STEVE LeMASTER
SPORTS EDITOR

BETSY LAYNE — The future continues to look quite bright for the Betsy Layne High School boys' basketball program. The Betsy Layne 13 and Under Seventh Grade basketball team competed in the Kentucky State AAU Tournament held in Lexington earlier this year. The latest edition of the state 13 and Under AAU tournament was held April 21-23 and included 24 teams from across the Commonwealth. The Bobcats represented Floyd County and Eastern Kentucky well in the tourney, bringing home third-place honors. Eventual state champion The Truth, a Louisville-based all-star team, defeated the Bobcats in the semifinals.

Betsy Layne's placement in the state tournament qualified it for the National AAU Tournament. The Bobcats are quite familiar with the national stage. As last year's state runner-up out of Kentucky, Betsy Layne found success on the national level, placing fifth in the 2005 AAU National Tournament. The 2005 National Tournament included 56 teams from all over the United States, including units from New York, Florida, California and Texas. Most of the teams that compete in the national tournament are all-star squads that are corporate-sponsored. The Betsy Layne 13 and Under team is made up of Betsy Layne Elementary students who have been playing together for five-plus years now.

Betsy Layne Elementary School

coach Harold Tackett guides the squad. Bernardo Maldonado and Troy Cole serve as assistant coaches on Tackett's staff.

Tackett will host a youth basketball camp July 10-12 at the Dome. Coach Tackett's Camp of Champions is open to both boys and girls in grades 3-8. The camp will offer general instruction based on position, general skill and age.

The camp will get underway each morning at 9 a.m. and run until noon.

Cost of the camp is $35 per camper. Discounts are available for one or more participants from the same family.

Members of the Betsy Layne 13 and Under Seventh Grade basketball team will be in attendance at the camp.

For more information on the debut camp, call Tackett at 886-3444.

SPORTS EDITOR

PIKEVILLE — The first game in the Mac Bryan Era as head coach of the Pikeville College football program will pit the Bears against a foe from Arkansas. Henderson (Ark.) State will visit the W.C. Hambley Athletic Complex on Saturday, Sept. 9 and give the Bears opposition in the first game of Bryan's tenure as Pikeville College head coach. Kickoff for the Pikeville College season-opener is set for 6 p.m.

Henderson State, a member of the Gulf South Conference, finished the 2005 season 3-8. Scott Maxfield is entering his second season as Henderson State head coach.

Bryan, the third coach in Pikeville College history, replaced Jerry Mynatt, who posted a 19-12 mark in his three years. He previously served as ASHLAND — Evander Holyfield may need to rethink his plans to fight Jeremy Bates. At least that's what Bates thinks.

"I'm not going to guarantee a win, because I'm not the cocky guy I was when I was younger, but I think Evander may have picked the wrong guy," Bates, a Greenup County High School graduate, told The Independent of Ashland on Thursday. "I wouldn't go to Dallas if I thought I was going to lose."

Holyfield, 43, said Thursday he would fight Bates, 32, on Aug.

Gilliam closing in on 13th season on MSU staff

TIMES STAFF REPORT

MOREHEAD — Prestonsburg native John Gilliam has a dozen seasons on the Morehead State University football staff already behind him. Gilliam, who tormented the offensive units of opposing teams when he was a linebacker and playing for the Eagles in the 1980s, coaches defense for the MSU football team.

In 2006, Gilliam will again serve as MSU's defensive coordinator. He will work particularly with the Eagle linebackers while making the defensive calls.

Gilliam was a four-year Eagle letterman (1983-86) during current MSU Coach Matt Ballard's tenure as an assistant coach on the MSU staff. After serving as a student assistant coach for the Eagles in 1987, he joined Ballard at Union College.

Gilliam spent six seasons under Ballard at Union and returned to MSU with Ballard in 1994.

Gilliam earned a bachelor's degree from MSU in 1987. He added a master's degree from Union in 1990.

The MSU football team has been known for its strong defensive groups for many years now. That's thanks in great part to Gilliam's coaching.

The 2006 Morehead State University football schedule includes four non-conference contests and seven Pioneer Football League games, including a rematch of last season's PFL

During his two seasons at JMU, Ratliff helped the Dukes post a 20-6 overall record and win the 2004 NCAA Division I-AA National Championship. He also coached all-conference tight ends Casime Harris (2005) and Tom Ridley (2004).

Prior to his tenure at JMU, Ratliff was the head football coach at Spring Valley High School from 2000-2003. He led the Timberwolves to the West Virginia Class AAA state playoffs in 2001, 2002, and 2003 and was named the Mountain State Athletic Conference's Coach of the Year in 2001.

Ratliff was a student assistant at Marshall in 1993 following his collegiate career. He went on to serve as defensive coordinator at Lawrence County High School from 1994 to 1999. The Louisa native received his bachelor's degree in elementary education with a specialization in special education from Marshall in 1994. Ratliff played his high school football at Lawrence County.

Marshall finished the 2005 season 4-7 overall (3-5 in Conference-

In between autographs, Nicklaus touts character education

by BEN FELLER
ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — He's such a golf titan that Tiger Woods can only chase his records. So when Jack Nicklaus shows up to testify on Capitol Hill, he can still draw a nice gallery.

Nicklaus, 66, added a touch of sports celebrity to Wednesday's hearing of the House Education and the Workforce Committee. He was there to tout the importance of character education, in which kids learn respect, courtesy, responsibility and other core values.

But some of those in the packed room came hoping for something else — an autograph. They got their chance when the committee had to halt the hearing for a House vote.

Nicklaus obliged as Hill staffers and memorabilia collectors formed a line. He signed golf balls, photos, flags, and a Sports Illustrated issue with him splashed on the cover. "Part of the life, huh?" said the smiling committee chairman, Rep. Howard McKeon, a Republican from California.

Nicklaus has won more major golf championships than anyone.

When the hearing resumed, he shared a wink with another sports figure — Rep. Tom Osborne, R-Neb., who headed a very successful football program at the University of Nebraska.

Nicklaus is the honorary chairman of The First Tee, which uses the game of golf to instill values in young people. Since he last testified before the committee in 2002, Nicklaus said the program's membership has increased more than six times over. It now reaches 760,000 children and is being incorporated into school gym classes.

"Golf is a wonderful vehicle for teaching life lessons," Nicklaus said. "But sometimes it is the people you meet in the game of golf that guide you to the most important lessons. Not every child gets the kind of grounding and positive reinforcement at home and school that I was fortunate to receive. And that is why programs like First Tee are so important."

Four months after Turin, Flying Tomato still airborne

by WILL GRAVES
ASSOCIATED PRESS

LOUISVILLE — Ask Shaun White the moment when everything changed, when he realized he no longer would be known only as that snowboarding kid with the crazy red hair, and at first all you get is a drawn out "duuuude."

"It's just been crazy," said the 19-year-old White, perhaps better known as "The Flying Tomato" for the way his auburn locks frame his face as he flips, twists and backside airs his way down the half-pipe.

There have been movie premieres and parties all over the globe for the Turin Olympics gold medalist. Stops on every talk show you can think of, and maybe a few you can't. Companies asking him to put his name on this, or shoot a commercial with that.

But don't hold your breath for a Shaun White bobblehead. He's not a Bobblehead kind of guy.

Maybe, White said, the moment he knew things had changed happened a few days after the Olympics, when somebody told him President Bush had dropped his name during a speech.

