Audit: Sheriff should pay more than $3K

The Associated Press

INEZ - An audit of Martin County Sheriff Garmon Preece says the sheriff should personally reimburse a $3,126 deficit the office piled up for the 2006 fiscal vear.

The audit released Thursday found that instead of using money for a program to prevent drug abuse, Preece used official funds to buy $1,047 in anti-drug education materials. The report also found his office paid $604 for children's badges, $295 for shirts and $165 for advertising in a high school yearbook ,Äî all expenditures the audit called unnecessary and unreasonable.

Other charges the sheriff's office rang up include bank late fees and conference fees for employees' spouses.

Preece defended his actions, telling The Lexington-Herald Leader that he thought the purchases were allowed.

The audit has been sent to the Kentucky Attorney General's Office for further review.

Two killed, one jailed in Abbott shooting

by JACK LATTA STAFF WRITER

PRESTONSBURG - A long-standing family feud turned into tragedy Thursday night in Prestonsburg, when an Abbott Creek man reportedly gunned down his niece and her husband, as the couple's four children stood witness.

Berry Hall, 45, was arrested by the Floyd County Sheriffs Office after he reportedly confessed to killing his niece, Lisa Tackett, 30, and her husband, Alan Tackett, 47.

Sheriff John K Blackburn, who arrived first on the scene with Kentucky State Police Trooper Chris Hicks, said, "He told me and Chris that he 'shot and killed both of them."

According to Blackburn, Hall went upstairs in his home, took up a .30-06, and from his window, first shot Lisa Tackett while she was in her yard, then proceeded to shoot Alan Tackett as he stood on his front porch.

Hall then reportedly put down his weapon, and walked across the street to the Tacketts' home and retrieved their four children from the house bringing them back to his home where he waited for authorities to arrive. According to Blackburn, Hall was arrested without incident and transported to Floyd County Detention Center. Hall's son reportedly made the 911 call that alerted authorities.

The Tackett children, aged 2-4 years, were taken into custody by social services, Blackburn

State gears up for spring highway cleanup

by JACK LATTA STAFF WRITER

PIKEVILLE - Volunteers will be out in force next week as the Kentucky Transportation Cabinet begins its annual Adopt-a-Highway Spring Clean.

"The Kentucky Cabinet Transportation appreciates the effort put forth by all Adopt-A-Highway groups in keeping our highways and communities beautiful and litterfree," said Joe Prather, Transportation Secretary.

According to KYTC, almost 1,100 groups participate in Kentucky's Adopt-A-Highway program during which volunteers clean almost 8,000 miles of road In District 12, 188 miles of road have been adopted. Many Adopt-A-Highway groups are partnering this year with their local PRIDE organizations. "We have the same goal: to keep our roadsides litterfree and beautiful," said Tarnell Patton, AAH coordinator for District 12, "A PRIDE group can also be Adopt-A-Highway an group, and their cleanup efforts can count for both agencies. We are flexible, and we've worked very well with the PRIDE organization, especially in Johnson, Pike and Martin counties. So if you are part of a PRIDE group, you may as well get Adopt-A-Highway credit for your work, too."

According to KYTC, enrollment in the program has been increasing, "This shows that Kentuckians place a high importance on maintaining and improving the scenic beauty of our state," Secretary Prather said. "Through their participation they are sending a message that littering is simply unacceptable in our commonwealth."

"The environment is everyone's responsibility," Patton said. "Adopt-a-Highway provides a chance to be part of the solution." According to Patton about $5 million and 200,000 hours of labor are spent each year to remove 96,000 bags of litter from state roadways. "As an Adopt-a-Highway volunteer, you will save thousands in taxpayer dollars and demonstrate to others that a clean environment is

"Things are starting to happen. People are starting to notice."

That's how city economic development director Brent Graden summarized the success of Prestonsburg's free wireless internet service, which was given its official unveiling Thursday evening at the Mountain Arts Center.

The service has actually been operational in various testing phases for several months. During that time,

Graden said the service has the possibility of implementing been embraced by the community

Graden noted that on the day of the unveiling, the service peaked at a record 107 simultaneous users.

The city's wireless zone stretches roughly two miles along North and South Lake Drive. It allows people with wireless-enabled computers, cell phones and other devices to connect to the internet without having to pay a fee.

The project was accomplished at a bargain-basement price. When first investigating wireless internet, the city received estimates from three companies ranging from $50,000 to $250,000, making the project too expensive for the city to tackle.

But Graden said he happened to see an advertisement for Meraki Networks in the back of a magazine and was intrigued by the San Franciscobased company's claims that it could provide the tools for a wireless network at a far cheaper price.

Measure would allow people to eat deer that damage crops

by ROGER ALFORD ASSOCIATED PRESS

FRANKFORT - Buzzards could lose a bountiful food supply under a bill that's making its way through the Kentucky General Assembly.

The measure would change a law that essentially bars farmers who shoot crop-damaging deer from giving them to needy families.

With the Kentucky Department of Fish and Wildlife Resources issuing landowners to shoot troublesome deer each year, buzzards and coyotes have had lots of rotting carcasses to dine on.

If state Rep. Royce Adams, D-Dry Ridge, gets his way, those deer would be eaten by people.

"We're hoping we can encourage more utilization of the meat," Adams said. "There are all kinds of people out there . Kentucky League of Property who are hungry.'

The Senate Agriculture and Natural Resources Committee about 3,500 permits for approved legislation Thursday to allow landowners to request a disposal tag so that the deer carcasses can be sent to butcher shops for processing. It now goes to the Senate floor for consideration. The House approved the bill last week, but would have to vote on it again because of a modification made in the Senate committee.

Bud Clancy, president of the Owners, said the state's deer

Guest view-Not just for the media

Those of us who raise our voices in protest whenever we think government is not being as open as it should are sometimes told by elected officials that only a handful of people in the media really care about open meetings, open records and the like.

Well, those elected officials are wrong about the public being disinterested in such matters. A new poll conducted by Scripps Howard News Service and Ohio University has found that almost three out of every four Americans think their government is becoming more secretive and they don't like it.

According to the poll commissioned by the American Society of Newspaper Editors in observance of National Sunshine Week, only 20 percent of the American people one in five - think the federal government is as open as it should be. Just two years ago, 33 percent of the respondents in a similar poll were satisfied with the openness of the federal government. During the same period, the percentage of those surveyed who thought the federal government was "very secretive" has doubled to 44 percent from 22 percent.

Given the secretive nature of the administration of President George W. Bush, such numbers are not the least bit surprising. The Bush administration has consistently tried to keep public information from the public - all in the name of protecting "national security," of course. But this president seems to think that even the most mundane information is a threat to national security. Thus "national security" has become an all-purpose umbrella under which a wide variety of abuses can hide. No wonder the American people distrust this administration.

