Kentucky's painkiller sales level off

by SAMIRA JAFARI ASSOCIATED PRESS

scription painkillers have soared in Kentucky in recent years, but experts say the trend is leveling off.

Purchases of five major painkillers increased 62 percent in Kentucky between 1997 and 2005, while the nation saw an 88 percent hike, according to an analysis by The Associated Press of statistics from the U.S. Drug Enforcement Administration. The fig-

Purchases of oxycodone - the PIKEVILLE - Purchases of pre-, main ingredient in brand-name OxyContin — quadrupled in Kentucky in that time period. Sales of hydrocodone, which has quietly outpaced other painkillers in recent years, has more than doubled.

Morphine purchases in Kentucky showed an 88 percent increase, far below the national 154 percent jump. However, purchases of codeine, an opiate, dropped 50 percent and meperiures are based on purchases at retail dine, commonly sold as Demerol, dropped 12 percent.

Kentucky ranks 43rd in the nation in terms of increases in prescription painkiller purchases, according to the AP analysis. The seven states that border Kentucky were ranked as follows: No. 1, Tennessee; No. 7, Missouri; No. 14, West Virginia; No. 30, Ohio; No. 35 Virginia; No. 42, Indiana; No. 50,

While Kentucky's low ranking seems to signal improvement, experts cautioned that the state's painkiller epidemic is merely leveling off with a large number of patients still abusing

"We've been fighting this in Kentucky for several years," said Robert Walker, researcher at the University of Kentucky Center on Drug and Alcohol Research. "We had the OxyContin explosion in early 2000. What we're seeing now is rest of nation catching up to where we were."

This photo was taken July 27 by golfer Greg Friend at Stonecrest in Prestonsburg. There is an ongoing debate whether the large cat is a bobcat or a mountain lion and neither has been confirmed. Greg and his wife Diana were at the seventh hole when Greg spotted the cat at the edge of the fairway approximately 30 feet away. He says he whistled at the cat and it turned to look at him when he snapped the photos. Bobcats are known for short tails and mountain lions have long tails, though the tail of this curious cat could not be seen. Diana has affectionately named it her "Tiger (in the) Woods."

Opponents fear bill would mean increased mountaintop removal

by ROGER ALFORD ASSOCIATED PRESS

FRANKFORT — As far as Carl Shoupe is concerned, Kentucky has already had too many mountaintops destroyed by coal mining.

That's why the Harlan County man is so opposed to an energy bill that would provide hundreds of millions of dollars in incentives to companies that build high-tech plants in the state to make cleaner-burning alternative fuels from coal.

"The bottom line is if this goes into effect there's going to be a need for more coal," Shoupe said. "We cannot survive this mountaintop removal and contour mining. They are destroying our mountains. They are destroying our environment. They are destroying our streams. They are destroying our lives."

Shoupe was among a group of mountain residents and environmentalists who came to Frankfort on Tuesday to voice opposition to the energy bill that is steamrolling through the General Assembly. Legislative leaders contend the measure is critical to Kentucky's future because it would help coal, a mainstay of the state's economy, remain a viable source of fuel for decades to come.

Gov. Ernie Fletcher called a special legislative session, which began Monday, for the sole purpose of passing the energy plan. Lawmakers expect the measure to clear the House on Wednesday and the Senate on Friday.

"It is a very important move that we need to make in Kentucky to be national leaders in this arena because of our

Fletcher headed to Pikeville to speak against casinos

by JESSICA HALE STAFF WRITER

PIKEVILLE - Gov. Ernie Fletcher is ready to reveal his findings related to a cross-country tour in search of information and facts concerning casino gambling, and he plans to make his first "No Casinos Tour" stop in Pikeville to warn Kentuckians of the negative consequences associated with casinos.

The "No Casino Tour" will focus on bringing to attention what Fletcher says are "harmful effects" associated with casino gambling.

"I learned a great deal about the financial and social costs of casinos in communities across the country and it is important to show Kentuckians firsthand the harmful effects

Autism is one of the most common developmental disorders known to the medical community. It affects an estimated 1 in 150 births and the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention says those numbers are on the rise.

Unfortunately, many people are unaware of the disease, but one teenager from Kentucky who grew up with an autistic brother hopes to change that.

Sixteen-year-old Natalie Pope, a senior Girl Scout from Crestwood, has for an autism specialty license plate for her Girl Scout Gold Award project came as Natalie and her sister noticed a breast cancer awareness plate on a car driving alongside them on the highway. After seeing the plate, Natalie thought to herself, "Why isn't there an autism awareness plate out there?" From that point on it's been a whirlwind of excitement for Natalie as she strives to reach her goal

Wake-up call

After nearly six years of hearing the Bush administration make assertions about the war on terrorism that turn out to beto put it kindly - overblown, Congress and the public it represents should be wary about surrendering personal liberties for dubious claims of greater security.

Recent days have brought two reminders that America still has a tough time being hard on terrorism without being soft on liberty. The first was Congress' abdication of its responsibilities in approving changes in the 1978 Foreign Intelligence Surveillance Act. The second was the conviction last week of Jose Padilla, the one-time alleged "dirty bombe" on charges unrelated to those that got his constitutional rights suspended.

The House and Senate, in a hurry to begin their August recess, approved the FISA changes Aug. 4; instead of reining in the administration's abuses of the FISA law - including warrantless eavesdropping on electronic communications - Congress actually may have made the problem worse.

Under the new language, the government need not get a court warrant to eavesdrop on communications between the United States and abroad if there is a "reasonable belief" that the target of the investigation is outside the United States. Previously the law required that the target be someone known to be on foreign soil and suspected of direct terrorist involvement.