Even for a laid-back kid from San Diego who wasn't old enough to vote in the last presidential election, getting a shout-out from the president was pretty "gnarly."

"I thought I was all big-time," White said. "I was like, 'No way.'"

Way. White acknowledges the months since Turin have been a blur. At one point, he welcomed a couple of minor skateboarding injuries — just so he could relax.

"It was rad because I couldn't skate at all," he said. "It was nice just to go home and hang out with my family."

Just not for too long. The road to success is littered with Olympic heroes whose 15 minutes quickly faded once the closing ceremony ended.

White's goal is to maintain the momentum he gained in the Italian Alps. Now, with the phrase "Olympic Champion" permanently attached to his name, he's ready for the next step in his career.

He'll spend the summer on his skateboard, competing in vert competitions — skateboarding's version of the half-pipe — at events such as the Dew Action Sports Tour and the X-Games.

"I just want to focus on being the best skater and the best snowboarder in the world," he said.

A skateboarder at heart, White knows it could take a while to regain the form he had before taking several months off late last year to train for the Olympics. The rust showed Saturday, when White failed to make it out of the skate vert's preliminary rounds at the Sports Tour's first stop.

Not that White's worried. He's got time. He sees himself doing this for at least another 6-8 years, which is fine with Wade Martin, the general manager of the Sports Tour.

Martin said having White involved helps give the tour buzz beyond its typical target demographic of teenage boys and girls who have traded in their basketball shoes for a skateboard, helmet and knee pads.

"I think what Shaun did (in Turin) is going to help action sports immensely," Martin said. "He is probably the face of action sports and the first face to the mainstream public since Tony Hawk, with the big difference by the time Tony became that mainstream face, he was done competing at the professional level."

Martin isn't the first person to compare White to Hawk, an icon in the skateboard world who helped action sports transform from something kids did in empty backyard pools into a cultural movement making inroads on more traditional team sports such as baseball and football.

White doesn't mind the comparison — which goes beyond their ability to make a skateboard bend to their every whim.

Like Hawk, White is working on his own line of clothing. Like Hawk, White is developing a video game. And like Hawk, White's crossover appeal is undeniable, though he says he's not going to get too caught up in trying to match Hawk success for success.

"There's pressure from other people to say I'm heading that way," he said. "I want to become me, become who I am and do my thing."

Which means maybe sticking around long enough to one day go for a couple of Summer Olympic gold medals to match the one he grabbed in Turin. There's little chance of skateboarding making it to Beijing in 2008, but he'll only be 25 when the 2012 Summer Games are held in London.

Given the sport's rising profile and the International Olympic Committee's eagerness to keep the Games up with the times, it's not out of the question.

"I would definitely go for it," he said. "It would be pretty amazing to get winter and summer medals. I don't know too many people that have done that."

Team Halls of Fame having resurgence

by DAN SEWELL
ASSOCIATED PRESS

CINCINNATI — The 1919 World Series is known historically for the Black Sox Scandal, the exile of eight Chicago White Sox players from baseball for conspiring with gamblers to fix the series they were heavily favored to win.

In Cincinnati, it's also known for the Reds' first world championship. And an eclectic new display of 1919 Series artifacts offers the first extensive Reds-eye view of the scandal and makes the point that the Reds were a very good team — best record in baseball that year — and could have beaten the Sox whether they were trying to lose or not.

Hey, this is Cincinnati's history, not Chicago's.

"We wanted to have a sense of pride in that 1919 team, tell sort of the lost side of the story. It's always been told from the point of view of the White Sox," explained Greg Rhodes, executive director of the Cincinnati Reds Hall of Fame and Museum.

The exhibit, which includes the ball hit by the legendary Shoeless Joe Jackson for the final out and silent-film footage of the series, has been a hit since opening in May. Impressed by the interest shown, Rhodes is looking ahead to developing a tour of Cincinnati sites connected to the scandal that spawned myriad books and Hollywood movies such as "Eight Men Out" and "Field of Dreams."

The Reds, who opened their museum in September 2004, are one of only a handful of major league teams with facilities dedicated to their history and best players. But several teams, including St. Louis, Atlanta and Baltimore, have recently expanded museums or have plans to, and the Kansas City Royals plan to build a museum at their stadium.

Paula Homan, curator of the St. Louis Cardinals' museum, said baseball fans often feel very personal connections to their teams, and want to share that with children and grandchildren.

"There's the ability to relive memories, for grandfathers to stand in front of the Stan Musial display and hand down stories of their memories of Stan Musial," she said. "There are fans who want to come into the museum and pore over every single case."

All of that is fine with the National Baseball Hall of Fame in Cooperstown, N.Y., which has loaned out exhibits and artifacts to support individual teams' efforts to showcase baseball history in other parts of the country.

"Cooperstown isn't accessible to everybody," said Hall of Fame spokesman Jeff Idleson.

Cooperstown gets 300,000 to 350,000 visitors a year; the team sites each draw about 20 percent to 25 percent of that.

Cincinnati seems a natural spot for a baseball museum. It was here that the first professional baseball team was born with the 1869 Red Stockings. The team's history is loaded with other milestones such as the first night game (1935), the only pitcher (Johnny Vander Meer in 1938) to pitch back-to-back no-hitters, the youngest player in modern history (15-year-old Joe Nuxhall in 1944), and the breaking of baseball's all-time hit record by Cincinnati native Pete Rose (1985).

Opening Day each year is virtually a local holiday, with a downtown parade featuring politicians and celebrities preceding the game.

Rhodes said there had been talk of a Reds Hall of Fame Museum for decades. One longtime fan, Dan Cron, formed a nonprofit corporation with the thought of one day creating a museum with memorabilia he began accumulating as a boy in Celina, Ohio, and added to at auctions and with the trove of a retired Reds usher.

However, the team even discontinued electing team Hall of Fame members for nearly a decade, until Reds executive John Allen revived the practice in 1998. The club then included a museum in planning for its new Great American Ball Park, which opened three years ago.

Rhodes, who brought experience from the Cincinnati Historical Society and Museum Center, said the goal for the $10 million project was a family-oriented attraction combining memorabilia with interactive exhibits and themed areas in its 16,000 square feet of exhibit space.

Visitors can pitch off a regulation-sized mound to a plate 60 feet, 6 inches away, leap against an outfield wall to simulate a home run-stealing catch, broadcast their own play-by-play of Reds highlights, or pick up a phone to hear former Reds leaders discuss trades and strategy.

Among themed exhibits are "Glory Days," where fans of a team who last won the World Series in 1990 can relive winners such as the dominating "Big Red Machine" championships of 1975-76, and "Baseball Heaven," a fantasy rec room with bobbleheads, baseball cards, scorecards and a TV running Reds highlights and bloopers.

There are hundreds of jerseys, bats, balls and other artifacts, many loaned by collectors such as Cron, and eye-catching touches such as a nearly one-ton wooden replica of a bat honoring the '69 Red Stockings and a 30-foot-high wall display of 4,256 baseballs, representing Rose's career hit total. A new display has the baseball and special Reds jacket from President Bush's ceremonial first pitch on opening day this year.

Jack Hennes, an elementary school teacher in eastern Ohio, recently brought 17 fifth- and sixth-graders through the museum. He said that for serious fans of baseball, there was plenty to study, while others had a ball with the interactive exhibits.

