Hearing slated for shooting

by ALEX SMITH
STAFF WRITER

PRESTONSBURG — An Estill man who allegedly shot his own father had a pretrial conference set for Nov. 2 in circuit court Friday.

Edward Lee Jones Jr., 43, was indicted by a Floyd County grand jury July 20 on a charge of first-degree assault for allegedly causing serious injuries to his father, Edward Jones Sr., on June 1 when he allegedly shot him. Det. Byron Hansford of the Kentucky State Police was the arresting officer.

Before the November pretrial conference can take place, Jones will be evaluated by doctors to make sure that he is fit to be in court on the order of Judge Danny P. Caudill. A doctor will have to testify about Jones' health in court at a date that has not yet been set.

Jones' bond has been set at $75,000 and he remains in jail on the felony charge.

Sheriff John K. Blackburn spoke with frustrated Wayland residents who are concerned with crime and drugs in their town.

Sheriff discusses crime with concerned Wayland residents

STAFF WRITER

WAYLAND — Some Wayland residents are trying to take back their town, saying it is ridden with crime and drugs.

Floyd County Sheriff John K. Blackburn met with the residents Thursday evening, in an attempt to gain a better understanding of what problems have arisen since the town hasn't had a police officer.

As soon as Blackburn arrived at Wayland City Hall, residents began arriving also with the expectation that someone would be there to open up the building. After a few minutes of waiting and conversing with one another, Blackburn and the residents decided to continue with the meeting outside, despite not having a formal setting.

"I've talked with Mayor [Tommy] Murphy and they are trying very hard to hire someone," Blackburn said. Residents informed the sheriff that council members had interviewed some-

Wednesday, but that applicant still had a couple more weeks of training to complete. Other than that, they were not sure of the outcome of the meeting.

Residents said it would help if officers performed random checks of the town, just to let people know that they were being watched. Blackburn said that he does have an officer in the area that does do checks from time to time.

Residents complained that

Betsy Layne basketball legend dies

by STEVE LeMASTER
SPORTS EDITOR

COLUMBIA, S.C. — Mare Creek native and basketball legend Grady Wallace passed away Thursday at his South Carolina home.

Wallace, 72, was a Betsy Layne High School graduate who went on to become the University of South Carolina men's basketball program's all-time leading scorer.

In a storied basketball career that started in Floyd County and ended in South Carolina, Wallace scored with ease amongst some of the nation's top basketball players.

In 1957, during his college-playing career, Wallace led the nation in scoring (31.3 points per game) and the Atlantic Coast Conference in rebounding (14.4 per game). The Floyd County native ranked above some elite players, outscoring both Kansas' Wilt Chamberlain and Seattle's Elgin Baylor, both of whom put together remarkable professional basketball careers and are

Man gets year for robbery

by ALEX SMITH

PRESTONSBURG — A Floyd County man charged with assault and robbery last year was sentenced to five years in prison, but will only spend 37 more days in prison because the sentence was probated.

Shawn Sexton, 22, was originally charged with first-degree robbery and first-degree assault to go along with a persistent felony offender charge, but all the charges except the robbery charge were dismissed because first-degree robbery means to take something with physical force, making the

Voiceless in America Student conducts experiment in Prestonsburg

STAFF WRITER

As you read this article, imagine if written words were your only form of communication with the world around you.

Experts around the country say that communication is a key element in any type of environment, whether it be a personal or a business relationship. What would your life be like if you didn't have the ability to speak to others?

Just trying to stay silent for five minutes is struggle for some people, but a young college student from Cleveland, Ohio, is attempting to define what it's like to not have a voice.

Alex Frissel is a Rochester University student who has received a $3,000 Schimmel Fellowship grant to conduct a three week study about how people in different communities around the country react towards someone who does not have the ability to use verbal communication. Frissel wants to experience what it's like to be

As part of his experiment to see how people would react to him being mute, Alex Frissel conducted a poll for The Floyd County Times, asking people what sense they would miss the most if they lost it. Above are some of the responses he received.

MSU provost to step down

The Associated Press

MOREHEAD — Morehead State provost Michael R. Moore will step down next June the university announced on Friday.

Moore has spent nine years working for the school's administration, first as the executive vice president for academic affairs and dean of faculty in 1997 before becoming the school's first provost in 2001.

Moore will return to teaching speech and communication classes after leaving the position on June 30, 2007.

"When I first moved into an administrative position as a department chair, I knew I wanted to eventually be back in the classroom learning with my students," Moore said. "After 23 years as a department chair, dean and provost, that time has come."

Moore is the second-longest tenured academic officer in the history of the university. Warren C. Lappin served 31 years on the job before retiring in 1971.

the people causing all of the trouble have police scanners and know when there is an officer around, so it unlikely that they will participate in any unlawful manner knowing this.

Blackburn said it's hard for him to put an officer in every location at all times of the day and night. "There are five cities in the county and it's hard to keep a constant eye on the entire county," Blackburn said.

Blackburn explained to residents that it would be hard to get a deputy to move to the area. He said that if residents could find a place where the officer could live, then it might be possible he could get someone to relocate.

Residents were curious to know what the sheriff's boundaries were when it came to investigating possible drug hangouts and how they could rid the town of the people who were bringing the drugs to the area.

"We can visit a residence thought to be involved with drugs and let them know we are having complaints and ask for them to sign for a consent to search," Blackburn said.

After much discussion over the continuing crime, Blackburn suggested that residents form a "Neighborhood Watch" program. He said such programs have been successful in others communities and concerned Wayland residents should consider it. He offered to get the residents the forms they need to fill out for signs and bumper stickers, but warned that the program won't work without the participation of the entire community.

"One person can't do it alone," Blackburn said.

Blackburn said he will try to keep a closer watch on the town and he's hopeful that they will soon have their own officer.

When residents directed Sheriff Blackburn toward one residence where they think that most of the drug activity is originating, he said, "Well, maybe we'll just go down there and pay them a visit."

The next day, Blackburn said he visited the house where residents seem to think that a lot of the drug activity is happening in the town.

"I did ask for a consent to search and the occupant of the house declined," Blackburn said. "I also let that person know that we are watching and we intend to find out if there is any drug activity going on in the home."

Blackburn said people have the right to refuse a search of their home and, once denied, the sheriff's department cannot search the home without a warrant unless they give their consent.

Caudill told Sexton he was very fortunate to get the sentence that he did and he should take advantage of the opportunity he had been given because it was a good one.

two of the all-time best.

Wallace, who played at Pikeville College before moving out of state, holds the South Carolina career scoring (28.0 ppg) and single-season scoring average (31.3) records. The Betsy Layne High product was the first USC player to have his jersey retired.

Many of Wallace's scoring efforts were tops in the South Carolina program's history for many years. He set a single-game record with 54 points (the record has since been broken).

In his final game in a South Carolina uniform, Wallace scored 44 points and pulled down 20 rebounds, both game-highs.

Wallace is a member of both the Pikeville College and University of South Carolina halls of fame.

When his playing days ended, Wallace played in an industrial basketball league and eventually returned to South Carolina and married the former Janet Boney. While working for South Carolina's probation, pardon and parole board, Wallace coached basketball at Cardinal Newman (S.C.) High School. He coached at Cardinal Newman High for nine years, winning two state titles. His career with the state probation, pardon and parole board spanned 30 years.

Wallace was survived by his wife, daughter Leigh Ann Wallace and son Thomas Wallace, among others.

He was laid to rest Saturday at the St. Peter's Catholic Cemetery in Columbia, S.C.

Voicelless

voiceless in America.

The misconception that many people make when they meet him is assuming that he cannot hear either. In reality, he is perfectly capable of hearing and speaking. He has only taken a vow of silence for this three-week span.

He carries a spiral notebook with him wherever he goes and a card that reads, "I do not speak. I can hear perfectly well. I am a student journalist traveling across the country. Do you have time to answer a few questions?" Anytime that he needs to communicate with someone, he writes it down for the other person to read.

Frissel says that people are generally polite and don't seem to be taken back by his false inability to speak. During his recent visit to Prestonsburg, he visited several local establishments ranging from Wal-Mart to a local tattoo shop.

Through a conversation on Frissel's spiral notebook, he said the people he interacted with were fairly receptive overall. He said he had the most response at Big Sandy Community and Technical College, where the people he communicated with were very happy to take the time to answer his questions and didn't seem to have a problem with his inability to speak.

However, he said some shoppers at Wal-Mart steered away from him and acted like they did not have the desire to take the extra time to speak to someone who couldn't speak back.

Despite some of the more reluctant people he has encountered, Frissel says that he is really enjoying what he is doing.

Miners endangered by safety standoff

Like so much else in the endless battle for coal mine safety, the fight over dust controls remains a deadly standoff.

It's been eight years since The Courier-Journal revealed that cheating on air samples was commonplace, and that federal regulators knew.

It's been six years since the Clinton-era Mine Safety and Health Administration (MSHA) proposed that government take over dust sampling from the coal operators.

And it's been five years since an industry-dominated Bush administration put that potentially lifesaving change on hold.

In the past three years, a tamperproof dust monitor that miners can carry as part of their cap-lamp battery has been painstakingly developed, thoroughly tested and carefully perfected. But it's still not in use.

Using the monitors to protect miners from black lung disease, which kills some 1,000 every year, should be a no-brainer.

But there's still no agreement over whether to require them, who should pay for them and how they should be used.

This much seems obvious: 1) Miners themselves shouldn't have to pay for these $7,500 devices. 2) They should be widely deployed in mines. 3) If dust readings from different locations are averaged, operators could get by with jeopardizing some individual miners. 4) A worst-case scenario would be using the adoption of this equipment to justify a loosening of allowable dust standards. 5) Special exemptions should not allow small, poorly capitalized — and typically more dangerous — mines to forego the monitors.

Industry may nag for help with what should be a basic safety expense: a federal loan program, a federal tax credit, or purchase and lease of monitors by MSHA. But why shouldn't such costs be part of the price consumers pay for coal-generated power?

Of course, there's much about the culture of coal that isn't sensible, such as its resistance to safety innovation.

Industry moaned about methane monitors, which now are taken for granted. Industry fought self-contained self-rescue devices in the courts for years, but now they are standard equipment for miners.

When it comes to the new dust monitors, industry, union and MSHA remain far apart. Miners remain at risk.

Run, Newt, run

The casual TV viewer has probably noticed two things during the past few days — there's a war in the Middle East, and Newt Gingrich is commenting on it.

Gingrich has been a ubiquitous analyst on the war — ubiquity being one of the tireless, outsized former House speaker's favorite qualities. In between appearances in his role as a commentator for the Fox News Channel, Gingrich announced on "Meet the Press" that we are in the midst of World War III. A few days later, Hezbollah declared that it welcomed World War III, nicely capturing the moment: Simultaneous with its shooting war with Israel, Hezbollah is in a war of words with Newt Gingrich.

The old conventional wisdom about Gingrich was that we wouldn't have him to kick around anymore. The new conventional wisdom is that he's back, and he's doing the kicking.

Ousted by his own party after its 1998 midterm election losses, Gingrich has re-established himself as a party leader through sheer intellectual energy. He has had something intelligent to say about literally every issue, from health care to Katrina to the war on terror. "He has helped himself immensely — he's all over the place," says former Republican National Committee Chairman Ed

Gillespie.

Gingrich is partly benefiting from a beneath-the-surface conservative exasperation with President Bush. In 2000, Bush represented a break from Gingrich's brainy, hyper-partisan, government-cutting conservatism, for something more personable, more bipartisan and more comfortable with government. After six years of Bush, many conservatives are ready for a no-holds-barred, limited-government brainiac again.

Opinion is split about whether Gingrich will run for the 2008 presidential nomination, but no one doubts that he would love to. A GOP strategist says: "The only question for Newt will be, 'Can I devise the message that will rouse the nation?'"

Gingrich is still in bad odor for many Washington insiders who remember his often self-indulgent, erratic four-year run as speaker. Grass-roots Republicans, however, don't share their dismissiveness.

It's hard to see any plausible path to victory for Gingrich unless George Allen and Mitt Romney fizzle, freeing up room for an anti-McCain conservative. But the first-in-the-nation

Iowa caucuses are a conservative bastion. In 2000, even unserious candidates Alan Keyes and Gary Bauer combined for 23 percent of the vote. "I think he could do very well in Iowa," says top Republican pollster John McLaughlin, "and you never know."

If one of Gingrich's strengths is that he is enamored of ideas, a weakness is that he seems too enamored of his own. He has ethical issues from his time as speaker related to a book contract and the funding of a college course he taught, but in the Age of Abramoff those scandals seem quaint. More potentially damaging is his messy personal life and the sense of arrogance that sank his speakership.

Whatever happens, Gingrich stands to be the party's most important intellectual table-setter. "Whoever wins," says Gillespie, "is going to have spent a lot of time talking about what Newt was talking about." There are worse places for the party to look for a renewed agenda.

Analysts spin yarns on Lieberman race; four penguins die

MINUTEMAN MEDIA

There are some headlines on news stories that tell you what the story is about. That's good. There are some that merely confuse you. That's bad. And then there are those that suggest something more grand; a novel perhaps. They're the best of all.

One such headline appeared on my Internet home page the other day. It read:

"Four penguins perish in truck accident. Octopus uninjured."

Wow. Is that a headline or what?

If you click on the headline the story comes up and you can read it, but I didn't click. I knew that the mundane facts of the case could never match the novel it suggested. (I'm a great deal like George Bush in that regard. When facts interfere with a narrative, I ignore them.) So...

Once upon a time, an octopus was driving his pickup truck on a main street, carrying a cargo of four penguins to their new home at the zoo. He had two of his penguins on the wheel, another resting on the sill of the open window, another changing channels on his CD player, two more working the brake and gas pedals and one holding a cell phone to his earhole while he talked to his girlfriend.

When the penguins, being penguins, got into an argument over who had the coolest tuxedo, the octopus reached around with his remaining pus to swat them into silence. At that moment a utility pole darted in front of the truck and the he hit it.

The octopus dropped everything he was doing and wrapped all of his tentacles around every available anchor, so he was all right.

The penguins, however, being penguins, were not wearing seat belts and went tumbling into the street like so many formally attired bowling pins. Alas, they did not survive the crash.

That's my story and I'm sticking to it.

Columnists are not the only media people who deal in fantasy, however. There are political analysts.

For example, many of them are sadly bemoaning Joe Lieberman's loss in Connecticut's Democratic Senate primary. He lost to a relatively unknown rich guy who attacked the three-term senator for his support of the Iraq war.

"Poor Joe," the pundits are saying, "he voted his conscience and the nasty Democratic voters of Connecticut punished him for it. What is to become of compromise and moderation — hallmarks of Lieberman's tenure — in this poisonous atmosphere?"

Excuse me, but I thought his job was to represent the people of Connecticut, not merely his immaculate conscience. He not only voted for the war, he's continued to parrot the administration's rosy scenario long after it became apparent that it was a fiction.

Besides, compromise in Congress is dead. George Bush killed it. Anyone who doesn't know that is a fool.

Lieberman's got a conscience? Fine. So do the Democrats of Connecticut and they voted it.

Lieberman has said that he'll run as an independent in the fall and they say he's got a chance of winning, although he may just siphon off enough votes to put the Republican candidate, a virtual nonentity, in office.

I have a friend George who thinks that would not be a bad result. He thinks the Democrats would be wise to let the Republicans keep control of Congress.

"We're going to have to pull out of Iraq and sooner rather than later," he said. "The American people won't stand for keeping our troops in the middle of a civil war which, if eyewitness accounts are to be believed, Iraq has become."

"If the Democrats are in power when it happens the Republicans will say 'See! We told you so. The Democrats are weak on national security. They lost Iraq.' Already that little weasel Bill Kristol is saying that Lieberman was defeated by people who hate America."

"Better to let the Republicans stay in office and take the fall when the mess they've created reaches our eyeballs."

That George, he's such a cynic. Still, he could be right.

This Town, That World

Editor's Note: For years, Floyd County Times founder and former publisher Norman Allen wrote a weekly column that looked at Floyd County through his eyes. His columns are being reprinted due to request.

Things have come to a pretty pass when Democrats can't have their own Donnybrook, without the armed forces being called in to protect them from outsiders.

E PLURIBUS UNUM

This nice lady, Lida Margaret Spradlin, is one in—well, if not in a million, certainly one in thousands. She, of all the readers of this newspaper, was the only one who missed this column enough, when it was omitted recently, to say she had.

GIVE ME A HOSS...

Times do change—now, don't they? I can remember the day when a Cadillac would have us falling over our feet to draw near and gawk, and, most of us recall when a jet overhead caused more than one wry neck. But only the other day, in the space of an hour, all this went by the wayside. More than one "Cad" rased past, and never a second glance. A jet broke the sound barrier, and the only comment was a crusty remark that the pilot wouldn't have appreciated.

Then, down the street came a lone man. Necks craned, you could see ears perk up. This man was riding a horse.

NEWS ITEM

A friend tapped me on the shoulder, the other day, pointed to a girl, and said, "There's an item for your column." It was news. This youngster was intent upon an encyclopedia, meanwhile disregarding the comic books, movie magazines, and other popular "literature" in a rack, a few feet away.

SMALL COMFORT

The story was told and the teller vowed, so help him, it's the truth. This old guy had bought himself a brand-new car and was snagged on the little item of sales tax. When he expressed considerable displeasure, he was reminded that the car would depreciate next year, and he would get credit on that.

Quoth he:

"Now, I depreciate what you're tryin' to tell me, but I demed sure, don't depreciate these taxes!"

ALLEN ON ALLEN

Dr. J. H. Allen didn't know he was to be honored at the recent Maytown homecoming—surely not, for he would have arranged that his hunting and fishing partner, Ray Allen, did not get a chance at making "a few feeble remarks," as they say. Anyway, Doc was hooked and was forced to sit and suffer in silence while Allen quoted from three newspapers - for the first time in his life attesting to the veracity of newspaper editors - but wound up by twisting them to his own purposes. Said he:

"If Dr. Allen had been a drinking man, some items appearing would

"Caught one!" This Prestonsburg Health Care Center resident is proud to show off her catch of the day during a recent outing to Jenny Wiley State Park.

'City Strollers'

Prestonsburg Health Care residents enjoy outings

Residents of Prestonsburg Health Care Center have spent the warm weather months busily engaged in a variety of outdoor activities. The center's recreation director and staff have embarked on daily strolls down the streets and avenues of Prestonsburg, gone on afternoon fishing expeditions, paid regular visits to the Floyd County Library, lunched at Billy Ray's Restaurant, and more.

The activities have been coordinated by center staff through the "Quality of Life Initiative" conducted by the center's restorative and physical therapy departments. The Quality of Life initiative seeks to improve both the physical and mental aspects of a patient's recovery process and the general well-being of all residents.

This past summer, Prestonsburg Health Care Center residents have visited many of the city's various attractions and parks, as well as going on daytime excursions to various points of interest throughout the county. Center staff report that the residents enjoy being involved in community life as they meet and greet other city and county residents and visitors to the area.

A favorite activity is to visit

Prestonsburg's Save-A-Lot store to shop for snacks and supplies for cooking classes, another fun activity that the residents have enjoyed this summer.

Visiting the Floyd County Library to see magic shows and participate in the library's story hour has also been a favorite activity for many.

Eating out and touring Jenny Wiley State Resort Park to fish and see the ducks, geese and other wildlife has also been a favorite activity of interest for many residents.

It is the belief of the Prestonsburg Health Center director and staff that these outings provide their residents with wonderful opportunities to remain an integral part of community life and to actively participate in meaningful life activities. They thank all area businesses for welcoming their involvement and encouraging their visits. Center staff look forward to continuing the outdoor activities throughout the coming beautiful fall season.

MOVIES FROM THE BLACK LAGOON

'Roller Coaster'

by TOM DOTY
TIMES COLUMNIST

A safety inspector matches wits with a lethal extortionist targeting the titular rides at the nation's most popular theme parks, in this late-1970s effort.

It all begins with a spectacular sequence in which a young man sets off a small bomb on the track of a roller coaster. The train derailed when it hits the damaged spot and deposits its passengers all over the boardwalk while the killer slips away munching on cotton candy. The scene abruptly shifts to safety inspector Harry Calder submitting to a unique program to stop smoking.

He's wired up and every time he takes a puff a technician administers a jolt of electricity to his body. Harry may not have picked the best method to stop smoking but he's sharp enough to suspect that a fire at a second amusement park is related to the roller coaster bombing and crashes a meeting of the top five amusement park owners in Chicago.