In the same survey, local and state governments fared better than the national government: 56 percent felt their local government was open or somewhat open and 50 percent felt that way about their state government.

Here in Kentucky we are fortunate to have one of the nation's strongest open meetings and open records laws, and a long line of opinions issued by attorney generals have come down solidly in support of open government. Since attorney general opinions on open records and open meet-

Rich fowry Column Whose politics of fear?

Last month, in the words of Nancy Pelosi, House Democrats struck back against "fear" and "fear-mongering." They let the terrorist surveillance program expire, thus making a stirring gesture of national self-confidence and fearlessness.

House Democrats probably can't sustain their stand against renewing the program over the long term, so they will have managed a Pyrrhic defeat, losing on the policy and exposing a major political vulnerability for the fall.

President Bush compromised with Senate Democrats on a renewal of the surveillance program that passed by a 2-1 margin. The program monitors the communications of terrorist suspects outside the United States, which the president has the inherent authority to do. The legal and political controversy has arisen because many overseas communications now in the age of fiber optics - travel special FISA court that they are an agent of a foreign power. But a judge on that FISA court ruled early this past year that foreign communications must meet the same probablecause standard under the law. According to Director of National Intelligence Mike McConnell, our intelligence yield dropped off by a catastrophic twothirds.

The urgency of the situation led to the quick passage this past summer of the Protect America Act that exempted foreign communications from FISA's restrictions. The act had a six-month sunset. The House has now let it expire. House leaders shrug and say that the essential authorities remain in place for another six months. This is a dodge. We can continue to surveil current overseas targets, but can't pick up any new targets without FISA's onerous restrictions - a severe hampering of our intelligence. House Democrats tell themselves they are striking a blow against the politics of fear. But only if we suffer another mass-casualty terror attack will a politics of untrammeled fear be unleashed on the land. Best to do all we can to avoid it, especially when it involves nonviolations of the nonrights of non-Americans.

It's not as though Democrats don't traffic in their own politics of fear. Barack Obama summons a dark vision in his speeches of Americans denied economic opportunity and health care by lobbyists and callous corporations. Indeed, Exxon puts our planet "at risk." It's just that terrorists. don't make his fright list. In his victory speech after Potomac the Primary, Obama warned of using

"9/11 to scare up votes."

Naturally, Obama opposed the Senate's FISA deal, and he even denounced the telecoms that have cooperated with U.S. intelligence as "special interests." Here is a major opening for John McCain. The Arizona Republican will never outinspire anyone, but he can lead a serious national discussion of what we reasonably should fear, and how Obama, and the Pelosi wing of the Democratic Party of which he is the soaring avatar, discount it at our peril.

ings carry the force of law in Kentucky, that's important.

However, even with strong laws protecting openness in government, we must be ever vigilant in our efforts to guard against those government officials who would deny ordinary citizens access to public meetings and public records.

Public officials in Kentucky have learned that the law demands that they conduct the public's business in the sunshine. They may not like it, but with few exceptions, they obey the law.

Responding to the latest survey on open government, Lucy Dalglish, executive director of the Reporters Committee for the Freedom of the Press, said, "It's not just the media that wants open government. The survey has consistently shown that 'ordinary' citizens want it, too."

Candidates for public office - and those who are serving in those offices - should take note. Open and transparent government is not only good public policy, it's good politics.

duced the first black candidate with a chance to win. This split two core Democratic constituencies, ensuring that at least one segment of their most reliable supporters would feel betrayed and abandoned yet again. They then cleverly arranged to exclude from the prithe states most importelling Michigan and Florida to get lost.

Not content, they adhered to a selection system that made it almost certain that any contest between two evenly matched opponents would be inconclusive. And to put a cherry on this banana-republic split, they put the final deciding power in hands of "super delegates" - a polite term for party hacks - taking us back to the days of the "smoke-filled room."

As a result, Democrats are facing three months of guerrilla warfare between two estimable candidates, one of whom will leave the convention as the triumphant nominee nose bent to one side, an ear hanging by a thread, missing three front teeth:

To be greeted by a tanned, rested John McCain who will then summon the justly famous Republican attack machine whose engineers will have spent the previous six months taking notes.

When Will Rogers said: "I don't belong to an organized party; I'm a Democrat," he wasn't kidding. You might say: "Senators Clinton and Obama shouldn't attack each other. They should just play nice."

They have very little choice. They are both center-left liberals; the difference between the programs they offer is miniscule. They are separated mainly by race, gender and personality, not issues. So they are forced to attack each other's personal flaws and inadequacies.

Sen. Hillary Clinton's approach is particularly problematic. Her main argument against Sen. Barack Obama is that she is more experienced and would make a stronger commanderin-chief "from day one.'

However specious those claims may be, she is taken seriously when she makes them. She will be laughed off the stage, however, if she makes them against John McCain, who has more experience and is a war hero besides.

Obama's message of change, hope and soaring rhetoric might be a bit ephemeral for some but it at least provides a contrast to McCain, whose speeches are Rotarian in style and who offers only more of President George W. Bush's magic elixir.

Now ... it could be that the economy is such a horror show by November that a Republican victory is truly impossible. But should the economy go that far south, the Republicans are perfectly capable of convincing voters that the Democrats arc at fault.

Remember, you don't have to fool all of the people all of the time; you have to fool half of them for a single day in November, once every four years.

In addition to the downtown wireless zone, the city has expanded service to Archer Park and the MAC, and work is currently underway to provide the service at Stonecrest Golf Course.

"In some areas, it's worse than others," Adams said. "T've heard from people who say they get up and look out at night and see 20 or 30 deer in one alfalfa field. You can imagine the amount of damage that many deer could do in a short time."

State law allows the Department of Fish and Wildlife Resources to issue permits to farmers to shoot deer, but not to donate them for venison.

"This is objectionable to us," Clancy said. "Anything that's edible should be eaten."

Elbridge Cook Jr., a nuisance wildlife trapper from Corinth, said deer herds have been known to ravage gardens, cornfields, even apple orchards in Kentucky despite the best efforts of landowners to chase them away.

"If the deer needs to be put down because of crop damage, someone should be able to use it," he said.

This Town, That World

Editor's Note: For years, Floyd -County Times founder and former publisher Norman Allen wrote a weekly column that looked at Floyd County through his eyes. His columns are being reprinted due to request.

Spring officially arrived at 7:57 last Friday evening, and a few minutes later was unceremoniously blown back whence it came by an artic blast. Whatever happened to the fishing season, don't mention it.