"They were all thrilled," he said. "It was a great visit, to have the interactive things for the kids and a lot of things for adults."

A frequent visitor is Jim O'Toole, a 1960s pitching mainstay who's a Reds Hall of Fame honoree. O'Toole says that with 11 children and 31 grandchildren, it's a wonderful place to relive and share memories.

"To have a reminder that you used to be part of all that, and to be part of the Reds Hall of Fame, that makes my life complete," O'Toole said.

Rhodes says a frequent question from visitors is whether Rose is a member of the Reds' hall. The answer is no, because his ban from baseball for betting on games extends to his old team.

Rhodes is hopeful that a future baseball commissioner will allow Rose's induction into the Cincinnati hall, and he notes that the hard line is a Black Sox legacy.

"Major League Baseball created these very stiff penalties, lifetime suspensions, as a result of the 1919 scandal. They never wanted betting to taint the game again," Rhodes said. "Pete was a victim of that. He broke the wrong rule."

EKU Football teams up with Backfield in Motion

SPECIAL TO THE TIMES

RICHMOND — For the third consecutive year, the Eastern Kentucky University football team has teamed up with Backfield in Motion to host two weeks of summer camps on the campus of EKU. Thirty-four inner city middle school aged youths spent five days in Richmond filled with academic classes, educational field trips, job shadowing experiences and recreation.

Backfield in Motion strives to give inner city youth of Nashville, Tenn., a chance to develop both their academic and athletic skills to reach their highest potential. The organization's founder and primary benefactor, Joe Davis, was a kicker on the Eastern football squad in the 1980s. In an effort to give the participants a preview of college life, the Backfield in Motion Summer Academic Camp was introduced in 2004 with Eastern Kentucky University chosen as the host site.

"We are delighted to be associated with the Backfield in Motion program," said Sally Hope, wife of EKU football coach Danny Hope and the coordinator for the Backfield in Motion summer camp. "We strongly believe in its mission statement and, in the three years we have hosted the Backfield in Motion campers," have already begun to see the positive impact that the Backfield in Motion program is having on the Nashville community."

Most mornings at EKU, the campers attended classes such as language arts, drug awareness, sexual harassment and first aid. Other activities included field trips to the police and fire stations, Barnes Mill Animal Hospital to watch a surgery, Robert Palmer Dentistry, Commonwealth

Ford and Wallingford Broadcasting. The campers were also given a chance to take a tour of Berea College.

Eastern Kentucky players and coaches served as mentors for the kids while emphasizing that a college education is an opportunity that is very real for them. Senior defensive standouts Mark Cristiani and Steven Cassell spoke to the campers about the requirements and responsibilities of being a student-athlete. Various other representatives from around campus — Financial Aid, Admissions and Public Safety — offered their insights during evening sessions.

Both weeks of camp concluded with a banquet to honor the Backfield in Motion campers for their hard work during the week. Rita Smart, who recently retired from the Madison County Extension Office, presented an etiquette lesson as the banquet was taking place, presenting yet another learning experience for the campers. The keynote banquet speaker, EKU football team chaplain Howard Miller, encouraged the kids to make sure they were in "proper alignment" in life to get where they want to be just as they would do on the football field to execute a successful play.

Eastern Kentucky will be in search of its 29th consecutive winning season and its first league title since 1997 next fall when the Colonels open the 2006 campaign at Big East foe Cincinnati on Sept. 2

Union picks up a pair from Lee County

TIMES STAFF REPORT

BARBOURVILLE — Union College head baseball coach Bart Osborne recently signed a pair of players from Lee County High.

Corey Thomas and Jason Osborne helped the Bobcats to a 17-7 overall record as they finished as the District 56 runners-up.

"We are pleased to have these two versatile players join our program," Osborne said. "They both will be able to help us out in a variety of ways."

Both Thomas and Jason Osborne served Lee County as right-handed pitchers. Thomas also played centerfield, while Osborne was a third baseman. The Bobcats advanced to the Region 14 semifinal round before losing to Leslie County.

The Bulldogs won their first conference championship in 12 years when they captured the Appalachian Athletic Conference Tournament Title. Union (48-14 overall) advanced to the NAIA Region XII Tournament as the No. 1 seed, but finished the event in third place.

Jockeys' Guild turning to Rev. Jesse Jackson, sports agent

by WILL GRAVES
ASSOCIATED PRESS

LOUISVILLE — The Jockeys' Guild is turning to the Rev. Jesse Jackson and pro sports agent Dwight Manley for help in rebuilding its financially strapped union.

Manley said he signed a two-year contract with the guild to become its national manager. The contract allows him to appoint a co-manager, a position he suggested Jackson could hold following a meeting with guild members earlier this week.

Manley said Thursday that Jackson would be involved with the guild but did not specify in what capacity Jackson would serve.

The Jockeys' Guild represents about 1,200 riders.

Manley will replace acting national manager Darrell Haire, who took over after former guild president L. Wayne Gertmenian was fired last November amid allegations of financial mismanagement.

Manley said he has already begun the transition process and stressed he and Jackson will not be the only ones who will try to repair the guild's reputation.

"There's a lot of layers to this," said Manley, 40. "It's such a big thing. There's going to be 100 people behind the scenes to make all of this happen."

Manley, who represented former NBA stars Karl Malone and Dennis Rodman, interviewed with the guild's senate in Louisville on Monday. Jackson also attended, and both agreed to help the financially troubled union get back on its feet.

While Manley said he understands why some would be taken aback by Jackson's involvement, he's not worried about Jackson's presence being a distraction or a hindrance.

"People didn't think about him as far as hurricanes go either," Manley said. "But when they had a huge disaster or hundreds of thousands of displaced people or people in need, he was there. (The jockeys) have been stuck in a hurricane for 60 or 70 years, and now somebody is coming to help."

Jackson is the founder and president of the Rainbow/PUSH Coalition.

"I think Jesse Jackson opens doors for the jockeys that it couldn't get within a thousand miles of," guild attorney Barry Broad said.

The guild was on the brink of financial ruin when Gertmenian was fired in November after allowing the guild's health care coverage to lapse.

Among the key issues facing jockeys are safety, insurance, endorsements and an upward change in the scale of weights.

Gordon a winner again, and shows surprising emotion

by MIKE HARRIS
ASSOCIATED PRESS

It's true Jeff Gordon hasn't won races in bunches lately, but it still was a little surprising to see the four-time NASCAR champion get so emotional after his latest win Sunday on the road course in Sonoma, Calif.

Gordon said he became choked up while driving toward Victory Lane after stopping to pick up the checkered flag.

This wasn't just another victory, though. There were a lot of dynamics at play.

Gordon, divorced very publicly and expensively in 2003, finally told family and friends Saturday night about his month-old secret engagement to Ingrid Vandebosch, the Belgian model and actress he has been dating for nearly two years.

He could even laugh and joke when asked if she was going to sign a prenuptial agreement, saying: "Well, you'll have to talk to her about that."

Then there was the fact that Infineon Raceway is just 20 miles or so from Vallejo, the California town in which Gordon spent his early years, and the Sonoma track is where he hears the fewest boos and where he is surrounded by loved ones and pals.

Finally, Gordon had not been to Victory Lane since winning last October on the short track at Martinsville, Va. He had gone as far as the 16th race of a season without a victory in NASCAR's top stock car series only twice before — his winless rookie year of 1993 and in 2002, when he finally won in the 24th race of the year at Bristol and wound up with three victories.

