

Police seize drugs from man's home

Times Staff Report

EASTERN - A Floyd County man was arrested Tuesday after a state police drug investigation came to a head.

Paul D. Morris, 56, of Gold Howard Loop in Eastern, was arrested Tuesday and charged with first-, second- and third-degree trafficking in a controlled substance, trafficking in a controlled substance within 1,000 yards of a school and numerous other drugrelated charges.

The arrest was the end result of an investigation by Kentucky State Police and followed a search of Morris' home. According to police, the search turned up various prescription medications, marijuana and assorted drug paraphernalia at Morris' home. The case remains under investigation by Trooper Austin Hicks, who was assisted Tuesday by Trooper Shaun Little.

Morris was lodged at the Floyd County Detention Center after his arrest, were he remained as of Thursday.

Electrical crews have been working around the clock to remove debris from power lines and restore electricity to thousands across the region. At left, an AEP worker toiled amidst fallen trees behind Jerry's in Prestonsburg.

Winter weather has left more than 1,000 people in Floyd County without power, some as early as Tuesday morning with others losing power throughout the night Tuesday.

The number of county residents without power by midnight Tuesday numbered at 5,000, according to Floyd County Judge-Executive R.D. "Doc" Marshall. By Wednesday morning, that number was down to 1,500, but those residents could be waiting until as late as Saturday or even later before power is back on.

Marshall has warned residents to stay in as much as possible and to contact the county about any emergencies, adding that various assistance, such as provisions of kerosene, is available to those who might need it.

Marshall declared a state of for the county emergency Wednesday, joining Gov. Steve Beshear's declaration for the entire state. State health department issues guidelines for food safety FRANKFORT — The hundreds of thousands of Kentuckians left without electricity from the winter ice storm that has been gripping the state are strongly encouraged to follow food safety guidelines from the Kentucky Department for Public Health (DPH) to prevent food contamination and related illness.

DPH staff recommends keeping freezers closed to maintain the proper temperature for frozen foods. A full freezer will hold the temperature for approximately 48 hours and for 24 hours if the freezer is half full DPH cautions that a refrigerator will only hold its temperature for about four hours, meaning food items such as milk, dairy products, meats, eggs and leftovers should be placed in a cooler surrounded by ice if the outage lasts for more than four hours. Dry ice can be used to keep refrigerators cold. If the outage lasts for several days, 50 pounds of dry ice should preserve food in an 18-cubic foot full freezer for two days. (Be careful when handling dry ice. Never touch dry ice with bare hands or breathe its vapors in an enclosed area. Dry ice is frozen carbon dioxide, a gas).

"Situations like this one emphasize the importance of emergency preparedness in the home," said William Hacker, M.D., DPH commissioner. "Those without power should remember that improperly stored or handled food can lead to foodborne illness, which can be serious and, in some cases, even life-threatening. By following food safety recommendations such illnesses can be prevented."

If left without power, purchase one or more coolers, ice and a digital, dial or instantread food thermometer, DPH recommends. Public health guidelines also recommend keeping appliance thermometers in the refrigerator and freezer, no matter how long the power has been out. The refrigerator temperature should be 41 degrees Fahrenheit or below; the freezer should be 0 degrees Fahrenheit or lower.

"If you are not sure a particular food is cold enough, take its temperature with a food thermometer," said Dr. Hacker. DPH recommends limiting the opening of freezer and refrigerator doors, even if an appliance has been out but returns to function within a couple of hours. If the freezer is not full, DPH strongly advises that poultry and meat items be grouped away from other foods to prevent juices from contaminating other items.

When the refrigerator and/or freezer are operating again, follow these guidelines to decide what to do with foods:

Refrigerated foods should be safe as long as power is out for no more than four hours.

Throw out any perishable food in your refrigerator, such as meat, poultry, lunchmeats, fish, dairy products, eggs and any prepared or cooked foods that have been above 41 degrees Fahrenheit for four hours. Bacteria can multiply to tries can be refrozen without unsafe levels under these conditions

Fresh fruits and vegetables are safe as long as they are still firm and there is no evidence of mold or sliminess.. If an appliance thermometer was kept in the freezer, read the temperature when power comes back on. If the appliance thermometer stored in the freezer reads 41 degrees Fahrenheit or below, the food is safe and may be refrozen.