TIME AND A HALF

Watt Hale tells a story that may have within it, somewhere, the beginning of overtime pay. This was in the days when a man on the farm drew the lordly sum of 50 cents a day for sunrise to sundown work. The old farmer had worked his crew to a frazzle, and at the end of the day was paying the boys off.

Fifty cents here, and on down the line till he came to a fellow with a peg-leg. He handed the fellow his pay, and the other, honest yeoman that he was, remarked "You've paid me too much—you gave me 75 cents."

"That's all right, son," the farmer replied. "T'm payin' you ttime and a half, for every time you stepped with that peg-leg of your'n you made me a hole to set a sweet tater plant in."

AND THAT'S HOW

Not to be outdone, but always careful to protect his reputation for truth and veracity, Lenna Moore tells one which he lays to the credit (?) of one of his fellow-workers down at the parking lot. Says this fellow tells of tangling with a monster bass while fishing over one of these sunken car bodies in Dewey Lake, and of losing the fish after a terrific struggle of some minutes "what happened—why did you lose him?" he was asked.

BSCTC Art Gallery hosts exhibition of works of new instructor, Tim Smith

Currently showing at the Big Sandy Community and Technical College Art Gallery, located on the Prestonsburg campus, is an exhibition of recent works by BSCTC art instructor, Timothy Smith. The exhibit includes a variety of materials including a marble carving, bronze casting, photo collage and abstract-style paintings. Smith's most recent works displayed are large acrylics on canvas of roughly textured compositions with a surrealistic tone.

by TOM DOTY TIMES COLUMNIST

A talented cast and breakneck pacing distinguish this return to the "slasher" cycle of films.

Director Adam Green has said that his intent was to duplicate the 1980sstyle horror movie, but he actually soars above that goal by injecting the film with loads of humor and overthe-top gore. Unlike a 1980s horror fest, this one provides you with characters that are over 18 and actually gives them more to do than party and wait around to be killed by a superhuman psycho in a plastic mask.

Tom Doty Times Columnist

The film opens in a misty swamp, where father-and-son poachers are looking to grab some gators. After a banal conversation about the logistics of relieving one's bladder we get a first, albeit false, scare as the son decides to go over the side of the canoe. A gator (about the size of a Volkswagen) doesn't take kindly to Cajuns who treat his home like a fire hydrant and springs up long enough to teach the young man some manners, and give him a stain that will be hard to explain.

The gator scene is quickly followed by a vague humanoid shape which rips the men apart and we are off to the races.

Next up the film shifts to the French Quarter of New Orleans. Here we meet the despondent Ben, who has just broken up with the girl he had dated since seventh grade. His buddies are mostly drunk frat guys looking for the next Mardi Gras party, but all Ben wants is to go on a haunted swamp tour. He gets his wish when his best friend Marcus opts to keep him company. The tour group is an eclectic bunch that transcends the usual suspects in a slasher film and includes: Marybeth, a withdrawn girl; Misty and Jenna, models there to film bits of a "Girls Gone Wild"-style film; Shapiro, a film maker with no shame; and the Permatteos, a retired couple who speak like they walked off the set of "Fargo" to be in this movie. The group is led by a shady character named Shawn, who appears to have little experience with the region, though that doesn't stop him from trying to sound like he's always in the know. The group heads out to the swamp after an embarrassing bus tour where the Permatteos show that they read up on Cajun lore and challenge all of Shawn's patter. Shawn does get their attention by telling the story of Victor Crowley and here things get interesting. Through flashback we get the whole story of a deformed boy raised in the swamp by his loving dad. We get to see how he was ostracized for looking different and how a prank by local kids backfired and set his house ablaze with the boy trapped inside. When dad came to the rescue, he had

And, according to this version of the matter, the fisherman explained:

"That's simple. That fish just crawled back into that car and rolled the window up on me."

PALMER TELLS HOW

Saw a magazine article this week by Arnold Palmer, who took several pages to tell how, any golfer could take 10 strokes off his score for 18 holes. I was beginning to be impressed till it suddenly occurred to me that Mr. Palmer needed to take just about that many strokes off his own score in some of these recent tournaments.

BUT THAT WOULD HURT "BUSI-NESS"

Gallup, New Mexico, is having one horrendous time with its drunks-drunken Indians, mainly. The police jammed the jail till the health authorities became concerned. Drinking became so universal among these native sons of ours, that Gallup officials consulted psychiatrists, doctors, everybodyeven considered a bigger and more modern jail. What was so amusing about the whole sad story was the failure of the Gallup city fathers to use their noggins and consider getting rid of some of those 40-odd bars that have been set up to catch the Redskin trade.

In attempting to describe his work, Smith said, "I prefer not to talk about the content of the paintings. They can be interpreted based on the viewers own experiences. The experiences and processes involved in making the images are important aspects to me. The painting becomes almost a record of the actual experience of creating it. This is very exciting to me. That's where the surrealist character comes in. I like the idea of trying to get close to a subconscious expression, loosely based on art history and personal concerns. The image is important, also. Images can have a powerful impact. It's sort of a struggle between image and idea. It's an exciting way of approaching art. When I work on a painting, I never know exactly where I'm going with it. That's the best way that I can explain it, after all, art is a visual language. Must we also describe it verbally?

The Big Sandy Community and Technical College Art Gallery is located in the Magoffin Building on the Prestonsburg Campus. BSCTC administrators, Smith and Gallery Curator Timothy Sizemore invite everyone to stop by to view this unique showing.

Her 'American Idol'

by SALLIE A. RODMAN "CHICKEN SOUP FOR THE AMERICAN IDOL SOUL"

The phone always rings right at 9 p.m. on the dot.

"It's time for 'Idol,' Mom. Are you ready?" It's my oldest daughter, Jennifer.

"Sure am, and I'm crossin' my fingers for Melinda and Jordin. I heard Jennifer Lopez is coaching them this week!"

"That is so cool!" she replies. "I'm saying a little prayer that Jordin stays, too. Catch you in a little." And with that she hangs up.

Thus starts our weekly journey into an hour of time that is all ours just me and my daughter, who lives a thousand miles away.

Jennifer is a military wife. She lives with my two grandchildren in Washington state, a long way from her hometown of Los Alamitos. She moved there in the middle of last year and is slowly making friends, but it's not easy being alone. Her husband, Ed, is in the Navy serving in the North Arabian Sea, supporting the troops on the ground in Afghanistan in Operation Enduring Freedom. Ed will be on sea duty for another nine months. Watching "American Idol" together is one of my ways of reaching out to her so that she doesn't feel so alone.