For those who thought that nearly $100 million in earnings, 73 previous wins in NASCAR's top series and the multiple championships might have dulled his desire for victory, think again.

Gordon acknowledged this latest winless string bothered him enough that he tried to avoid references to it.

"Well, one way I cope with it is I try not to read the paper or go to NASCAR.com or any other Web site that might show, 'Gordon had trouble again,' 'Gordon doesn't win again,' 'When is it going to happen?' I just stayed away from all that stuff as much as I could.

"Winning is what drives me," he added. "There's not enough money in the world that you can give to buy that feeling."

Team owner and friend Rick Hendrick saw how tough this last year has been on Gordon.

"Winning means a lot to him," Hendrick said. "When he doesn't win races, he needs to know why it's not happening. Sometimes, there's just no good answer and that's difficult to deal with."

The Rainbow Warrior was masterful in this latest win, patiently working his way from an 11th-place start to the lead just before the halfway point, then just as patiently hunting down and passing sometime-teammate Terry Labonte, whose fuel strategy had put him ahead in the late stages.

Gordon has had slumps before, but this one hurt more because the man generally considered the stock car sport's biggest star failed to make it into NASCAR's showcase last year, falling short of qualifying for the 10-race Chase for the Nextel Cup championship.

He and new crew chief Steve Letarte, who took over from Robbie Loomis with 10 races to go last year, felt like they were building some momentum as 2005 ended. But this season got off on the wrong foot with a crash and a 26th-place finish in the Daytona 500.

Since then, it seemed like every good performance was offset with a bad one.

Now, for only the second time in 2006, and the first time since March, Gordon has two straight top-10 finishes. He finished eighth two weeks ago at Michigan.

More important, this latest surge has thrust him squarely back into the race for the Chase. Gordon heads to Daytona for Saturday night's Pepsi 400 eighth in the standings and feeling good about his prospects for the rest of the season — and for making some more appearances in Victory Lane.

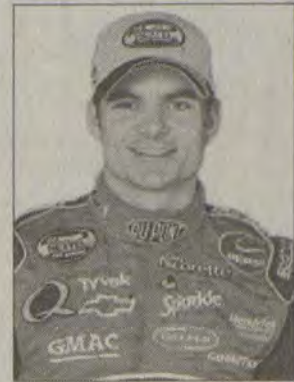

Gordon, who won his first race in a go-kart when he was about 6, said he still gets the same burst of energy and feeling of satisfaction from winning.

"There's no greater feeling," he said. "That's all I've ever raced for is to get that trophy, get to Victory Lane."

Gordon to drive in 2007 Daytona 24-hour race

SPECIAL TO THE TIMES

DAYTONA BEACH, Fla. — Proving that there's no such thing as too much preparation time, Wayne Taylor and SunTrust Racing have hired Jeff

Jeff Gordon

Gordon to drive in the 2007 Rolex 24 At Daytona next January.

Gordon will share driving duties with Taylor and Max Angelelli, who along with teammate Emmanuel Collard, won the Rolex 24 At Daytona in 2005.

"This is something that I've wanted to do for a long time and I'm really looking forward to it," Gordon said. "It was important to me to do this with a quality team like Surrey Sport, and I'm looking forward to teaming up with two champions, Wayne and Max."

"Of all the NASCAR drivers, Jeff's the guy," Taylor said. "He proved again last weekend his road racing skills are outstanding when he won at Sears Point. I think he's going to be an asset to the team for the Rolex 24."

"We were a great season that culminated in the Grand-Am series championship. We welcome Jeff Gordon to the SunTrust team and hope we can achieve another win with him as a teammate."

Transition to NASCAR rough for Jourdain

by CHRIS JENKINS
ASSOCIATED PRESS

MILWAUKEE — There was a time when open-wheel racers looked down their noses at NASCAR, a form of racing they considered not as demanding or sophisticated as Indy-style racing.

But as the money in NASCAR got bigger, a few of those drivers suddenly became more interested. Perhaps, as Roush Racing team president Geoff Smith suggests, they came to view NASCAR as easy money — a way to extend their careers and remain competitive against what they saw as lesser competition.

"I remember like when I was starting in Champ Car, drivers would say, 'Those guys? Those guys are no good as drivers,'" says Michel Jourdain Jr., the latest open-wheel driver trying, and struggling, to break into NASCAR.

Tony Stewart left the Indy Racing League to become a NASCAR champion, and Robby Gordon has three career victories. But others haven't fares as well.

The list of open-wheel drivers who flirted with NASCAR in recent years but haven't established themselves as top-level Nextel Cup material includes established drivers such as John Andretti, Christian Fittipaldi, Scott Pruett, Paul Tracy, Max Papis and Jimmy Vasser.

So when it came time for Jourdain to decide what to do with his future, he didn't take leaving the Champ Car Series lightly.

"I knew it was going to be very, very hard," Jourdain said.

And so far, it has been. Jourdain drove for PPC Racing in the Busch Series last year, but didn't complete a full season because of sponsorship issues. He's only scheduled to make a few Busch starts this year, and recently caught on with Roush to drive a partial schedule in the Craftsman Truck Series — two rungs below Cup.

Even there, he hasn't been an instant success.

Although Jourdain finished a respectable 13th at Texas Motor Speedway in his first truck race for Roush, he struggled at the Milwaukee Mile last weekend — a track where he won in Champ Car in 2003. Jourdain's previous experience at the track didn't do him much good — he failed to qualify for Friday's race.

Smith, who hired Jourdain at the urging of Ford Racing executives, said the team understands he is inexperienced at NASCAR. But their patience will go only so far; Smith needs Jourdain to show enough promise to attract the approximately $2 million in sponsorship money the team needs to give Jourdain a full season in trucks next year.

"We're very enthusiastic about having him here," Smith said. "We really hope it can work over the long haul. But I still have to have a sponsor to do it."

Jourdain acknowledges he's still learning. He said NASCAR cars and trucks are so different from open-wheel cars — they're much heavier, not as aerodynamic and have skinnier tires — that at Milwaukee his previous experience actually hurt him.

"It's not only like you have to learn. I have to forget about everything I knew before, too," he said.

So why bother? Jourdain had two career victories in the Champ Car Series and said he probably could have driven eight more seasons there and done well financially. At 29, he's not over the hill but is older than most drivers being groomed for Cup series rides.

But Jourdain wanted to compete against the best — and today, that means moving to NASCAR.

"I believe this step can give me more in every sense," he said. "I think right now, it's better to win the Daytona 500 than the Indy 500."

Right now, Jourdain is a long way from winning Daytona, or even driving in it.

First, he needs to learn how to drive in NASCAR, something that only comes with experience.

"The first time I drove one of these cars, I was like, 'What's a track bar?' I had no idea what a track bar was," Jourdain said, referring to a suspension adjustment mechanism found on NASCAR cars.

Smith isn't surprised at Jourdain's struggles, given what he has seen from other open-wheel drivers trying to drive in NASCAR.

"It's been a constant source of amusement to me in the last 17 years," Smith said.

Smith said Indy-style cars are such technological and aerodynamic marvels that drivers get "spoiled." Still, Smith is confident Jourdain can learn to drive in NASCAR. And as a native of Mexico, Jourdain's diverse background would be a plus with potential sponsors.

But Smith says his future ultimately depends on results.