Sure enough they are delivered a tape stating that $1 million will stop the extortionist's reign of terror. Harry's advice is to bring in the feds because this guy is serious and, unfortunately, cunning. Turns out Harry is right, because the guy planted a microphone in the room and knows exactly what they're discussing. He also takes a shine to Harry and informs the FBI that Harry is to make the money drop.

This leads to an excellent sequence in which the bomber arranges to receive the money at yet another amusement park. It isn't long before he reveals that another bomb is somewhere in the facility and then proceeds to send Harry on every ride in the park before coming up with an ingenious method of getting rid of the agents shadowing Harry so he can collect the money. The bills however are marked and the bomber announces he will teach them all a lesson.

It all comes down to a manhunt at Magic Mountain, with no one knowing what the bomber looks like, though Harry definitely knows his voice and that comes in handy during a crucial sequence that I won't give away here.

Though billed as a disaster movie — the coaster sequences are even recorded in Sensurround — this is actually a suspense picture and was written by the team of Levinson and Link, who specialized in mysteries and penned "Columbo" amongst others. Director James Goldstone uses a top-notch cast and they deliver the goods. George Segal is the perfect every man as Harry and one's never sure if he will be able to stop the madman he's after. Richard Widmark plays the FBI honcho as an authoritative if by rote lawman who learns that his methods need some improvement. Henry Fonda has a small but amusing

A brother like that

by DAN CLARK

"CHICKEN SOUP FOR THE SOUL"

A friend of mine named Paul received an automobile from his brother as a Christmas present. On Christmas Eve when Paul came out of his office, a street urchin was walking around the shiny new car, admiring it. "Is this your car, Mister?" he asked.

Paul nodded. "My brother gave

it to me for Christmas."

The boy was astounded. "You mean your brother gave it to you, and it didn't cost you nothing? Boy, I wish ..." He hesitated.

Of course Paul knew what he was going to wish for. He was going to wish he had a brother like that. But what the lad said jarred Paul all the way down to his heels.

"I wish," the boy went on, "that I could be a brother like that."

Paul looked at the boy in astonishment, then impulsively added, "Would you like to take a ride in my automobile?"

"Oh, yes. I'd love that."

After a short ride, the boy turned, and with his eyes aglow, said, "Mister, would you mind driving in front of my house?"

Paul smiled a little. He thought he knew what the lad wanted. He wanted to show his neighbors that he could ride home in a big automobile. But Paul was wrong again.

"Will you stop where those two steps are?" the boy asked.

He ran up the steps. Then in a little while Paul heard him coming back, but he was not coming fast. He was carrying his crippled little brother. He sat him down on the bottom step, then sort of squeezed up against him and pointed to the car.

"There she is, Buddy, just like I told you upstairs. His brother gave it to him for Christmas, and it didn't cost him a cent. And some day I'm gonna give you one just like it ... then you can see for yourself all the pretty things in the Christmas windows that I've been trying to tell you about."

Paul got out and lifted the lad to the front seat of his car. The shining-eyed older brother climbed in beside him, and the three of them began a memorable holiday ride.

That Christmas Eve, Paul learned what Jesus meant when he said: "It is more blessed to give ..."

Automatic air conditioner causing marital disharmony

MAGLIOZZI

Dear Tom and Ray:
Please settle an argument between me and my wife. We have a 2005 Toyota Highlander with an "automatic air conditioner." You set the temperature and it maintains it. My wife contends that the AC works like a house AC, so that the temperature of the cold air is constant and the compressor cycles on and off. I contend that the AC (just like the older "manual" ACs) simply mixes hot and cold air to obtain the desired temperature. The dispute comes to a head when it's really hot in the car. I claim that we should set the temperature as low as possible. My wife counters that it will (like a house AC) reach a given temperature in the same amount of time, no matter what temperature you set the AC to. Please settle this issue for us! — Roger TOM: Isn't it wonderful when a marriage is so good that all you have to argue about is trivial stuff like this, Roger?

RAY: Yeah. My brother and his wife usually argue about what size frying pan she's going to hit him with next.

TOM: The great news is, you're both at least partially correct. As your wife says, all the cold air that's produced comes out at a constant temperature, and the compressor does cycle on and off. And, like YOU say, Roger, the car's climate-control system also blends warm and cold air to maintain the temperature you set.

RAY: Now, will cranking down the temperature all the way cool off a hot car faster? Oftentimes, yes. It depends on the particular system. But when you crank most systems down past a certain point (it doesn't have to be all the way), three things happen.

TOM: First, you ensure that no warm air is getting blended in. Second, the system puts itself into "recirculate" mode.

RAY: "Recirculate" limits the amount of fresh, outside air the system takes in. Essentially, in recirculate mode, the air conditioner is recycling the air it has already cooled, and cooling it more.

TOM: The third thing that happens when you set the climate control on "arctic" is that the fan speed gets kicked up to its highest setting.

RAY: That doesn't produce any more cold air, but it moves the air around more and might make you feel cool faster.

TOM: But as you've probably noticed, having the fan set on high also makes it sound like you're in Dorothy's backyard in Kansas just before the big twister hits. And all that noise makes it harder to hear you two lovebirds cooing at each other.

RAY: So, our advice would be to do whatever pleases your wife the most, Roger. Doing it your way — even if it cools off the car faster — is going to make it seem a lot hotter in there. Trust us.

Low-mileage cars need maintenance less often

Dear Tom and Ray:

I have a question about cars with VERY low mileage. I have a 10-year-old car that has less than 12,000 miles. What maintenance should I be doing or not doing? I am told at the dealership that, due to the "time" element, I need "flushes" on a routine basis, etc. Is this true? — Rosalie

TOM: Well, most manufacturers recommend that you change your oil every 7,500 miles. But for you, that would be only once every dog year, Rosalie. There's a "time"-based recommendation as well.

RAY: For most cars that get very little use, the recommendation is to change the oil once every six months. In general, we'd agree with that. Here's why.

TOM: When you run the engine, it produces water. It's one of the products of combustion. Some of that water always ends up in your crankcase, mixed in with the oil. Normally, when the engine gets good and hot, that water evaporates and is expelled by the crankcase ventilation system.

RAY: But if you only take short, little trips — like two or three miles a day — you never get the engine hot enough to get rid of that water. So you have watery oil, which doesn't lubricate well.

TOM: So if you take lots of short trips, get your oil changed every six months.

RAY: On the other hand, if you have low mileage because you use the car infrequently, but you really let the engine heat up when you do drive, then you can extend that oil-change interval. For instance, if you drive the car only once a week but drive it 20 miles every time, you're less likely to dilute the oil, so you can change the oil once a year instead.

TOM: As for other stuff, you'll want to change the coolant once every five years or so to renew the rust inhibitors. Those dissipate over time. And you'll need to keep an eye on rubber components, like belts and tires, because those get attacked by ozone whether you use them or not.

RAY: But I wouldn't let the mechanic talk you into too much else. You don't need a transmission service. You don't need a fuel-system cleaning. You probably don't need new brakes. You might need a new air freshener. But the vast majority of cars wear out from use, not from lack of use. So you're doing fine, Rosalie.

Odds & Ends

■ ALEXANDRIA, Ind. — This cool cat has traded in his catnip for some bling.

Sebastian, a 1-year-old Persian with long black hair, sports gold crowns on his two bottom canines, which grew sticking out from his lips in an underbite similar to a bulldog's.

His owner, dentist David Steele, said he gave Sebastian gold crowns to help strengthen the fanged feline's teeth. Steele said he was worried the teeth would break off or become a problem.

"It's possible to work on animals the same way we do humans," he said. "I did it to strengthen (Sebastian's) teeth, but it had an excellent cosmetic result. The cat gets a lot of attention now. Everyone is tickled to death when they see him."

The gold teeth protruding from Sebastian's furry face make him seem a bit menacing, like a hip-hop star's guard-cat or a movie villain's pet. The feline didn't seem too happy with his new look at first.

Two weeks ago, veterinarian Larry Owen tranquilized the cat at the Alexandria Animal Hospital about 30 miles northeast of Indianapolis so Steele could do the dentistry work, which took about 15 minutes to complete.

Owen said putting gold crowns on teeth can be done for any pet with a dental problem. Steele said the cost for each gold tooth is about the same as for humans — about $900.

■ BEIJING — The Communist Party has a message for Chinese traveling abroad: Don't embarrass your country by spitting, littering or shouting into mobile phones.

The party's Spiritual Civilization Steering Committee launched a campaign Wednesday to reduce the number of Chinese tourists who "appear uncouth," a news report said.

"The behavior of some Chinese travelers is not compatible with the nation's economic strength and its growing international status," the China Daily quoted the committee as saying.

The campaign will last through the end of 2008, when Beijing is due to host the Summer Olympics.

Many Chinese tourists spit, loudly clear their throats, take off their shoes on planes, smoke in public places and shout into their mobile phones, the newspaper said.

Last year, Chinese tourists made 31 million trips abroad and 1.2 billion trips inside the country. The number is expected to skyrocket to 100 million overseas trips by 2020, the China Daily said.

■ BRIDGEPORT, W.Va. — These thieves apparently didn't listen to "Thou shalt not steal."

A portrait of Jesus Christ was taken from Bridgeport High School on Thursday, two days after the Harrison County School Board agreed to fight court efforts to remove it.

An intruder snatched the contentious painting just before 4 a.m. but left behind the gilded frame and backing, Schools Superintendent Carl Friebel said.

"The picture was the only thing stolen, so the deliberate intent was to steal the picture and only the picture," Friebel said.

The painting, which depicts Jesus in sepia tones on a large canvas, hung on the wall outside the principal's office and had been at the school for 37 years.

The Americans United for Separation of Church and State and the West Virginia American Civil Liberties Union sued the school board in June, saying the painting, "Head of Christ," sends the message that the school endorses Christianity as its official religion.

On Tuesday, the school board decided to fight to keep the portrait hanging after an outside group, the Christian Freedom Fund, raised more than $150,000 to pay the board's legal costs.

Eight national groups with expertise in constitutional law have offered legal help to the school board. One of those groups will be selected to lead the defense at trial, which is set for February.

■ VALPARAISO, Ind. — A man who cursed in court and gave a judge an obscene gesture was thrown in jail and ordered to write a letter of apology.

Jonathan Wilson, 31, of San Pierre, remained in the Porter County Jail on Wednesday following his outburst, which came after he failed to have a speeding ticket thrown out.

Wilson had faced no more than a fine Tuesday until he reacted with his offensive language and gesture to the ruling by Porter Superior Judge David Chidester. Chidester promptly ordered Wilson jailed and to remain behind bars until he writes a letter of apology.

Chidester said Wilson's letter must convince the judge that Wilson understands why he was found guilty and also that the correct way to challenge a verdict is through an appeal.

Wilson was found guilty of driving 70 mph in a 55 mph zone along Indiana 49 in northern Indiana during the early morning hours of June 2, ■ DANIELSVILLE, Ga. — Fishing in someone else's well-stocked fish pond without permission isn't a good idea — especially if that pond belongs to the sheriff.

Three men spent the better part of four days in the Madison County, Ga., jail after being charged with fishing in a pond without the owner's permission. The pond is owned by Madison County Sheriff Clayton Lowe.

A state conservation ranger Saturday arrested Brian Keith Wallace, 35, Michael Shannon Fricks, 32, and Christopher Carldon Wallace, 37, on the misdemeanor charge. Lowe said they were released Tuesday after paying a fine.

Lowe said he stocked the pond with about $1,200 worth of catfish and bream last spring to give disabled children a fun day outside fishing. But sometime before the fishing day, someone drove a four-wheel all-terrain vehicle under a cable stretched across the road leading to the pond and began catching the fish.

The sheriff paid $360 to restock the pond before the children's fishing day.

"It all worked out. They caught plenty of fish," he said.

■ TACOMA, Wash. — For the second time in as many summers, police are trying to find a stolen salmon — a larger-than-life fiberglass fish sculpture taken from a city park.

The latest theft occurred at Gateway Park sometime between 6 p.m. Friday and 6 a.m. Saturday, said Lynn Di Nino, an artist who said she tried to find clues in the city's Old Town neighborhood before reporting the loss to police Tuesday.

"I thought maybe somebody pushed it over the edge," she said, "but I scoured the landscape and couldn't find it."

Police Officer Mark W. Fulghum confirmed that the report had been received.

The 8-foot, 150-pound sculpture is one of 10 that City Council member Bill Evans bought five years ago as part of a public art effort called Soul Salmon 2001.

The Old Town Business Association later bought the fish from Evans and hired Bruce and Shannon Anderson, a local artist couple, to decorate it. They adorned the salmon with tiles of colored glass over sepia-tone photographs depicting Old Town history, and the rest of the salmon has a coat of blue-green paint, De Nino said.

In July 2005 someone took the 7-foot fiberglass coho from Puget Gardens Park. It was found within a couple of days in the laundry room of a house. A man who lived there said he got it in a trade for some old bicycle wheels.

■ EUGENE, Ore. — Items

discarded at an airport in the response to a terror plot have turned into balm for the city's homeless.

The St. Vincent de Paul Society of Lane County has started picking up some of the things people have jettisoned for security reasons as they board flights at the Eugene Airport.

Charley Harvey, assistant executive director of the charity, dug through trash bags Tuesday and took every bottle of shampoo and shaving cream he could find. The items will be distributed at the organization's First Place Family Center.

But he didn't take the can of Easy Cheese, or the mini-bottle of brandy, or the tube of something called Vampire's Blood.

"Oh, the things people bring on planes," said Harvey as he considered the item in his hand, a container of lavender body butter.

After investigators said they uncovered a plot in Britain to blow up aircraft, travelers tossed the items into trash bins in compliance with new rules prohibiting most liquids, lotions and gels in carry-on luggage.

"We're always looking for shampoo, toothpaste and other toiletries to help homeless families," Harvey said.

■ SANTA ANA, Calif. — A man dubbed the "senior citizen bandit" has pleaded guilty to 10 counts of armed robbery and one firearms count for sticking up banks in three Western states, authorities said.

Charles Manrow, 70, of Pennsylvania, entered the plea Aug. 10 and will be sentenced early next year.

Manrow pleaded guilty to robberies in Southern California, Fresno, Utah and Arizona, Assistant U.S. Attorney Ivy Wang said.

Manrow was arrested in January outside a motel in the Riverside County community of Thousand Palms. He had cash, fake identification and weapons stashed in a stolen Cadillac.

Manrow would enter the banks wearing a baseball cap and casual clothes. When he reached a teller, he would announce the holdup, show a weapon and hand over multiple bags, saying he had a remote device that could tell him if a silent alarm was activated.

A year ago, Manrow's crime spree sparked national interest after a Los Angeles TV station reported that investigators considered whether Manrow could be the fugitive Boston crime boss James "Whitey" Bulger, who is on the FBI's "Most Wanted" list and has been on the run for years. The possibility was ultimately discounted.

role as Harry's beleaguered boss.

Timothy Bottoms, however, is the real casting coup here. His red hair and bland features make a perfect counterpart for his emotionless character, who is never given a name or background. A subplot involving his parents' bankruptcy as owners of a small scale amusement park was wisely cut, leaving us with a cold fish that is just out for the money.

There are also a few turns by people who hadn't been discovered yet and include Helen Hunt as Harry's daughter and Steve Guttenberg in a one-line role as a messenger boy.

The special effects are well executed, though the best sequence occurs at the very beginning.

All in all, this is a good fusing of action, suspense and disaster movies with a smart script and tight direction. In the summer of 1977 it didn't scare people away from amusement parks like "Jaws" did for beaches the previous year, but then again those were safer times and no one yet believed how far some fanatics would go to get some attention.

Best Line: "Harry, if you're trying to kill us, at least let me put on some lip gloss."

Allen Central improves to 2-1

TIMES STAFF REPORT

EASTERN – The Allen Central volleyball team won its second match of the season Thursday night, defeating host East Ridge 2-0. Allen Central was led by sophomore Brittany Hodge with six kills on .500 hitting. Fellow Allen Central outside hitter Christina Blevins had three kills on .429 hitting and Courtney Martin popped in five kills on .455 hitting. Hannah Howard and Kimbo Blevins added a kill each.

The Rebels hit .390 in the outing and recorded 10 service aces on 87-percent serving. Koko Martin landed four aces, Hodge followed with three. Courtney Martin slammed in two, and Hannah Howard added one. Allen Central's defense was strong as Alesia Hall led the team with 11 confirmed digs in 17 attempts with only one error. Hodge had 10 stops in 20 attempts with only three errors. Christina Blevins had seven confirmed digs, Hannah Howard dug up four, Koko Martin stopped three attacks, and Tiffany Owens and Courtney Martin each prevented one Warrior try. Courtney Martin had four blocks and Kimbo Blevins blocked two.

The Rebels appeared timid and cold letting East Ridge score the first three points of game one. Allen Central got back on track and took its first offensive point on a kill by Hodge. Then Hodge took the serve putting the Rebels on a seven point tear, landing two of her three aces. Courtney Martin blocked an attack try by the Warriors and slammed an over-net kill, putting the Allen Central squad up 7-4. The Rebels pushed to a 15-9 lead, forcing an East Ridge timeout, and continued to climb from there and built up a 22-14 lead on the powerful hitting of Christina Blevins and Hodge, the excellent defensive play of Hall. The Rebels allowed one more point before finally closing the game 25-15 with a kill from Hodge.

In game two, the Rebels rang up a 6-0 lead on two of Hall's 11 digs and a Hodge kill assisted by Koko Martin. Martin stepped in to serve and landed three aces. The Allen Central girls never lost the lead. However, the Rebels allowed East Ridge to get back in the game on several miscues allowing the Warriors to close within two, 13-15. However, the AC squad would allow only six more Warrior

KHSAA BoC meeting set for Monday

TIMES STAFF REPORT

LEXINGTON – The next meeting of the Kentucky High School Athletic Association (KHSAA) Board of Control will be a special meeting to review appeals cases. The meeting is scheduled for Monday at the Association Office in Lexington. During the meeting, the Board will hear feedback from member schools with regard to the draft football alignment.

The next regular Board meeting is scheduled for Sept. 14-15.

The KHSAA conducted an administrator workshop Friday, Aug. 11 at the Association office in Lexington. Over 200 administrators from throughout the state attended the one day conference that will cover areas of Title IX, KHSAA Communication and Forms, Website and other information. Association staff will be conducted required regional meeting in Sept. to review hot button topics.

The KHSAA will be conducting its sixth HYPE Student Leadership Conference next Tuesday at the Lexington Convention Center. The one day conference is free and open to all member school student-athletes and will have breakout sessions that include respect, teamwork, leadership and more. Opening the conference will be AVCA (American Volleyball Coaches Association) Executive Director and former University of Kentucky volleyball coach Kathy DeBoer. Former University of Kentucky basketball star Cameron Mills will conduct a breakout session on leadership roles. Justin Boudreau will be the closing speaker for the conference.

The conference has annually attracted a capacity 400 students and 50 adults. For more information, contact Marilyn Mitchell or Butch Cope at the KHSAA.

The 2006-07 KHSAA Events Calendar is now available for purchase. The calendar includes sports specific important dates as well as Board of Control and Advisory Committee meetings and other KHSAA related information.

UK releases entire men's basketball schedule

TIMES STAFF REPORT

LEXINGTON – Kentucky finalized its 2006-07 men's basketball schedule Tuesday with release of its 16-game Southeastern Conference slate and most of the league's television selections and game times.

The Wildcats have five appearances scheduled on CBS and seven slots on ESPN's family of networks - ESPN, ESPN2 and potentially ESPNU. Eight UK games will be shown by the SEC's syndicated TV partner, Lincoln Financial Sports (formerly Jefferson-Pilot).

FSN South will show five non-conference games, which will also be shown tape-delayed on the Big Blue Sports Network. FSN South/Sunshine Network has yet to finalize their SEC schedule, which could include UK games.

Host Hornets blank Betsy Layne

SPORTS EDITOR

SALYERSVILLE – Playing on the road Thursday evening after three straight home matches and a back-to-back losses, Betsy Layne couldn't work its way back into the win column. The Betsy Layne volleyball team, despite pushing Magoffin County in the first game between the two squads, fell. Magoffin County edged the visiting Ladycats 27-25 in a hard-fought first encounter and ended the match with a 25-10 triumph in the second game, winning 2-0.

The win was Magoffin County's second straight. The Lady Hornets started the season Tuesday with a 2-1 (25-16, 14-25, 25-15) win over 54th District rival Paintsville.

Betsy Layne has key upcoming matches scheduled versus Prestonsburg (Aug. 22), Pike County Central (Aug. 24), South Floyd (Aug. 28), Paintsville (Aug. 29) and Allen Central (Aug. 31).