Congress got rolled. The language of this provision and others is so vague that some experts now warn that spy agencies may be able to seize business records and conduct physical searches on American soil without first obtaining warrants from a FISA judge.

After the Senate approved the new language, Sen. Christopher S. "Kit" Bond, R-Mo., one of the bill's most ardent supporters, said "I can sleep a little safer tonight." We're grateful for that, but more grateful that Congress at least had the sense to put a six-month limit on the new rules.

As for Jose Padilla's conviction, seldom has the phrase "mixed emotions" seemed so apt. Clearly he was an angry, disaffected would-be jihadist who, given the right resources, might have proved a danger to his fellow Americans. He apparently applied to train to become a terrorist and talked about it with others, which proved to be his undoing, but there was never any evidence that he posed a real threat.

The jury decided that being a terrorist wannabe is enough. Padilla faces 15 years to life in prison on his conviction in federal court in Miami for conspiring in the 1990s (long before the Sept. 11 attacks) to provide support for Islamist fundamentalists in Bosnia and Chechnya.

He was not charged with any of the things with the government claimed he was involved when he was arrested in May 2002 in Chicago as an "enemy combatant," including the sensational and apparently specious allegation that a former Taco Bell cook could explode a "dirty bomb" attack on U.S. soil.

Padilla, a United States citizen, was held in a military prison for two years without charges and without access to a lawyer. He was subjected to the series of coercive interrogation techniques sometimes known as "torture lite," including total sensory deprivation. In 2004, fearing that the U.S. Supreme Court might insist that U.S. citizens had rights, the Bush administration kicked him over to the federal criminal court system, where the Constitution still applies.

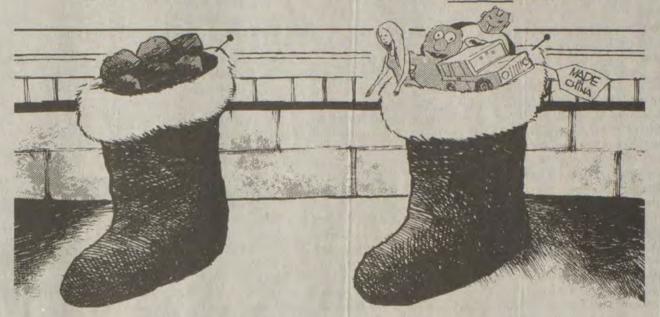

If Congress can wake up, it should insist that the Padilla case proves that special military courts aren't needed to try terrorism cases, nor are special military prisons needed to hold suspects. Since 1787, the U.S. judicial system, operating under the Constitution and the rule of law, has managed the fine balance between liberty and security. To bypass the Constitution is to risk both.

Those hilarious Republicans

by BILLY REED WWW.STRAIGHTNFLUSH.COM

I had just about stopped chuckling over the ah, "fair and impartial" decision by the Executive Branch Ethics Commission to end its investigation of Governor Ernie Fletcher when doggoned if those wild and crazy Fletcherites didn't come up with something new that has me howling, falling down, and clutching my sides all over again.

They just have to stop-this stuff or I could be the first pundit ever to die from laughter. I mean, folks, we have serious issues to discuss here in the commonwealth. But it's hard to focus on heavy stuff such as health-care reform and education when the Fletcherites keep on diverting us with the funny stuff.

Did you see that the Republican Party of Kentucky has printed 200,000 political brochures that featured a fake photograph of Steve Beshear, Fletcher's Democratic challenger? They've superimposed Beshear's head on a body standing beside a casino gambling table with a drink in his hand.

Right away this is pretty funny to anybody who knows anything about Beshear. The brochure, which promotes the entire Republican statewide slate of candidates, refers to Beshear as "Easy Money Steve," but the fact is, "Sunday School Steve" would be more appropriate. Beshear is such a straight arrow that he makes your local Boy Scout leader look like a derelict.

Yet here he is in the faux photo, looking every bit the role of, well, Bill Bennett, the Republican icon who was forced to admit blowing $8 million or so in Las Vegas. I mean, it's a hoot. Putting Beshear's head on the body of a Vegas lounge lizard is like putting Mitch McConnell's head on a photo of Elvis.

You get the idea. It's funny, but it just doesn't work.

Beshear's "sin," for lack of a better word, is that he favors a statewide referendum on a constitutional amendment to allow casino gambling at the commonwealth's race tracks and certain other cities that want it. In other words, he wants to let the voters decide, and isn't that a novel concept?

Sure, Beshear hopes the public is as tired as he is of watching thousands of brethren cross Kentucky's borders every day to leave their money at the casinos in our neighboring states. But he's not trying to shove his views down the public's throat. It's Fletcher who's doing that. Ernie doesn't want the public to have a say because, well, he and his pals on the religious right know what's good for the voters more than they do.

Beshear spokesperson Vicki Glass correctly characterized the brochure as "a desperate attempt by a desperate candidate." Even the Republicanfunded polls show Fletcher trailing Beshear by double digits, mainly because the vast majority of Kentuckians — responsible Republicans and independents, as well as Democrats — understand that the absolute No. 1 campaign issue isn't casino gambling, but the dishonesty, corruption, and incompetence that has characterized Fletcher's first term.

But the Fletcherites don't want to talk about that. So they attack "Sunday School Steve" with a campaign rooted in the elements that hold their base together – fear, ignorance, and prejudice. So they're spreading the misinformation that casinos will automatically bring more crime, broken homes, and social ills to Kentucky – and they're doing it in such a heavy-headed, sophomoric, clumsy way that they're providing political columnists and cartoonists with a treasure trove of material.

Consider, for example, the Executive Branch Ethics Commission's decision to drop its investigation into Ernie's role in the merit-system-hiring scandal.