If a thermometer has not been kept in the freezer, check each package of food to determine the safety.

If the food still contains ice crystals or is 41 degrees Fahrenheit or below, it is safe to refreeze.

Raw meats, poultry, cheese, juices, breads and paslosing too much food quality.

Prepared food, fish, vegetables and fruits in the freezer can be refrozen safely, but food quality may suffer.

"Remember, you can't rely on appearance or odor of the food to determine if it's safe," said Hacker. "Food that has thawed or was held above 41 degrees Fahrenheit for more than four hours should be thrown out because bacteria may multiply to unsafe levels.'

To remove spills and freshen the freezer and refrigerator, DPH recommends washing with a solution of two tablespoons of baking soda dissolved in one quart of warm water. To absorb any lingering odors, place an open box or dish of baking soda in the appliance.

The tree struck Knott and crew member Tommy Lackey, who fell over a hill after the impact and came away relatively uninjured.

Knott, on the other hand, was badly injured, having taken the full force of the fallen tree first on his head and then along his leg. The result was a large gash on his head and a compound fracture just above his ankle.

"He was in bad shape," Jarrell said. "The tree came down and hit him first in the head and if he hadn't had a hard hat on he would have probably been killed. He was sort of out of it and mumbling things."

Lackey, Jody Conn and Brandon Jarrell immediately went into action, using their coats to cover Knott until an

that swept through the Bluegrass, the Better Business Bureau of Central & Eastern Kentucky is urging homeowners to carefully check out contractors before hiring to repair any ice and snow damage.

When any kind of storms cause damage to homes and property in our 64county service area, calls and e-mails come into the BBB from homeowners looking for contractors they can trust to help them," said Heather Clary, Communications Director of the BBB of Central & Eastern Kentucky. "We want the public to know that we are ready to help them start with trust and find ethical, BBB Accredited Businesses to do the work they need. The BBB urges homeowners to use the new BBB e-Ouote to simplify the process of searching for an ethical contractor for necessary repairs. "

The BBB also wants to urge the public to use caution with door-to-door contractors or out-of- state workers that move into the area offering repairs. "Don't let to www.bluegrass.bbb.org and click on

In the wake of the recent winter storm your rush to get the damage fixed cloud the e-Quote icon. Choose the category your judgment when choosing a contractor," said Clary. "If you give money to a fly-by-night outfit that disappears quickly without having done the job right, you'll pay even more to get the problem resolved, and you may have little recourse."

> The BBB offers these tips to property owners looking for reputable companies to remove fallen trees or repair roofs, gutters, electrical problems, burst pipes and other damage:

> Before hiring, check out the company report and rating with the BBB by calling (859) 259-1008 or 1-800-866-6668, or by logging on to www.bluegrass.bbb.org,

> Get a list of BBB Accredited Businesses in the specific category you need. These lists are available on the website or by calling the BBB to have one sent to you.

> Use BBB e-Quote to get estimates from BBB Accredited Businesses. Log on you need, the manner in which you'd like to be contacted, and contractors in that category will automatically contact you, making it an easier process to get the service you need.

Multiple estimates are a good idea. When you hire, get a written contract (there's no such thing as a "verbal contract") outlining the materials to be used, the time frame in which the work is to be done and the payment schedule. Get any warranties in writing. NEVER PAY THE ENTIRE AMOUNT UPFRONT.

Ask to see the contractor's proof of proper workers comp and liability insurance, and any required licensing. (Contractors doing work in Fayette County, even if from outside the county, are required to be registered with the Lexington-Fayette Urban County Government's Contractor Registration Program. Make sure you verify their registration at 859-258-3770.)

As for customers with RECC, Floyd County 911 Coordinator Jim Caldwell said it's possible the company could reach a goal of Saturday for restoration of power to most customers.

"In a situation like this, they have to work in the daylight hours instead of the dark," Caldwell said. "That cuts down on the time they can put toward the work itself. It's just too dangerous to work during the night."

the process of disaster recovery options.

Part of that process would be that the Federal Emergency Management Agency (FEMA) will direct other federal agencies and provide 75 percent federal funding for emergency measures taken to save lives and protect property and public health.