Hilltoppers hoping to rebound from disappointing 2005

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

BOWLING GREEN — The pain of Western Kentucky's disappointing 2005 season is still very real to cornerback Dennis Mitchell.

Mitchell and the Hilltoppers aren't used to seasons that end with them on the outside of the Division I-AA playoffs looking in. But a four-game losing streak over the season's final month left the Hilltoppers with a 6-5 record and no postseason plans for the first time since 2000.

"That was the worst feeling we've had in a while," Mitchell said. "That was not Western Kentucky football. We've never lost like that. We kind of lost our swagger. We weren't the team we were supposed to be."

The plan to get their swagger back starts with senior quarterback Justin Haddix, a three-year starter from Jackson who threw for 1,892 yards and 15 touchdowns last season.

"I just want to go out there and be a leader for the team and not let things bring us down and keep everybody up and hopefully go out on top this year," Haddix, a Breathitt County High School graduate said. "That left a bad taste in our mouth losing four in a row going into the offseason."

Haddix will have plenty of help. Senior running back Lerron Moore is coming off his second 1,000-yard season and is closing in on the school's all-time rushing record.

"We've got a lot of confidence in those two in their leadership and playing ability," said coach David Elson. "That's where our offense is obviously going to be focused."

Elson reshuffled the offensive line, but thinks the experienced group will jell quickly. Left guard Greg Ryan returns in his same spot, but former tackles Zach Thuney and Andrew Campbell have moved to center and right guard. Chris McConnell will open at left tackle, and Joe Dolchan points and dominate down the stretch with aces by Hodge and Courtney Martin, two back row kills from Hodge and a shot by Christina Blevins, blocks by Courtney Martin and Kimbo Blevins, and three kills by the duo. Excellent defensive play by Hall, Hodge, and both Blevins sealed the deal for the Rebels, 25-19.

Allen Central will return to action on Monday night at 6 p.m. on the road at Pikeville.

Hilltoppers

will man the right tackle spot after recovering from knee surgery.

Defensively, Elson said the Hilltoppers are most experienced in the secondary, where Mitchell and safety Marion Rumph lead the way.

The rest of the defense is filled with experienced players who earned playing time mostly in backup roles last season. Elson is confident they're ready to make the transition to starter.

"We're a little better off up front than I think some people would imagine right now," Elson said.

Walker attorney says eligibility appeal rejected

by DAN SEWELL ASSOCIATED PRESS

CINCINNATI - The state's sanctioning body for high school sports has upheld its ruling that Bill Walker, one of the nation's top prep stars, is out of eligibility and cannot play this season.

The Ohio High School Athletic Association's board of control heard Walker's appeal Wednesday, then voted to deny it 8-0, the association said Thursday.

The evidence supported the conclusion that Walker had completed his eight semesters of eligibility, Jerry Snodgrass, president of the OHSAA board of control and also athletic administrator at Findlay High School, said in a statement. "The OHSAA's bylaws are specific," he said.

Walker's attorney, Richard Katz, said association commissioner Dan Ross informed him Wednesday of the decision.

Messages were left Thursday with Cincinnati North College High School, which Walker and teammate O.J. Mayo have led to consecutive state Division III championships and national prominence.

The association ruled July 10 that Walker couldn't play as a senior because he had exhausted his eligibility by playing at Rose Hill Christian School in Ashland, Ky., as a freshman in the 2002-03 school year, then playing three seasons for North College Hill.

Katz said Walker shouldn't have been considered a freshman at Rose Hill. Under Kentucky rules, he would have been allowed to play high school sports as an eighth-grader.

"It was strictly a paperwork issue," Katz said. "Bill did nothing wrong whatsoever, and now it comes back to bite him."

He said he had advised Walker and his family not to comment. Walker still plans to earn his high school diploma at North College Hill.

He said the family could challenge the association in court, but he hasn't discussed that with them.

Walker, a 6-foot-6 forward, averaged 21.7 points and 10.1 rebounds last season, as he was often ranked only behind Mayo among the nation's best juniors.

COLLEGE FOOTBALL '06: Coaches on the Hotseat

by RALPH D. RUSSO ASSOCIATED PRESS

For many college football fans, the coach of their favorite team is always just a couple of losses away from being on the hot seat.

Many Michigan fans consider Lloyd Carr to be on shaky ground after the Wolverines stumbled to a 7-5 record last season, their worst in two decades. But unless the Maize and Blue crash and burn this season, the coach likely won't be ousted.

The same goes for Tennessee's Phillip Fulmer, whose Volunteers had their first losing season since 1988. In Miami, folks aren't thrilled with Larry Coker these days, but he's 53-9 in five seasons with a national championship.

There are some coaches, however, who should worry:

RICH BROOKS, Kentucky - The Wildcats were dealing with NCAA sanctions when Brooks arrived. Last year, Kentucky was pounded by injuries. Still, nine wins in three seasons doesn't offer much job security.

JOHN BUNTING, North Carolina

- By all accounts, people in Chapel Hill want Bunting to succeed. But the Tar Heels can't seem to win consistently, and another brutal schedule won't help.

JOHN L. SMITH, Michigan State - It's doubtful a third straight losing season would be tolerated in East Lansing. If Smith could get the Spartans to a bowl game, that might be enough.

HOUSTON NUTT, Arkansas -

Wasn't it just a couple of years ago that Nutt was being courted by Nebraska? Two seasons and nine wins later, he seems to be looking at a bowl-bid-or-bust season.

BILL DOBA, Washington State - Doba was handed Mike Price's program in 2003 and won 10 games. Since then, he has won nine. In his favor is two consecutive wins against rival Washington, but the Huskies have been terrible.

Allison spoils NASCAR invasion at Eldora

SPECIAL TO THE TIMES

ROSSBURG, Ohio - A pair of story lines accompanied Tim Allison's victory in Wednesday night's Old Spice Summer Sizzler - that of disappointment for visiting NASCAR stars Kasey Kahne and Dave Blaney, and that of excellence for Dave's brother Dale. Meanwhile, in the UMP (United Midwestern Promoters) Modified finale, it was a repeat story line, as Brian Ruhlman captured yet another win, in a field that included NASCAR stars Kenny Wallace and Ken Schrader.

Allison is the all-time leading NRA (National Racing Alliance) Sprint Invader winner at Eldora, so the Wednesday night special came as no real surprise, although the win was among his toughest to garner.

Defending Nextel Cup champion

and Eldora Speedway owner Tony Stewart set quick time of the night with a clocking 14.462 seconds around the one-half mile clay oval, so he established himself as the driver to beat early in the contest.

While Stewart was enjoying the limelight as quick timer, Kahne's hopes for a return to Eldora's hallowed victory lane went South immediately. Once the car was pushed off to fire up early in the afternoon, he crew discovered internal engine woes - enough to withdraw him from competition for the balance of the contest. Blaney's mount was not up to par as well, as an early exit from his heat race and B-Main eliminated any hopes of a main event start.

Kevin Huntley jumped into the early lead of the 25-lap feature event, with Dwain Leiber in hot pursuit, while Allison and Caleb Griffith battled for third and fourth. Leiber mounted an early charge for the top spot, but after five laps in the race which was to go non-stop, Huntley checked out.

Once into lapped traffic, Allison got but Huntley and began the chase for the front.

Just past the half-way point, he got the job done and headed what he assumed was going to be an easy win.

However, Dale Blaney was lurking as an eventual threat. A sub-par performance in his heat, found him transferring into the A-Main through a B-Main win. Starting deep in the pack, Blaney found a quick groove around the lowest edge of the traffic and was picking cars off lap after lap; eventually moving into second with two laps remaining.

Time ran out, as he finished just shy of overcoming Allison, and had to settle for runner-up honors. Griffith crossed the line third, followed by Greg Wilson and Luke Hall. Stewart was unable to mount a successful charge and finished ninth.

Through the luck of the draw, Ruhlman started on the pole position of the 17-lap Modified finale and that spelled trouble for the balance of the 22-car starting field.

Scott Orr, fresh off Saturday's win, tried repeatedly to reel in Ruhlman but wasn't able to get the job done, while Brian's brother, Chad, was moving from mid-pack and up to third at the finish. Todd Sherman, making his first appearance of the 2006 campaign at Eldora drove to an impressive fourth place finish, while Davey Gantt cruised him fifth.

Schrader, with some great moves, finished eighth, while Wallace developed woes early in the contest and had to retire early to finish 22nd.

Woodson, Pulley in dead heat to be Kentucky's quarterback

by JEFFREY McMURRAY
ASSOCIATED PRESS

LEXINGTON — André Woodson has outscored Curtis Pulley in a basketball game. Pulley has beaten Woodson in bowling.

So who's the better quarterback for Kentucky? Coach Rich Brooks isn't saying.

In one corner is Woodson, a junior pocket-passer who started all 11 games for the Wildcats a year ago. In the other is Pulley, a speedster and part-time wide receiver who briefly replaced Woodson atop the depth chart in spring drills.

The two are close friends, having known each other since facing off in a state high school basketball game at Rupp Arena, a game they often joke about now.

"He always bragged about how many points he scored, but I always bragged about getting the victory," Pulley said.

In team outings to bowling alleys, Woodson is one of the better Wildcat bowlers, but both quarterbacks acknowledge Pulley is the best.

Yet when it comes to the contest to determine who will be under center for the Wildcats when they open the season Sept. 3 at Louisville, there is little bragging, joking or handicapping from the competitors. They both want the job badly, but both say they could also see it go the other way.

"All I know is I've got to keep doing my job every single day, do what coach asks me to do, and hopefully I'll come out on top," Woodson said. "Everybody knows obviously we're battling, but there's no arguments. Nothing like that."

If Brooks knows which quarterback has the edge, he's keeping the information close to the vest. The two have taken virtually the same amount of snaps this summer. At the squad's first scrimmage, they each won rave reviews from Brooks for protecting the ball and improving the little things he'd asked them to improve.

Offensive coordinator Joker Phillips, never cautious to say what he thinks about the performance of his players, insists the quarterback battle remains too close to call.

"We'd like for it to be easy for us," Phillips said. "That helps us as coaches. If it's tough for us, we're in a pretty good situation. We feel like then we've got two pretty good quarterbacks."

Even Keenan Burton, the team's top returning wide receiver, won't say which quarterback he prefers.

"I'm torn between the two," Burton said. "Both of them make plays and both of them do great things. I'm just trying to get used to both of them."

Although Woodson knows he will never have Pulley's mobility, a strenuous offseason conditioning program helped him drop 20 pounds. He figures his stronger frame should allow him to improve on one thing coaches are demanding of him — cutting down on the sacks.

"When the pocket does break down, I want to take that little bit of speed that I do have and possibly turn it into a one- or two-yard gain instead of a negative," Woodson said.

Pulley has never had trouble evading defenders, but Brooks wants him to make crisper, smarter passes.

The coaches say they're under no timetable to determine a winner of the contest, and it's possible the two could even rotate.

The playbook would remain virtually unchanged either way. Pulley as quarterback might add two or three running plays, Phillips said, but he's instructing both the same.

Of course, if neither quarterback pans out, there is also a third option. Freshman Will Fidler, a high school All-American who figures to be the future leader of the team, is waiting in the wings.

"It's not a bad problem that we don't have a starter named," Fidler said. "It's a good problem. It means we've got a lot of talent. Competition always makes you better."

Cardinals ready to take next step

by WILL GRAVES
ASSOCIATED PRESS

Michael Bush

Brian Brohm

All-American defensive end Elvis Dumervil getting stomped on — literally — by Virginia Tech quarterback Marcus Vick in a Gator Bowl loss.

The Cardinals begin year two in the Big East with the similar expectations, only this time with the wisdom gained from their good — but not quite great — conference debut.

It's not that the Cardinals look at 2005 as a disappointment. Going 9-3 and making it to a New Year's bowl game for the first time in 15 years is a pretty big deal.

"A 9-3 season, it's good," said senior running back Michael Bush, who set a school-record with 24 touchdowns. "Louisville used to be what? 4-7. So 9-3 is great. There aren't a lot of teams that get to 9-3."

But Bush knows there aren't a lot of teams that enter 2006 featuring two Heisman Trophy candidates and a somewhat friendly schedule that allows them to face their two toughest tests — Sept. 16 against Miami and Nov. 2 against defending Big East champion West Virginia — at home.

Bush said the ingredients for a special season are in place if the Cardinals can take the lessons they learned a year ago and apply it when it counts.

"We've just got to finish the game, that's the big thing," he said. "In the fourth quarter, we just need to keep pounding and pounding it and not let up."

Between Bush and Brohm — who has fully recovered from a knee injury suffered in a win over Syracuse last November — the Cardinals have as potent a one-two combination as there is in the country. The Louisville natives are being tabbed "The Derby City Duo" by the school's sports information department as part of their Heisman Trophy campaign.

"There's really no ceiling," said Brohm, the Big East's Offensive Player of the Year last season after throwing for 2,883 yards and 19 touchdowns. "Our goal is to be the number one offense in the country."

Brohm won't lack for options. Between returning wide receivers Mario Urrutia and Harry Douglas and transfers Pat Carter, Corey Thompson and Chris Vaughn, there will be plenty of volunteers on third down.

"We just want to keep pushing each other," said Douglas. "There doesn't need to be one guy for Brian to go to. But we all want to be the one getting the ball on the big plays."

The only real question marks offensively center on the line, which will feature three new starters after veterans Jason Spitz, Travis Lefew and Jeremy Darveau moved on.

Sophomore George Bussey has impressed coach Bobby Petrino with his athleticism, and there's enough depth that center Eric Wood isn't worried about the unit's performance no matter who is on the field.

"We look at it like we're not just looking for three guys," Wood said. "There's so much competition, I don't think it's going to be a shock if lots of guys play. We've got a ton of guys who can go out there and get the job done."

Things are much more unsettled defensively, where the Cardinals have to replace Dumervil — who set a school-record with 20 sacks a year ago — and standouts Brandon Johnson and Montavious Stanley.

But then again, said co-defensive coordinator Mike Cassity, a year ago nobody expected Dumervil to come out of nowhere and win the Nagurski Award, given annually to the nation's best defensive player.

"The cupboard is not bare," Cassity said. "We have a lot of guys in that front that have played a lot of snaps of defense for us. Hopefully some of our guys will step up and fill those shoes."

Senior linebacker Nate Harris and defensive tackle Amobi Okoye will be called on to help the new players adjust. And while the Cardinals will have to look elsewhere for sacks now that Dumervil is gone, the bigger concern will be stopping the run.

Louisville allowed more than 185 yards rushing in each of its three losses a year ago and finished just fourth in the conference in total defense.

"We just need to help each other out," said Harris, who was second on the team with 66 tackles last season. "We know teams are going to want to come after us, that they're disrespecting us. We feel like we have something to prove."

To themselves and the rest of the conference as well. For all the progress the program has made in the last decade, the Cardinals know it is time to take the next step.

"We're ready," Harris said. "Every

Pitino: Padgett won't play during Canadian exhibition tour

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

LOUISVILLE — Louisville center David Padgett won't play when the Cardinals play three exhibition games in Canada next month, coach Rick Pitino said Wednesday.

Padgett underwent knee surgery in March. Though Pitino said Padgett's recovery is ahead of schedule, Padgett will not participate in practice or the games when the Cardinals play against three Canadian colleges in Ottawa, Ontario from Sept. 2-4.

"We're going to be really conservative with him," Pitino said of Padgett, who averaged 11.8 points and 6.1 rebounds for the Cardinals last season after transferring from Kansas.

Padgett's injury will allow Pitino to give more playing time to sophomore Jonathan Huffman and junior Terrance Farley as well as freshman Derrick Character.

Williams will also not play during the tour after suffering a minor leg injury. Williams will be available when the Cardinals begin practice for the 2006-07 season in October.

Though the Cardinals have not yet released their schedule, Pitino said the school's non-conference opponents will include Arizona, whom the Cardinals will play at Madison Square Garden in the Jimmy V Classic on Dec. 5.

The Cardinals will also play Massachusetts and in-state rival Kentucky before beginning their second season in the Big East. Louisville went 21-13 last season, losing to

South Carolina in the National Invitation Tournament semifinals.

Pitino said the strength of the non-conference schedule is a testament to his incoming class, which he called the best he's had during his stay at Louisville.

"We expect much bigger and better things," Pitino said. "I think our guys will rise to the occasion."

The Cardinals will begin practicing for their trip to Canada on Aug. 23. The Cardinals will play Carleton University on Saturday, Sept. 2 at 8 p.m., the University of Ottawa on Sunday, Sept. 3 at 1 p.m. and Laurentian University on Monday, Sept. 4 at 11 a.m.

MSU signs Illinois high school hoops standout

TIMES STAFF REPORT

MOREHEAD — Andreas Coleman, a 6-7 power forward for Danville (Ill.) High School signed to play basketball at Morehead State University, Head Coach Donnie Tyndall announced today. An Illinois Basketball Coach's Association All-Star, Coleman averaged just over 12.5 points per game and 8.1 rebounds per game last season at Danville High School. He was the MVP of the Lincoln Thanksgiving Tournament and was voted All-Area by the Champaign News-Gazette in 2005.

"I am very excited about adding Andreas (Coleman) as the final piece of our recruiting class," said Tyndall. "He has a nice skill level for a big guy. He shoots the ball well from the perimeter and will give us a physical presence around the goal as well."

"I feel he will add some depth to a very young and inexperienced front line."

As a senior under Danville Head Coach Scott Olsen, Coleman provided leadership both on and off the floor.

"He's a coach's dream," said

Olsen. "He doesn't shirk responsibility, and he will do whatever he has to do at workouts and on the floor. He's a really classy young man."

Coleman said he is very excited to be an Eagle.

"MSU has a great staff and I can't wait to get on the court and start learning from Coach Tyndall and the rest of the staff," said Coleman. "I'm a team player, and I'll do whatever I have to do in order to help the team win."

UK alumnus, Hazard native gives $6 million to school's athletics department

by JEFFREY McMURRAY
ASSOCIATED PRESS

LEXINGTON — A University of Kentucky alumnus pledged $6 million Thursday for the rights to name a new basketball practice facility at his alma mater — more than double the largest private gift ever for the school's athletics department.

Joe Craft, 55, a Hazard native, had anonymously pledged $3 million last year toward the 100,000 square-foot practice facility adjacent to Memorial Coliseum. That gift would have been the largest ever for the department, but this week he told university officials he intended to double it.

In an interview Thursday with The Associated Press, Craft said he made the donation with no strings attached, although Kentucky Athletics Director Mitch Barnhart has urged him to name the facility after Craft or his family.

"He suggested he would like for that to be the case," said Craft, president of Alliance Resource Partners, a Tulsa, Okla.-based coal company. "I said, 'We'll be glad to talk about it,' but we haven't talked about it with any specifics."

Craft said he made a trip to Lexington two weeks ago and was highly impressed with the progress construction crews were making on the facility, which is adjacent to Memorial Coliseum. It will house practice courts, locker rooms, weight rooms and coaches rooms when completed later this year.

Craft has been friends with Kentucky basketball coach Tubby Smith for years, dating back to Smith's tenure as Tulsa's coach. Their sons knew each other from amateur basketball during high school, Craft said.

Although some fans were disgruntled by the Wildcats' subpar season this year, Craft said he has confidence Smith will right the ship.

"I just look at the good as opposed to try to look at negatives," Craft said. "Tubby's a great person, a great leader and a great coach. The fans at Kentucky, they've always been passionate about their Wildcats. They want them to win. We all do. I understand how they feel at times, but I'm a Tubby supporter."

Craft said he has made numerous other donations to various academic programs at the university, where he received a law degree, but this is the largest. He also has contributed to other schools, including the University of Tulsa, where he sits on the Board of Trustees.

The donation for the practice facility puts the project only $800,000 short of its $30 million anticipate cost.

"The passion and commitment of our loyal alumni continue to amaze me," said Lee Todd, university president. "Joe Craft boldly leads by example in pushing our university to excellence. He has been a significant contributor to academic programs, our capital campaign and athletics. This major gift will help ensure Kentucky basketball remains one of the premier programs in the country."

Previously, the largest gift to the Kentucky athletics department was $2.78 million, donated anonymously toward the same facility. The Nutter family of Beaver Creek, Ohio, had contributed $2.5 million toward football facilities.

Kyle Chaffin is the three-time winner of the Prestonsburg Home Run Derby and two-time local champion of Century 21 Home Run Derby. Chaffin traveled to Applebee's Park in Lexington Aug. 5 and competed in Century 21's state home run derby. He finished runner-up in the 11-12-year-old division.