"If he can just show a little bit of the blue-sky promise, I think we'll be fine," Smith said.

Jourdain said he's willing to put in the work.

"Is Nextel Cup the main goal? Yes," he said. "Why? Because it's the biggest thing, I believe. And I'm not (as) young as a lot of kids coming in, but I'm a good age that I can have some good years here."

NASCAR to change championship format in 2007

by JENNA FRYER
ASSOCIATED PRESS

DAYTONA BEACH, Fla. — NASCAR chairman Brian France promised slight changes to the sport's championship format, hoping to add more drama to the 10-race title hunt.

"What I have always said about the Chase was we needed a few years under our belt to see how it evolves, how it changes in strategy, see how the actual formula we have really works," France said

Thursday. "Now in our third year ... it's the ideal time for us make adjustments."

France did not specify what areas will be changed in an off-season facelift that will take effect in 2007.

The Chase for the Nextel Cup was devised by France when he took over as chairman in 2004. The format was designed to spice up a stale championship race in which winners were running away with the title and routinely clinching before the season finale.

France wanted more excitement and a dramatic playoff system that could compete with the NFL for television ratings.

The result was the Chase, which uses the first 26 races of the season as a qualifier to set up the title run. The top 10 drivers in the standings automatically make it in, and any drivers within 400 points of the leader are also eligible.

They then compete over the final 10 events to decide the championship.

Although the first season was a success, with five drivers in mathematical contention to win the title heading into the finale, Tony Stewart's 2005 dominating run lacked the same punch.

Several flaws in the system have also been revealed along the way.

Dale Earnhardt Jr. and Jeff Gordon, NASCAR's two biggest stars, were both locked out of the Chase last year because of subpar seasons. The 400-point mark has yet to come into play, and it's been proven that one or two poor finishes — especially at the start of the Chase — can cripple a drivers' title hopes.

"We'll be looking at nothing new — everything that we'll be looking at has been brought up by various people the last couple of years," France said. "Just various things that we think will build what we're hoping for, which are big moments and a bigger stage for the drivers."

"That's what the Chase has always been about. It's about showcasing their skills."

NHRA Jr. Dragster Eastern Conference Finals returning to Bristol Dragway

TIMES STAFF REPORT

BRISTOL, Tenn. — The resounding noise of five-horsepower motors echoing through Thunder Valley next month will signal the return of the NHRA O'Reilly Auto Parts Jr. Drag Racing League Eastern Conference Finals, presented by Pure Power Billet Solid Engines to Bristol Dragway July 10-15.

Since Bristol Dragway began hosting the NHRA-sanctioned event two years ago the number of competitors has increased each year and the trend should continue in 2006.

This year's event will feature more than 600 competitors from 18 states as well as Canada and Puerto Rico. The racing field will be split into eight classes so that drivers will compete against opponents their own age.

While the Eastern Conference Finals don't officially begin until Thursday, July 13, contestants will have numerous opportunities to get acclimated with Thunder Valley's famed racing strip earlier in the week.

A Test & Tune is scheduled to run from noon to 5 p.m. on Monday, July 10. Tuesday's action-packed schedule includes the Gaged Engineering Thunder Valley Challenge for entrants 8-12 years old and 330' Outlaw qualifying and eliminations. The Magnum High Performance Belts Thunder Valley Challenge, for competitors aged 13-17 years old, will take place Wednesday, July 12.

Participants in each class will receive two time trials on Thursday beginning at 8 a.m. with an additional pass on Friday before eliminations start at 2 p.m.

The winners of last year's event were: Zachary Eyring, Glen Burnie, Md. (8-9 age group); Jamison Lopochohnsky, Greenville, Pa., (10); Kelsey Lynn, Marietta, Ga. (11); Lewis Shuman, William Butterworth, Goodlettsville, Tenn. (12); George Farkouh, Brooklyn, N.Y. (13); Michael Bloomfield, Fairfield, Ohio (14); Eric Peterka, Gilbertsville, Pa. (15); Jake Sealey, Aiken, S.C. (16-17). Silver Dollar Raceway, of Reynolds, Ga., won the team championship.

Throughout the week various activities including monster truck rides in War Wizard II, movie night, inflatable games, track tours, and a welcome party and the Vault cookout will keep competitors entertained during their time away from the track.

Spectator tickets are $15 for single days or $40 for the entire event. Children ages six and under are admitted free. For more information, go online to www.bristoldragway.com or call 423/764-Drag.

Floyd County Late Model driver Chuckie May entered Saturday night's O'Reilly NARA Battle of the Bluegrass DirtCar Series event at 201 Speedway looking to cruise to his second straight feature win on the Johnson County track's red clay oval. Results from the race were unavailable at press time.

Best Bets

SUNDAY, JULY 2
7 p.m.
SHOWTIME
Movie: Lemony Snicket's A Series of Unfortunate Events
 Jim Carrey is in full, wacky flourish in director Brad Silberling's stylish, faithful take on Daniel Handler's books. Three orphans (Emily Browning, Liam Aiken, and twins Kara and Shelby Hoffman) are set to stay with a series of guardians, the most notorious being Count Olaf (Carrey), who adopts disguises in trying to swindle the kids out of the fortune they've inherited. Meryl Streep has a fun turn as another of their parental surrogates.

7:30 p.m.
FOX
Movie: Men of Honor
 Known more for his comedic work, Cuba Gooding Jr. does a good job in director George Tillman Jr.'s ("Soul Food") 2000 drama. It is the true story of Carl Brashear, the first black diver in the history of the U.S. Navy -- and whose name is not recognizable to most people. He faces various challenges, not the least of which is a no-nonsense commander (Robert De Niro). But everyone knows that enlisting in the military means shaping up or shipping out.

8 p.m.
ESPN
MLB Baseball
 Winning series is what counts in baseball, as managers often say, and the New York Mets have done their fair share of that this season, which is why they're comfortably nestled in first place in the NL East. Among their victims have been the New York Yankees, who lost two of three -- all one-run affairs -- to their cross-city rivals in May. Tonight Carlos Delgado and the Mets play the last of six interleague games against Derek Jeter and the Bombers.

9 p.m. check local listings
PBS
Great Performances
 The man from the frighteningly perfect Lake Wobegon takes his act on the road for "Garrison Keillor's Independence Day Special: A Prairie Home Companion at Tanglewood." Meryl Streep joins private eye Guy Noir, cowboys Dusty and Lefty, and other denizens of Keillor's imaginary Minnesota town for a Fourth of July celebration from the famed Massachusetts music venue. Tunes are provided by the Hopeful Gospel Quartet, Waitin' Jennys and Guy's All-Star Shoe Band.

9 p.m.
SHOWTIME
Movie: A Love Song for Bobby Long
 Nothing like having your life controlled by a dead person. In this 2004 drama, a young woman (Scarlett Johansson) arrives in New Orleans to claim the house she reportedly inherited from her mom. She discovers she has competition: a dissipated, hard-drinking professor (John Travolta) and his protegee (Gabriel Macht), who insist the dead woman, a friend of theirs, left it to them. The three reach an uneasy truce and ultimately a bond that benefits two of them.