"There are areas here in the northern end of the county that look like war zones," Marshall said. "We've been out assessing it since it got started Monday night. What we'd like to see is the rain to stop. This rain isn't going to help anything.'

Marshall traveled with county road foreman Mike Jarrell to areas most effected. visiting residents and sending out a message to the county to stay inside if possible.

Two residents along Armory Road talked with Marshall Tuesday amid fallen trees, some resting across the roofs of homes, pool decks and other structures making road.

"Some of the neighbors got their chainsaws out and cut branches out," said Denzil Whitten, who lost power at his home as early as 10 a.m. Tuesday morning. As night fell-Tuesday, Whitten and his family grew ever more tense. "Every few minutes we could hear trees falling behind our house," he said. "And every time, we just sat there in the dark hoping one didn't fall on our house."

Sam Hager, another resident of Armory Road, shared the same fears Tuesday night.

"It sounded like guns going off when the trees would start cracking," said Hager. "We just didn't think it was going to be this bad."

The wintry weather came to a head Monday and Tuesday, after freezing rain and sleet coated the county and the rest of the region in ice. The storm built over the course of the last week, accompanied by unbearably cold temperatures. The resulting ice weighed heavily across the region, resulting in hundreds of downed trees.

Jarrell estimated that about 20 roads were in bad repair following hundreds of downed trees. Road crews worked precarious canopies across the throughout the night Tuesday to clear roadways along Abbott, Lakeview and Armory Road and continued to do during the day Wednesday and again Thursday.

Those areas were the hardest hit, according to Marshall, along with the rest of the northern end of the county. Jarrell estimated that some 98 percent of downed trees, which tore out power lines, blew out transformers and collapsed roofs throughout the night, were located in the northern end of the county.

"It's the worst I've seen in the 20 years that T've been with the county," Jarrell said while combing the county during assessments.

Along Lakeview Village, several residents, speaking with county officials, said they had phoned local hotels to see about accommodations, but that most had no vacancies. Wednesday evening, May Lodge at Jenny Wiley State Resort Park was offering discounted rooms to those without power.

According to Floyd County 911 Coordinator Jim Caldwell, a briefing with Marshall Wednesday finished by making the decision to not open a shelter for the county, something that had been considered

County officials were already expecting the cleanup effort to take approximately six months based on conditions early Thursday afternoon.

Beshear declared a state of emergency for Kentucky Wednesday morning and Marshall has said he intends to contact Frankfort to ensure that assistance would be coming for Eastern Kentucky, as only western Kentucky was specifically mentioned in Wednesday's declaration.

Reports late Thursday estimated that more than 607,000 Kentuckians were without power, a figure state officials said tops the numbers for Hurricane Ike, now placing this storm as the worst on record.

Alternatives to prison protect the community

No politician ever got into trouble for wanting to build more jail cells or enacting tougher criminal punishments. Few prosecutors ever were punished for seeking a maximum sentence, nor judges for throwing the book at a defendant.

Locking up convicts -- the longer the better -- has been seen as a sure way to promote political careers, protect job security and pacify communities fearful of crime.

That may be changing. A new kind of "truth in sentencing" movement is underway. It is based on the premise that it isn't how long a criminal defendant spends behind bars that's important, but whether the community is safer if he's put in prison.

There's mounting evidence that being "tough on crime" -- especially regarding nonviolent offenders -- actually makes communities less safe.

Missouri Supreme Court Judge Michael Wolff, who chairs the state Sentencing Advisory Commission, is a leading evangelist for what he calls "evidence-based sentencing." That's when judges use hard data on a criminal convict's risk of re-offending as a key element in the decision whether to mete out jail time.

In a speech last year at New York University Law School's Brennan Center of Justice, Wolff noted that 50 percent of inmates in Missouri prisons are nonviolent offenders. Working with researchers at the Missouri Department of Corrections and the Department of Probation and Parole, he collected data on offenders convicted of nonviolent felony theft.

The data show that 45 percent of those sent to jail or prison -even for as little as 120 days -- re-offend. But only 19.1 percent of those sentenced to probation or community service commit additional crimes.