Sterling Marlin struggles along and ponders retirement

by JOHN KEKIS
ASSOCIATED PRESS

WATKINS GLEN, N.Y. — After blowing an engine in practice and another while qualifying, Sterling Marlin was more than ready to say goodbye to Watkins Glen International. And when he was caught up in a multicar crash late in Sunday's road race at The Glen and finished 39th in the 43-car field, the despair sank to a new low.

"I hate it for MB2 Motorsports," said the 49-year-old Marlin, in his first year driving the No. 14 Waste Management Chevrolet for team owner Bobby Ginn. "I had a decent car, but it would be nice if they'd put Rockingham right in this place right here."

The result left Marlin's team teetering on the brink of falling out of the top 35 in owner points — his team sits 35th, just 16 points ahead of Ray Evernham's No. 19 car. That's a big deal because anybody outside the top 35 is not guaranteed a starting spot each week.

"It's aggravating," said Marlin, who has just one top-10 finish and five DNFs this season and dislikes road racing as much as any of the drivers who don't do so well turning right. "It takes a whole lot of luck and a good race team to compete at this level."

Just four years ago, Marlin had that special team driving the Coors Light Dodge for Chip Ganassi Racing, and it showed on the track. After finishing third in points the previous year for the second time in his career, Marlin led the points race for 25 consecutive weeks in 2002 and gave Ganassi a real shot at winning his first Cup title.

"Nobody really thought we could do it. Week in and week out we'd run top five, top 10 no problem," said Marlin, who has 10 victories in his Cup career. "We ran so good. It was pretty neat for my dad. He didn't really say a whole lot about it. He just stayed kind of quiet, and I was wanting us to win it bad."

For more than six months, Marlin was the man to beat. He kept four-time Cup champ Jeff Gordon, Mark Martin, Kurt Busch, Jimmie Johnson and eventual champion Tony Stewart in his rearview mirror with his consistency, posting two wins, eight top fives, and 14 top 10s.

Then the season began to unravel at Richmond. He was involved in an early crash with teammate Jimmy Spencer and finished last. Marlin was hurt but ignored the pain in his neck. The only time an injury had kept him out of the seat was a burn he had in a crash at Bristol.

"Somebody wrecked going into Turn 3," said Marlin, the 1983 Cup rookie of the year. "I checked up, somebody popped me in the back end, barely touched me, and I went down across the apron and more or less hit the wall head-on. That was the start of it."

Marlin left Richmond with a nine-point lead over Martin, but consecutive finishes of 21st at Loudon and Dover dropped him to fourth as the circuit headed for Kansas in early September. He qualified seventh for the Protection One 400, but another head-on crash into a barrier ended his season after 29 races and his chase for that elusive championship.

"The wreck I didn't think was as bad as Richmond," Marlin said. "Didn't even know I was hurt."

He did two days later. "I was home cleaning some property and (car co-owner) Felix (Sabates) called and said, 'Man, what are you doing?'" Marlin recalled, smiling. "I told him, and he said, 'Don't move, you've got a broken neck.' I said, 'OK.'"

"It was all over then. I was disappointed because we were coming back," he said. "We had some good tracks coming up and had found some stuff in testing. We had lost a little bit at midseason. We were still running good, but we really weren't the dominant car like we had been earlier. Then I got hurt. That's just part of it."

Marlin was relegated to cheerleader status as Jamie McMurray finished the season in his place. "It was a tremendous disappointment, probably one of the biggest I've ever been a part of," said Tony Glover, Marlin's crew chief at the time and longtime friend. "You'll never know. We were coming into our strongest part of the season. We were certainly looking forward to the challenge. We were never given a chance to finish the book, I guess you'd say."

"What hurt was he was leading the points and he had to win," Spencer said. "Sometimes, you only get one shot at a championship. That might have been his only shot."

Still, because the team had done so well before his injury, Marlin looked forward with great anticipation to the next season.

"I figured I'd just go to 2003 and come back and kick butt again," said Marlin, who won the 1994 Daytona 500 for his first career victory, beating Ernie Irvan after finishing second to Irvan the previous two years. "Then 2003 came along. We had some good runs, but we had some mechanical failures, just couldn't ever get the momentum back. We just never had the luck we had in 2002."

"It's been a year since Sterling's dad, Coo Coo, died. And you can see in his eyes how much he misses his father. Sterling got his start as a pit crew member for his dad, a farmer who also raced at NASCAR's top level from 1966-80, and always has credited the toughness he learned from Coo Coo for his success."

Although Marlin has earned more than $39 million in 697 starts, he still maintains the family farm in Tennessee. He has to.

"I promised dad I'd take care of the farm," he said. "I'm trying to do it."

Marlin, who hopes to bring his son Steadman through the ranks of NASCAR, said he would race a full schedule next year but hasn't thought beyond that.

Sadler to take over No. 19 at Michigan

by JENNA FRYER
ASSOCIATED PRESS

CHARLOTTE, N.C. — The No. 19 Dodge is getting a new driver.

Elliott Sadler will take over the ride from Jeremy Mayfield at Evernham Motorsports beginning with this weekend's race at Michigan International Speedway, a team official confirmed to The Associated Press.

Sadler secured an early release from Robert Yates Racing late Tuesday night, clearing the way for him to replace Mayfield beginning Sunday, according to an Evernham official who spoke on condition of anonymity because an official announcement had not yet been made.

Sadler, who asked out of his contract at Yates in July, had been predicted to join Evernham's three-car team in 2007. But when Evernham fired Mayfield last week, Sadler and the car owner worked to get him into the No. 19 immediately. The paperwork was finalized Tuesday night, and Sadler was set to test the car at Kentucky Speedway on Wednesday.

David Gilliland, meanwhile, tested Sadler's old Yates car at Kentucky and was poised to fill the seat in that ride beginning with Sunday's race in Michigan. Gilliland exploded onto the NASCAR scene in June when he won the Busch Series race at Kentucky while driving for an underfunded team.

It's not clear if Gilliland will drive the rest of the Cup schedule for Yates. NASCAR has yet to clear him to race at Talladega Superspeedway, and running in more than seven events this season would make him ineligible to compete for rookie of the year in 2007.

That's where Mayfield could come in. Although he's expected to sign with Bill Davis Racing for the 2007 season, he could drive a handful of races for Yates while the team prepares for Gilliland to take over the ride permanently next year.

Mayfield was fired last week in the midst of a tumultuous season with Evernham. Although he was a two-time qualifier for the Chase for the championship, he had a miserable year and had been extremely critical of the car owner because of it.

He dropped to 36th in the points before he was fired, and was replaced with Bill Elliott last week at the road course in Watkins Glen, N.Y.

Paintsville Lake Wildlife Management Area hunting zones and regulations

SPECIAL TO THE TIMES

LEXINGTON — The US Army Corps of Engineers at Paintsville Lake, in conjunction with the Kentucky Department of Fish & Wildlife, has designated a few areas on the Paintsville Lake Wildlife Management Area as "No Hunting" zones.

The Corps has posted a map and description of these areas on outdoor bulletin boards located at the Corps of Engineers Resource Manager's Office, Paintsville Lake State Park boat launch ramp, Dam Overlook, Downstream Area, Big Mine Fork and the Open Fork boat launch ramps. Hunters will also find a list of current hunting season dates posted on these bulletin boards.

Those hunters wishing to hunt in the Morgan County section of the Wildlife Management Area can do so without any hunting zone restrictions.

Those hunters wishing to hunt in the Johnson County section are urged to check this map since a few areas close to the dam have been designated as "No Hunting" zones.

The 2006 - 2007 hunting season dates for the Paintsville Lake Wildlife Management Area are as follows:

1. Squirrel: Open August 19 - November 10, 2006, and November 13, 2006 - February 28, 2007 and June 2 - 15, 2007. Open under statewide regulations, except closed during Quota Deer Hunt.

Dedicated squirrel hunter feels in tune with woods

by STEVE VANTREESE
ASSOCIATED PRESS

BURNA — While squirrel hunting has waned in popularity as deer and turkey hunting opportunities have grown, Edward Doom has bucked the trend.

The retired educator, a former teacher and Livingston Central High School principal, has long determined that, at least as far as he's concerned, squirrels in the hardwoods is what hunting is all about. And with Kentucky's long-running squirrel season having opened, you can be sure Doom is among the trees and after them today.

"I started out squirrel hunting as a kid with my dad and my great-grandfather," said Doom, 59. "I sort of followed with what they were doing."

"Everybody these days seems like they've gotten into deer or turkey and lost interest in squirrels, but I still squirrel hunt," he said. "I used to deer hunt some, but I finally decided this is what I really like to do, so I strictly squirrel hunt now. It just feels good being out there, being alone in the woods."

Doom in times past hunted with a shotgun, but he's purely a rimfire rifle hunter now, even during the early period of the season when summer foliage makes visibility difficult and shotgunning would be far more forgiving.

"I decided a while back that I'd give them a little more chance and just hunt with the rifle," he said. "I enjoy the challenge of it."

Doom frequently hunts in the tall timber bottomlands of the Cumberland River. His tactics are familiar, although the way he goes about it has a little of his own stamp.

For the early days of the season, Doom, like most August hunters in the state's forests and woodlots, goes seeking a hot hickory tree — one with a good crop of early ripening nuts that is apt to draw squirrels from all directions.

"I kind of sneak along through the woods, stopping regularly to look and listen," Doom said. "I'm looking for a hickory with ripe nuts on it, but I usually find it first by listening. I'll either hear the nut cuttings that a squirrel is dropping hitting leaves, or I hear the sound of a squirrel jumping from one limb to another as it's moving toward a hickory to feed."

"I'll follow the sounds to get where the squirrel is — I like it when the leaves are all still on the tree and I know he's up there, even though I can't see him yet," Doom said. "I carry a little wooden-legged folding stool, and I'll find a place under the tree and wait for the squirrel to show himself."

Doom usually packs a scope-sighted rifle in .22 long rifle, although lately he's been working with one in the tiny, but fast .17 Mach 2 rimfire chambering. He zeroes his rifle and scope combination to hit dead-on at 50 yards, but admittedly shots are taken more commonly at 30 yards and closer. He practices his shooting and places his bullets carefully.

"It really does a job on a squirrel,"

he said of the newer small caliber. "I want a clean kill, and you don't have to shoot one but once." Doom concentrates his hunting in the early-morning hours during the initial days of the season.

"I usually stay until I get my (six-squirrel) daily limit," he said. "That's my goal, and I'm usually out there from daylight until 10 or 10:30 in the morning."

"A little later in the season after it cools down some, if I don't get my limit in the morning, I may come back in the afternoon and finish it up," he said.

Doom, of course, doesn't always take his limit, but he probably does so often enough to easily best the average harvest of most Kentucky squirrel hunters. Especially during the August period of hunting, daily bags of two to three squirrels are routine. Limits are the exception.

Doom for the last several years has kept a log book in which he records conditions, locations and results from each of his hunts. The log shows that his best season in recent years was that of 2004 when Kentucky was marking an exceptional squirrel population — only to see the population crash that fall and winter during a major nut crop failure. Doom noted taking 135 squirrels before the population collapsed mostly due to starvation.

"Every squirrel gets eaten," he said of those that come back in his game bag. "It's not like they are killed and just wasted."

Kentucky statewide squirrel season runs Aug. 19-Nov. 10 and Nov. 13-Feb. 28, closing only during the first weekend of the firearms deer hunting season, Nov. 11-12.

Best Bets

SUNDAY, AUGUST 20 2:30 p.m.
TNT
NASCAR Racing
 It's been an off year for Jeremy Mayfield, to say the least. After being part of the Chase the past two seasons, he's without a win so far in 2006, and after 20 races, he hadn't even posted a top 10. He needs a bit of luck, to be sure, the kind that helped him win the GFS Marketplace 400 a year ago when by all rights he should have run out of gas. "Conserve fuel" is the Mayfield message, one he takes into Michigan today to defend his title.

8 p.m.
ESPN
MLB Baseball
 After a cooling-off period of more than two months, the white-hot rivalry that ensues every time the Yankees and Red Sox meet is in full swing again. This series in Boston began with a doubleheader on Friday and ends tomorrow, the five games the result of two earlier rainouts, and it could go a long way toward deciding the AL East. David Ortiz and the Sox have held first place for much of the season, but you know Derek Jeter won't let the Yanks go down quietly.

8 p.m.
FOX
Teen Choice 2006
 Forget "best," "outstanding," "favorite" and other adjectives generally attached to entertainment awards. The word of the hour at this ceremony, where teen votes determine the winners, is "choice" - from choice movie, choice TV show and choice athlete to such offbeat categories as choice hissy fit and choice sleazebag. Jessica Simpson and Dane Cook co-host the show; Kevin Federline, Timbaland and Nelly Furtado are slated to perform.

9 p.m.
NATGEO
Fight Science
 Got a kid at home who loves those karate or taekwon do lessons but hates science class? He or she might be psyched for the latter after watching this fascinating new two-hour special, which explores the science behind various martial arts. Sophisticated animation techniques and cameras, and a "crash-test dummy" who makes those guys in the seat belt PSAs look like rag dolls, are used to get inside the body of a fighter in action. Amazing stuff indeed.

10 p.m.
COMEDY
Comedy Central Roast
 If ever there was a "serious" actor who knew how to laugh at himself, it's the artist formerly known as Capt. Kirk and now known as Denny Crane. So William Shatner is a perfect candidate for the Comedy Central Roast treatment, in which assorted friends and colleagues pepper him with good-natured insults and memorable anecdotes. Let's hope all that attention doesn't give him a Big Giant Head.

MONDAY, AUGUST 21 8 p.m.
ESPN
NFL Preseason Football
 Gulf Coast fans of the New Orleans Saints, be they diehards or simply sentimentalists rooting for the team that represents the hurricane-ravaged area, get their first look at the 2006 squad tonight in Shreveport, La., against the Dallas Cowboys. What they hope to see are signs, ones that point to progress being made under new coach Sean Payton after a three-win 2005. Newcomers Reggie Bush and Drew Brees should draw the fans' biggest cheers.

9 p.m.
HBO
When the Leaves Broke: A Requiem in Four Acts
 You probably won't be entertained by Spike Lee's ambitious four-part miniseries - airing over two nights - about the aftermath of Hurricane Katrina in New Orleans. But you will be moved and inspired. The music of Wynton Marsalis and Terence Blanchard accompanies the words of Louisiana Gov. Kathleen Blanco, New Orleans Mayor Ray Nagin, Harry Belafonte, rapper Kanye West and other not-so-famous folk who lived through the disaster.

10 p.m.
COURT
On Native Soil: The Documentary of the 9/11 Commission Report
 Not so much about the terrorist attacks of Sept. 11, 2001, themselves, but about the events leading up to 9/11 and what happened afterward, this documentary tells the story from the point of view of victims' families, in particular those who fought for the establishment of a commission to investigate the attacks. Their voices are heard here, along with those of President George W. Bush, former President Bill Clinton and many others.

TUESDAY, AUGUST 22 8 p.m.

Best

Continued from p11 about, but a certain department store chain (hint: Its name is on the event) is hoping to change that — and raise some money — with this concert, taped in July. The cause is after-school care for children of working parents, with the goal of keeping them out of trouble by giving them a safe, supervised place to be when classes let out. Performers include Sting, 3 Doors Down, Martina McBride, John Legend, Bon Jovi and more.

PBS Wide Angle
It's called "Turkey's Tigers," but don't look for big cats in this documentary. It's about the impact of Islam in Turkey, a land with a large Muslim population and a secular, Western-thinking government. Politically and economically, its devout Muslims have been on the fringes, but they're starting to assert themselves in both arenas. The documentary looks at what that means for the nation, the region and the world.

10 p.m. OXYGEN Breaking Up With Shannen Doherty
She's really not a witch ... or that other word that rhymes with it. But the on-screen attitude of the "Beverly Hills, 90210" and "Charmed" star is well suited to this new reality offering. She plays a sort of Cyrano de Bergerac in reverse, doing the dirty work for people who want to end relationships with lovers or friends. Sometimes the dumppee takes it quite well, even rebounding quickly enough to ask Shannen out. Occupational hazard, you know?

WEDNESDAY, AUGUST 23 6 p.m. HBO Movie: Songcatcher
Tony winner Janet McTeer ("Carrington") shines as a frustrated musicologist who stumbles onto a rural Appalachian community in which old English ballads have been preserved intact for centuries in this affecting drama, which won a special jury prize at the 2000 Sundance Film Festival. The haunting music and breathtaking mountain scenery dominate this endearing film, which also features Aidan Quinn, Pat Carroll and Jane Adams.

9 p.m. TBS World's Funniest Commercials 2006
These are the commercials that don't make you reach for the mute button or head for the bathroom. Kevin Nealon hosts an hour of laugh-out-loud television ads from around the world. Even if you don't understand the language, there's plenty to chuckle at. The only problem with a showlike this is: How do you know when it's gone to commercial?

10 p.m. COMEDY PARK South Park
Definitely not for those offended by portrayals of sexual matters — and if you're easily offended, what the heck are you doing watching "South Park"? — this hilarious episode has Jimmy discovering a certain part of his anatomy has developed a mind of its own. He needs to get it under control if he's going to do his comedy routine in the talent show, so he seeks out a willing woman, whose pimp mistakes him for competition. Yes, you read that right.

THURSDAY, AUGUST 24 8 p.m. DISNEY Movie: High School Musical
It's cheesy, it's Disney-wholesome, and the kids love it; the soundtrack album is still a hot seller months after this musical comedy's premiere. Directed by choreographer Kenny Ortega ("Newsies"), it stars Zac Efron and Vanessa Anne Hudgens as two radically different teens who decide to challenge their innate personalities and act in a play. Once together onstage, feelings start to develop. However, their friends will have none of that.

8 p.m. FX Movie: Mona Lisa Smile
Julia Roberts and several of today's most impressive younger actresses — Kirsten Dunst, Julia Stiles and Maggie Gyllenhaal — add zest to a predictable plot in this 2003 school drama directed by Mike Newell ("Four Weddings and a Funeral"). Roberts plays a bold 1950s Wellesley College teacher who encourages students to think for themselves. Women, in the '50s, thinking for themselves? Gasp!

9:30 p.m. TCM Movie: Brother Orchid
Half a century before Whoopi Goldberg hid out from the mob in a convent, Edward G. Robinson was doing the same in a monastery in this engaging 1940 comedy. He returns from abroad to find his old gang has a new boss. Fearing for his life, he takes refuge with the brothers and ends up helping them fight an underworld takeover of their flower business. Insert your own "prevent florist friars" joke here.

TV Listings

FRIDAY EVENING AUGUST 25, 2006. Table with columns for time slots (5:00-12:30) and rows for various TV channels (TBS, NBC, PBS, ABC, WGN, CBS, FOX, CBS, ESPN, DSC, TNT, A&E, NICK, USA, FAM, LIFE, ESPN2, AMC, HGTV, SCIFI, HIST, TOC, HBO, HBO2, HBO3, MAX, DISN, SHOW, TMC).

Best

Continued from p12 8 p.m. A&E City Confidential "Gatlinburg: Smoky Mountain Nightmare" remembers the night - Sept. 13, 1986 - when the worst of the real world invaded a friendly Tennessee tourist getaway.

8 p.m. DISNEY Movie: The Cheetah Girls 2 If you're over 13, this new sequel to the tuneful Disney Channel flick "The Cheetah Girls" may not float your boat, but you'll enjoy the spectacular Spanish scenery.

8 p.m. ESPN NFL Preseason Football The annual battle for bragging rights in the Keystone State between the Steelers and Eagles should have the faithful at Lincoln Financial Field in Philadelphia as obnoxious as ever.

SATURDAY MORNING/AFTERNOON AUGUST 26, 2006. Table with columns for time slots (9:00-4:30) and rows for various TV channels (TBS, NBC, PBS, ABC, WGN, CBS, FOX, CBS, ESPN, DSC, TNT, A&E, NICK, USA, FAM, LIFE, ESPN2, AMC, HGTV, SCIFI, HIST, TOC, HBO, HBO2, HBO3, MAX, DISN, SHOW, TMC).

SATURDAY, AUGUST 26 8 p.m. ABC Movie: Pearl Harbor Did you watch "Titanic" just to see the boat sink and ignore the sappy love story? We suggest you take the same approach to this 2001 drama.

8 p.m. HBO Movie: In Her Shoes Highly dissimilar sisters collide in director Curtis Hanson's well-acted 2005 version of the Jennifer Weiner novel, with Cameron Diaz as a ne'er-do-well ultimately left with nobody else to turn to but her uptight lawyer sibling (Toni Collette).