MONDAY, JULY 3
6:30 p.m.
HBO
Movie: Antz
 Released before "A Bug's Life" -- and sadly, overshadowed by it at the time -- in the showdown of computer-animated movies about insects, this well-made 1998 fantasy boasts an all-star voice cast. Woody Allen, Sharon Stone, Sylvester Stallone, Gene Hackman, Jennifer Lopez and Danny Glover are heard in the story of the romance that develops between a princess (Stone) and a reluctant soldier (Allen) as an ant colony prepares for battle.

7 p.m.
TCM
The Wonderful Wizard of Oz: 50 Years of Magic
 This special was made in 1989, hence the title; it's actually been 67 years since "Wizard" came out, and yes, we feel old. Like the movie, though, it's still enjoyable and will enhance your appreciation of the film. Actress Angela Lansbury takes a look back at the production of the 1939 classic, which stunned audiences with its brilliant use of color. The documentary includes rare film clips, casting calls and memories from the movie's stars.

9 p.m.
ABC
Supernanny
 How bad is little Skyler? So bad that she got kicked out of day care, and Mom had to quit working to stay home with her. She's only 3, but she knows how to make her parents and older brother bend to her every whim with her explosive tantrums. If Supernanny can tame this wild child, she deserves combat pay. But first she needs to teach the parents a thing or two -- especially Dad, who thinks his "little princess" can do no wrong.

Best

December 1997. The family called in two psychics experienced in working with police, Pam Coronado and Laurie Campbell, to search for clues. The special follows the two women as they work with the Boulder, Colo., police to crack the case.

10:30 p.m. SPIKETV
Raising the Roofs
This new unscripted series stars actor Michael Roof Jr. as himself -- a working actor in Los Angeles who can be seen in "Black Hawk Down," "The Dukes of Hazzard" and both "XXX" flicks. He comes from a boisterous back-country family in a small Florida town, which considers him the local boy who made good. In the show, his dad, uncle and pet pig pay Roof a long-term visit, so expect some hog-wild, "Beverly Hillsbillies"-style comedy, only real.

FRIDAY, JULY 7
9 p.m. DISNEY
Movie: Monsters, Inc.
This computer-animated 2001 comedy from Pixar is stunning for its technical sophistication, but it's also a surprisingly touching fantasy yarn that stands "monster in the closet" lore on its head. In Monsteropolis, scary monster James P. "Sulley" Sullivan (voice of John Goodman) and his colleague Mike Wazowski (voice of Billy Crystal) uncover dirty doings after a toddler called Boo wanders into the monster world.

9 p.m. SCI-FI
Quest for Atlantis: Startling New Secrets
This well-done new special attempts to separate the "sci" from the "fi" surrounding the legend of Atlantis. Did it really exist? And if so, what happened to it? Hosted by an actual journalist -- NBC's Natalie Morales -- it examines all the theories, from the outrageous (aliens and humans met and mated there) to the plausible (a seismic event or flood sank it). There's definitely plenty to think about here.

10 p.m. USA
Psych
James Roday ("The Dukes of Hazzard") stars in this new drama series as Shawn Spencer, a police consultant with amazing powers of observation. He developed them with the help of his father (Corbin Bernsen), who isn't too crazy about his son's career choice. The police, however, appreciate his help solving crimes, although some of them suspect he's psychic. Dule Hill, Timothy Omundson and Kirsten Nelson also star.

SATURDAY, JULY 8
9 a.m. NBC
Tennis
Surprise, surprise, Venus Williams provided the first when she won the 2005 Wimbledon title as a No. 14 seed, and the second could come today during the women's final if Venus isn't a part of it. At least one Williams sister has made it this far every year since 2000, and we know for sure it won't be Serena, who didn't play because of a knee injury. Ted Robinson, John McEnroe, Mary Carillo, Jimmy Roberts and Bud Collins make up NBC's crew in England.

8 p.m. HBO
Movie: The 40-Year-Old Virgin
Steve Carell ("The Office") scored a sleeper hit as the co-writer -- with director Judd Apatow -- and star of this comedy about a man whose experience with physical intimacy has been limited, to put it mildly. His coworkers and pals try to help him catch up, but he has ideas of his own, especially when he meets an appealing single mother (Catherine Keener). Seth Rogen and Paul Rudd costar.

8 p.m. SHOWTIME
Movie: Crash
Paul Haggis, who adapted "Million Dollar Baby," earned added acclaim as the writer-director of this intense drama about diverse Los Angeles residents linked by circumstances. The strong cast includes Sandra Bullock and Brendan Fraser as a politically connected couple who become urban-crime victims; Don Cheadle as a police detective on a racially charged internal investigation; and Matt Dillon as a racist in a cop's uniform.

10 p.m. CINEMAX
Movie: Wedding Crashers
Nobody likes these type of guys in reality, but apparently, movie versions are great. Last year's top comedy "sleeper," this bawdy tale casts Vince Vaughn and Owen Wilson as lawyers who attend weddings to which they haven't been invited -- to meet women. The rules change when Wilson's character finds love with the daughter (Rachel McAdams) of a politician (Christopher Walken). Jane Seymour has a hilariously image busting role as the woman's mother.

Fishing for Dinner Ideas?

Recipes You'll Go Nuts Over

FAMILY FEATURES

When you're pondering that age-old question — "What's for dinner?" — look again at two all-American classics served up in fresh, innovative ways. You're gonna love how versatile U.S. farm-raised catfish and U.S.A.-grown peanuts take to a variety of flavors and cooking methods when they team up for quick and easy dinners.

U.S. farm-raised catfish, with its mild, sweet flavor, is delicious any way you cook it — grilled, broiled and baked, as well as the traditional fried. Likewise, U.S.A.-grown peanuts and peanut butter have come a long way from the ballpark to the plate as chefs and home cooks alike put the peanut to work as a showcase ingredient. Healthful, versatile and flavorful, peanuts today enhance gourmet menus, from the catch of the day to Pad Thai.

So, grill catfish with a peanut glaze, toss cooked rice with orange zest, parsley and orange segments, and serve. Drizzle catfish with a gingered teriyaki sauce, bake, then serve with peanut noodles and sugar snap peas. Spread the fish with a crunchy peanut and coconut topping, bake, then serve with sliced tomatoes and a green salad. Dinner's ready!

You're Gonna Love It

Don't you love it when a food tastes great and is also good for you?

- U.S.A.-grown peanuts are healthful sources of vegetable protein and are a good source of more than 30 essential nutrients and phytonutrients. They have zero cholesterol.
- Scientific evidence suggests that eating 1.5 ounces per day of most nuts, including peanuts, as part of a diet low in saturated fat and cholesterol may reduce the risk of heart disease.
- U.S. farm-raised catfish is delicious and safe to eat. Raised in clean, environmentally friendly freshwater ponds and processed under strict quality controls, this consistently mild-tasting fish is virtually mercury-free.
- Farm-raised catfish is an excellent source of protein that's low in saturated fat and contains omega-3 fatty acids.

Gingered Catfish, Peanut Noodles and Sugar Snap Peas

- 1/4 cup teriyaki sauce
- 1/2 teaspoon grated fresh gingerroot or 1/8 teaspoon dried ginger
- 1/2 cup plain dry breadcrumbs
- 4 U.S. farm-raised catfish fillets (6 ounces each), halved crosswise
- 1/3 cup chunky peanut butter
- 1 tablespoon rice vinegar
- 1/8 teaspoon crushed red pepper flakes
- 3 cups cooked vermicelli noodles (6 ounces uncooked)
- 2 cups frozen sugar snap peas, defrosted

Heat oven to 450°F. Spray baking sheet with nonstick cooking spray; set aside.