She grabs a Coke and I grab my tea, and we each settle down in front of our respective TV sets. Her kids are in bed at last, and she can have a little time to herself. We call back and forth on our cell phones between contestants. She's voting for Jordin Sparks, and I was voting for Gina Glocksen until she was voted off last week. We both cried when Gina left. So now we're both voting for Jordin, but we also like Melinda a lot — and Chris, Lakisha and Blake.

Whoops, there goes my phone again.

"Can you believe that Sanjaya?" she says before I even get a chance to say hello. "What does everyone see in him?"

"I don't know, hon, but they must see something. I know the teenyboppers who work part time in my office just love him to death."

"Oh," she giggles, "I forgot about them. Haley's up; gotta run. Catch you after," and she's gone again.

And so it goes, week after week.

When the show is over, we recap what Haley wore, how long Melinda held her notes, how rude Simon's remarks were and who we think might get the boot tomorrow night.

For the contestants, "American Idol" is the dream of a lifetime. For me, "American Idol" is a time to connect with my daughter during these difficult days in her life and hopefully help keep her spirits afloat. For Jennifer, "American Idol" is her little hour of fun where she can escape into a world

Reverse is no substitute for parking brake

by TOM and RAY MAGLIOZZI

Dear Tom and Ray:

Several years ago, my Ford Ranger coasted out of my driveway at about 2 a.m. and rammed a minivan across the road. (I parked on a very steep driveway.) I learned to drive on my grandparents' cherry farm and was taught to put everything - tractors, pickups, cars, anything with a standard transmission - into reverse when I parked it, because that would keep it from rolling backward. It seemed to work for many years ... until that night, at least. My question is: Will putting a vehicle in reverse make it less likely to roll backward down a hill? It seems counterintuitive. When I got to my truck that night, the door was locked and it was in reverse. - Brendan

RAY: Will parking a manual-transmission car in reverse make it less likely to roll down a hill? Yes. Will it guarantee that the car won't roll down a hill? Absolutely not.

TOM: Whether you put the transmission in a forward or reverse gear makes less difference than the ratio of the gear (the compression in the cylinders will make the engine resist moving in either direction — forward or backward). You want a high gear ratio in order to give the wheels a mechanical disadvantage. First and reverse have the highest gear ratios.

RAY: By putting the vehicle in gear, you're making a direct mechanical connection between the engine and the wheels. You're making it so the wheels can't turn unless they force the engine to turn.

TOM: So, what you've done, when you put the car in gear and connect the engine to the wheels, is made a bet that the compression inside the cylinders is strong enough to counteract the effect of gravity trying to pull the weight of the car down the hill. And on mildenough hills, you'll win that bet.

RAY: But you could lose the bet on steep hills - or if your engine's compression is low, or if your clutch is slipping, or if the transmission slips out of gear, or if there's ice on the ground.

TOM: That's why we have this relatively new invention called - pay attention, Brendan - the parking brake.

RAY: Putting a vehicle in gear even the most mechanically disadvantageous gear - doesn't guarantee that vour car won't roll down a hill. So we always suggest that you put the car in first or reverse AND apply the parking brake

TOM: If your Ranger used to hold on that same hill, under all the same conditions, then something may well have changed, and you'll want to have a mechanic check out the condition of the elutch and get a compression test. But regardless, even when everything else is working perfectly, you still should make a habit of using the parking brake.

RAY: It's good insurance, Brendan. It's why my brother's dates always bring two paper bags with them - one to put over my brother's head, and one for themselves, in case my brother's falls off.

A hairy problem Dear Tom and Ray:

Please help me. I have a 1996 Honda Accord that runs great - no complaints. However, this morning, coming back to my car in a parking lot, I noticed some long hair or fur hanging out from my exhaust pipe. I removed some of it, and a kind gentleman pulled some more out and thought he got all of it. After driving 60 miles back home, I parked the car in the garage and noticed a lot more hair/fur hanging out of the same exhaust pipe. as I was getting the groceries out. Please, what could this be, and how did something - an animal of some kind get in there? Did it get in from another part of the car, like somewhere under the hood? I am afraid to touch the car again. Who do I go to or call to get this taken care of? Thank you so much. — Linda

TOM: Call the Hair Club for Men, Linda. You might be able to sell this stuff and supplement your income.

RAY: Did the "kind gentleman" happen to mention anything about being a president and a client? He might have been Sy Sperling.

TOM: What you've got actually is something we refer to as muffler hair, Linda. It seems to be unique to Hondas. At least, those are the only cars we've seen with flowing muffler locks.

RAY: Honda apparently uses some It is long, soft-black/gray/white hair or sort of insulation in its mufflers that fur. I noticed a foul smell in the trunk looks an awful lot like human or animal hair. It's not hair. It's probably fiberglass, or some such thing. It's used to keep the haffles in the muffler from rattling when the muffler starts to get old and the parts loosen

TOM: But when the interior of the muffler really begins to disintegrate, the baffles no longer hold the insulation (i.e., muffler hair) in place, and it gets pushed out the tailpipe.

RAY: This leads to a fair number of blood-curdling screams coming from people's garages when they go out in the morning and think Grandma has been stuffed up the tailpipe.

TOM: So, it means you need a new mulller, Linda. In the meantime, try putting it up in a bun or something so it doesn't look unruly.

to break in using a hatchet which wound up wounding the boy, who was cowering on the other side of the door as dad chopped it down.

This bit explains to the audience who killed the poachers, but our tourists appear to know nothing and are soon trapped in Crowley country when their boat sinks.

The stranded tourists observe a house in the swamp and begin to make for it until Marybeth speaks up and says that it is the Crowley house. She reveals that her father and brother went missing in the area two nights before and that she took the tour to investigate their whereabouts. She goes on to note that nobody comes there because of the Crowley legend, which made the area attractive to her desperate dad. Turns out there is something to fear and Crowley promptly shows up and hacks away at the Permatteoes.

The movie doesn't fool around here and their fate is over-the-top graphically demonstrating that special effects men are still capable of panics like Britney Spears when she spots flashing blue lights in her rearview mirror and quickly abandons the best strategy here by splitting up.

They eventually regroup and we learn that everyone has a secret, especially Shawn, who turns out to be a Detroit hustler still learning the ropes in the Big Easy. They eventually decide to fight back, but Crowley is as indestructible as any 1980s horror creature and he proceeds to whittle down the cast like "Gong Show" rejects.

What separates this one from the pack is the editing, which makes for a quick ride (under 90 minutes) and doesn't allow for time to catch a breath.

Then there are the characters who are actually fun to be around. Ben is a good lead as he proves resourceful and has a sardonic outlook which resembles the early seasons of "Friends" when David Schwimmer was allowed to be morose and consequently funny.