8 p.m. TCM Movie: Gunga Din Like its contemporary "Gone With the Wind," this 1939 tale, set in India and loosely based on Rudyard Kipling's poem, has its share of stereotyping.

SATURDAY EVENING AUGUST 26, 2006. Table with columns for time slots (5:00-12:30) and rows for various TV channels (TBS, NBC, PBS, ABC, WGN, CBS, FOX, CBS, ESPN, DSC, TNT, A&E, NICK, USA, FAM, LIFE, ESPN2, AMC, HGTV, SCIFI, HIST, TOC, HBO, HBO2, HBO3, MAX, DISN, SHOW, TMC).

10 p.m. A&E The Jonesboro Schoolyard Ambush They weren't the first students to go on a shooting rampage at their school, but they were the youngest. This powerful special revisits the case of Mitchell Johnson and Andrew Golden, who were 13 and 11 when they opened fire at their Arkansas school, killing five people and wounding 10.

10 p.m. CINEMAX Movie: The Transporter 2 Jason Statham and his amazingly flexible business suit return in this sequel to the earlier action hit, again co-written and co-produced by genre specialist Luc Besson.

11 p.m. COMEDY Russell Peters: Outsourced Russell Peters makes fun of Asians! But it's OK: he is one. A Canadian of Indian descent to be exact, the comedian has a lot to say on the topic of being Asian in general and Indian in particular.

Hearing slated for shooting

STAFF WRITER

PRESTONSBURG — An Estill man who allegedly shot his own father had a pretrial conference set for Nov. 2 in circuit court Friday.

Edward Lee Jones Jr., 43, was indicted by a Floyd County grand jury July 20 on a charge of first-degree assault for allegedly causing serious injuries to his father, Edward Jones Sr., on June 1 when he allegedly shot him. Det. Byron Hansford of the Kentucky State Police was the arresting officer.

Before the November pretrial conference can take place, Jones will be evaluated by doctors to make sure that he is fit to be in court on the order of Judge Danny P. Caudill. A doctor will have to testify about Jones' health in court at a date that has not yet been set.

Jones' bond has been set at $75,000 and he remains in jail on the felony charge.

SEEKING ANSWERS

Sheriff John K. Blackburn spoke with frustrated Wayland residents who are concerned with crime and drugs in their town.

Sheriff discusses crime with concerned Wayland residents

STAFF WRITER

WAYLAND — Some Wayland residents are trying to take back their town, saying it is ridden with crime and drugs.

Floyd County Sheriff John K. Blackburn met with the residents Thursday evening, in an attempt to gain a better understanding of what problems have arisen since the town hasn't had a police officer.

As soon as Blackburn arrived at Wayland City Hall, residents began arriving also with the expectation that someone would be there to open up the building. After a few minutes of waiting and conversing with one another, Blackburn and the residents decided to continue with the meeting outside, despite not having a formal setting.

"I've talked with Mayor [Tommy] Murphy and they are trying very hard to hire someone," Blackburn said. Residents informed the sheriff that council members had interviewed some-

Wednesday, but that applicant still had a couple more weeks of training to complete. Other than that, they were not sure of the outcome of the meeting.

Residents said it would help if officers performed random checks of the town, just to let people know that they were being watched. Blackburn said that he does have an officer in the area that does do checks from time to time.

Betsy Layne basketball legend dies

by STEVE LeMASTER
SPORTS EDITOR

COLUMBIA, S.C. — Mare Creek native and basketball legend Grady Wallace passed away Thursday at his South Carolina home.

Wallace, 72, was a Betsy Layne High School graduate who went on to become the University of South Carolina men's basketball program's all-time leading scorer.

In a storied basketball career that started in Floyd County and ended in South Carolina, Wallace scored with ease amongst some of the nation's top basketball players.

In 1957, during his college-playing career, Wallace led the nation in scoring (31.3 points per game) and the Atlantic Coast Conference in rebounding (14.4 per game). The Floyd County native ranked above some elite players, outscoring both Kansas' Wilt Chamberlain and Seattle's Elgin Baylor, both of whom put together remarkable professional basketball careers and are

Voiceless in America Student conducts experiment in Prestonsburg

STAFF WRITER

As you read this article, imagine if written words were your only form of communication with the world around you.

Experts around the country say that communication is a key element in any type of environment, whether it be a personal or a business relationship. What would your life be like if you didn't have the ability to speak to others?

Just trying to stay silent for five minutes is struggle for some people, but a young college student from Cleveland, Ohio, is attempting to define what it's like to not have a voice.

Alex Frissel is a Rochester University student who has received a $3,000 Schimmel Fellowship grant to conduct a three week study about how people in different communities around the country react towards someone who does not have the ability to use verbal communication. Frissel wants to experience what it's like to be

Dwayne Foster, Garrett
"Well, you just wouldn't be able to see nothing. And to me...You wouldn't know what you look like or nothing."

Shawn Perry, Paintsville
"I'd pick vision. I like seeing things. I like seeing women and everything in general."

Virginia Sloan, Wayland
"Probably my eyesight. I like to see these mountains and stuff, and peoples' faces."

Sunni Williams, Prestonsburg
"That's a hard question. My sight, because I wouldn't be able to see all the beauty in everything around me. I wouldn't be able to see people when I talk to them."

Poll: What sense would you miss most if you lost it?

As part of his experiment to see how people would react to him being mute, Alex Frissel conducted a poll for The Floyd County Times, asking people what sense they would miss the most if they lost it. Above are some of the responses he received.

MSU provost to step down

The Associated Press

MOREHEAD — Morehead State provost Michael R. Moore will step down next June the university announced on Friday.

Moore has spent nine years working for the school's administration, first as the executive vice president for academic affairs and dean of faculty in 1997 before becoming the school's first provost in 2001.

Moore will return to teaching speech and communication classes after leaving the position on June 30, 2007.

"When I first moved into an administrative position as a department chair, I knew I wanted to eventually be back in the classroom learning with my students," Moore said. "After 23 years as a department chair, dean and provost, that time has come."

Moore is the second-longest tenured academic officer in the history of the university. Warren C. Lappin served 31 years on the job before retiring in 1971.

the people causing all of the trouble have police scanners and know when there is an officer around, so it unlikely that they will participate in any unlawful manner knowing this.

Blackburn said it's hard for him to put an officer in every location at all times of the day and night. "There are five cities in the county and it's hard to keep a constant eye on the entire county," Blackburn said.

Blackburn explained to residents that it would be hard to get a deputy to move to the area. He said that if residents could find a place where the officer could live, then it might be possible he could get someone to relocate.

Residents were curious to know what the sheriff's boundaries were when it came to investigating possible drug hangouts and how they could rid the town of the people who were bringing the drugs to the area.

"We can visit a residence thought to be involved with drugs and let them know we are having complaints and ask for them to sign for a consent to search," Blackburn said.

After much discussion over the continuing crime, Blackburn suggested that residents form a "Neighborhood Watch" program. He said such programs have been successful in others communities and concerned Wayland residents should consider it. He offered to get the residents the forms they need to fill out for signs and bumper stickers, but warned that the program won't work without the participation of the entire community.

"One person can't do it alone," Blackburn said.

Blackburn said he will try to keep a closer watch on the town and he's hopeful that they will soon have their own officer.

When residents directed Sheriff Blackburn toward one residence where they think that most of the drug activity is originating, he said, "Well, maybe we'll just go down there and pay them a visit."

The next day, Blackburn said he visited the house where residents seem to think that a lot of the drug activity is happening in the town.

"I did ask for a consent to search and the occupant of the house declined," Blackburn said. "I also let that person know that we are watching and we intend to find out if there is any drug activity going on in the home."

Blackburn said people have the right to refuse a search of their home and, once denied, the sheriff's department cannot search the home without a warrant unless they give their consent.

Judge Danny P. Caudill agreed to probate the five-year sentence to one year in jail, including time spent, and with the remaining years spent on probation because the victim in the case signed off on the deal. Caudill told Sexton he was very fortunate to get the sentence that he did and he should take advantage of the opportunity he had been given because it was a good one.

two of the all-time best.

Wallace, who played at Pikeville College before moving out of state, holds the South Carolina career scoring (28.0 ppg) and single-season scoring average (31.3) records. The Betsy Layne High product was the first USC player to have his jersey retired.

Many of Wallace's scoring efforts were tops in the South Carolina program's history for many years. He set a single-game record with 54 points (the record has since been broken).

In his final game in a South Carolina uniform, Wallace scored 44 points and pulled down 20 rebounds, both game-highs.

Wallace is a member of both the Pikeville College and University of South Carolina halls of fame.

When his playing days ended, Wallace played in an industrial basketball league and eventually returned to South Carolina and married the former Janet Boney. While working for South Carolina's probation, pardon and parole board, Wallace coached basketball at Cardinal Newman (S.C.) High School. He coached at Cardinal Newman High for nine years, winning two state titles. His career with the state probation, pardon and parole board spanned 30 years.

Wallace was survived by his wife, daughter Leigh Ann Wallace and son Thomas Wallace, among others.

He was laid to rest Saturday at the St. Peter's Catholic Cemetery in Columbia, S.C.

Voicelless

voiceless in America.

The misconception that many people make when they meet him is assuming that he cannot hear either. In reality, he is perfectly capable of hearing and speaking. He has only taken a vow of silence for this three-week span.

He carries a spiral notebook with him wherever he goes and a card that reads, "I do not speak. I can hear perfectly well. I am a student journalist traveling across the country. Do you have time to answer a few questions?" Anytime that he needs to communicate with someone, he writes it down for the other person to read.

Frissel says that people are generally polite and don't seem to be taken back by his false inability to speak. During his recent visit to Prestonsburg, he visited several local establishments ranging from Wal-Mart to a local tattoo shop.

Through a conversation on Frissel's spiral notebook, he said the people he interacted with were fairly receptive overall. He said he had the most response at Big Sandy Community and Technical College, where the people he communicated with were very happy to take the time to answer his questions and didn't seem to have a problem with his inability to speak.

However, he said some shoppers at Wal-Mart steered away from him and acted like they did not have the desire to take the extra time to speak to someone who couldn't speak back.

Despite some of the more reluctant people he has encountered, Frissel says that he is really enjoying what he is doing.

Miners endangered by safety standoff

Like so much else in the endless battle for coal mine safety, the fight over dust controls remains a deadly standoff.

It's been eight years since The Courier-Journal revealed that cheating on air samples was commonplace, and that federal regulators knew.

It's been six years since the Clinton-era Mine Safety and Health Administration (MSHA) proposed that government take over dust sampling from the coal operators.

And it's been five years since an industry-dominated Bush administration put that potentially lifesaving change on hold.

In the past three years, a tamperproof dust monitor that miners can carry as part of their cap-lamp battery has been painstakingly developed, thoroughly tested and carefully perfected. But it's still not in use.

Using the monitors to protect miners from black lung disease, which kills some 1,000 every year, should be a no-brainer.

But there's still no agreement over whether to require them, who should pay for them and how they should be used.

This much seems obvious: 1) Miners themselves shouldn't have to pay for these $7,500 devices. 2) They should be widely deployed in mines. 3) If dust readings from different locations are averaged, operators could get by with jeopardizing some individual miners. 4) A worst-case scenario would be using the adoption of this equipment to justify a loosening of allowable dust standards. 5) Special exemptions should not allow small, poorly capitalized — and typically more dangerous — mines to forego the monitors.

Industry may nag for help with what should be a basic safety expense: a federal loan program, a federal tax credit, or purchase and lease of monitors by MSHA. But why shouldn't such costs be part of the price consumers pay for coal-generated power?

Of course, there's much about the culture of coal that isn't sensible, such as its resistance to safety innovation.

Industry moaned about methane monitors, which now are taken for granted. Industry fought self-contained self-rescue devices in the courts for years, but now they are standard equipment for miners.

When it comes to the new dust monitors, industry, union and MSHA remain far apart. Miners remain at risk.

Run, Newt, run

The casual TV viewer has probably noticed two things during the past few days — there's a war in the Middle East, and Newt Gingrich is commenting on it.

Gingrich has been a ubiquitous analyst on the war — ubiquity being one of the tireless, outsized former House speaker's favorite qualities. In between appearances in his role as a commentator for the Fox News Channel, Gingrich announced on "Meet the Press" that we are in the midst of World War III. A few days later, Hezbollah declared that it welcomed World War III, nicely capturing the moment: Simultaneous with its shooting war with Israel, Hezbollah is in a war of words with Newt Gingrich.

The old conventional wisdom about Gingrich was that we wouldn't have him to kick around anymore. The new conventional wisdom is that he's back, and he's doing the kicking.

Ousted by his own party after its 1998 midterm election losses, Gingrich has re-established himself as a party leader through sheer intellectual energy. He has had something intelligent to say about literally every issue, from health care to Katrina to the war on terror. "He has helped himself immensely — he's all over the place," says former Republican National Committee Chairman Ed

Gillespie.

Gingrich is partly benefiting from a beneath-the-surface conservative exasperation with President Bush. In 2000, Bush represented a break from Gingrich's brainy, hyper-partisan, government-cutting conservatism, for something more personable, more bipartisan and more comfortable with government. After six years of Bush, many conservatives are ready for a no-holds-barred, limited-government brainiac again.

Opinion is split about whether Gingrich will run for the 2008 presidential nomination, but no one doubts that he would love to. A GOP strategist says: "The only question for Newt will be, 'Can I devise the message that will rouse the nation?'"

Gingrich is still in bad odor for many Washington insiders who remember his often self-indulgent, erratic four-year run as speaker. Grass-roots Republicans, however, don't share their dismissiveness.

It's hard to see any plausible path to victory for Gingrich unless George Allen and Mitt Romney fizzle, freeing up room for an anti-McCain conservative. But the first-in-the-nation

Iowa caucuses are a conservative bastion. In 2000, even unserious candidates Alan Keyes and Gary Bauer combined for 23 percent of the vote. "I think he could do very well in Iowa," says top Republican pollster John McLaughlin, "and you never know."

If one of Gingrich's strengths is that he is enamored of ideas, a weakness is that he seems too enamored of his own. He has ethical issues from his time as speaker related to a book contract and the funding of a college course he taught, but in the Age of Abramoff those scandals seem quaint. More potentially damaging is his messy personal life and the sense of arrogance that sank his speakership.

Whatever happens, Gingrich stands to be the party's most important intellectual table-setter. "Whoever wins," says Gillespie, "is going to have spent a lot of time talking about what Newt was talking about." There are worse places for the party to look for a renewed agenda.

Analysts spin yarns on Lieberman race; four penguins die

MINUTEMAN MEDIA

There are some headlines on news stories that tell you what the story is about. That's good. There are some that merely confuse you. That's bad. And then there are those that suggest something more grand; a novel perhaps. They're the best of all.

One such headline appeared on my Internet home page the other day. It read:

"Four penguins perish in truck accident. Octopus uninjured."

Wow. Is that a headline or what?

If you click on the headline the story comes up and you can read it, but I didn't click. I knew that the mundane facts of the case could never match the novel it suggested. (I'm a great deal like George Bush in that regard. When facts interfere with a narrative, I ignore them.) So...

Once upon a time, an octopus was driving his pickup truck on a main street, carrying a cargo of four penguins to their new home at the zoo. He had two of his penguins on the wheel, another resting on the sill of the open window, another changing channels on his CD player, two more working the brake and gas pedals and one holding a cell phone to his earhole while he talked to his girlfriend.

When the penguins, being penguins, got into an argument over who had the coolest tuxedo, the octopus reached around with his remaining pus to swat them into silence. At that moment a utility pole darted in front of the truck and the he hit it.

The octopus dropped everything he was doing and wrapped all of his tentacles around every available anchor, so he was all right.

The penguins, however, being penguins, were not wearing seat belts and went tumbling into the street like so many formally attired bowling pins. Alas, they did not survive the crash.

That's my story and I'm sticking to it.

Columnists are not the only media people who deal in fantasy, however. There are political analysts.

For example, many of them are sadly bemoaning Joe Lieberman's loss in Connecticut's Democratic Senate primary. He lost to a relatively unknown rich guy who attacked the three-term senator for his support of the Iraq war.

"Poor Joe," the pundits are saying, "he voted his conscience and the nasty Democratic voters of Connecticut punished him for it. What is to become of compromise and moderation — hallmarks of Lieberman's tenure — in this poisonous atmosphere?"

Excuse me, but I thought his job was to represent the people of Connecticut, not merely his immaculate conscience. He not only voted for the war, he's continued to parrot the administration's rosy scenario long after it became apparent that it was a fiction.

Besides, compromise in Congress is dead. George Bush killed it. Anyone who doesn't know that is a fool.

Lieberman's got a conscience? Fine. So do the Democrats of Connecticut and they voted it.

Lieberman has said that he'll run as an independent in the fall and they say he's got a chance of winning, although he may just siphon off enough votes to put the Republican candidate, a virtual nonentity, in office.

I have a friend George who thinks that would not be a bad result. He thinks the Democrats would be wise to let the Republicans keep control of Congress.

"We're going to have to pull out of Iraq and sooner rather than later," he said. "The American people won't stand for keeping our troops in the middle of a civil war which, if eyewitness accounts are to be believed, Iraq has become."

"If the Democrats are in power when it happens the Republicans will say 'See! We told you so. The Democrats are weak on national security. They lost Iraq.' Already that little weasel Bill Kristol is saying that Lieberman was defeated by people who hate America."

"Better to let the Republicans stay in office and take the fall when the mess they've created reaches our eyeballs."

This Town, That World

Editor's Note: For years, Floyd County Times founder and former publisher Norman Allen wrote a weekly column that looked at Floyd County through his eyes. His columns are being reprinted due to request.

Things have come to a pretty pass when Democrats can't have their own Donnybrook, without the armed forces being called in to protect them from outsiders.

E PLURIBUS UNUM

This nice lady, Lida Margaret Spradlin, is one in—well, if not in a million, certainly one in thousands. She, of all the readers of this newspaper, was the only one who missed this column enough, when it was omitted recently, to say she had.

GIVE ME A HOSS...

Times do change—now, don't they? I can remember the day when a Cadillac would have us falling over our feet to draw near and gawk, and, most of us recall when a jet overhead caused more than one wry neck. But only the other day, in the space of an hour, all this went by the wayside. More than one "Cad" rased past, and never a second glance. A jet broke the sound barrier, and the only comment was a crusty remark that the pilot wouldn't have appreciated.

Then, down the street came a lone man. Necks craned, you could see ears perk up. This man was riding a horse.

NEWS ITEM

A friend tapped me on the shoulder, the other day, pointed to a girl, and said, "There's an item for your column." It was news. This youngster was intent upon an encyclopedia, meanwhile disregarding the comic books, movie magazines, and other popular "literature" in a rack, a few feet away.

SMALL COMFORT

The story was told and the teller vowed, so help him, it's the truth. This old guy had bought himself a brand-new car and was snagged on the little item of sales tax. When he expressed considerable displeasure, he was reminded that the car would depreciate next year, and he would get credit on that.

Quoth he:
"Now, I depreciate what you're tryin' to tell me, but I demed sure, don't depreciate these taxes!"

ALLEN ON ALLEN

Dr. J. H. Allen didn't know he was to be honored at the recent Maytown homecoming—surely not, for he would have arranged that his hunting and fishing partner, Ray Allen, did not get a chance at making "a few feeble remarks," as they say. Anyway, Doc was hooked and was forced to sit and suffer in silence while Allen quoted from three newspapers - for the first time in his life attesting to the veracity of newspaper editors - but wound up by twisting them to his own purposes. Said he:

"If Dr. Allen had been a drinking man, some items appearing would

'City Strollers'

Prestonsburg Health Care residents enjoy outings

Residents of Prestonsburg Health Care Center have spent the warm weather months busily engaged in a variety of outdoor activities. The center's recreation director and staff have embarked on daily strolls down the streets and avenues of Prestonsburg, gone on afternoon fishing expeditions, paid regular visits to the Floyd County Library, lunched at Billy Ray's Restaurant, and more.

The activities have been coordinated by center staff through the "Quality of Life Initiative" conducted by the center's restorative and physical therapy departments. The Quality of Life initiative seeks to improve both the physical and mental aspects of a patient's recovery process and the general well-being of all residents.

This past summer, Prestonsburg Health Care Center residents have visited many of the city's various attractions and parks, as well as going on daytime excursions to various points of interest throughout the county. Center staff report that the residents enjoy being involved in community life as they meet and greet other city and county residents and visitors to the area.

A favorite activity is to visit

Prestonsburg's Save-A-Lot store to shop for snacks and supplies for cooking classes, another fun activity that the residents have enjoyed this summer.