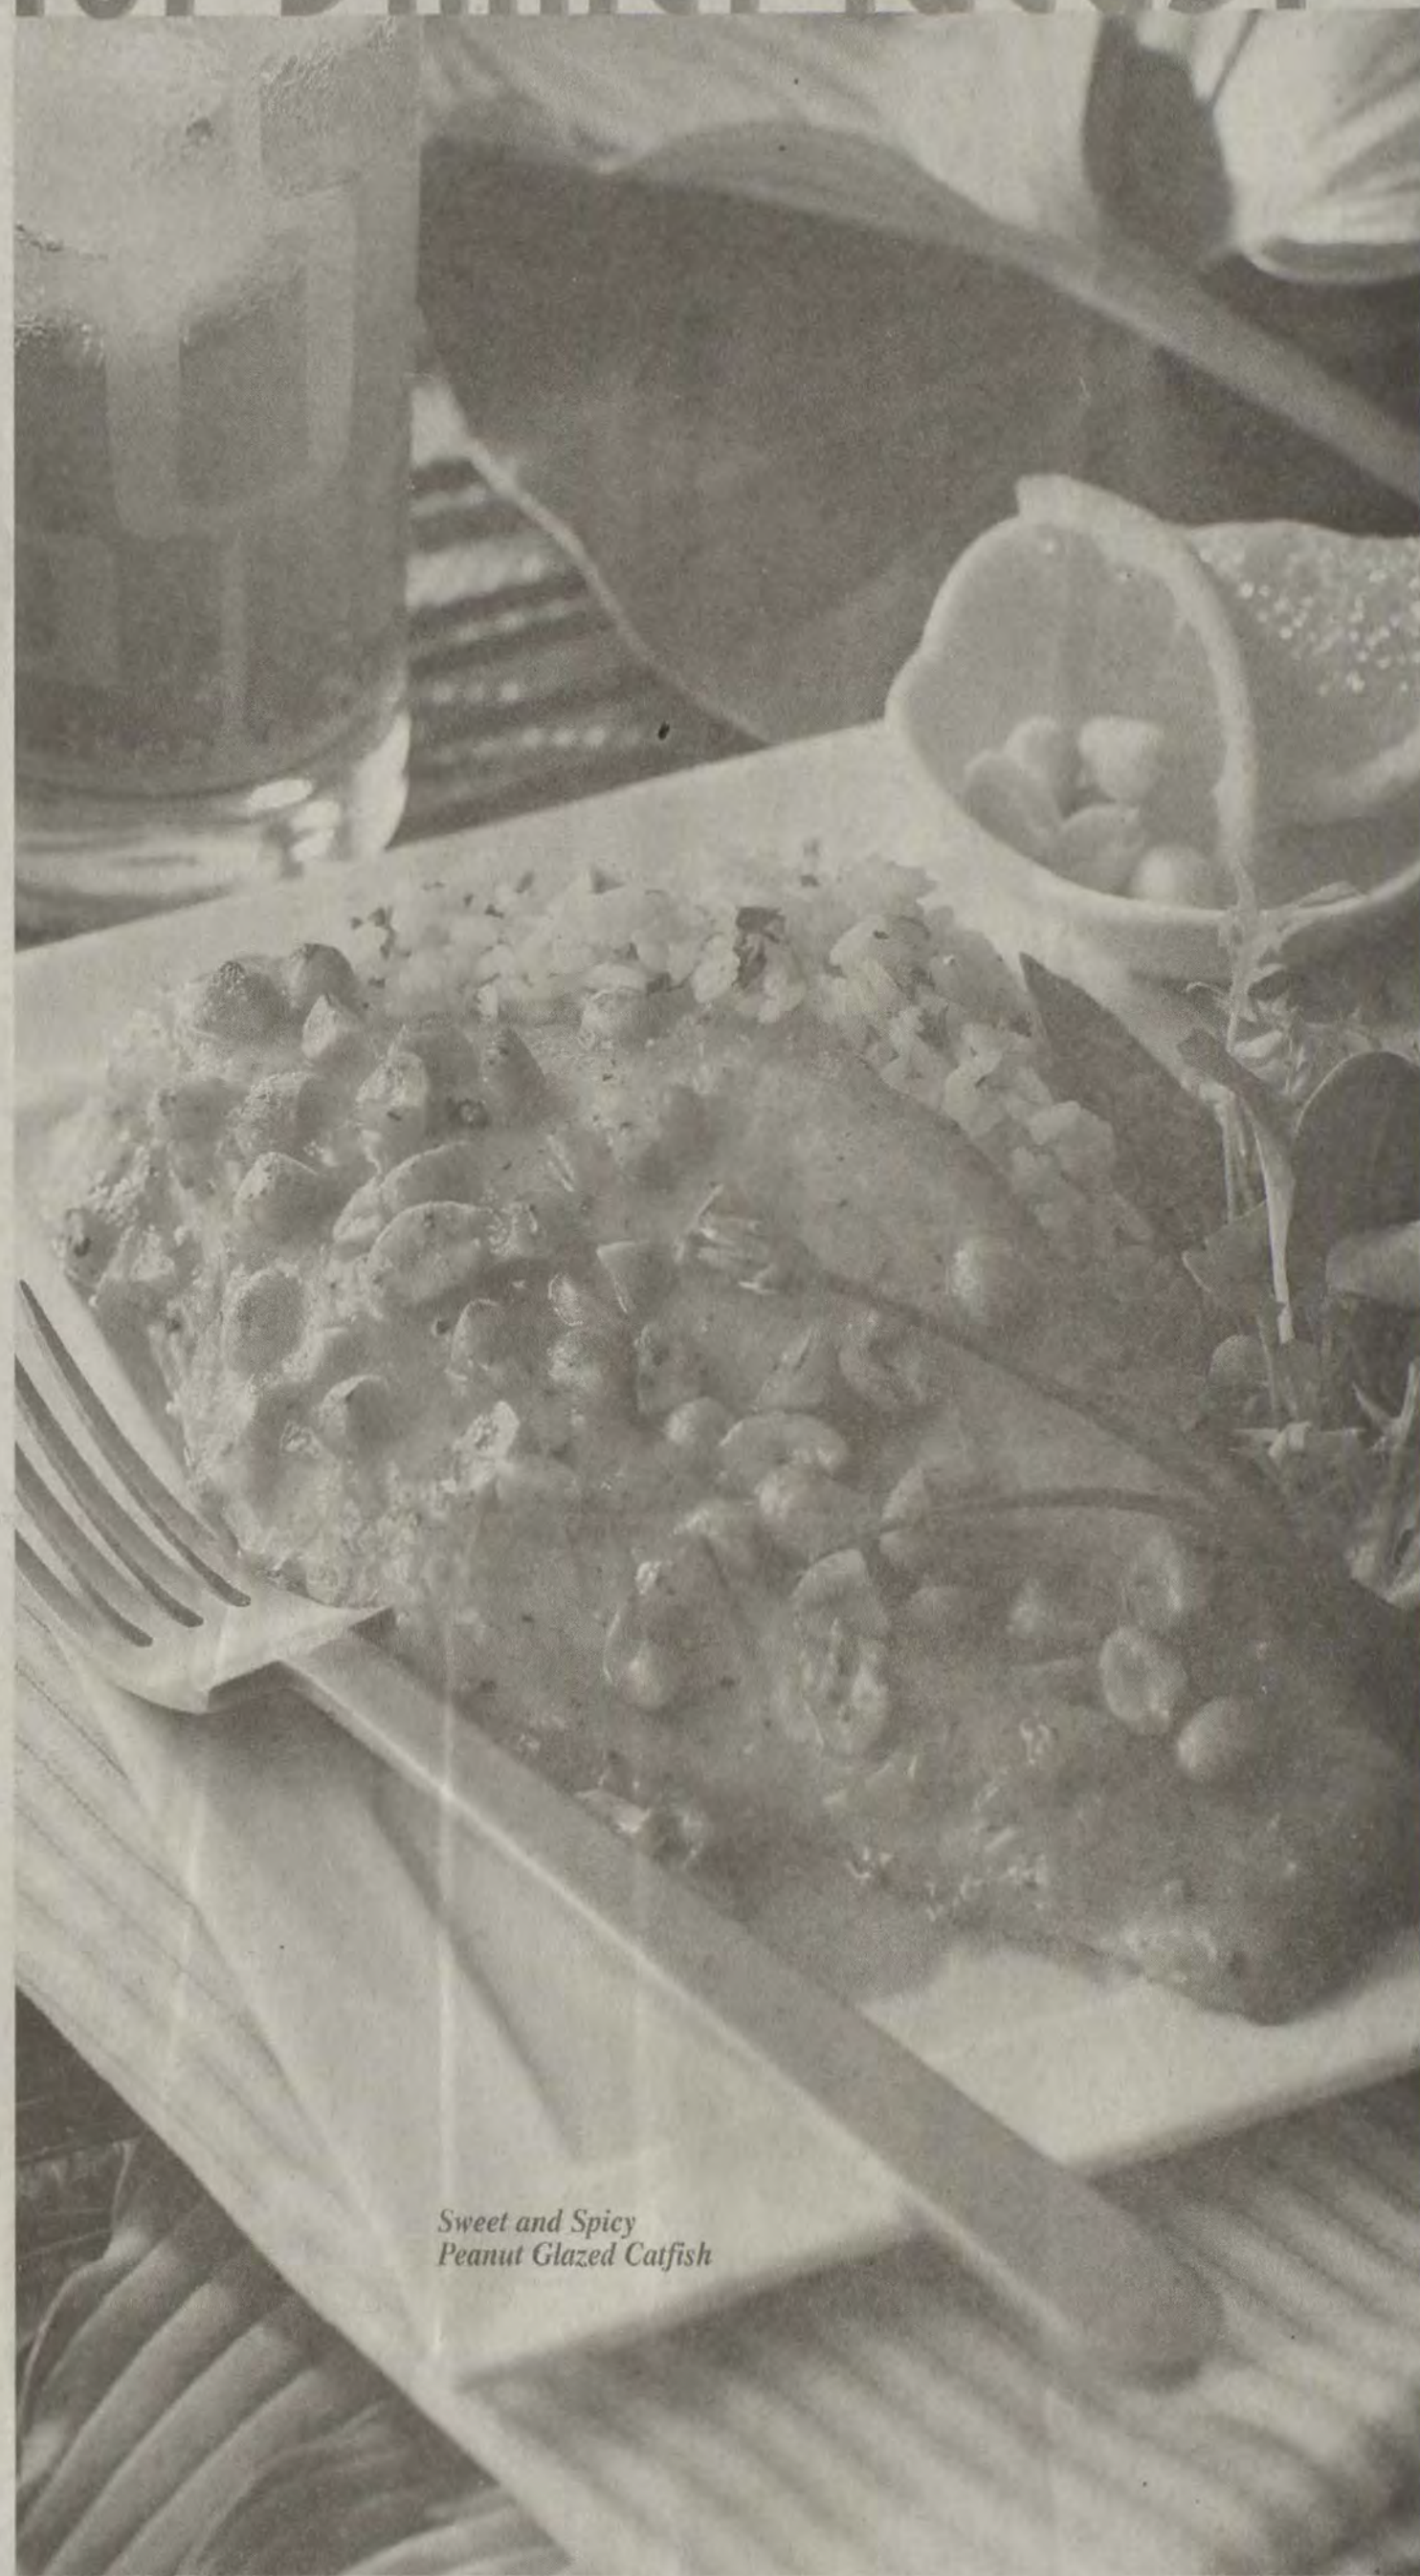

In small bowl, combine teriyaki sauce with ginger. Remove 1 tablespoon teriyaki mixture to medium bowl. Place breadcrumbs on plate. Gently pat catfish fillets with paper towels to dry. Add catfish to teriyaki mixture in medium bowl and toss gently. Coat each fillet with breadcrumbs; place on prepared baking sheet. Spray fillets with nonstick cooking spray. Bake until fish is opaque in center, 10 to 13 minutes, depending on size.

To remaining teriyaki mixture in small bowl, stir in peanut butter, vinegar and red pepper flakes, stirring until smooth and adding water until saucy, 1 tablespoon at a time. Set aside 1/4 cup peanut sauce; toss remaining sauce with cooked noodles.

To serve, arrange peanut noodles on platter. Top with sugar snap peas and hot catfish. If desired, garnish with sliced scallions (green onions). Drizzle catfish with reserved peanut sauce.

Sweet and Spicy Peanut Glazed Catfish

Sweet and Spicy Peanut Glazed Catfish

- 4 U.S. farm-raised catfish fillets (about 6 ounces each)
- 2 tablespoons orange marmalade
- 1 tablespoon reduced-fat peanut butter
- 1/2 teaspoon paprika
- 1/4 teaspoon finely minced garlic
- 1/4 teaspoon salt
- 1/4 teaspoon black pepper
- 1/8 to 1/4 teaspoon ground red pepper
- 1/4 cup dry roasted peanuts, chopped
- 2 cups cooked rice

Preheat oven to 450°F or grill to medium.