The news was delivered to Fletcher in a June 27 letter from Jill LeMaster, the Ethics Commission's executive director. However, Fletcher's campaign waited until now to release it because they hoped it would have more impact closer to the election.

The five-person commission includes four Republicans appointed by Fletcher – Chairman John Webb, Tom Handy, E. Patrick Moores, and J. Quentin Wesley. The fifth member, Cynthia Stone, whose term expired last month, was the only Democrat and only holdover appointed by former Governor Paul Patton.

When the Fletcher campaign released the letter to the media, Webb contended that the vote on Fletcher—which was held in secret, by the way—was fair and impartial. However, Stone told The Courier-Journal a day later that the vote to end the Fletcher probe was "absolutely" rooted in partisan politics. "From my perspective, that's what it appeared to be," Stone said.

Of course, that's what it was.
But wait a minute. Let's think about this. Maybe the Governor has stumbled onto a way to solve the overcrowding problem in our prisons and jails. We can all agree that when somebody is charged with a crime or other violation, he or she deserves to be judged by a jury of his or her peers.

But now we can add a new twist. Call it the "Ernie Amendment." Each charged person gets to pick his own jury. The police officer accused of shooting a man to death in a "roadrage" case, for example, gets to be tried by his buddies on the force.

We would have no convictions, and, with no convictions, our prisons and jails would have more room! Is this brilliant or what?

Fletcher knows he can't win a fair game, so, of course, he rigged the Executive Branch Ethics Commission in his favor. Why would anybody expect anything different from a Governor who has tried to stack the deck with every board and commission in the state. If anybody deserves to have his head superimposed on a Vegas sharpie's body, it's "I-Need-the-Edge Ernie."

And that's no joke.

Governor makes more money available for cooling assistance

FRANKFORT

Governor Ernie Fletcher has instructed the Cabinet for Health and Family Services (CHFS) to make $2.5 million in funds available immediately to provide cooling assistance to low income families and the elderly through the Low-Home Energy Income Program Assistance (LIHEAP).

"I am happy to announce this cooling assistance funding for some of the state's most vulnerable people and families," Governor Fletcher said. "With the heat wave Kentucky has experienced in recent weeks, this is about far more than making people comfortable. It's about taking steps to ward off serious health risks, especially among children and the elderly, and helping prevent the worsening of chronic illnesses."

Under the LIHEAP cooling program, eligible households may receive assistance - up to a maximum of $250 per household - in paying their cooling (electric) bill or toward the purchase of an air onditioner (based on avail-

To qualify for assistance on a cooling bill, household income must be at or less than 130 percent of the federal poverty level. In addition, households must pay home cooling costs for which they are responsible either by direct payment or as an undesignated portion of their rent and have cash resources of no more $3,000 if at least one person in the household is 60 or older, or disabled.

■ $4,000 if a member of the household has an illness which requires cash resources to be accessed regularly for medical and living expenses.

$2,000 for all other households.

As most of the nation continues to experience a surge in purchases. painkiller Kentucky's purchases appear to have plateaued since 2003.

Part of the trend is due to a

Meanwhile, purchases of hydrocodone - an analgesic which doesn't have as many restrictions as more potent drugs, like oxycodone — have increased annually.

Authorities mainly credit Operation UNITE, a regional drug task force overseeing most of southeastern Kentucky since 2004, for hindering purchases of prescription painkillers.

Autism

of raising awareness of a disability that effects so many.

According to the Autism Society of America, autism is one of five disorders that falls into the category of pervasive developmental disorders, a category of neurological disorders characterized by "severe and pervasive impairment in several areas of development." Autism is a disability that typically appears during the first three years of life and is the result of a disorder that affects the normal functioning of the brain, impacting development in the areas of social interaction and communication skills. Those who suffer from autism typically show difficulties in verbal and nonverbal communication, social interactions and leisure or play activities.

"It was just my norm," says Natalie as she describes growing up with Austin, her 15year-old brother who suffers from a severe case of autism. As a child who didn't have any other siblings besides Austin until later in her childhood, Natalie says it wasn't hard for her to live with the fact that her brother was different from other kids.

Since the Girl Scout council approved Natalie's project to petition for the specialty plate, her goal to raise autism awareness has become closer every day. Families for Effective Autism Treatment (FEAT), a nonprofit organization which is dedicated to ensuring that all who suffer from autism have the opportunity to reach their full potential through effective early intervention, has teamed up with Natalie in order for her to be able to reach her goal. FEAT assisted with the design and continues to help promote the plate, which features a puzzle pattern that serves as the national symbol for autism.

"This is visual awareness. This is out there ... this is real," she says as she describes what her hopes are for the plate. "I think more people should know about it."

Energy bill includes more money for energy-related research

The Assocated Press

FRANKFORT — An energy bill offering tax breaks for a proposed coal gasification plant also includes more money for energy and geological research that could be crucial in sustaining Kentucky's existing energy sources and finding new ones.

Lawmakers will consider the bill in a special General Assembly session beginning Monday.

The measure includes about $7 million in new funds for the Kentucky Geological Survey and the Center for Applied Energy Research, both at the University of Kentucky.

Representatives of the two organizations told lawmakers on Friday that funding energy and geological research can help the state stay in the coal business despite a widely anticipated federal crackdown on the emissions blamed for global warming.

"We're in a world of vastly changing resource and energy issues," said David Harris, who heads the energy and minerals section of the geological survey. "The competition will be intense. We have to decide whether we even want to be in the game.'

Legislators appear to be listening. Many of those who attended the Special Subcommittee on Energy meeting offered praise to the two organizations.