Marybeth makes for a tough

The real surprise here is Top it all off with New Orleans as a scenic backdrop and you have a perfect slice of 2007 cheese. This should fill the bill for those who are starved for an 1980s-style horror picture made with more respect for the genre than most 1980s muster.

In Loving Memory GARY LEE WRIGHT February, 1970 - March, 2007

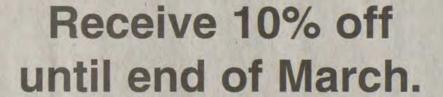

It has been a year already, and it is still like it was only yesterday.

We miss your smile and your warm hugs, and the way you could light up a room when you entered, because of the warm glow you always wore on your face, and the kind words you always spoke.

If you could see your son, Landon Lee, now, you would be so proud, for he has all your love inside of him.

Sadly missed by everyone who knew you, especially "Your Family"

Bentley claims annual MSC AD award

TIMES STAFF REPORT

PIKEVILLE - While Pikeville may have been the site of the crowning of the new Mid-South Conference champion Georgetown Tigers carlier in the month, one of Pikeville's own was given one of the conference's highest achievements.

Rick Bentley has faithfully served as Sports Information Director and Assistant Athletics Director at Pikeville College for 12 years, and for the fourth time he is being honored by the MSC with its annual Bill Sergent Award for Sports Information Director of the Year.

'It's always special to be recognized by my peers, because these are people I share a calling with and whom I care very deeply about," said Bentley. "But that's certainly not why I do what I do. This is about a love of the student-athletes, of sports and of writing."

Anyone who knows Rick Bentley knows that to be true. His standard for excellence comes not from a desire to prove himself or pad an already impressive resume, it comes from an undying love of athletics.

"The good Lord saw fit to grace me with the talents to be in this business, and I thank Him every day for that," he said. "I do what I do because it's fun and I have a blast with it.'

As if it were not enough to maintain the statistics and Web sites for all 19 of Pikeville's varsity sports, Bentley also volunteers as the radio voice of the Bears, as well as local high school teams, for East Kentucky Broadcasting. He also writes a weekly column for the Appalachian News-Express and The Floyd County Times.

"There are two groups of people I share this with," he said. "First, the coaches I work with every day make my job as enjoyable and as easy as they possibly can. They mean the world to me. Second, of course, is the members of the media I work with on a regular basis. They help me in my duty of getting word out about what we're doing and what's going on here in the athletics department. They are the ones who make my work qualify for an award like this."

And it does not matter

Affordable turkey hunting is available by LEE MCCLELLAN KENTUCKY AFIELD

FRANKFORT - If you watch a sports channel on Saturday morning during the early spring, there is a good chance you will see footage of someone turkey hunting. Squatting against a tree with a camouflaged semi-automatic shotgun, dressed in full camouflage from head to toe, wearing a turkey hunting vest that has a scat cushion, the television hunter looks like he threw out $2,500 in gear.

An average person can do the same thing for a fraction of that amount if they are patient. "Take the time to learn to hunt before you buy anything," said Norm Minch, avid turkey hunter and assistant director of the information and education division of the Kentucky Department of Fish and Wildlife Resources. "Getting a turkey close is much more important than the cost of your equipment. Increase your woodsmanship and decrease your cost."

Ask turkey hunting friends or relatives if they have any old calls they will sell. There is a good chance they'll give you one, as most turkey hunters col-

PAINTSVILLE HIGH SCHOOL BOYS' BASKETBALL FANS had plenty to cheer about throughout the 2007-08 season. The team featured six seniors - Landon Slone, JD VanHoose, Shane Grimm (above), Blake Bundy, Justin Murray (right) and Jeremy Pack. Slone and Pack played junior high basketball in Floyd County at Mountain Christian Academy. Slone is the 2008 Kentucky Association Basketball Coaches (KABC) 15th Region Player of the Year. Numerous Paintsville players claimed honors during the 2007-08 regular-season and postseason. Grimm was named the 2008 15th Region Tournament Most Valuable Player.

'Copper' John set to be inducted into KHSAA HoF TIMES STAFF REPORT

LEXINGTON - Twelve former high school coaches, athletes, officials administrators and/or contributors make up the 21st class to be inducted into the Dawahares/KHSAA Hall of Fame. The class was first recognized at the annual Dawaharcs/KHSAA Hall of Fame golf outing Tuesday, June 19, 2007, at the Marriott Griffin Gate Resort in Lexington. The class of 2008 will be inducted in ceremonies scheduled for Saturday, April 12 at the Lexington Convention Center. The induction of the 12 will bring the total number of individuals honored to 355. Among the inductees is former Wayland High School boys' basketball coach "Copper" John Campbell.

"Copper" played basketball for Hindman Settlement where he was a three year starter. In 1939, he helped Hindman to the State Tournament and was selected All-State Tournament for his efforts. Later, he coached the Wayland Wasps for 11 years, winning four district titles, three regional titles, including his 1959 squad that set many State Tournament records.

Others due to be inducted into the KHSAA Hall of Fame are Joe Carr Jr., Gloria Compton, Nancy Crutcher Martin, Charles "Doodle" Floyd, E.G. Plummer, William Burton Rankin, Ervin Stepp, Brad Wilkerson, Rozella Young Two individuals have previously been voted into the Hall of Fame but declined induction at that time. Kelly Coleman (1989) and John Reynolds (1994) have yet to accept the honor. They or their representatives would be added to the induction class in the year the honor is accepted. Coleman played under Campbell's watch at Wayland High School.

lect calls like bass anglers collect crankbaits. Slate, push button or box calls are good choices for a beginner. Mouth calls take more time to learn, but are convenient to use because they keep your hands free.

Learn the cluck and yelp calls first before advancing to the purr, the kee-kee run and the cackle. You can buy inexpensive cassette tapes that teach the basics of calling. Local libraries sometimes have these tapes that you can check-out for free.

"Learn to use your calls. That is the most important thing you can do to help yourself," said Minch, who can be found on a Shelby County hillside with his father many mornings during turkey season. "Also, after the season is over, take care of your calls. Many hunters throw their calls behind the seat of their trucks or in the trunk of their cars and forget about them. Heat is hard on the diaphragm of mouth calls. Moisture and heat can warp a box call. If you abuse your calls, you have to replace them again next year, which is expensive."

More on the storied Paintsville boys' basketball program's latest postseason run will appear in Wednesday's edition.

LL PSA targets parents and sportsmanship

SPECIAL TO THE TIMES

WILLIAMSPORT, Pa. - A Little League public service announcement (PSA), to be seen on the ESPN family of networks this spring and summer, deals with parents and sportsmanship.