"There is a strong case to be made that the large increase in prison population has made us less safe," Mr. Wolff said. "If we put nonviolent offenders in prison with violent offenders, the nonviolent do seem to learn from the violent."

If the public thinks "rationally about what's in our own best interests -- i.e. public safety," he added, we should "pay particular attention to which sentences work to reduce recidivism."

Progressive judges and corrections officials aren't the only ones taking notice. Grass-roots community groups, religious service organizations and a growing number of civic-minded lawyers have become involved in the movement that diverts nonviolent offenders from the conventional justice system, often soon after they are charged.

Better nutrition equals better education

by KATHLEEN ROGERS

Cafeteria food has always been the brunt of kids' jokes. Many of us remember the grilled cheese sandwich that stuck to the plate when you turned it upside down, and the egg soufflé that jiggled when you poked it. But even that is a far cry from what's served now.

In the midst of a growing childhood obesity crisis, school food now means federally subsidized chicken nuggets, low-grade hamburgers, french fries, hot dogs and pizza. "Cooking" usually involves a centralized kitchen similar to a fast food assembly line. According to Ron Haskins, senior fellow of Economic Studies at the Brookings Institution, "behind the overcooked vegetables and steamtable pizza that American children confront each school day is an industry that rivals defense contractors and media giants in its ability to bring home the federal bacon." That industry is agribusiness — and, via the National School Lunch Program, it has a chokchold on our kids. The commodities-driven National School Lunch Program, meant to feed 60 million children healthy food, has instead turned into a major public health threat. The most vulnerable in our society are suffering the most severe consequences, including epidemic levels of obesity, diabetes, heart disease and other illnesses. While we need to be able to include more children in the School Lunch Program, we also need to be able to feed them higher-quality, more nutritious food, or else we are defeating the purpose of the program.

Over the past three decades, rates of obesity in the U.S. have more than doubled among children ages 2 to 5 and more than tripled among those ages 6 to 11. Today, approximately 9 million U.S. children over the age of 6 are considered obesc. America's overweight teens consume an average of 700 to 1,000 calories more than they are required each day.

The National School Lunch Program and its affiliated programs have unmatched size and scope, serving more than 35 million lunches every day in almost every school in the U.S., costing taxpayers more than $8.5 billion. Close to 20 million K-12 students receive up to two meals a day, five days a week. The program was recently expanded to include all children enrolled in Head Start and child nutrition programs. The summer food service program feeds 18 million low-income children. Where does agribusiness come in? Schools participating in the National School Lunch Program receive cash subsidies and commodity foods for each meal served plus bonus commodities from agricultural surplus. The program's authorizing language requires that participating schools serve the most abundant commodities - mostly milk and meat, with few fruits and vegetables. In fact, the ties between the government and the commodities industry, aided and abetted by poor nutritional choices by state and local food service officials, trumps federal nutritional guidelines resulting in menu offerings that resemble fast food.

plus corn and wheat primarily as an economic benefit to agricultural interests. This might have been a defensible idea a century ago, when a third of our population worked as farmers; now, only 2 percent of our workforce is in agriculture. However, to help 2 percent of our citizens, these commodities are donated to the School Lunch Program and other food assistance programs. Unfortunately for our children, many of these foods are unhealthy.

Next year, The Child Nutrition and WIC Reauthorization Act of 2004, which includes school lunches, will expire and the renewal battle will begin. We must dramatically improve the federal nutrition requirements that guide this program, weaken the ties between the School Lunch Program and the commodities markets, revolutionize the quality of food in our schools, label the salt, fat, and sugar content of each meal served, and educate school officials, regulators and the American public about the School Lunch Program and its potentially disastrous implications for our children's health. We need a Congressional mandate for higher nutritional values for the School Lunch Program to improve the quality and types of food that are served in K-12 schools, with an emphasis on local foods and organics. However, that's useless unless we complement it with revamped nutrition curriculums for children and parcnts so that they can learn the value of good nutrition in preventing disease. Significant progress can and must be made in overhauling school lunches. It will take millions of voices to bring 'about this change. The cost to the next generation is too high for this battle to be lost.