"One of the most amazing things going on in the commonwealth is the research that's going on in the energy arena," said House Majority Floor Leader Rocky Adkins, D-Sandy Hook. "These two groups are known global-

Much of the discussion focused on what experts call "carbon capture and storage," which would involve collecting the carbon dioxide associated with burning coal and then injecting it deep underground. Ideally, the experts and lawmakers said, the carbon dioxide could be used to coax up to 15 percent more Kentucky oil from the ground.

Harris said the Kentucky Geological Survey needs to hire several more people to help identify the best places to put the carbon dioxide.

"This will allow Kentucky to remain competitive in this new energy arena," he said.

Don Challman, associate director of the energy research center, said his organization wants to expand research in finding cheaper, less energy-intensive ways to capture carbon from power plants. He said the center wants to expand research on fuels made from agricultural crops, sawdust or other renewable sources.

Tom FitzGerald, director of the Kentucky Resources Council, said bills in Congress call for a reduction in greenhouse gases like carbon dioxide of 40 percent to 80 percent by 2050.

"The implications for Kentucky are as significant or more significant than) any other state in the union," a FitzGerald said, noting that Kentucky relies on coal for more than 90 percent of its electricity.

He called for substantial investment in research and development of coal technologies that manage their carbon # dioxide emissions, as well as a major? push for renewable energy and energy efficiency.

awmakers begin debate on energy

by ROGER ALFORD ASSOCIATED PRESS

FRANKFORT Lawmakers returned to the state Capitol on Monday for what they hope will be a quick special session as they begin debate on an energy bill that is intended to lure a $3 billion coal gasification plant to Jody Richards, D-Bowling Kentucky.

The measure appears to be on the fast track to passage with legislative leaders predicting that it will clear the General Assembly by week's Energy coal gasification plant would be substantial, but lawmakers say they are not certain of the actual amount. Legislative leaders have agreed to provide financial incentives for all qualifying companies that build alternative fuel facilities. Early estimates put the value of the proposed Peabody incentives at $300 million.

weeks of closed-door negotia-

Under the legislation, actual incentives would be decided by the Kentucky Economic Finance Development Authority, not the General Assembly.

The proposal would provide breaks on sales taxes, income taxes and coal severance taxes for alternative fuel plants.

The environmental group Kentuckians for Commonwealth is lobbying against the bill and has even purchased newspaper ads criticizing the proposal. Teri Blanton, a member of the group, said she fears it could lead to the leveling of even more mountaintops by coal companies taking advantage of the incentives.

"It's not that we need to lure them here," Blanton said. "The coal is already here."

Blanton plans to testify against the measure on Tuesday during a meeting of the House Appropriations and Revenue Committee.

In addition to Peabody, Houston-based Future Fuels LLC has also expressed an interest in building in Kentucky. The company is 1 working with Kentucky River Properties LLC to develop two "clean coal" projects near Hazard, Ky.

Gov. Ernie Fletcher had included the issue on an agenda with several other items when he called the General Assembly into a special session last month. House lawmakers refused to take part, saying many of the items could wait until they convene in January.

In an order Friday, Fletcher limited the agenda to only the energy bill, calling on lawmakers to make any necessary financial appropriations to get the measures implemented. He said the measure would decrease the state and nation's dependence on foreign oil and create more markets for Kentucky coal.

Beshear, Fletcher begin airing TV ads

by ROGER ALFORD ASSOCIATED PRESS

FRANKFORT Gesturing toward the state Capitol, Democratic gubernatorial candidate Steve Beshear echoes what has become a familiar refrain about cleaning up state government in his first television ad of the fall campaign.

"Unfortunately, politicians care more about what's good for themselves," Beshear laments in the ad. "I'm running to change that, to finally clean this place up."

The words are reminiscent of those used four years ago by Gov. Ernie Fletcher, who won handily by making that his chief campaign promise only to have his administration marred by a special grand jury probe into political patronage.

The Beshear ad, which began airing on Monday in Louisville and other Kentucky cities, marks the kickoff of the most expensive part of the fall campaign, the one where candidates reach out to voters in their living rooms. Fletcher is expected to begin airing his first television ad on Tuesday. In it, he vilifies casino gam-

The frequency of the ads will quicken as the Nov. 6 election draws nearer.

"People are desperate for leaders, real leaders who can bring us together to make Kentucky better," Beshear says in his ad, as he calls for a

Fletcher plans to air a series of ads that talks about a tour he made of casino communities across the country.

"What I saw was not very pretty," Fletcher said in a statement about the tour. "I learned a great deal about the financial and social costs of casinos and it is important to show Kentuckians firsthand what harmful effects casinos would have on Kentucky.'

Fletcher is trying to make casino gambling a key issue in the race. He has taken a strong stand against expanding gambling beyond Kentucky's horse racing tracks. Beshear favors a proposal for a referendum to allow voters to decide whether to change the state Constitution to allow casinos.

Fletcher campaign spokesman Jason Keller said the ads will air on network television in Bowling Green, Hazard, Lexington, Louisville and Paducah and on cable stations across the state.

Money determines when campaigns begin the ad wars, said Larry Sabato, director of the Center for Politics at the University of Virginia.

In the Kentucky race, both Fletcher and Beshear had tough primary campaigns. Fletcher spent about $3.4 million to Beshear's $1.9 million, according to records the candidates filed with the Kentucky Registry of Election Finance.

Prestonsburg LITTLE LEAGUE

The Prestonsburg Little League would like to congratulate the players and teams that advanced to the Kentucky Little League State Tournament this year. This is the first time in our league's history we had three teams representing us in the State Tournament.

We extend a very special Thank You to:

- Everyone who helped ready the fields at StoneCrest
- The City of Prestonsburg, Mayor Fannin, the City Council and all Volunteers
- Businesses and individuals who donated money for expenses

While words cannot adequately express our appreciation, we believe the smiles on these kids faces show that your time, effort and money were well spent. How wonderful it is to live in a community that offers such support and encouragement to our youth!