Visiting the Floyd County Library to see magic shows and participate in the library's story hour has also been a favorite activity for many.

Eating out and touring Jenny Wiley State Resort Park to fish and see the ducks, geese and other wildlife has also been a favorite activity of interest for many residents.

It is the belief of the Prestonsburg Health Center director and staff that these outings provide their residents with wonderful opportunities to remain an integral part of community life and to actively participate in meaningful life activities. They thank all area businesses for welcoming their involvement and encouraging their visits. Center staff look forward to continuing the outdoor activities throughout the coming beautiful fall season.

MOVIES FROM THE BLACK LAGOON

'Roller Coaster'

by TOM DOTY
TIMES COLUMNIST

A safety inspector matches wits with a lethal extortionist targeting the titular rides at the nation's most popular theme parks, in this late-1970s effort.

It all begins with a spectacular sequence in which a young man sets off a small bomb on the track of a roller coaster. The train derailed when it hits the damaged spot and deposits its passengers all over the boardwalk while the killer slips away munching on cotton candy. The scene abruptly shifts to safety inspector Harry Calder submitting to a unique program to stop smoking.

He's wired up and every time he takes a puff a technician administers a jolt of electricity to his body. Harry may not have picked the best method to stop smoking but he's sharp enough to suspect that a fire at a second amusement park is related to the roller coaster bombing and crashes a meeting of the top five amusement park owners in Chicago.

Sure enough they are delivered a tape stating that $1 million will stop the extortionist's reign of terror. Harry's advice is to bring in the feds because this guy is serious and, unfortunately, cunning. Turns out Harry is right, because the guy planted a microphone in the room and knows exactly what they're discussing. He also takes a shine to Harry and informs the FBI that Harry is to make the money drop.

This leads to an excellent sequence in which the bomber arranges to receive the money at yet another amusement park. It isn't long before he reveals that another bomb is somewhere in the facility and then proceeds to send Harry on every ride in the park before coming up with an ingenious method of getting rid of the agents shadowing Harry so he can collect the money. The bills however are marked and the bomber announces he will teach them all a lesson.

It all comes down to a manhunt at Magic Mountain, with no one knowing what the bomber looks like, though Harry definitely knows his voice and that comes in handy during a crucial sequence that I won't give away here.

Though billed as a disaster movie — the coaster sequences are even recorded in Sensurround — this is actually a suspense picture and was written by the team of Levinson and Link, who specialized in mysteries and penned "Columbo" amongst others. Director James Goldstone uses a top-notch cast and they deliver the goods. George Segal is the perfect every man as Harry and one's never sure if he will be able to stop the madman he's after. Richard Widmark plays the FBI honcho as an authoritative if by rote lawman who learns that his methods need some improvement. Henry Fonda has a small but amusing

A brother like that

by DAN CLARK

"CHICKEN SOUP FOR THE SOUL"

A friend of mine named Paul received an automobile from his brother as a Christmas present. On Christmas Eve when Paul came out of his office, a street urchin was walking around the shiny new car, admiring it. "Is this your car, Mister?" he asked.

Paul nodded. "My brother gave

it to me for Christmas."

The boy was astounded. "You mean your brother gave it to you, and it didn't cost you nothing? Boy, I wish ..." He hesitated.

Of course Paul knew what he was going to wish for. He was going to wish he had a brother like that. But what the lad said jarred Paul all the way down to his heels.

"I wish," the boy went on, "that I could be a brother like that."

Paul looked at the boy in astonishment, then impulsively added, "Would you like to take a ride in my automobile?"

"Oh, yes. I'd love that."

After a short ride, the boy turned, and with his eyes aglow, said, "Mister, would you mind driving in front of my house?"

Paul smiled a little. He thought he knew what the lad wanted. He wanted to show his neighbors that he could ride home in a big automobile. But Paul was wrong again.

"Will you stop where those two steps are?" the boy asked.

He ran up the steps. Then in a little while Paul heard him coming back, but he was not coming fast. He was carrying his crippled little brother. He sat him down on the bottom step, then sort of squeezed up against him and pointed to the car.

"There she is, Buddy, just like I told you upstairs. His brother gave it to him for Christmas, and it didn't cost him a cent. And some day I'm gonna give you one just like it ... then you can see for yourself all the pretty things in the Christmas windows that I've been trying to tell you about."

Paul got out and lifted the lad to the front seat of his car. The shining-eyed older brother climbed in beside him, and the three of them began a memorable holiday ride.

That Christmas Eve, Paul learned what Jesus meant when he said: "It is more blessed to give ..."

Automatic air conditioner causing marital disharmony

MAGLIOZZI

Dear Tom and Ray:
Please settle an argument between me and my wife. We have a 2005 Toyota Highlander with an "automatic air conditioner." You set the temperature and it maintains it. My wife contends that the AC works like a house AC, so that the temperature of the cold air is constant and the compressor cycles on and off. I contend that the AC (just like the older "manual" ACs) simply mixes hot and cold air to obtain the desired temperature. The dispute comes to a head when it's really hot in the car. I claim that we should set the temperature as low as possible. My wife counters that it will (like a house AC) reach a given temperature in the same amount of time, no matter what temperature you set the AC to. Please settle this issue for us! — Roger TOM: Isn't it wonderful when a marriage is so good that all you have to argue about is trivial stuff like this, Roger?

his wife usually argue about what size frying pan she's going to hit him with next.

TOM: The great news is, you're both at least partially correct. As your wife says, all the cold air that's produced comes out at a constant temperature, and the compressor does cycle on and off. And, like YOU say, Roger, the car's climate-control system also blends warm and cold air to maintain the temperature you set.

RAY: Now, will cranking down the temperature all the way cool off a hot car faster? Oftentimes, yes. It depends on the particular system. But when you crank most systems down past a certain point (it doesn't have to be all the way), three things happen.

TOM: First, you ensure that no warm air is getting blended in. Second, the system puts itself into "recirculate" mode.

RAY: "Recirculate" limits the amount of fresh, outside air the system takes in. Essentially, in recirculate mode, the air conditioner is recycling the air it has already cooled, and cooling it more.

TOM: The third thing that happens when you set the climate control on "arctic" is that the fan speed gets kicked up to its highest setting.

RAY: That doesn't produce any more cold air, but it moves the air around more and might make you feel cool faster.

TOM: But as you've probably noticed, having the fan set on high also makes it sound like you're in Dorothy's backyard in Kansas just before the big twister hits. And all that noise makes it harder to hear you two lovebirds cooing at each other.

RAY: So, our advice would be to do whatever pleases your wife the most, Roger. Doing it your way — even if it cools off the car faster — is going to make it seem a lot hotter in there. Trust us.

Low-mileage cars need maintenance less often

Dear Tom and Ray:

I have a question about cars with VERY low mileage. I have a 10-year-old car that has less than 12,000 miles. What maintenance should I be doing or not doing? I am told at the dealership that, due to the "time" element, I need "flushes" on a routine basis, etc. Is this true? — Rosalie

TOM: Well, most manufacturers recommend that you change your oil every 7,500 miles. But for you, that would be only once every dog year, Rosalie. There's a "time"-based recommendation as well.

RAY: For most cars that get very little use, the recommendation is to change the oil once every six months. In general, we'd agree with that. Here's why.

TOM: When you run the engine, it produces water. It's one of the products of combustion. Some of that water always ends up in your crankcase, mixed in with the oil. Normally, when the engine gets good and hot, that water evaporates and is expelled by the crankcase ventilation system.

RAY: But if you only take short, little trips — like two or three miles a day — you never get the engine hot enough to get rid of that water. So you have watery oil, which doesn't lubricate well.

TOM: So if you take lots of short trips, get your oil changed every six months.

RAY: On the other hand, if you have low mileage because you use the car infrequently, but you really let the engine heat up when you do drive, then you can extend that oil-change interval. For instance, if you drive the car only once a week but drive it 20 miles every time, you're less likely to dilute the oil, so you can change the oil once a year instead.

TOM: As for other stuff, you'll want to change the coolant once every five years or so to renew the rust inhibitors. Those dissipate over time. And you'll need to keep an eye on rubber components, like belts and tires, because those get attacked by ozone whether you use them or not.

RAY: But I wouldn't let the mechanic talk you into too much else. You don't need a transmission service. You don't need a fuel-system cleaning. You probably don't need new brakes. You might need a new air freshener. But the vast majority of cars wear out from use, not from lack of use. So you're doing fine, Rosalie.

Odds & Ends

■ ALEXANDRIA, Ind. — This cool cat has traded in his catnip for some bling.

Sebastian, a 1-year-old Persian with long black hair, sports gold crowns on his two bottom canines, which grew sticking out from his lips in an underbite similar to a bulldog's.

His owner, dentist David Steele, said he gave Sebastian gold crowns to help strengthen the fanged feline's teeth. Steele said he was worried the teeth would break off or become a problem.

"It's possible to work on animals the same way we do humans," he said. "I did it to strengthen (Sebastian's) teeth, but it had an excellent cosmetic result. The cat gets a lot of attention now. Everyone is tickled to death when they see him."

The gold teeth protruding from Sebastian's furry face make him seem a bit menacing, like a hip-hop star's guard-cat or a movie villain's pet. The feline didn't seem too happy with his new look at first.

Two weeks ago, veterinarian Larry Owen tranquilized the cat at the Alexandria Animal Hospital about 30 miles northeast of Indianapolis

so Steele could do the dentistry work, which took about 15 minutes to complete.

Owen said putting gold crowns on teeth can be done for any pet with a dental problem. Steele said the cost for each gold tooth is about the same as for humans — about $900.

■ BEIJING — The Communist Party has a message for Chinese traveling abroad: Don't embarrass your country by spitting, littering or shouting into mobile phones.

The party's Spiritual Civilization Steering Committee launched a campaign Wednesday to reduce the number of Chinese tourists who "appear uncouth," a news report said.

"The behavior of some Chinese travelers is not compatible with the nation's economic strength and its growing international status," the China Daily quoted the committee as saying.

The campaign will last through the end of 2008, when Beijing is due to host the Summer Olympics.

Many Chinese tourists spit, loudly clear their throats, take off their shoes on planes, smoke in public places and shout into their mobile phones, the newspaper said.

Last year, Chinese tourists made 31 million trips abroad and 1.2 billion trips inside the country. The number is expected to skyrocket to 100 million overseas trips by 2020, the China Daily said.

■ BRIDGEPORT, W.Va. — These thieves apparently didn't listen to "Thou shalt not steal."

A portrait of Jesus Christ was taken from Bridgeport High School on Thursday, two days after the Harrison County School Board agreed to fight court efforts to remove it.

An intruder snatched the contentious painting just before 4 a.m. but left behind the gilded frame and backing, Schools Superintendent Carl Friebel said.

"The picture was the only thing stolen, so the deliberate intent was to steal the picture and only the picture," Friebel said.

The painting, which depicts Jesus in sepia tones on a large canvas, hung on the wall outside the principal's office and had been at the school for 37 years.

The Americans United for Separation of Church and State and the West Virginia American Civil Liberties Union sued the school board in June, saying the painting, "Head of Christ," sends the message that the school endorses Christianity as its official religion.

On Tuesday, the school board decided to fight to keep the portrait hanging after an outside group, the Christian Freedom Fund, raised more than $150,000 to pay the board's legal costs.

Eight national groups with expertise in constitutional law have offered legal help to the school board. One of those groups will be selected to lead the defense at trial, which is set for February.

■ VALPARAISO, Ind. — A man who cursed in court and gave a judge an obscene gesture was thrown in jail and ordered to write a letter of apology.

Jonathan Wilson, 31, of San Pierre, remained in the Porter County Jail on Wednesday following his outburst, which came after he failed to have a speeding ticket thrown out.

Wilson had faced no more than a fine Tuesday until he reacted with his offensive language and gesture to the ruling by Porter Superior Judge David Chidester. Chidester promptly ordered Wilson jailed and to remain behind bars until he writes a letter of apology.

Chidester said Wilson's letter must convince the judge that Wilson understands why he was found guilty and also that the correct way to challenge a verdict is through an appeal.

Wilson was found guilty of driving 70 mph in a 55 mph zone along Indiana 49 in northern Indiana during the early morning hours of June 2, ■ DANIELSVILLE, Ga. — Fishing in someone else's well-stocked fish pond without permission isn't a good idea — especially if that pond belongs to the sheriff.

Three men spent the better part of four days in the Madison County, Ga., jail after being charged with fishing in a pond without the owner's permission. The pond is owned by Madison County Sheriff Clayton Lowe.

A state conservation ranger Saturday arrested Brian Keith Wallace, 35, Michael Shannon Fricks, 32, and Christopher Carldon Wallace, 37, on the misdemeanor charge. Lowe said they were released Tuesday after paying a fine.

Lowe said he stocked the pond with about $1,200 worth of catfish and bream last spring to give disabled children a fun day outside fishing. But sometime before the fishing day, someone drove a four-wheel all-terrain vehicle under a cable stretched across the road leading to the pond and began catching the fish.

The sheriff paid $360 to restock the pond before the children's fishing day.

"It all worked out. They caught plenty of fish," he said.

■ TACOMA, Wash. — For the second time in as many summers, police are trying to find a stolen salmon — a larger-than-life fiberglass fish sculpture taken from a city park.

The latest theft occurred at Gateway Park sometime between 6 p.m. Friday and 6 a.m. Saturday, said Lynn Di Nino, an artist who said she tried to find clues in the city's Old Town neighborhood before reporting the loss to police Tuesday.

"I thought maybe somebody pushed it over the edge," she said, "but I scoured the landscape and couldn't find it."

Police Officer Mark W. Fulghum confirmed that the report had been received.

The 8-foot, 150-pound sculpture is one of 10 that City Council member Bill Evans bought five years ago as part of a public art effort called Soul Salmon 2001.

The Old Town Business Association later bought the fish from Evans and hired Bruce and Shannon Anderson, a local artist couple, to decorate it. They adorned the salmon with tiles of colored glass over sepia-tone photographs depicting Old Town history, and the rest of the salmon has a coat of blue-green paint, De Nino said.

In July 2005 someone took the 7-foot fiberglass coho from Puget Gardens Park. It was found within a couple of days in the laundry room of a house. A man who lived there said he got it in a trade for some old bicycle wheels.

■ EUGENE, Ore. — Items

discarded at an airport in the response to a terror plot have turned into balm for the city's homeless.

The St. Vincent de Paul Society of Lane County has started picking up some of the things people have jettisoned for security reasons as they board flights at the Eugene Airport.

Charley Harvey, assistant executive director of the charity, dug through trash bags Tuesday and took every bottle of shampoo and shaving cream he could find. The items will be distributed at the organization's First Place Family Center.

But he didn't take the can of Easy Cheese, or the mini-bottle of brandy, or the tube of something called Vampire's Blood.

"Oh, the things people bring on planes," said Harvey as he considered the item in his hand, a container of lavender body butter.

After investigators said they uncovered a plot in Britain to blow up aircraft, travelers tossed the items into trash bins in compliance with new rules prohibiting most liquids, lotions and gels in carry-on luggage.

"We're always looking for shampoo, toothpaste and other toiletries to help homeless families," Harvey said.

■ SANTA ANA, Calif. — A man dubbed the "senior citizen bandit" has pleaded guilty to 10 counts of armed robbery and one firearms count for sticking up banks in three Western states, authorities said.

Charles Manrow, 70, of Pennsylvania, entered the plea Aug. 10 and will be sentenced early next year.

Manrow pleaded guilty to robberies in Southern California, Fresno, Utah and Arizona, Assistant U.S. Attorney Ivy Wang said.

Manrow was arrested in January outside a motel in the Riverside County community of Thousand Palms. He had cash, fake identification and weapons stashed in a stolen Cadillac.

Manrow would enter the banks wearing a baseball cap and casual clothes. When he reached a teller, he would announce the holdup, show a weapon and hand over multiple bags, saying he had a remote device that could tell him if a silent alarm was activated.

A year ago, Manrow's crime spree sparked national interest after a Los Angeles TV station reported that investigators considered whether Manrow could be the fugitive Boston crime boss James "Whitey" Bulger, who is on the FBI's "Most Wanted" list and has been on the run for years. The possibility was ultimately discounted.

role as Harry's beleaguered boss.

Timothy Bottoms, however, is the real casting coup here. His red hair and bland features make a perfect counterpart for his emotionless character, who is never given a name or background. A subplot involving his parents' bankruptcy as owners of a small scale amusement park was wisely cut, leaving us with a cold fish that is just out for the money.

There are also a few turns by people who hadn't been discovered yet and include Helen Hunt as Harry's daughter and Steve Guttenberg in a one-line role as a messenger boy.

The special effects are well executed, though the best sequence occurs at the very beginning.

All in all, this is a good fusing of action, suspense and disaster movies with a smart script and tight direction. In the summer of 1977 it didn't scare people away from amusement parks like "Jaws" did for beaches the previous year, but then again those were safer times and no one yet believed how far some fanatics would go to get some attention.

Best Line: "Harry, if you're trying to kill us, at least let me put on some lip gloss."

not be complimentary. For instance, Norman Allen in the Floyd County Times stated that a sign on the Doctor's office door read: "Office Closed—Gone to Watts BAR."

"The Scott County weekly carried a news item: "Dr. J. H. Allen Kills a Squirrel." Before Governor Combs found out it was a red squirrel, he awarded Dr. Allen a Colonel's commission.

"The Knoxville Sentinel in its Sunday edition, July 10, 1961, stated that Dr. Allen had caught a five-pound fish. Again Governor Combs, thinking Dr. Allen had caught a game-fish, awarded him a commission as Admiral of Beaver Creek. After discovering that Dr. Allen had caught a carp, he changed the award to read: "For the Long Practice of Medicine."

TIMES STAFF REPORT

EASTERN – The Allen Central volleyball team won its second match of the season Thursday night, defeating host East Ridge 2-0. Allen Central was led by sophomore Brittany Hodge with six kills on .500 hitting. Fellow Allen Central outside hitter Christina Blevins had three kills on .429 hitting and Courtney Martin popped in five kills on .455 hitting. Hannah Howard and Kimbo Blevins added a kill each.

The Rebels hit .390 in the outing and recorded 10 service aces on 87-percent serving. Koko Martin landed four aces, Hodge followed with three. Courtney Martin slammed in two, and Hannah Howard added one. Allen Central's defense was strong as Alesia Hall led the team with 11 confirmed digs in 17 attempts with only one error. Hodge had 10 stops in 20 attempts with only three errors. Christina Blevins had seven confirmed digs, Hannah Howard dug up four, Koko Martin stopped three attacks, and Tiffany Owens and Courtney Martin each prevented one Warrior try. Courtney Martin had four blocks and Kimbo Blevins blocked two.

The Rebels appeared timid and cold letting East Ridge score the first three points of game one. Allen Central got back on track and took its first offensive point on a kill by Hodge. Then Hodge took the serve putting the Rebels on a seven point tear, landing two of her three aces. Courtney Martin blocked an attack try by the Warriors and slammed an over-net kill, putting the Allen Central squad up 7-4. The Rebels pushed to a 15-9 lead, forcing an East Ridge timeout, and continued to climb from there and built up a 22-14 lead on the powerful hitting of Christina Blevins and Hodge, the excellent defensive play of Hall. The Rebels allowed one more point before finally closing the game 25-15 with a kill from Hodge.

In game two, the Rebels rang up a 6-0 lead on two of Hall's 11 digs and a Hodge kill assisted by Koko Martin. Martin stepped in to serve and landed three aces. The Allen Central girls never lost the lead. However, the Rebels allowed East Ridge to get back in the game on several miscues allowing the Warriors to close within two, 13-15. However, the AC squad would allow only six more Warrior

TIMES STAFF REPORT

LEXINGTON – The next meeting of the Kentucky High School Athletic Association (KHSAA) Board of Control will be a special meeting to review appeals cases. The meeting is scheduled for Monday at the Association Office in Lexington. During the meeting, the Board will hear feedback from member schools with regard to the draft football alignment.

The next regular Board meeting is scheduled for Sept. 14-15.

The KHSAA conducted an administrator workshop Friday, Aug. 11 at the Association office in Lexington. Over 200 administrators from throughout the state attended the one day conference that will cover areas of Title IX, KHSAA Communication and Forms, Website and other information. Association staff will be conducted required regional meeting in Sept. to review hot button topics.