The concept is called "restorative justice" and it gives offenders a chance to face the community directly -- and especially their victims -- to accept responsibility for their actions and make amends.

In Springfield, Mo., Greene County Prosecutor Darrell Moore, a longtime prosecutor with a no-nonsense reputation, has built a restorative justice program for nonviolent adult offenders -- in both misdemeanor and felony cases.

Moore is convinced such programs make offenders "more accountable" and, above all, that they give victims "a greater satisfaction." He's working with state lawmakers on legislation that confirms the authority of prosecutors statewide to engage in restorative justice and that protects community groups that participate.

As if keeping the public safer wasn't reason enough to explore these programs, an added bonus is that restorative justice programs cost less than locking up a person in prison. The inconvenient truth in sentencing is that the public may be safer when nonviolent offenders are kept out of prisons.

DINNER DIVA Super Bowl food

The Super Bowl cometh, as all self-respecting football fans know.

And if you're having a few folks over to watch the big game, that means you get to supply the food as well as the tube. This means too, that you will be entertaining. Docs that freak you out?

Leanne Ely

The very word "entertaining" can be hugely intimidating, conjuring up images of lavish spreads, immaculately appointed homes and other visions of magazine living. It is time to get a reality check and get to the heart of the matter.

First off, let's chuck the word "entertaining". What I'm talking about today isn't about doing the Martha thing at all-it's about hospitality. Hospitality isn't something one is talented in and another is not-it is something that is cultivated, much like a plant. All it takes is a welcoming home, a good meal (I can help you with that) and a warm and welcoming attitude (that's your department). Oh and, for the Super Bowl, a nice big TV screen!

If you're going to practice hospitality, you need to keep your perspective-don't invite people over who are going to scare you if you're a newbie at this. You need allies at this time-comrades, amigos. You don't need to be intimidated as you take your first baby steps at hospitality. The first rule is to keep it simple. I would suggest a big crockpot filled with some terrific chili, a big green salad, some cornbread and of course, the right set of friends to enjoy it all. The kind of friends that you ask to bring dessert-that's the type of guest you want for this sort of party. Set your buffet table with a red and white-checkered tablecloth, grab some flowers and throw them in a pitcher for a country effect. Wrap the silverware up in the napkins (I'd use paper napkins), toss the wrapped silverware into a basket, stack the bowls next to the chili, with a stack of larger dinner plates, so the salad and corn muffin can go on the side of the plate. The plate will act as a tray for the howl and the rest of the food will go on the "tray". Make sense? I hope so-this is an easy way to do this menu.

We just heard that a dear friend has had an episode of transient global amnesia. What is it? How do you get it? How do you make it go away? Is it physical or mental?

Transient global amnesia (TGA) was first identified in 1956. It is a condition that causes an otherwise healthy person to have a sudden onset of memory loss not associated with other neurological symptoms, like weakness, or slurred speech. There is an acute loss of recent memory that can go back several months or even years.

People suffering a TGA also lose their general orientation. They can't recall where they are, how they got there, what time it is, and what they were doing immediately prior to the attack. However, you never lose your sense of personal identity. That is, you know who you are and can recognize family and friends. Your language and social skills remain intact, as well.

A TGA attack can last from 30 minutes to as much as 24 hours. Once it is over, you will have no memory TGA results in sudden memory loss, but you make full recovery a blurred memory of the events leading up to the attack. The good news is that the rest of your memory is like it was before the attack. The return of your memory is also usually quite rapid. A TGA has no lasting affect on memory; however, it can cause a lot of psychological stress.

While transient global amnesia is rare, its recurrence is even rarer. One study found that TGAs strike about five out of every 100,000 people. The recurrence rate was estimated at no more than 3 percent per year.

Though the symptoms of a TGA can seem at first to be similar to those of a stroke or an epileptic seizure, the risk factors are decidedly different. For instance, neither high blood pressure nor high blood cholesterol strongly associated with strokes - is a risk factor for TGA. Several stud-of the attack itself, and you may have ies, though, have found that people with a history of migraines are at higher risk. In fact, this seems to be the highest risk factor for TGAs so far identified.

> We also know that TGAs are most common between the ages of 50 and 69, with men and women equally at risk. Almost half of all TGA attacks follow physical or psychological stress, such as strenuous exercise, sexual activity, immersion in cold water or minor medical procedures like having blood drawn.