Sincerely,

AC VOLLEYBALL: Overall, Maynard pleased with his team's early efforts

by STEVE LeMASTER SPORTS EDITOR

EASTERN - The Allen Central volleyball team is just a few points shy of being undefeated. Allen Central fell to Pikeville last week in its third match of the season. The Rebels defeated both East Ridge and Paintsville 2-0 in a pair of matches during the first week of the campaign. Pikeville pulled out a hard-fought 2-1 victory over the Rebels. The Rebels, however, managed to get back in the win column thanks to a 2-0 (25-22, 25-14) victory over rival South Floyd in a match played on Tuesday, Aug.

win in five outings Thursday night when the power went out at Sheldon Clark High School. The Rebels handled Sheldon Clark rather easily in the first game of the varsity volleyball match.

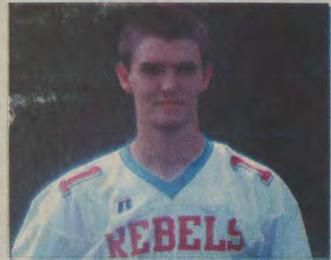

Allen Central was back in action at home Tuesday night, hosting 55th District/Floyd County Conference rival Betsy Layne. The Allen Central-Betsy Layne match ended too late to make this edition.

'Allen Central volleyball is on track," said Rebel Coach Larry Maynard. "We had one set back because our heads were not in the match. However, I believe it has made

14. Allen Central was on its way to a fourth them better and more focused now. Especially after the win over South Floyd. People who watched them at South Floyd and Sheldon Clark Thursday night are believing this 'little' team is for real."

Maynard doesn't question his team's potential.

"They have the desire and the determination but, more importantly, they have the heart to play this great game," Maynard added. "They are a team and play as a team. They are not selfish nor envy other team members. They want everyone to succeed and they fully understand that it is not how good you are, but how bad you want it."

Harris prevails in 201 Speedway Late Model feature

by STEVE LeMASTER SPORTS EDITOR

SITKA - Veteran driver Paul Marris returned to the 201 Speedway Victory Lane Saturday night, winning the track's Late Model feature. Harris held off Harold Redman Jr. for the feature win. Redmond, Randy Boggs, Rodney Davis and Casey Vitae rounded out the top-five.

Redmond set the fastest qualifying time in the Late Model feature, turning a lap in 14.24.

Marty Meade had the fastest qualifying lap in the Open Wheel Modified division. Meade, however, finished eighth in the Modified feature race. Corey McKenzie claimed the Modified eature win, beating Jim Lemaster to the finish line. Pete Castle, Denis Deboard and Jeremy Hayes rounded out the Modified feature top-five.

Scott Lemaster (Mr. Metal Bomber) and Alan Osborne (Four Cylinder) also claimed feature wins Saturday night.

Limited openings remain for youth soccer league

TIMES STAFF REPORT

PRESTONSBURG Floyd County Youth Soccer Association has announced that there are a limited number of available spaces in all age groups for the fall season. Teams have been formed, but league play will not begin until September 8 and players can be added up to the maximum number allowed on a team. The teams in the U6 and U8 age groups will play each other in a round-robin format on the soccer fields at Archer Park. These games are played on a weeknight. The U10, U12 and U14 teams will play teams from surrounding counties on Saturdays through the end of October. The U10 field is also located at Archer Park, while the U12 and U14 fields are at Allen Christ United Methodist Church in Allen.

TIMES STAFF REPORT

INEZ - Allen Central got the best of host Sheldon Clark during an abbreviated contest held Thursday night. The Rebels were fired up and focused as they defeated Sheldon Clark in 25-9 in the first game of a varsity high school volleyball match. As the second game got underway, a power outage blacked out the gym, forcing the contest to be postponed. The match was suspended with Allen Central leading 1-0 and will resume Sept. 17 during the All 'A' Invitational at Allen Central.

Junior middle Brittany Clark led the Rebel attack with three kills on .600 hitting. To compliment her kills, Clark had one ace on nine service attempts without an error to go along with one partial block. As part of a balanced offensive attack, juniors Koko Martin, Brittany Hodge, and Kimbo Blevins slammed in two kills each. Junior libero Brittany Smith was credited with a back row kill. Hannah Howard dished up a team-best

The defensive effort was led by Tiffany Clark, who scooped up six. Hodge dug up four as AC took the game. Martin stopped two and Blevins and Smith dug up one each. Blevins also had a partial block. The Rebel defense returned 96 percent of the Sheldon Clark attempts and caused the Cardinals to commit nine unforced

The two teams played evenly until Allen Central broke out to an 8-5 lead on strong serving with Martin dropping in one and Hodge pounding in two. Neither team had a strong offensive performance until Smith landed a kill from the back row. Howard stepped in to serve and landed four aces. Her effort put the Rebels up 13-6 and the defense began to click for the Allen Central girls. Tiffany Clark dug up a hard hit by the Cardinals and Hodge set up Brittany Clark's first slam of the night. Hodge then dug up a low offering, getting the pass to Howard, who then dished up a Hodge kill. Another dig by Blevins to Howard led to a set to Blevins who pounded in her first kill of the night.

The Rebels led 17-8 and never looked back.

Kentucky Fish and Wildlife Commission proposes 2007-2008 waterfowl season dates

TIMES STAFF REPORT

FRANKFORT - The Kentucky Fish and Wildlife Commission recommended the 2007-2008 waterfowl seasons at its quarterly meeting held on Friday, Aug. 19.

Wildlife The Fish and Commission recommends all hunting, fishing and boating regulations for approval by legislators, and approves all expenditures by the Kentucky Department of Fish and Wildlife Resources. The Kentucky Fish and Wildlife Commission must place waterfowl seasons in the framework mandated by the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service because all migratory game birds are under federal control.