In this still photo from the PSA, the batter, played by Johnny Maio of Tampa, Fla., waits in the box for the pitch, but steps out for a few words with his dad.

"Little League has always been looked upon to provide leadership in youth sports, and we are taking this subject head on as well," said Stephen D. Keener, President and Chief Executive Officer of Little League majority of the millions of Little League parents who sign their children up each year never cause any problems. But we do see a few who overreact and take the game too seriously, and they, unfortunately, are the ones everyone remembers."

The 15-second PSA opens with a batter at the plate during a game. An adult voice weakly cheers the player on, and the player turns toward the stands to berate his father for not cheering loudly enough.

"Come on dad, is that the best you can do?" the Little Leaguer, played by Johnny Maio, 12, of Tampa, Fla.,

Baseball and Softball. "The vast screams toward the stands. "That's pathetic. I don't even know why you bother showing up. Why can't you be more like Jimmy's dad? All the other parents are going to laugh at you. You make me sick.'

> In the midst of the tirade, a title appears on the screen: "Now you know how it feels. Just let them play."

The PSA, along with several other videos produced by or for Little League, can be found online at: http://www.youtube.com/user/Dugout TheMascot.

The four PSAs for 2008 were filmed at Cross Bayou Little League, in Seminole, Fla.

Floyd-Johnson NWTF to hold first banquet by STEVE LeMASTER SPORTS EDITOR

PRESTONSBURG - The Floyd-Johnson Chapter of the National Wild Turkcy Federation (NWTF) will hold the 1st Annual Hunting Heritage Banquet on Friday, March 28 at Heritage House Hotel. The banquet will run from 6-10 p.m. The banquet will include games, raffles, silent auction, dinner and live auction. Tickets may be purchased at the door.

The Floyd and Johnson county chapters of the NWTF recently combined to form one chapter. Tom Scott is the Floyd-Johnson NWTF Chapter President. Prior to combining, both NWTF charters enjoyed growth and success.

Turkey hunters throughout the world are National Wild Turkey Federation members.

The National Wild Turkey Federation is a nonprofit 5013c conservation organization that strives to promote the conservation and restoration of the wild turkey, and the preservation of the hunting heritage.

Memphis beats Kentucky 74-66; Crawford nets 35 in loss

by ANDREW BAGNATO ASSOCIATED PRESS

ANAHEIM, Calif. - After first-round flameouts in their last two NCAA tournaments, the Marquette Golden Eagles wowed to stick around this time.

They're headed to the second round after defeating Kentucky 74-66 in the South Regional opening round on Thursday.

· Jerel McNeal scored 20 points and Wesley Matthews hit eight free throws in the final 31 seconds to help the Golden Eagles survive a 35performance point by Kentucky's Joe Crawford, who matched a career high before fouling out. Sixthseeded Marquette will face No. 3 seed Stanford on Saturday.

Marquette (25-9) earned its h first NCAA tournament victo-

Kentucky in the regional final. That Marquette team had Dwyane Wade. This one has a group of tested veterans who have learned to play under pressure.

"We've grown so much just since my first year here," said McNeal, a junior from Chicago who has started all 94 games of his college career. "We had spurts through those 40 minutes that weren't always the best Marquette team that we could put out there, but the most important thing, we just stayed with it. Nobody dropped their heads."

Crawford may have felt like dropping his head when he fouled out in the final seconds. But Marquette's Dominic James walked overand offered consolation.

"I mean, you saw the performance out there, and he put his heart out there on the floor," James said. "So out of ry since 2003, when it beat respect for him and his teammates, I just told him to keep his head up and keep playing the game that he loves."

Crawford, a senior, was disheartened to see his college career end in defeat.

"I came here to win," he said. "That's what I wanted to do. So I'm just kind of sad right now because, you know, I feel like we had a good chance and I'm just kind of down right now."

For Kentucky (18-13), the loss caps an uneven season. The Wildcats overcame a 7-9 start, including a loss to Gardner-Webb, and won 11 of their last 14 to slip into the bracket.

"It was a tough loss for us," first-year coach Billy Gillispic said. "We came here intent on winning, like everybody else does."

Ramel Bradley, another senior, added 19 for the Wildcats, whose record 49th NCAA tournament appearance was brief.

Playing a combined 79 Crawford and minutes. scored 54 Bradley of Kentucky's 66 points. Only one other Wildcat - Perry made a field Stevenson goal.

Gillispie said the Wildcats will miss Crawford and Bradley.

"You hate to see those guys walking out of here for the last Gillispie said. time." "They've made a definite mark on Kentucky basketball, which is the best tradition in the history of the sport."

Marquette's tradition isn't bad, either, especially when it comes to beating Kentucky in March.

The Wildcats and Golden Eagles met for the 10th time in the NCAA tourney's mostplayed matchup. Marquette is 6-4 in the series, and Crean has won both of his tournament games against Kentucky.

The Wildcats played without leading rebounder and No. 2 scorer Patrick Patterson. Kentucky went 2-3 after losing the star freshman to a season-ending ankle injury.

"I thought the longer we played, the more we'd miss Patrick," Gillispie said.

As it turned out, Crawford was almost enough for the Wildcats.

Kentucky cut it to 66-63 on Crawford's 3-pointer from the top of the key with 38 seconds left.

After Matthews hit two free throws, Bradley hit a 3pointer from the corner to get the Wildcats within two with 22 seconds remaining.

Matthews made two more free throws, then stole the ball and hit two more from the line to ice the game.

"It was just a matter of going up there and making them," said Matthews, a career 77.6-percent shooter from the line. "It's easy to make them when your whole team and coaches have this confidence in you, and coach is drawing up the play to give me the ball in that-position."

Marquette knew Kentucky would run its offense through Crawford but seemed powerless to stop him. Crawford hit 13 of 22 shots from the floor while his teammates went 10for-26. He hit 5-of-8 from beyond the arc and 4-of-8 at the line.

"He earned his baskets," Crean said. "He's a great player. We will see him in Milwaukee. I don't know if he'll be a Buck, but there's 29 or 30 other teams he can play for."

In the end, though, Crawford needed a lot more help than he had.

"We had a lead and didn't want to lose it," Matthews said. "They threw their punch and we threw ours right back."

Duke survives Belmont in opening round, West Virginia tops Arizona

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON - Mighty, mighty Duke let teeny, tiny Belmont play with the big boys. And, for stretches, get the better of them.

No. 2-seeded Duke actually trailed in the final 15 seconds before barely avoiding the monumental upset, using every last one of Gerald Henderson's 21 points to edge No. 15 Belmont 71-70 in the first round of the West Regional on Thursday night.