> Acute memory loss in an otherwise healthy appearing person is cause for an immediate trip to the nearest hospital emergency department. Since, as I mentioned, neurological conditions such as stroke or seizure can have similar symptoms, it is important to have trained medical personnel make a diagnosis. When test results indicate a stroke, for instance, quick intervention can prevent permanent brain damage and/or death. With a TGA, on the other hand, your blood work, head CT and neurological exam will all be normal, and no treatment will be necessary.

In short, TGA is a self-limiting, benign medical condition that will probably never recur and is associated with a full recovery. The exact cause is not known. Your friend should be fine.

There were no losers for renters this week as four films hit the racks after so-so runs at the box office.

"Lakeview Terrace" — Racial tensions come to a full boil in this L.A.-based tale that hearkens back to "Crash." The story centers on a bi-racial couple that move into a new home and find that their African American neighbor is not too pleased with their mixed marriage. Turns out he's a cop and that just ratchets up the tension when things begin to get out of hand. Samuel L. Jackson is in fine form as the neighbor, while Patrick Wilson and Kerry Washington turn in sturdy performances as the couple. This one works up until the copout ending, which shouldn't tarnish the entire project.

📕 "Fireproof" — Kirk Cameron gets his best role since his voice changed with his starring turn here as a fireman who is ready to divorce his wife of seven years, until his father challenges him to try to make an effort to rediscover the love he's lost for his spouse. Considering that the fireman's motto is to never leave a man behind, it compels him to make a better effort. Thoughtful stuff that combines ideas about faith and hope and manages to make them poignant rather than stilted.

"RocknRolla" Mobsters, assorted tough guys and one aging rock star clash over a fortune in money from a real estate swindle in this crime drama from Guy Ritchie ("Lock, Stock and Two Smoking Barrels"). This represents a return to form for Ritchie and he assembles a fine cast of international actors that include Gerard Butler ("300"), Jeremy Piven ("Entourage"), Idris Elba ("The Wire") and Tom Wilkinson ("The Full Monty"). Great stuff with lots of tough talk and a gritty vibe that should please fans of Ritchie's better films, like "Snatch."

"The Rocker" — Laughout-loud comedy that features Rainn Wilson (Dwight, from "The Office") in his first starring role. He's hilarious as a middle-aged drummer who never got over getting kicked out of his first band back in the 1980s. He gets a second chance when his nephew needs a drummer for his rock band 20 years later. Plenty of great generation gap jokes and finely drawn supporting characters make for a thoroughly enjoyable romp.

Next week look for "The Secret Life of Bees" and the DVD debut of a sturdy sports drama called "Inside Moves."

Lord knows he hears it. In addition to being the most popular of us in the media, he's also the most teased. Nearly all of us are guilty of it - myself included when he walks in or we approach him.

Bristol Motor Speedway, Dragway Charlie help to make Tennessee No. 1 for motorcoach travel

TIMES STAFF REPORT

BRISTOL, Tenn. - Bristol Motor Speedway and Dragway, one of the largest tourist destinations in the state, played a key role in Tennessee being projected as the No. 1 state for motorcoach travel in 2009.

Byways Magazinc, a bimonthly publication directed at motorcoach charter and tour planners, expects Tennessee to have more motorcoach travel than any other state this year.

This designation comes on the heels of the largest number of tour buses to ever visit Bristol Motor Speedway and Dragway during the 12th edition of Autotrader.com Speedway In Lights. The holiday light show, one of the largest of its kind in the country, welcomed the fourth largest crowd in the event's history.

Motorcoach travel also is the chosen mode of transportation for a large number of race fans who attend NASCAR races at BMS in March and August, as well as the NHRA event in May.

Two years ago, the American Bus Association named Speedway In Lights as one of the Top 100 events for group travel in the United States and Canada.

Byways Magazine reaches in excess of 4,000 motorcoach charter and tour planners with each issue panion and my old work buddy at the paper, told us in an email he was trying to hang a television in their new house when he lost his balance and fell. He broke a bone in his right leg right in the knee area, he says, and as a result, he's down for the count.