The KHSAA will be conducting its sixth HYPE Student Leadership Conference next Tuesday at the Lexington Convention Center. The one day conference is free and open to all member school student-athletes and will have breakout sessions that include respect, teamwork, leadership and more. Opening the conference will be AVCA (American Volleyball Coaches Association) Executive Director and former University of Kentucky volleyball coach Kathy DeBoer. Former University of Kentucky basketball star Cameron Mills will conduct a breakout session on leadership roles. Justin Boudreau will be the closing speaker for the conference.

The conference has annually attracted a capacity 400 students and 50 adults. For more information, contact Marilyn Mitchell or Butch Cope at the KHSAA.

The 2006-07 KHSAA Events Calendar is now available for purchase. The calendar includes sports specific important dates as well as Board of Control and Advisory Committee meetings and other KHSAA related information.

Hilltoppers hoping to rebound from disappointing 2005

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

BOWLING GREEN — The pain of Western Kentucky's disappointing 2005 season is still very real to cornerback Dennis Mitchell.

Mitchell and the Hilltoppers aren't used to seasons that end with them on the outside of the Division I-AA playoffs looking in. But a four-game losing streak over the season's final month left the Hilltoppers with a 6-5 record and no postseason plans for the first time since 2000.

"That was the worst feeling we've had in a while," Mitchell said. "That was not Western Kentucky football. We've never lost like that. We kind of lost our swagger. We weren't the team we were supposed to be."

The plan to get their swagger back starts with senior quarterback Justin Haddix, a three-year starter from Jackson who threw for 1,892 yards and 15 touchdowns last season.

"I just want to go out there and be a leader for the team and not let things bring us down and keep everybody up and hopefully go out on top this year," Haddix, a Breathitt County High School graduate said. "That left a bad taste in our mouth losing four in a row going into the offseason."

Haddix will have plenty of help. Senior running back Lerron Moore is coming off his second 1,000-yard season and is closing in on the school's all-time rushing record.

"We've got a lot of confidence in those two in their leadership and playing ability," said coach David Elson. "That's where our offense is obviously going to be focused."

Elson reshuffled the offensive line, but thinks the experienced group will jell quickly. Left guard Greg Ryan returns in his same spot, but former tackles Zach Thuney and Andrew Campbell have moved to center and right guard. Chris McConnell will open at left tackle, and Joe Dolchan

TIMES STAFF REPORT

LEXINGTON – Kentucky finalized its 2006-07 men's basketball schedule Tuesday with release of its 16-game Southeastern Conference slate and most of the league's television selections and game times.

The Wildcats have five appearances scheduled on CBS and seven slots on ESPN's family of networks - ESPN, ESPN2 and potentially ESPNU. Eight UK games will be shown by the SEC's syndicated TV partner, Lincoln Financial Sports (formerly Jefferson-Pilot).

FSN South will show five non-conference games, which will also be shown tape-delayed on the Big Blue Sports Network. FSN South/Sunshine Network has yet to finalize their SEC schedule, which could include UK games.

by STEVE LEMASTER
SPORTS EDITOR

SALYERSVILLE – Playing on the road Thursday evening after three straight home matches and a back-to-back losses, Betsy Layne couldn't work its way back into the win column. The Betsy Layne volleyball team, despite pushing Magoffin County in the first game between the two squads, fell. Magoffin County edged the visiting Ladycats 27-25 in a hard-fought first encounter and ended the match with a 25-10 triumph in the second game, winning 2-0.

The win was Magoffin County's second straight. The Lady Hornets started the season Tuesday with a 2-1 (25-16, 14-25, 25-15) win over 54th District rival Paintsville.

Betsy Layne has key upcoming matches scheduled versus Prestonsburg (Aug. 22), Pike County Central (Aug. 24), South Floyd (Aug. 28), Paintsville (Aug. 29) and Allen Central (Aug. 31).

points and dominate down the stretch with aces by Hodge and Courtney Martin, two back row kills from Hodge and a shot by Christina Blevins, blocks by Courtney Martin and Kimbo Blevins, and three kills by the duo. Excellent defensive play by Hall, Hodge, and both Blevins sealed the deal for the Rebels, 25-19.

Allen Central will return to action on Monday night at 6 p.m. on the road at Pikeville.

Hilltoppers

will man the right tackle spot after recovering from knee surgery.

Defensively, Elson said the Hilltoppers are most experienced in the secondary, where Mitchell and safety Marion Rumph lead the way.

The rest of the defense is filled with experienced players who earned playing time mostly in backup roles last season. Elson is confident they're ready to make the transition to starter.

"We're a little better off up front than I think some people would imagine right now," Elson said.

Walker attorney says eligibility appeal rejected

by DAN SEWELL ASSOCIATED PRESS

CINCINNATI — The state's sanctioning body for high school sports has upheld its ruling that Bill Walker, one of the nation's top prep stars, is out of eligibility and cannot play this season.

The Ohio High School Athletic Association's board of control heard Walker's appeal Wednesday, then voted to deny it 8-0, the association said Thursday.

The evidence supported the conclusion that Walker had completed his eight semesters of eligibility, Jerry Snodgrass, president of the OHSAA board of control and also athletic administrator at Findlay High School, said in a statement. "The OHSAA's bylaws are specific," he said.

Walker's attorney, Richard Katz, said association commissioner Dan Ross informed him Wednesday of the decision.

Messages were left Thursday with Cincinnati North College High School, which Walker and teammate O.J. Mayo have led to consecutive state Division III championships and national prominence.

The association ruled July 10 that Walker couldn't play as a senior because he had exhausted his eligibility by playing at Rose Hill Christian School in Ashland, Ky., as a freshman in the 2002-03 school year, then playing three seasons for North College Hill.

Katz said Walker shouldn't have been considered a freshman at Rose Hill. Under Kentucky rules, he would have been allowed to play high school sports as an eighth-grader.

"It was strictly a paperwork issue," Katz said. "Bill did nothing wrong whatsoever, and now it comes back to bite him."

He said he had advised Walker and his family not to comment. Walker still plans to earn his high school diploma at North College Hill.

He said the family could challenge the association in court, but he hasn't discussed that with them.

Walker, a 6-foot-6 forward, averaged 21.7 points and 10.1 rebounds last season, as he was often ranked only behind Mayo among the nation's best juniors.

COLLEGE FOOTBALL '06: Coaches on the Hotseat

by RALPH D. RUSSO ASSOCIATED PRESS

For many college football fans, the coach of their favorite team is always just a couple of losses away from being on the hot seat.

Many Michigan fans consider Lloyd Carr to be on shaky ground after the Wolverines stumbled to a 7-5 record last season, their worst in two decades. But unless the Maize and Blue crash and burn this season, the coach likely won't be ousted.

The same goes for Tennessee's Phillip Fulmer, whose Volunteers had their first losing season since 1988. In Miami, folks aren't thrilled with Larry Coker these days, but he's 53-9 in five seasons with a national championship.

There are some coaches, however, who should worry:

RICH BROOKS, Kentucky — The Wildcats were dealing with NCAA sanctions when Brooks arrived. Last year, Kentucky was pounded by injuries. Still, nine wins in three seasons doesn't offer much job security.

JOHN BUNTING, North Carolina

— By all accounts, people in Chapel Hill want Bunting to succeed. But the Tar Heels can't seem to win consistently, and another brutal schedule won't help.

JOHN L. SMITH, Michigan State — It's doubtful a third straight losing season would be tolerated in East Lansing. If Smith could get the Spartans to a bowl game, that might be enough.

HOUSTON NUTT, Arkansas —

Wasn't it just a couple of years ago that Nutt was being courted by Nebraska? Two seasons and nine wins later, he seems to be looking at a bowl-bid-or-bust season.

BILL DOBA, Washington State — Doba was handed Mike Price's program in 2003 and won 10 games. Since then, he has won nine. In his favor is two consecutive wins against rival Washington, but the Huskies have been terrible.

Allison spoils NASCAR invasion at Eldora

SPECIAL TO THE TIMES

ROSSBURG, Ohio — A pair of story lines accompanied Tim Allison's victory in Wednesday night's Old Spice Summer Sizzler - that of disappointment for visiting NASCAR stars Kasey Kahne and Dave Blaney, and that of excellence for Dave's brother Dale. Meanwhile, in the UMP (United Midwestern Promoters) Modified finale, it was a repeat story line, as Brian Ruhlman captured yet another win, in a field that included NASCAR stars Kenny Wallace and Ken Schrader.

Allison is the all-time leading NRA (National Racing Alliance) Sprint Invader winner at Eldora, so the Wednesday night special came as no real surprise, although the win was among his toughest to garner.

and Eldora Speedway owner Tony Stewart set quick time of the night with a clocking 14.462 seconds around the one-half mile clay oval, so he established himself as the driver to beat early in the contest.

While Stewart was enjoying the limelight as quick timer, Kahne's hopes for a return to Eldora's hallowed victory lane went South immediately. Once the car was pushed off to fire up early in the afternoon, he crew discovered internal engine woes - enough to withdraw him from competition for the balance of the contest. Blaney's mount was not up to par as well, as an early exit from his heat race and B-Main eliminated any hopes of a main event start.

Kevin Huntley jumped into the early lead of the 25-lap feature event, with Dwain Leiber in hot pursuit, while Allison and Caleb Griffith battled for third and fourth. Leiber mounted an early charge for the top spot, but after five laps in the race which was to go non-stop, Huntley checked out.

Once into lapped traffic, Allison got but Huntley and began the chase for the front.

Just past the half-way point, he got the job done and headed what he assumed was going to be an easy win.

However, Dale Blaney was lurking as an eventual threat. A sub-par performance in his heat, found him transferring into the A-Main through a B-Main win. Starting deep in the pack, Blaney found a quick groove around the lowest edge of the traffic and was picking cars off lap after lap; eventually moving into second with two laps remaining.

Time ran out, as he finished just shy of overcoming Allison, and had to settle for runner-up honors. Griffith crossed the line third, followed by Greg Wilson and Luke Hall. Stewart was unable to mount a successful charge and finished ninth.

Through the luck of the draw, Ruhlman started on the pole position of the 17-lap Modified finale and that spelled trouble for the balance of the 22-car starting field.

Scott Orr, fresh off Saturday's win, tried repeatedly to reel in Ruhlman but wasn't able to get the job done, while Brian's brother, Chad, was moving from mid-pack and up to third at the finish. Todd Sherman, making his first appearance of the 2006 campaign at Eldora drove to an impressive fourth place finish, while Davey Gantt cruised him fifth.

Schrader, with some great moves, finished eighth, while Wallace developed woes early in the contest and had to retire early to finish 22nd.

Woodson, Pulley in dead heat to be Kentucky's quarterback

by JEFFREY McMURRAY
ASSOCIATED PRESS

LEXINGTON — André Woodson has outscored Curtis Pulley in a basketball game. Pulley has beaten Woodson in bowling.

So who's the better quarterback for Kentucky? Coach Rich Brooks isn't saying.

In one corner is Woodson, a junior pocket-passer who started all 11 games for the Wildcats a year ago. In the other is Pulley, a speedster and part-time wide receiver who briefly replaced Woodson atop the depth chart in spring drills.

The two are close friends, having known each other since facing off in a state high school basketball game at Rupp Arena, a game they often joke about now.

"He always bragged about how many points he scored, but I always bragged about getting the victory," Pulley said.

In team outings to bowling alleys, Woodson is one of the better Wildcat bowlers, but both quarterbacks acknowledge Pulley is the best.

Yet when it comes to the contest to determine who will be under center for the Wildcats when they open the season Sept. 3 at Louisville, there is little bragging, joking or handicapping from the competitors. They both want the job badly, but both say they could also see it go the other way.

"All I know is I've got to keep doing my job every single day, do what coach asks me to do, and hopefully I'll come out on top," Woodson said. "Everybody knows obviously we're battling, but there's no arguments. Nothing like that."

If Brooks knows which quarterback has the edge, he's keeping the information close to the vest. The two have taken virtually the same amount of snaps this summer. At the squad's first scrimmage, they each won rave reviews from Brooks for protecting the ball and improving the little things he'd asked them to improve.

Offensive coordinator Joker Phillips, never cautious to say what he thinks about the performance of his players, insists the quarterback battle remains too close to call.

"We'd like for it to be easy for us," Phillips said. "That helps us as coaches. If it's tough for us, we're in a pretty good situation. We feel like then we've got two pretty good quarterbacks."

Even Keenan Burton, the team's top returning wide receiver, won't say which quarterback he prefers.

"I'm torn between the two," Burton said. "Both of them make plays and both of them do great things. I'm just trying to get used to both of them."

Although Woodson knows he will never have Pulley's mobility, a strenuous offseason conditioning program helped him drop 20 pounds. He figures his stronger frame should allow him to improve on one thing coaches are demanding of him — cutting down on the sacks.

"When the pocket does break down, I want to take that little bit of speed that I do have and possibly turn it into a one- or two-yard gain instead of a negative," Woodson said.

Pulley has never had trouble evading defenders, but Brooks wants him to make crisper, smarter passes.

The coaches say they're under no timetable to determine a winner of the contest, and it's possible the two could even rotate.

The playbook would remain virtually unchanged either way. Pulley as quarterback might add two or three running plays, Phillips said, but he's instructing both the same.

Of course, if neither quarterback pans out, there is also a third option. Freshman Will Fidler, a high school All-American who figures to be the future leader of the team, is waiting in the wings.

Cardinals ready to take next step

by WILL GRAVES

Michael Bush

All-American defensive end Elvis Dumervil getting stomped on — literally — by Virginia Tech quarterback Marcus Vick in a Gator Bowl loss.

The Cardinals begin year two in the Big East with the similar expectations, only this time with the wisdom gained from their good — but not quite great — conference debut.

It's not that the Cardinals look at 2005 as a disappointment. Going 9-3 and making it to a New Year's bowl game for the first time in 15 years is a pretty big deal.

"A 9-3 season, it's good," said senior running back Michael Bush, who set a school-record with 24 touchdowns. "Louisville used to be what? 4-7. So 9-3 is great. There aren't a lot of teams that get to 9-3."

But Bush knows there aren't a lot of teams that enter 2006 featuring two Heisman Trophy candidates and a somewhat friendly schedule that allows them to face their two toughest tests — Sept. 16 against Miami and Nov. 2 against defending Big East champion West Virginia — at home.

Bush said the ingredients for a special season are in place if the Cardinals can take the lessons they learned a year ago and apply it when it counts.

"We've just got to finish the game, that's the big thing," he said. "In the fourth quarter, we just need to keep pounding and pounding it and not let up."

Between Bush and Brohm — who has fully recovered from a knee injury suffered in a win over Syracuse last November — the Cardinals have as potent a one-two combination as there is in the country. The Louisville natives are being tabbed "The Derby City Duo" by the school's sports information department as part of their Heisman Trophy campaign.

"There's really no ceiling," said Brohm, the Big East's Offensive Player of the Year last season after throwing for 2,883 yards and 19 touchdowns. "Our goal is to be the number one offense in the country."

Brohm won't lack for options. Between returning wide receivers Mario Urrutia and Harry Douglas and transfers Pat Carter, Corey Thompson and Chris Vaughn, there will be plenty of volunteers on third down.

"We just want to keep pushing each other," said Douglas. "There doesn't need to be one guy for Brian to go to. But we all want to be the one getting the ball on the big plays."

The only real question marks offensively center on the line, which will feature three new starters after veterans Jason Spitz, Travis Lefew and Jeremy Darveau moved on.

Sophomore George Bussey has impressed coach Bobby Petrino with his athleticism, and there's enough depth that center Eric Wood isn't worried about the unit's performance no matter who is on the field.

"We look at it like we're not just looking for three guys," Wood said. "There's so much competition, I don't think it's going to be a shock if lots of guys play. We've got a ton of guys who can go out there and get the job done."

Things are much more unsettled defensively, where the Cardinals have to replace Dumervil — who set a school-record with 20 sacks a year ago — and standouts Brandon Johnson and Montavious Stanley.

But then again, said co-defensive coordinator Mike Cassity, a year ago nobody expected Dumervil to come out of nowhere and win the Nagurski Award, given annually to the nation's best defensive player.

"The cupboard is not bare," Cassity said. "We have a lot of guys in that front that have played a lot of snaps of defense for us. Hopefully some of our guys will step up and fill those shoes."

Senior linebacker Nate Harris and defensive tackle Amobi Okoye will be called on to help the new players adjust. And while the Cardinals will have to look elsewhere for sacks now that Dumervil is gone, the bigger concern will be stopping the run.

Louisville allowed more than 185 yards rushing in each of its three losses a year ago and finished just fourth in the conference in total defense.

"We just need to help each other out," said Harris, who was second on the team with 66 tackles last season. "We know teams are going to want to come after us, that they're disrespecting us. We feel like we have something to prove."

To themselves and the rest of the conference as well. For all the progress the program has made in the last decade, the Cardinals know it is time to take the next step.

"We're ready," Harris said. "Every

Pitino: Padgett won't play during Canadian exhibition tour

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

LOUISVILLE — Louisville center David Padgett won't play when the Cardinals play three exhibition games in Canada next month, coach Rick Pitino said Wednesday.

Padgett underwent knee surgery in March. Though Pitino said Padgett's recovery is ahead of schedule, Padgett will not participate in practice or the games when the Cardinals play against three Canadian colleges in Ottawa, Ontario from Sept. 2-4.

"We're going to be really conservative with him," Pitino said of Padgett, who averaged 11.8 points and 6.1 rebounds for the Cardinals last season after transferring from Kansas.

Padgett's injury will allow Pitino to give more playing time to sophomore Jonathan Huffman and junior Terrance Farley as well as freshman Derrick Character.

Williams will also not play during the tour after suffering a minor leg injury. Williams will be available when the Cardinals begin practice for the 2006-07 season in October.

Though the Cardinals have not yet released their schedule, Pitino said the school's non-conference opponents will include Arizona, whom the Cardinals will play at Madison Square Garden in the Jimmy V Classic on Dec. 5.

The Cardinals will also play Massachusetts and in-state rival Kentucky before beginning their second season in the Big East. Louisville went 21-13 last season, losing to

South Carolina in the National Invitation Tournament semifinals.

Pitino said the strength of the non-conference schedule is a testament to his incoming class, which he called the best he's had during his stay at Louisville.

"We expect much bigger and better things," Pitino said. "I think our guys will rise to the occasion."

The Cardinals will begin practicing for their trip to Canada on Aug. 23. The Cardinals will play Carleton University on Saturday, Sept. 2 at 8 p.m., the University of Ottawa on Sunday, Sept. 3 at 1 p.m. and Laurentian University on Monday, Sept. 4 at 11 a.m.

MSU signs Illinois high school hoops standout

TIMES STAFF REPORT

MOREHEAD — Andreas Coleman, a 6-7 power forward for Danville (Ill.) High School signed to play basketball at Morehead State University, Head Coach Donnie Tyndall announced today. An Illinois Basketball Coach's Association All-Star, Coleman averaged just over 12.5 points per game and 8.1 rebounds per game last season at Danville High School. He was the MVP of the Lincoln Thanksgiving Tournament and was voted All-Area by the Champaign News-Gazette in 2005.

"I am very excited about adding Andreas (Coleman) as the final piece of our recruiting class," said Tyndall. "He has a nice skill level for a big guy. He shoots the ball well from the perimeter and will give us a physical presence around the goal as well."

"I feel he will add some depth to a very young and inexperienced front line."

As a senior under Danville Head Coach Scott Olsen, Coleman provided leadership both on and off the floor.

"He's a coach's dream," said

Olsen. "He doesn't shirk responsibility, and he will do whatever he has to do at workouts and on the floor. He's a really classy young man."

Coleman said he is very excited to be an Eagle.

"MSU has a great staff and I can't wait to get on the court and start learning from Coach Tyndall and the rest of the staff," said Coleman. "I'm a team player, and I'll do whatever I have to do in order to help the team win."

UK alumnus, Hazard native gives $6 million to school's athletics department

by JEFFREY McMURRAY
ASSOCIATED PRESS

LEXINGTON — A University of Kentucky alumnus pledged $6 million Thursday for the rights to name a new basketball practice facility at his alma mater — more than double the largest private gift ever for the school's athletics department.

Joe Craft, 55, a Hazard native, had anonymously pledged $3 million last year toward the 100,000 square-foot practice facility adjacent to Memorial Coliseum. That gift would have been the largest ever for the department, but this week he told university officials he intended to double it.

In an interview Thursday with The Associated Press, Craft said he made the donation with no strings attached, although Kentucky Athletics Director Mitch Barnhart has urged him to name the facility after Craft or his family.

"He suggested he would like for that to be the case," said Craft, president of Alliance Resource Partners, a Tulsa, Okla.-based coal company. "I said, 'We'll be glad to talk about it,' but we haven't talked about it with any specifics."