While Belmont couldn't quite pull off the stunner, it was surprising enough how close this game was. In a matchup between a school with three NCAA titles ---- that would be Duke, of course and another that never has won a game in the tournament, it was Henderson's driving basket with 11.9 seconds left that erased Belmont's final lead. After ACC defensive player of the year DeMarcus Nelson stole the ensuing inbounds pass, he was fouled, but he missed at the line. Belmont got the rebound, and one final chance to make history, with 2.2 seconds left. The Bruins' leading scorer, Justin Hare, got a good look at the basket from about 35 feet away, but his shot clanged off the iron. He winced, and Duke celebrated as though it had won far more than an opening-round game - something it actually failed to do a year ago.

Duke (28-5) advanced this time to face West Virginia on Saturday.

And Belmont (25-9) can go home with heads held high.

West Virginia 75, Arizona 65: WASHINGTON - West Virginia's prowess from long range made Arizona's 24th consecutive trip to the NCAA tournament another one-anddone performance.

Alex Ruoff scored 21 points, Da'Scan Butler had 19, and the Mountaineers won.

West Virginia (25-10) took the lead for good on a 3-pointcr by Ruoff with 17:43 left, and another jumper by Rouff from beyond the arc made it 48-39. After Arizona closed to 60-59, two 3-pointers by Darris Nichols and another by Ruoff sealed the victory.

Chase Budinger Icd Arizona (19-15) with 23 points, and Jordan Hill had 16 points and 12 rebounds.

Xavier 73, Georgia 61: WASHINGTON - Derrick Brown's 19 points and 11 rebounds led a balanced-asusual offense, and No. 3-seeded Xavier avoided a big upset by rallying to overcome fading Georgia.

scored 20 for the Musketeers (28-6), who trailed by as many as 11 in the second half but conjured up a 22-6 run to come back.

Terrance Woodbury had 16 points and do-everything guard Sundiata Gaines' finished with 13 for Georgia (17-17), which could not sustain the energy it summoned during last week's run to the SEC tournament title.

South Regional

Stanford 77, Cornell 53: ANAHEIM, Calif. - Kenny Brown scored 18 points and third-seeded Stanford earned its first NCAA tournament win since 2004, routing Cornell in a matchup of players as good with the books as they are with a basketball.

Lewis Dale, the Ivy League player of the year, scored 12

Super-sub Josh Duncan points, Adam Gore had 11 and Alex Tyler 10 for 14th-seeded Cornell (22-6), which had its 16-game winning streak snapped. The Ivy League hasn't won an NCAA tournament game since 1998.

The Cardinal (27-7) outscored Cornell 43-11 over both halves for a 58-23 lead.

Pittsburgh 82, Oral Roberts 63: DENVER Levance Fields scored 23 points, Sam Young finished with 14 and Pittsburgh won its sixth straight game.

Fourth-seeded Pitt (27-9) is making its seventh straight NCAA tournament appearance, though none of those previous teams have made it past the third round.

Robert Jarvis had 16 points for the Golden Eagles (24-9), who won the Summit League tourney to make their third straight trip to the NCAAs.

Michigan State Temple 61: DENVER -Raymar Morgan led a balanced attack with 15 points and Michigan State advanced despite a sudden shooting slump from spark plug Drcw Neitzel.

Last year, Neitzel was the Spartans' only option on offense. Now, he's got scorers swarming all around. Chris Allen scored 12 points and fellow freshmen Kalin Lucas and Durrell Summers each added for fifth-seeded cight Michigan State (26-8).

Mark Tyndale scored 16 points for Temple (21-13).

A turkey shotgun doesn't have to break the bank. It is a utility gun, not something you show off for your buddies. You can find an old, beat up pump 12-gauge shotgun at a gun store for $150 or less. It doesn't matter how many nicks or scratches Father Time put on 12-gauge.

The next step is to pattern the gun with a full or extra full choke and the turkey loads you plan to use. Check your local sporting goods store for turkey shells loaded with number 4, 5 or 6 shot. Get an old piece of cardboard and a piece of white Continued from p4 the gun, because the next step is to cover the gun with camouflage tape. Make sure the tape doesn't interfere with the action of the pump. Now, you have an affordable turkey gun.

There are also 12-gauge pump shotguns on the market with black synthetic stocks for under $200. A new single shot 12-gauge in full choke runs about $125. Tape them up in camouflage and you are ready to go. A shotgun that chambers a 3-inch magnum shell is the best choice, but turkey hunters harvested turkeys for decades with 2 ?-inch shotshells. The shorter shotshell limits your effective range, however.

A 20-gauge shotgun that chambers 3-inch shells is a good choice for women and kids because of the reduced recoil. However, you must take closer shots than with a paper and check how the gun patterns at 25, 30, 35 and 40 yards. Some people use paper plates and draw an outline of their fist with a marker to simulate a turkey's head.

Make sure the turkey load produces a consistent pattern. If there are big holes in the pattern, switch the shot size or the brand of shotshell until you get a consistent pattern. If you use size 4 shot, a modified choke may produce the best pattern.

Patterning a shotgun's load is a great idea for all of your shotgun hunting, including doves and waterfowl. Not patterning the load is one of the great mistakes hunters make. Knowing how different loads react in your gun improves your shooting tremendously.

Food City 500 - most watched sporting event last Sunday

TIMES STAFF REPORT

BRISTOL, Tenn. - The Food City 500 at Bristol Motor Speedway was the most watched sporting event of the March 15-16 weekend, according to the Television Performance Summary issued by NASCAR today.

The Food City 500 topped the No. 2 event, the NCAA Selection Show, as well as the PGA Arnold Palmer Invitational, the NCAA men's basketball conference basketball tournaments and NBA coverage.

The sold-out NASCAR Sprint Cup event scored a 5.5 rating on FOX, up +8% over the 5.1 rating for the 2007 event, which also aired on FOX. The pre-race show, aired by FOX, earned a 3.4 rating.

The Sharpie MINI 300 Nationwide Series event was the third most viewed Nationwide Series event in the history of Bristol Motor Speedway and the green flag portion of the race earned a 2.0 rating on ABC.

The ratings of the summary were based on the live and same day data information, as well as the size of the network.

South Laurel (27-8), the 13th Region representative and 2005 state champs, got off to a slow start as the Cardinals missed their first nine shots and fell behind 9-0. A missed shot in the final seconds would have tied the score.

The Bulldogs (31-4) advanced to play a quarterfinal

Slowey strikes out 5 to help Twins beat Reds 4-0

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

FORT MYERS, Fla. -Minnesota Twins pitcher Kevin Slowey wished his alma mater could have played basketball as well as he pitched Thursday night.