The following seasons were recommended at the quarterly meeting:

Ducks, Coots and Mergansers: The duck seasons will again split for 2007-2008. The first duck season from November (Thanksgiving Day) through November 25, 2007 statewide. The season again opens December 3, 2007 and closes January 27, 2008 statewide. Daily bag and possession limits remain the same as last year. Canvasbacks may be taken for the entire duck season, but hunters may now take two canvasbacks daily.

Season dates for mergansers and coots are the same as the duck season dates for the 2007-2008 seasons. The daily bag limit for mergansers is five, only two of which may be hooded mergansers. The daily limit for coots is 15.

Dates for the goose hunting seasons follow.

Canada Geese: Western Goose Zone - November 23, 2007 -January 31, 2008.

Pennyrile-Coalfield Goose Zone (including West-Central Canada Goose subzone) - December 13, 2007 - January 31, 2008.

Eastern Goose Zone - December 13, 2007 - January 31, 2008.

Northeastern Canada Goose Zone - December 29, 2007 -January 6, 2008 and January 19 -January 31, 2008.

Brees goes 6-for-6, Saints roll to 27-19 win over Bengals

by JOE KAY ASSOCIATED PRESS

CINCINNATI – Drew Brees needed only six on-target passes to show that he's ready – and the Cincinnati Bengals' defense isn't.

Brees led New Orleans to a touchdown in his only series Saturday night, completing every throw he made and giving the Bengals a half-dozen more reasons to worry in the Saints' 27-19 preseason victory.

The NFL's leading passer last season, Brees had his way with the league's worst pass defense, one that Cincinnati put a lot of moves and money into trying to upgrade in the offseason. The early returns aren't good.

"Obviously, I'm not happy with how we performed, how we played tonight," glum coach Marvin Lewis said.

The Saints (1-2) scored on their first three drives against Cincinnati's starting unit. Brees was 6-for-6 for 55 yards on the opening drive, which culminated in Deuce McAllister's 8-yard run and the first round of boos from fans who had seen this so many times.

The Saints were only getting started on a night that left them feeling good.

New Orleans returns most of the team that lost to Chicago in the NFC championship game. There are a few things that need to be settled – a No. 3 receiver, role-sharing at a few spots on defense. All those things can get decided in the next two weeks before the opener.

The most encouraging thing is the way Brees is playing. A year ago, he was coming off a shoulder injury that limited him during training camp and left the Saints unsure what to expect.

"He's been practicing real well," coach Sean Payton said.

"He's worked hard on all the little things in his game, and he's playing with a lot of confidence. I'm encouraged about where he's at compared to where he was last year at this time. He has a good feel for what we're doing."

In the last two games, Brees has gone 18-for-20 for 173 yards.

"I'm getting excited about the beginning of the season," Brees said. "Preseason does serve a purpose. The last two times, we've looked good."

The Bengals (0-2) have a lot of work to do.

They let safety Kevin Kaesviharn leave as a free agent and released linebacker Brian Simmons in the offseason as part of their defensive overhaul. Both signed with the Saints and played in backup roles on Saturday.

Cincinnati's new-look defense looked a lot like the old one, giving up two touchdowns and a field goal on the Saints' first three possessions.

Reggie Bush had a 6-yard touchdown run.

On the Saints' first drive, they didn't even face a third

"Again, I go back to that first series," Lewis said. "We want to get off the football field. We had an opportunity to set the tempo."

Shayne Graham kicked four field goals in the first half – another bad sign for Cincinnati, which couldn't even get into the end zone after recovering a fumble at New Orleans' 3.

Carson Palmer played four series and was a pedestrian 5-for-10 for 41 yards with a sack and fumble that set up the Saints' second touchdown.

"It wasn't what we expected or want to do," Palmer said.

The most glaring problem was the lack of a No. 3 receiver. The Bengals were reminded how much they miss Chris Henry, who is suspended for the first eight games for violating the NFL's conduct policy.

The Bengals tried to get the ball to Tab Perry, who is first in line to take Henry's spot. Palmer overthrew him three times – once when he got open at the goal line – and backup quarterback Doug Johnson had trouble connecting with Perry was the intended receiver on eight passes in the first half, but had only one catch for seven yards. He also had a false start on the opening drive of the second half. Perry finished with two catches for 19 yards.

"I'm new at this deal,"
Perry said. "T.J.
(Houshmandzadeh) and Chad (Johnson) and Carson have good timing. They're on the same page, and I'm trying to get there."

Notes: Saints WR David Patten played despite a sore toe and had three catches for 26 yards. ... The Saints had no serious injuries. "Everyone's fine," Payton said ."Everyone's in good shape."

... Bengals LB Landon Johnson strained his back and DE Robert Geathers strained his ribcage in the first quarter. Neither returned. ... Bengals RT Willie Anderson walked the sideline without the protective boot he wore on his right foot two days earlier. Anderson has a foot injury that threatens to keep him out of the season opener.

Jacksonville releases former top pick QB Tim Couch

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

JACKSONVILLE, Fla. -Tim Couch's return to the NFL lasted nearly three weeks.

The Jacksonville Jaguars

released the former top draft pick Saturday after a handful of practices and one preseason game.

Couch, a former Kentucky quarterback who hadn't played in the NFL since the 2004 pret season, wanted a chance to revive his career following two shoulder operations.

The Jags signed him to, a two-year deal on July 29, but Couch, a Leslie County High School graduate, failed to make an impression in training camp. He was 2-of-4 passing for 11 yards last week at Miami and was sacked twice. The overall No. 1 pick by Cleveland in 1999 also missed practice this week with a sore back.