Ever the jokester, he reports that the important thing is the two Pikeville College football players helping him - who but Charlie can get help from two Bears to hang a television? saved the TV.

That's our boy.

Thankfully this happened in the winter; had it been in the fall and knocked him out of Pikeville College football scason, he would have been - pun alert! - a Bear to deal with.

I talked with Joyce on Wednesday morning and admitted that when Charlie called me Monday alternoon, I couldn't help but laugh. I know it's not funny, but to know Charlic is to laugh, and, well, I knew there would be a funny story to go along with it.

Charlie and I travel together all fall for Pikeville College football, and I think it's nice of Joyce to let him go. I know from experience he does too. And when he, Mark and I hit the road, two things are bound to happen: The food will be outstanding and a good time will be had by all.

To be honest, about the only people I know who wouldn't enjoy those travels are our respective doctors. I'd imagine we eat one, maybe two more calories than those in the medical field would appreciate.

I've also heard the story about how the famous "Charlie Pin-son!" commercials came to be, and to the surprise of nobody the genius behind them is Joyce herself. Apparently a group of Pike Central fans were eager to get on camera one night and were trying to get Dr. Don's attention. Someone at the school told them if they really wanted to get on TV to get up with Charlic.

Minutes later, they were chanting his name. Joyce, ever the business person, thought, according to Charlic, "Now that I can work with."

A marketing scheme was born, and so was a legend.

We wish Charlie well and a speedy recovery, for both his sake and Joyce's. I'm sure many, many good stories will come from this pain, and the first guy laughing will be Mr. Pinson himself. Nobody enjoys a good laugh like Charlie.

So when next you see him, expect him to be in a wheelchair or on a walker. But you'd better know two things: He'll be enjoying a laugh at somebody's expense, more than likely his own.

And if it's at a game, you'll know he's there. As sure as he is, somebody, somewhere, will be saying it loud, saying it proud.

KIM'S KORNER

The story of the quilt was sent to me by dear friend Missy Woods.

It's author is unknown, but it is so heartwarming and enlightening it had to be shared with each of you.

Please continue to read on and may it touch your soul.

As I faced my

judgment, I knelt before the Lord along with all the other souls. Before each of us laid our lives like the squares of a quilt in many piles.

An Angel sat before each of us sewing our quilt squares together into a tapestry that is our life. But as my angel took each piece of cloth off the pile, I noticed how ragged and empty each of my squares was. They were filled with giant holes. Each square was labeled with a part of my life that had been difficult, the challenges and temptations I was faced with in everyday life. I saw hardships that I endured, which were the largest holes of all.

I glanced around me. Nobody else had such squares. Other than a tiny hole here and there, the other tapestries were filled with rich color and the bright hues of worldly fortune. I gazed upon my own life and was disheartened. My angel was sewing the ragged pieces of cloth together, threadbare and empty, like binding air.

Finally the time came when each life was to be displayed, held up to the light, the scrutiny of truth. The others rose, each in turn, holding up their tapestries. So filled their lives had been. My angel looked upon me, and nodded for me to rise. My gaze dropped to the ground in shame. I hadn't had all the earthly fortunes. I had love in my life, and laughter. But there had also been trials of illness, and death, and false accusations that took from me my world as I knew it. I had to start over many, many times. I often struggled with the temptation to quit, only to somehow muster the strength to pick up and begin again. I spent many nights on my face in prayer, asking for help and guidance in my life. I had often been held up to ridicule, which I endured painfully, each time offering it up to the Father in hopes that I would not melt within my skin beneath the judgmental gaze of those who unfairly judged mc. And now, I had to face the truth. My life was what it was, and I had to accept it for what it was.

The quilt Bishops announce new director of Catholic Conference of Kentucky

Catholic Bishops of Kentucky have appointed Robert J. Castagna as the Executive Director of Catholic Conference of Kentucky.

Edward Castagna succeeds Monahan, who resigned in August to become Kentucky's Public Advocate. Castagna arrived in Frankfort this week.