Season both sides of fillets with salt and pepper, if desired. In small bowl, combine marmalade, peanut butter, paprika, garlic, salt, and black and red peppers; stir in peanuts. Spread fillets with peanut mixture, dividing evenly. Place fillets on greased baking pan or greased grill rack. Cook until fish is opaque in center, 8 to 10 minutes, depending on size.

Serve with rice tossed with orange zest and parsley and orange segments, if desired.

Catfish With Peanut-Coconut Crust

- 1/3 cup honey-roasted peanuts, finely chopped
- 1/4 cup crumbled honey-nut shredded wheat cereal
- 2 tablespoons shredded coconut
- 2 tablespoons minced scallion (green onion), divided
- 1/3 cup duck sauce (sweet and sour sauce)
- 1 tablespoon low-sodium soy sauce
- 1/4 teaspoon finely minced garlic
- 4 U.S. farm-raised catfish fillets (about 6 ounces each)

Spray baking sheet with nonstick cooking spray; set aside.

In large bowl, combine peanuts, cereal crumbs, coconut and 1 tablespoon scallion; set aside.

In small bowl, combine duck sauce, soy sauce, garlic and remaining 1 tablespoon scallion. Remove 2 tablespoons of mixture; brush over fillets. Place fillets on prepared baking sheet. Sprinkle fillets with peanut-coconut mixture, dividing evenly. Bake until fish is opaque in center, 10 to 12 minutes, depending on size.

Serve with remaining sauce mixture.