The Jags also placed guard/tackle Stockar McDougle (Achilles' tendon) on injured reserve, and signed 11-year veteran defensive tackle Seth Payne and defensive end Tyler King.

Payne returns to Jacksonville, where he played five seasons from 1997-2001. He spent the last five seasons in Houston. He was on injured reserve most of last year with a knee injury. He has 617 career tackles with 17.5 sacks.

King spent last season on practice squads in St. Louis and San Diego Chargers. He spent 2005 on Arizona's practice squad.

Sputtering offense doesn't worry Bengals' stars

by JOE KAY ASSOCIATED PRESS

CINCINNATI – Two games into the preseason, the Cincinnati Bengals' top receiver is someone who won't be around for the first half of the season.

That's their problem right there.

The Bengals (0-2) have yet to score a touchdown with their starting offense. All they managed were field goals during a 27-19 loss to New Orleans on Saturday night, when the only touchdown came in the closing seconds with reserves on the field.

Pro Bowl receiver Chad Johnson didn't realize it was so bad until informed after the game.

"No touchdowns? I didn't know that," he said.

Worried?

"No sense in worrying about it," said Johnson, who has been impressive in practice but gotten few balls thrown his way during his limited time in the games. "The things we're doing right now are very, very vanilla. I'm not worried about it."

His point is valid. The Bengals' offense has been extremely conservative with Carson Palmer and the rest of the starters on the field. The line is missing its two tackles – Levi Jones is recovering from knee surgery, and Willie Anderson has a serious foot injury.

So, they've been a little less flashy than usual. Plus, they don't want to show opponents how they've tweaked their playbook in the off-

"We just don't want to put too much out there for film," Palmer said.

All the points are valid, but they can't totally erase the early concerns about an offense missing four key players.

The biggest problem is the lack of a No. 3 receiver. Chris Henry leads the Bengals with eight catches for 112 yards and one of their two receiving touchdowns. He'll sit out the first eight games under his suspension for violating the NFL's conduct policy.

The Bengals were hoping that Tab Perry would step into his role. Perry, who missed most of last season with a hip injury, had two catches for 19 yards against the Saints, and should have had a lot more.

Palmer and backup quarterback Doug Johnson made an effort to get him the ball. Palmer overthrew him three times, including once at the goal line after Perry had beaten the cornerback.

Their timing is way off.

"Chris Henry and I have had a lot of (experience together)," Palmer said. "We have a great rhythm. It's a shame he's not going to be there for the early games.

"Tab and I haven't had much of a chance to work with each other. He's been banged up and missed some practice. I think he's done a great job. On that deep post (pattern), I just overthrew him. I missed him."

Perry acknowledged that he and Palmer have yet to develop a chemistry on the field.

"I've just got to keep working on it," Perry said. "We've got a couple more games to go."

The offensive line also is in flux. Jones is expected back at left tackle before the season opener, but there's no way of telling whether Anderson will be able to take his spot at right tackle.

The Bengals also are trying to figure out who will complement power running back Rudi Johnson, who had six carries for only 15 yards on Saturday night. Second-round draft pick Kenny Irons was expected to give the offense an outside running threat, but he tore the ACL in his knee in the preseason opener and is out for the season.

Quincy Wilson had four carries for 19 yards, and Kenny Watson had eight carries for 18 yards against the Saints. Neither distinguished himself in the competition for the No. 2 role.

Coach Marvin Lewis is disappointed by how the entire team played on Saturday – the starting defense gave up 17 points on New Orleans' first three possessions – but he's counting on the offense to come around once the games count.

"I think we went through that a couple of years ago, and all was good," Lewis said. "We'll go back to scoring. We don't do any game-planning for these games. We are not going to change that. We will keep working on the things we need to."

Scrimmage evaluation brings changes for Kentucky

TIMES STAFF REPORT

LEXINGTON - As expected, Kentucky Coach Rich Brooks said there are some lineup changes based on the results of the major scrimmage held Saturday.

"We've made some lineup changes," Brooks confided. "If we were to start (the season) tomorrow, and this is how we'll start the scrimmage Tuesday night, in the offensive line we'll have Garry Williams at left tackle, Zipp Duncan at left guard, Eric Scott at center, Jason'Leger at right guard, and Justin Jeffries at right tackle.

"The five I mentioned have been the best in practice. Christian Johnson (who started last season at left guard) has to get better. Obviously, missing spring practice burt him."

missing spring practice hurt him."

Regarding freshmen who figure in the picture in the offensive line, Brooks said, "Stuart Hines has moved to second string at right guard. He played well in the scrimmage. Brad Durham is in the mix at tackle, along with Phillip Hibbard and Billy Joe Murphy as well at tackle.

"The Wildcats were dye to scrimmage again Tuesday night.

Brooks also addressed the backup quarterback situation.

"(Mike) Hartline did some pretty good things and executed well," Brooks said. "He has a pretty good hold on No. 2 right now. I was upset yesterday because he took a sack he shouldn't have. I feel a lot better after looking at the tape.

"The question is, 'Who is No. 3?' Right now, (Matt) Lentz is slightly ahead based on the scrimmage."

On the defensive side, one highlight of the scrimmage was the continued improvement of sophomore middle linebacker Micah Johnson.

"Micah Johnson is playing better than he's ever played," Brooks said. "He's doing some good things and is clearly a factor at middle linebacker."

Cards perform well in final preseason tuneup

TIMES STAFF REPORT

LOUISVILLE - The University of Louisville held its final scrimmage of the summer and officially ended camp on Saturday night with its best performance of camp.

Head coach Steve Kragthorpe ran 61 plays with the 1s vs. 1s and 2s vs. 2. It was an extremely competitive scrimmage with each side making big plays.