Most recently serving as general counsel and executive director of the Aid for Women Inc. in Chicago, Ill., Castagna spent more than 20 years (1984-2006) as general counsel and executive director for the Oregon Catholic Conference. During his tenure in Oregon, Castagna was noted for his Fordham University and a law degree FRANKFORT — The Roman political skills, knowledge of the from the Catholic University of Church, and passion on behalf of those in need. He led successful efforts to restore the funding of public assistance for two-parent unemployed families, wrote legislation to address the needs of terminally ill patients, and successfully worked to enact working family child care tax credits and state earned income tax credits. He also led the "Campaign for Fairness" on behalf of 24 social service and statewide organizations, which successfully lobbied to restore $60 million in Oregon's Department of Human Services' budget.

A native of Brooklyn, N.Y., Castagna carned a bachelor of arts from America. He has received a number of awards including the 2003 Harvest of Hope Award presented by Oregon's governor on behalf of the Oregon Faith Roundtable Against Hunger; a 1989 "Service Award" from the Oregon Commission on Hispanic Affairs; the 1989 Steward of Life Award from the Oregon Right to Life; and the 2002 "Outstanding Advocacy Award" from the Governor's Commission on Senior Services. He has served in a number of professional, community, and church activities, including as president of the National Association of State Catholic Conference Directors, as a consultant for the United States Conference of Catholic Bishops' Migration Committee, and on the board of directors of Maryville Nursing Home and Ecumenical Ministries of Oregon.

CELEBRATING

In announcing the appointment on behalf of the bishops of Kentucky, Archbishop Joseph Kurtz said, "We are privileged to have someone of Mr. Castagna's stature serving as our public policy leader. His record and accomplishments are outstanding, and it will be a great pleasure to work with him as we continue to keep the Church's positions before the Commonwealth."

The Catholic Conference of Kentucky is the public policy voice of the state's four Roman Catholic Bishops.

Making time for prayer and religious dialogue top new year's resolution lists

NEW YORK -- The year 2009 will mark a significant return to personal prayer and religious dialogue, according to Dr. Aliza Lavie, a political science professor at Bar-Ilan University and currently a Research Associate at The Hadassah-Brandeis Institute.

Lavie's fields of research include gender, public communications and multiculturalism, and she scoured historical archives and private collections to uncover the forgotten manuscripts and human stories that she presents in A Jewish Woman's Prayer Book, published by Spiegel & Grau/Random House carlier this month.

"What I have discovered in the past few weeks is most Prayer as a mosaic of communication and knowledge that is continually growing in real time.

"At Lincoln Square Synagogue in New York, at the JCC in Milwaukee, and at an event in Buffalo, I met women who recognized some of the prayers from a particular 19thcentury Czech book of prayers which I had included in A Jewish Woman's Prayer Book. I have not encountered Jewish Czech women in Israel or Europe who remembered those prayers. For other parts of the Jewish nation, this knowledge

Confessing to prayer

Lavic notes that people who say they haven't read the Bible and never prayed before now "confess" to more than introspection and meditation: they report thinking about and talking to their Creator. "They keep journals, they talk to God while they're driving, they open their mouths and ask for help. Perhaps even more surprising, people report having conversations with others about God."

'They are not new for peoplc," Lavic says of the prayers in her book. "Even though people haven't actually heard or read them before, they've had and this connection was burnt them in the back of their memory. They have them in their blood."

Making time for diet, exercise, more family time and prayer

"Of course I hear many people saying they hope this year they'll stick to their diet; Others are resolving to refrain from texting in the car and promising to keep to the minutes in

I rose and slowly lifted the combined squares of my life to the light. An awe-filled gasp filled the air.

I gazed around at the others who stared at me with wide eyes. Then, I looked upon the tapestry before me. Light flooded the many holes, creating an image, the face of Christ.

Then our Lord stood before me, with warmth and love in His eyes. He said, "Every time you gave over your life to Me, it became My life, My hardships, and My struggles. Each point of light in your life is when you stepped aside and let Me shine through, until there was more of Mc than there was of you.

My prayer is that all our quilts be threadbare and worn, allowing Christ to shine through.

'Til next week, be blessed.

remarkable. Throughout the diverse communities and movements that I have visited in the United States - religious cultural and political organizations, student groups, mid-life professionals, the aged - in every place there is interest in the power of prayer and in the development of religious dialogue.