Slowey, a candidate to make the starting rotation, got the win as the Twins defeated the Cincinnati Reds 4-0 at Hammond Stadium.

A second-round pick out of Winthrop in 2005, Slowcy struck out five and gave up three hits in six innings. He lowered his spring ERA from 5.91 to 4.02 after his fifth outing.

"I heard we were up like 15-13," Slowey said afterward, only to learn Winthrop lost 71-40 to Washington State in the first round of the NCAA tournament.

"Oh well," he said. "They're still my alma mater."

While Winthrop struggled, Slowey shut down the Reds. He overcame a second-inning throwing error by third baseman Mike Lamb, who tossed a routine double-play ball over the head of second baseman Brendan Harris.

Slowey then struck out Norris Hopper and Paul Bako, ending the inning.

"We're so confident in our defense out there that when they don't make a play, they don't make a play," Slowcy said. "The biggest thing is I was keeping the ball down. Keeping the ball down is the biggest thing.'

The Twins are counting on Slowcy to step forward, with Francisco Liriano returning from a missed season due to left elbow surgery and Scott Baker limited in camp because of a back injury and the flu.

"Slowey did very good," manager Ron Gardenhire said. "The ball was really coming out of his hand. He used his changeup some.

"He's a lot more confident out there. He's on a good pace right now, about where he wanted to be."

The Twins supported Slowcy on offense. Michael Cuddyer had a sacrifice fly and minor league catcher Drew Butera, acquired last summer from the Mets for second baseman Luis Castillo, hit a two-run single that scored Harris and Carlos Gomez, who beat a throw to first for an infield single.

Butera scored on an error for a 4-0 lead in the seventh.

Twins closer Joe Nathan, whose agent has been discussing a contract extension with the Twins, struck out three and gave up one hit in two innings.

Reds starter Homer Bailey allowed one earned run and three hits with two walks in four innings.

Bailey is competing with Josh Fogg and Matt Belisle for the fifth spot in the rotation. When spring training opened, the competition was wide open for the three spots behind Aaron Harang and Bronson Arroyo.

But two young pitchers have passed Bailey: 22-year-old Johnny Cueto and 24-year-old Edinson Volquez, obtained from Texas in the Josh Hamilton trade, have won the third and fourth spots.

Asked if it would be a big disappointment if he started the season at Triple-A, Bailey said. "No, not really. Obviously I would be wanting to go to Louisville and do whatever in takes to get back. But to see how well Johnny and Volquez have been throwing, they've definitely shown what they car do and they've definitely showr they can pitch at this level."

Reds send top prospect OF Bruce to minors Jay Outfielder Jay Bruce, one of the Cincinnati Reds' tor prospects, was reassigned to their minor league camp or Thursday.

The 20-year-old Bruce was a possible candidate for the starting center field job Manager Dusty Baker wil now choose between Corey Patterson, Norris Hopper and Ryan Freel.

The Reds also optioned OI Drew T. Anderson and right hander Marcus McBeth to Triple-A Louisville. Right handers Josh Roenicke and Tom Shearn were reassigned to the minors.

The moves left the Red with 44 players in camp including injured left-hande Bobby Livingston and short stop Alex Gonzalez, expected to miss the start of the seaso. with a knee injury.

Bruce, who jumped from Single-A to Triple-A last sea son, hit .262 this spring with n homers and three RBIs.

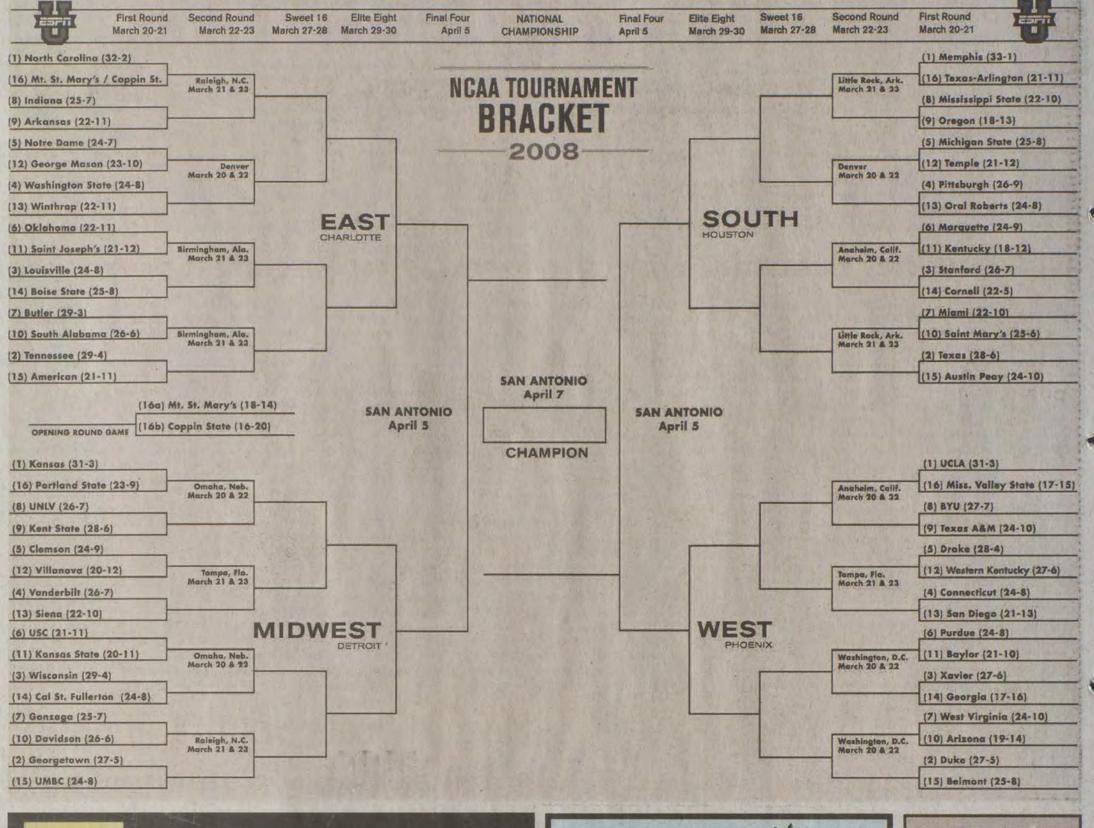

they would have jumped on us to offset their 20 turnovers. South Laurel was making its fourth straight appearance in 9-0 it would have been hard for us to come back," Hazard the tournament. Hazard coach Al Holland said.

> South Laurel shot 38.6 percent (17-of-44) for the game after its 2-for-12 (16.7 percent) start in the first quarter.