"I thought the tempo was very good," Kragthorpe said. "We did some good things on the offensive side of the ball and on defense. I feel good as a head coach walking out of there because I thought we had balance. The offense made plays, but the defense stepped up and made some plays on third down, too. So overall, I thought it was excellent."

Senior wide receiver Harry Douglas was out there for the first time in a scrimmage situation and made a huge difference to the success of the offense. Douglas made two long receptions and also scored a touchdown. He and Brohm missed on a couple of long throws that Douglas usually makes. However, the senior stayed afterwards to catch passes after everyone left the field.

The duo of Mario Urrutia and Douglas gave the defense fits. Each had about 80 or more yards of receiving. Juniors Brock Bolen and Sergio Spencer were the leading rushers, while Brohm looked accurate, completing 12-of-15 passes.

Senior wide receiver Patrick Carter made a pair of acrobatic receptions, which was definitely good to see, while Trent Guy and JaJuan Spillman also made a few plays.

Dear Hearts & Gentle People

We're excited!

Book number four is now in the hands of the publisher. With a keepyour-fingers-crossed promise, it should see print by Oct. 1, just in time for this year's Apple Festival.

"Dear Hearts & Gentle People: Rural America At Its Best" contains 32 verbal snapshots of people we've interviewed and written about over the past 15 or 20 years in the Weekly Progress and h Paintsville Herald.

We're not ready to reveal the names of the folks within its pages, but expect to read about one young man's 15 minutes of fame as a result of his winning a Hank Williams Jr. look-alike contest, and about the deputy sheriff who kept arresting the same bootleggers over and over again. Then there's a story of the man who builds, and files, what we referred to as "homemade helicopters."

Many of the people of whom we've written are no longer with us, like the sweet lady who shared birthday 101 with our readers, and the 97 year-old former coal miner with precious recollections of boyhood life in these mountains. Hopefully, this publication will help to keep the memories of these dear people alive.

Also in these pages, you'll meet a little lady preacher, a gentleman who has donated thousands of dollars to local churches from money earned by pollecting aluminum cans, and a local kid who made the big time as a disc

When you feel like you just want to quit

A very dear friend of mine called recently and told me that she was getting hit from every direction one could imagine. As her voice quivered, she uttered the words, "I just can't take anymore, I just feel like crawling in a

As I reflected on our conversation, my heart ached to be able to help her in some way. Then I rememberd an email I had received about the fern and the bamboo that Jim Holbrook had sent me a long time ago. I began to search my files and finally found it. The Fern and the Bamboo

One day I decided to quit. I quit my job, my relationship, and my spirituality. I wanted to quit my life.

I went into the woods to have one last talk with God before doing so.

"God," I said. "Can you give me one good reason not to

His answer surprised me. "Look around," He said. "Do you see the fern and the bamboo?" "Yes," I replied.

"When I planted the fern self to and the bamboo seeds, I took very good care of them. I gave them light. I gave them water. The fern quickly grew from the earth. Its brilliant green covered the floor. Yet nothing came from the bamboo seed. But I did not quit on the bam-

'In the second year, the fern grew more vibrant and plentiful. And again, nothing came from the bamboo seed.

"But again, I did not quit on the bamboo.'

God went on to say, "In year three, there was still nothing from the bamboo seed. But I would not quit. In year four, again, there was nothing from the bamboo seed. Still, I would not quit," He said.

"Then in the fifth year, a tiny sprout emerged from the earth. Compared to the fern it was seemingly small and insignificant. But just six months later, the bamboo rose

"Appalachian stereotypes" within these pages. What we've written is a truth, plain and simple: these are some of the finest people on earth.

We'll keep you posted on the new book's progress.

I had a call a few nights ago from a gentleman in Floyd County who grew up at Auxier. He, too, had a Muddy Branch story, much like the ones I've been telling for years in this column.

It seems that back in 1937, when he was about 10 years old, an adult in the community put a baseball team, of which this man was a member, in the back of a pick-up truck one Sunday morning, and brought them to Muddy Branch to play against a group of local boys.

was that the Muddy Branch ball diamond had the smoothest infield he'd ever seen. However, it was what happened at the end of the contest that formed the memory he's kept for the past 70 years.

It was late afternoon when the game was over, he said, and a man who ran the company store called all the Auxier ballplayers together and told them to meet him over at the store.

the man said, "and the store manager told us we could get 15 cents worth of whatever we wanted. I got a handful of crackers The gentleman said his first impression and cheese, a nickel cake and a big R.C. Cola.

The caller said he'd never forgotten the kindness and generosity of that store manager, and would bet that not a single Auxier ball player ever forgot it, either.

I guess it's obvious that Mr. Eugene Miller, who was in charge of the Northeast Coal Company Store for many years, was also one of those dear hearts and gentle to us. We were all dedicated to doing whatever was necessary to nurse Mrs. Bones back to health.

Finally, she began to grow stronger and to trust us. Eventually, she began to put on weight and, by the time two months had passed, Mrs. Bones no longer deserved her nickname as by this time, she was now weighing 65 pounds, just as this breed should weigh.

Soon, her profile was posted on our internet "forever home" site and almost immediately a couple from Portland, Maine contacted us expressing interest in adopting her.

"Mrs. Bones" is now living with this same couple in Las Vegas, Nevada (they moved after adopting her). We are pleased to report that this family has been delighted to give Mrs. Bones a "forever home" and that she has her very own boy to play with her and care for her daily. She will

A lot of people were involved with her rescue it's great to know that if that first couple had not cared enough to bring Mrs. Bones in to us, she may never have known the joy of human kindness and the love of a caring family.

So, here's to all the people who help those in less fortunate circumstances. You folks are my heroes!

Thanks for reading and God bless.