Craft said he made a trip to Lexington two weeks ago and was highly impressed with the progress construction crews were making on the facility, which is adjacent to Memorial Coliseum. It will house practice courts, locker rooms, weight rooms and coaches rooms when completed later this year.

Craft has been friends with Kentucky basketball coach Tubby Smith for years, dating back to Smith's tenure as Tulsa's coach. Their sons knew each other from amateur basketball during high school, Craft said.

Although some fans were disgruntled by the Wildcats' subpar season this year, Craft said he has confidence Smith will right the ship.

"I just look at the good as opposed to try to look at negatives," Craft said. "Tubby's a great person, a great leader and a great coach. The fans at Kentucky, they've always been passionate about their Wildcats. They

Craft said he has made numerous other donations to various academic programs at the university, where he received a law degree, but this is the largest. He also has contributed to other schools, including the University of Tulsa, where he sits on the Board of Trustees.

The donation for the practice facility puts the project only $800,000 short of its $30 million anticipate cost.

"The passion and commitment of our loyal alumni continue to amaze me," said Lee Todd, university president. "Joe Craft boldly leads by example in pushing our university to excellence. He has been a significant contributor to academic programs, our capital campaign and athletics. This major gift will help ensure Kentucky basketball remains one of the premier programs in the country."

Previously, the largest gift to the Kentucky athletics department was $2.78 million, donated anonymously toward the same facility. The Nutter family of Beaver Creek, Ohio, had contributed $2.5 million toward football facilities.

Kyle Chaffin is the three-time winner of the Prestonsburg Home Run Derby and two-time local champion of Century 21 Home Run Derby. Chaffin traveled to Applebee's Park in Lexington Aug. 5 and competed in Century 21's state home run derby. He finished runner-up in the 11-12-year-old division.

Sterling Marlin struggles along and ponders retirement

ASSOCIATED PRESS

WATKINS GLEN, N.Y. — After blowing an engine in practice and another while qualifying, Sterling Marlin was more than ready to say goodbye to Watkins Glen International. And when he was caught up in a multicar crash late in Sunday's road race at The Glen and finished 39th in the 43-car field, the despair sank to a new low.

"I hate it for MB2 Motorsports," said the 49-year-old Marlin, in his first year driving the No. 14 Waste Management Chevrolet for team owner Bobby Ginn. "I had a decent car, but it would be nice if they'd put Rockingham right in this place right here."

The result left Marlin's team teetering on the brink of falling out of the top 35 in owner points — his team sits 35th, just 16 points ahead of Ray Evernham's No. 19 car. That's a big deal because anybody outside the top 35 is not guaranteed a starting spot each week.

"It's aggravating," said Marlin, who has just one top-10 finish and five DNFs this season and dislikes road racing as much as any of the drivers who don't do so well turning right. "It takes a whole lot of luck and a good race team to compete at this level."

Just four years ago, Marlin had that special team driving the Coors Light Dodge for Chip Ganassi Racing, and it showed on the track. After finishing third in points the previous year for the second time in his career, Marlin led the points race for 25 consecutive weeks in 2002 and gave Ganassi a real shot at winning his first Cup title.

"Nobody really thought we could do it. Week in and week out we'd run top five, top 10 no problem," said Marlin, who has 10 victories in his Cup career. "We ran so good. It was pretty neat for my dad. He didn't really say a whole lot about it. He just stayed kind of quiet, and I was wanting us to win it bad."

For more than six months, Marlin was the man to beat. He kept four-time Cup champ Jeff Gordon, Mark Martin, Kurt Busch, Jimmie Johnson and eventual champion Tony Stewart in his rearview mirror with his consistency, posting two wins, eight top fives, and 14 top 10s.

Then the season began to unravel at Richmond. He was involved in an early crash with teammate Jimmy Spencer and finished last. Marlin was hurt but ignored the pain in his neck. The only time an injury had kept him out of the seat was a burn he had in a crash at Bristol.

"Somebody wrecked going into Turn 3," said Marlin, the 1983 Cup rookie of the year. "I checked out, somebody popped me in the back end, barely touched me, and I went down across the apron and more or less hit the wall head-on. That was the start of it."

Marlin left Richmond with a nine-point lead over Martin, but consecutive finishes of 21st at Loudon and Dover dropped him to fourth as the circuit headed for Kansas in early September. He qualified seventh for the Protection One 400, but another head-on crash into a barrier ended his season after 29 races and his chase for that elusive championship.

"The wreck I didn't think was as bad as Richmond," Marlin said. "Didn't even know I was hurt."

He did two days later. "I was home cleaning some property and (car co-owner) Felix (Sabates) called and said, 'Man, what are you doing?'" Marlin recalled, smiling. "I told him, and he said, 'Don't move, you've got a broken neck.' I said, 'OK.'"

"It was all over then. I was disappointed because we were coming back," he said. "We had some good tracks coming up and had found some stuff in testing. We had lost a little bit at midseason. We were still running good, but we really weren't the dominant car like we had been earlier. Then I got hurt. That's just part of it."

Marlin was relegated to cheerleader status as Jamie McMurray finished the season in his place. "It was a tremendous disappointment, probably one of the biggest I've ever been a part of," said Tony Glover, Marlin's crew chief at the time and longtime friend. "You'll never know. We were coming into our strongest part of the season. We were certainly looking forward to the challenge. We were never given a chance to finish the book, I guess you'd say."

"What hurt was he was leading the points and he had to win," Spencer said. "Sometimes, you only get one shot at a championship. That might have been his only shot."

Still, because the team had done so well before his injury, Marlin looked forward with great anticipation to the next season.

"I figured I'd just go to 2003 and come back and kick butt again," said Marlin, who won the 1994 Daytona 500 for his first career victory, beating Ernie Irvan after finishing second to Irvan the previous two years. "Then 2003 came along. We had some good runs, but we had some mechanical failures, just couldn't ever get the momentum back. We just never had the luck we had in 2002."

"It's been a year since Sterling's dad, Coo Coo, died. And you can see in his eyes how much he misses his father. Sterling got his start as a pit crew member for his dad, a farmer who also raced at NASCAR's top level from 1966-80, and always has credited the toughness he learned from Coo Coo for his success."

Although Marlin has earned more than $39 million in 697 starts, he still maintains the family farm in Tennessee. He has to.

"I promised dad I'd take care of the farm," he said. "I'm trying to do it."

Marlin, who hopes to bring his son Steadman through the ranks of NASCAR, said he would race a full schedule next year but hasn't thought beyond that.

Sadler to take over No. 19 at Michigan

by JENNA FRYER
ASSOCIATED PRESS

CHARLOTTE, N.C. — The No. 19 Dodge is getting a new driver.

Elliott Sadler will take over the ride from Jeremy Mayfield at Evernham Motorsports beginning with this weekend's race at Michigan International Speedway, a team official confirmed to The Associated Press.

Sadler secured an early release from Robert Yates Racing late Tuesday night, clearing the way for him to replace Mayfield beginning Sunday, according to an Evernham official who spoke on condition of anonymity because an official announcement had not yet been made.

Sadler, who asked out of his contract at Yates in July, had been predicted to join Evernham's three-car team in 2007. But when Evernham fired Mayfield last week, Sadler and the car owner worked to get him into the No. 19 immediately. The paperwork was finalized Tuesday night, and Sadler was set to test the car at Kentucky Speedway on Wednesday.

David Gilliland, meanwhile, tested Sadler's old Yates car at Kentucky and was poised to fill the seat in that ride beginning with Sunday's race in Michigan. Gilliland exploded onto the NASCAR scene in June when he won the Busch Series race at Kentucky while driving for an underfunded team.

It's not clear if Gilliland will drive the rest of the Cup schedule for Yates. NASCAR has yet to clear him to race at Talladega Superspeedway, and running in more than seven events this season would make him ineligible to compete for rookie of the year in 2007.

That's where Mayfield could come in. Although he's expected to sign with Bill Davis Racing for the 2007 season, he could drive a handful of races for Yates while the team prepares for Gilliland to take over the ride permanently next year.

Mayfield was fired last week in the midst of a tumultuous season with Evernham. Although he was a two-time qualifier for the Chase for the championship, he had a miserable year and had been extremely critical of the car owner because of it.

He dropped to 36th in the points before he was fired, and was replaced with Bill Elliott last week at the road course in Watkins Glen, N.Y.

Paintsville Lake Wildlife Management Area hunting zones and regulations

SPECIAL TO THE TIMES

LEXINGTON — The US Army Corps of Engineers at Paintsville Lake, in conjunction with the Kentucky Department of Fish & Wildlife, has designated a few areas on the Paintsville Lake Wildlife Management Area as "No Hunting" zones.

The Corps has posted a map and description of these areas on outdoor bulletin boards located at the Corps of Engineers Resource Manager's Office, Paintsville Lake State Park boat launch ramp, Dam Overlook, Downstream Area, Big Mine Fork and the Open Fork boat launch ramps. Hunters will also find a list of current hunting season dates posted on these bulletin boards.

Those hunters wishing to hunt in the Morgan County section of the Wildlife Management Area can do so without any hunting zone restrictions.

Those hunters wishing to hunt in the Johnson County section are urged to check this map since a few areas close to the dam have been designated as "No Hunting" zones.

The 2006 - 2007 hunting season dates for the Paintsville Lake Wildlife Management Area are as follows:

Dedicated squirrel hunter feels in tune with woods

by STEVE VANTREESE
ASSOCIATED PRESS

BURNA — While squirrel hunting has waned in popularity as deer and turkey hunting opportunities have grown, Edward Doom has bucked the trend.

The retired educator, a former teacher and Livingston Central High School principal, has long determined that, at least as far as he's concerned, squirrels in the hardwoods is what hunting is all about. And with Kentucky's long-running squirrel season having opened, you can be sure Doom is among the trees and after them today.

"I started out squirrel hunting as a kid with my dad and my great-grandfather," said Doom, 59. "I sort of followed with what they were doing."

"Everybody these days seems like they've gotten into deer or turkey and lost interest in squirrels, but I still squirrel hunt," he said. "I used to deer hunt some, but I finally decided this is what I really like to do, so I strictly squirrel hunt now. It just feels good being out there, being alone in the woods."

Doom in times past hunted with a shotgun, but he's purely a rimfire rifle hunter now, even during the early period of the season when summer foliage makes visibility difficult and shotgunning would be far more forgiving.

"I decided a while back that I'd

Doom frequently hunts in the tall timber bottomlands of the Cumberland River. His tactics are familiar, although the way he goes about it has a little of his own stamp.

For the early days of the season, Doom, like most August hunters in the state's forests and woodlots, goes seeking a hot hickory tree — one with a good crop of early ripening nuts that is apt to draw squirrels from all directions.

"I kind of sneak along through the woods, stopping regularly to look and listen," Doom said. "I'm looking for a hickory with ripe nuts on it, but I usually find it first by listening. I'll either hear the nut cuttings that a squirrel is dropping hitting leaves, or I hear the sound of a squirrel jumping from one limb to another as it's moving toward a hickory to feed."

"I'll follow the sounds to get where the squirrel is — I like it when the leaves are all still on the tree and I know he's up there, even though I can't see him yet," Doom said. "I carry a little wooden-legged folding stool, and I'll find a place under the tree and wait for the squirrel to show himself."

Doom usually packs a scope-sighted rifle in .22 long rifle, although lately he's been working with one in the tiny, but fast .17 Mach 2 rimfire chambering. He zeroes his rifle and scope combination to hit dead-on at 50 yards, but admittedly shots are taken more commonly at 30 yards and closer. He practices his shooting and places his bullets carefully.

"It really does a job on a squirrel,"

he said of the newer small caliber. "I want a clean kill, and you don't have to shoot one but once." Doom concentrates his hunting in the early-morning hours during the initial days of the season.

"I usually stay until I get my (six-squirrel) daily limit," he said. "That's my goal, and I'm usually out there from daylight until 10 or 10:30 in the morning."

"A little later in the season after it cools down some, if I don't get my limit in the morning, I may come back in the afternoon and finish it up," he said.

Doom, of course, doesn't always take his limit, but he probably does so often enough to easily best the average harvest of most Kentucky squirrel hunters. Especially during the August period of hunting, daily bags of two to three squirrels are routine. Limits are the exception.

Doom for the last several years has kept a log book in which he records conditions, locations and results from each of his hunts. The log shows that his best season in recent years was that of 2004 when Kentucky was marking an exceptional squirrel population — only to see the population crash that fall and winter during a major nut crop failure. Doom noted taking 135 squirrels before the population collapsed mostly due to starvation.

"Every squirrel gets eaten," he said of those that come back in his game bag. "It's not like they are killed and just wasted."

Kentucky statewide squirrel season runs Aug. 19-Nov. 10 and Nov. 13-Feb. 28, closing only during the first weekend of the firearms deer hunting season, Nov. 11-12.

Best Bets

SUNDAY, AUGUST 20 2:30 p.m.
TNT
NASCAR Racing
 It's been an off year for Jeremy Mayfield, to say the least. After being part of the Chase the past two seasons, he's without a win so far in 2006, and after 20 races, he hadn't even posted a top 10. He needs a bit of luck, to be sure, the kind that helped him win the GFS Marketplace 400 a year ago when by all rights he should have run out of gas. "Conserve fuel" is the Mayfield message, one he takes into Michigan today to defend his title.

8 p.m.
ESPN
MLB Baseball
 After a cooling-off period of more than two months, the white-hot rivalry that ensues every time the Yankees and Red Sox meet is in full swing again. This series in Boston began with a doubleheader on Friday and ends tomorrow, the five games the result of two earlier rainouts, and it could go a long way toward deciding the AL East. David Ortiz and the Sox have held first place for much of the season, but you know Derek Jeter won't let the Yanks go down quietly.

8 p.m.
FOX
Teen Choice 2006
 Forget "best," "outstanding," "favorite" and other adjectives generally attached to entertainment awards. The word of the hour at this ceremony, where teen votes determine the winners, is "choice" - from choice movie, choice TV show and choice athlete to such offbeat categories as choice hissy fit and choice sleazebag. Jessica Simpson and Dane Cook co-host the show; Kevin Federline, Timbaland and Nelly Furtado are slated to perform.

9 p.m.
NATGEO
Fight Science
 Got a kid at home who loves those karate or taekwon do lessons but hates science class? He or she might be psyched for the latter after watching this fascinating new two-hour special, which explores the science behind various martial arts. Sophisticated animation techniques and cameras, and a "crash-test dummy" who makes those guys in the seat belt PSAs look like rag dolls, are used to get inside the body of a fighter in action. Amazing stuff indeed.

10 p.m.
COMEDY
Comedy Central Roast
 If ever there was a "serious" actor who knew how to laugh at himself, it's the artist formerly known as Capt. Kirk and now known as Denny Crane. So William Shatner is a perfect candidate for the Comedy Central Roast treatment, in which assorted friends and colleagues pepper him with good-natured insults and memorable anecdotes. Let's hope all that attention doesn't give him a Big Giant Head.

MONDAY, AUGUST 21 8 p.m.
ESPN
NFL Preseason Football
 Gulf Coast fans of the New Orleans Saints, be they diehards or simply sentimentalists rooting for the team that represents the hurricane-ravaged area, get their first look at the 2006 squad tonight in Shreveport, La., against the Dallas Cowboys. What they hope to see are signs, ones that point to progress being made under new coach Sean Payton after a three-win 2005. Newcomers Reggie Bush and Drew Brees should draw the fans' biggest cheers.

9 p.m.
HBO
When the Leaves Broke: A Requiem in Four Acts
 You probably won't be entertained by Spike Lee's ambitious four-part miniseries - airing over two nights - about the aftermath of Hurricane Katrina in New Orleans. But you will be moved and inspired. The music of Wynton Marsalis and Terence Blanchard accompanies the words of Louisiana Gov. Kathleen Blanco, New Orleans Mayor Ray Nagin, Harry Belafonte, rapper Kanye West and other not-so-famous folk who lived through the disaster.

10 p.m.
COURT
On Native Soil: The Documentary of the 9/11 Commission Report
 Not so much about the terrorist attacks of Sept. 11, 2001, themselves, but about the events leading up to 9/11 and what happened afterward, this documentary tells the story from the point of view of victims' families, in particular those who fought for the establishment of a commission to investigate the attacks. Their voices are heard here, along with those of President George W. Bush, former President Bill Clinton and many others.

TUESDAY, AUGUST 22 8 p.m.
CBS
JCPenney Jam ... The Concert for America's Kids
 It's a cause we haven't heard much

Continued from p12 8 p.m. A&E City Confidential "Gatlinburg: Smoky Mountain Nightmare" remembers the night - Sept. 13, 1986 - when the worst of the real world invaded a friendly Tennessee tourist getaway.

8 p.m. DISNEY Movie: The Cheetah Girls 2 If you're over 13, this new sequel to the tuneful Disney Channel flick "The Cheetah Girls" may not float your boat, but you'll enjoy the spectacular Spanish scenery.

8 p.m. ESPN NFL Preseason Football The annual battle for bragging rights in the Keystone State between the Steelers and Eagles should have the faithful at Lincoln Financial Field in Philadelphia as obnoxious as ever.

SATURDAY MORNING/AFTERNOON AUGUST 26, 2006. Table with columns for time slots (9:00-4:30) and rows for various TV channels (TBS, NBC, PBS, ABC, WGN, CBS, FOX, CBS, ESPN, DSC, TNT, A&E, NICK, USA, FAM, LIFE, ESPN2, AMC, HGTV, SCIFI, HIST, TOC, HBO, HBO2, HBO3, MAX, DISN, SHOW, TMC).

SATURDAY, AUGUST 26 8 p.m. ABC

Movie: Pearl Harbor Did you watch "Titanic" just to see the boat sink and ignore the sappy love story? We suggest you take the same approach to this 2001 drama.

8 p.m. HBO Movie: In Her Shoes Highly dissimilar sisters collide in director Curtis Hanson's well-acted 2005 version of the Jennifer Weiner novel, with Cameron Diaz as a ne'er-do-well ultimately left with nobody else to turn to but her uptight lawyer sibling (Toni Collette).

8 p.m. TCM Movie: Gunga Din Like its contemporary "Gone With the Wind," this 1939 tale, set in India and loosely based on Rudyard Kipling's poem, has its share of stereotyping.

SATURDAY EVENING AUGUST 26, 2006. Table with columns for time slots (5:00-12:30) and rows for various TV channels (TBS, NBC, PBS, ABC, WGN, CBS, FOX, CBS, ESPN, DSC, TNT, A&E, NICK, USA, FAM, LIFE, ESPN2, AMC, HGTV, SCIFI, HIST, TOC, HBO, HBO2, HBO3, MAX, DISN, SHOW, TMC).

10 p.m. A&E

The Jonesboro Schoolyard Ambush They weren't the first students to go on a shooting rampage at their school, but they were the youngest. This powerful special revisits the case of Mitchell Johnson and Andrew Golden, who were 13 and 11 when they opened fire at their Arkansas school, killing five people and wounding 10.

10 p.m. CINEMAX Movie: The Transporter 2 Jason Statham and his amazingly flexible business suit return in this sequel to the earlier action hit, again co-written and co-produced by genre specialist Luc Besson.

11 p.m. COMEDY Russell Peters: Outsourced Russell Peters makes fun of Asians! But it's OK: he is one. A Canadian of Indian descent to be exact, the comedian has a lot to say on the topic of being Asian in general and Indian in particular.

RANGER CONTRACTING

P.O. Box 1427 • Martin, Kentucky 41649 Office: (606)-285-1136 • Shop: (606)-285-9377

Ranger Contracting is a well established, locally owned and operated independent company. Several of our foremen have over 20 years of experience in the reclamation business.

Ranger Contracting offers a variety of reclamation services including but not limited to

- Construction of sediment and erosion control devices, including building of sediment traps and basins, construction of earthen berms, construction of perimeter control ditches, and installation of silt fences
- Subsidence stabilization, including backfilling of sink holes and other related subsidence features
- Earthwork, including excavation, backfilling and/or regrading, installation of surface water diversion structures, water treatment practices, and construction of subsurface drain and underdrain systems
- New revegetation, including tree revegetation of newly disturbed areas resulting from completion of other work.
- Site construction for gas company wells

Ranger Contracting has the equipment and workforce to complete the largest of reclamation jobs. We worked in the cleanup of the Martin County Coal Corporation Slurry Spill in Inez, Kentucky and recently we have been involved in the cleanup of the mudslide closing KY 699 at Leatherwood. We offer by the hour rates or contract labor bids.

Ranger Contracting is highly qualified and ready to assist in your reclamation project.
